EXPLANATION

Pollard sculp.

In the clouds is represented Our Blessed Saviour seated on a Rainbow, and attended by his Ministering Angels, trampling on Sin & Death, & thereby bringing Salvation to Mankind even to the ends of the Earth—who are delineated according to the respective quarters of the Globe, shewing that the Benefits of Divine Revelation extend to All persons who are willing to embrace the Glad tidings of Salvation. In the back ground are Moses & Aaron, with the Rod, Breast Plate, &c. pointing out the Jewish Dispensation which is now abolished by the Christian Sacrifice, for as the Ceremonial Law was given by Moses, so Grace & Truth came by Jesus Christ. On the left hand side is Idolatry with his Idols flying from the presence of True Religion. The Hebrew characters of Jehovah, & other decorations in the Ornament are also emblematical of the stupendous subjects explained in this Work.

INTRODUCTORY PREFACE TO CHRISTIAN READERS.

THE HOLY BIBLE is the great Storehouse of Divine Truths, given graciously by God himself to the Children of Men, for their constant, their never failing Support, through all the various Changes of this Life, and to lead them safely to a happy Immortality in the next. In every Trial and Difficulty, in every Circumstance of adverse Fortune, the pious CHRISTIAN will apply to the BIBLE for Light and Instruction, for Guide and Comfort: This divine Book is at once our Teacher, our Companion, and our Friend. We are assured that all Scripture is given by the Inspiration of God, and is profitable for Doctrine, for Reproof, for Correction, and for Instruction in Righteousness. As these sacred Oracles treat of the most important Subjects, Subjects that concern the whole Period of our Existence, and are able to make us wise unto Salvation, the lofty Terms in which they are recommended by their Great AUTHOR to Mankind in General, should rather inspire us with Gratitude than occasion Astonishment. They contain, all of them in Connection together, an Universal Library of Divine Knowledge; and

THE OLD TESTAMENT may be divided into three general Heads, viz. Historical, Doctrinal and Practical.

THE Historical are those which begin with GENESIS and end with the Book of ESTHER; comprehending, beside several very important Affairs of civil History, the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai, and many Typical Representations of the Christian Church.

THE Doctrinal Parts are those of the PSALMS or HYMNS of David, the Writings of Solomon, and the ancient Book of Job.

THE Prophetical Books are those inspired Writings that begin with ISAIAH, and end with MALACHI.

SUCH are the general divisions of the OLD TESTAMENT.

WITH regard to the APOCRYPHA, some of the Books were composed during the Captivity, others soon after the Return of the Jews from Babylon, and others probably after the Promulgation of Christianity. These Books contain a Mixture of Historical Facts, Moral Sentiments, and uncertain Traditions; our Church therefore does not admit the APOCRYPHA into the Canon of Scripture, but recommends it to be read for Example of Life and Instruction of Mankind.

THE NEW TESTAMENT may also be divided into three general Heads: viz. the GOSPELS, the ACTS of the APOSTLES, and the EPISTLES to the CHURCHES.

IN the GOSPELS we meet with many Divine Discourses of our blessed REDEEMER; his wonderful Miracles; and his innumerable Examples, which are recorded that we may copy after them, as near as is consistent with human Nature.

IN THE ACTS of the APOSTLES we have a faithful Account of the Propagation of Christianity, and of the Operation of it upon the Minds of the People, notwithstanding all the Opposition it met with from various Enemies.

THE EPISTLES, which were sent to the newly converted Churches, either to rebuke them for some Abuses, to warn them against false Doctrines, or to establish them in their most Holy Faith, are sufficient to convince every Reader that the Hearts of the Authors were influenced with Love to GOD, and had a real Concern for their Fellow Creatures.

HAVING said thus much concerning the Sacred Scriptures in General, we must beg Leave to make a few Remarks relative to this important Undertaking, which, on many Accounts, is humbly offered to the Public as a more complete and perfect Work of the Kind for Christian Families, than any other extant.

AMIDST the Variety of Commentaries on the BIBLE, which have been ushered into the World from Time to Time, it has been long a Matter of great Astonishment that no one has been published on a Plan of GENERAL INFORMATION, suited to such as wish to gain a PERFECT KNOWLEDGE of the DIVINE ORACLES. Almost all of them have slavishly followed each other, in taking much Pains to explain Passages which in themselves are sufficiently clear to every Capacity; while they have, in general, entirely left those Parts unnoticed, which really want a judicious Illustration, and are not so easily comprehended by those who have not made the sacred Scriptures their constant Study. Some of these Publications have been sold under the Names of fictitious Persons, who never existed, or in the Names of others, who never in the least contributed to the Compilation of the Works which bear their Signatures; and thus have the Public been imposed on and deceived. It was in Consequence of this great Defect and Abuse of Public Confidence, that, at the Solicitation of numerous Friends, the Author has been induced to publish this Work, (the arduous Labour of many Years) which through the Blessing of GOD, and his own unremitted Attention to the Whole, shall be faithfully and regularly carried on, for the Benefit and Instruction of all pious and sincere Christians, in order to secure their eternal Salvation. In a Word, it has been the Author's sincere Endeavour, in his Commentary, Annotations, and Practical Reflections, unfeignedly to promote the TEMPORAL and ETERNAL Happiness of Mankind. He has pointed out the absolute Necessity of PRACTICE as well as FAITH in the great and important Business of RELIGION; and upon the Whole has, he trusts, successfully laboured to display the HOLY SCRIPTURES in their GENUINE PURITY and LUSTRE. He has exerted his utmost Abilities to instruct the Unlearned, to remove the Doubts of the Diffident, to promote the fervent Zeal of the pious Christian, and to fix the Faith of the Wavering on the great Author of our Holy Religion, the NEVER-FAILING ROCK OF AGES.

ON THE INSPIRED WRITERS.

THE Lives of All the Inspired Writers of the Old Testament will be given at the End of the Notes on Malachi.

With Respect to the Inspired Writers of the New Testament, St. MATTHEW, the Evangelist, called also Levi, was of Jewish Extraction, and the Son of Alphaeus and Mary. His Occupation, when our Lord chose him for one of his Disciples, was that of a Publican, or Gatherer of the Roman Taxes levied on the Jews. He wrote the Gospel which bears his Name, chiefly for the Use of the converted Jews. He died about the 70th Year of Christ.

St. MARK was also born of Jewish Parents, of the Tribe of Levi. He is supposed to have been a Disciple and Convert of St. Peter, who calls him his Son; and is said to have dictated the Gospel which goes by his Name, though it was inspired by the Holy Ghost. His Martyrdom is placed about the End of the Emperor Nero's Reign.

St. LUKE, the Evangelist, styled the beloved Physician, accompanied St. Paul in his Travels, and was his Fellow-labourer. He dedicated his Gospel to Theophilus, an eminent Person in the Church. He wrote likewise the Acts of the Apostles, comprising an ecclesiastical History of the first and purest Churches. The Time, Manner, and Place of his Death are uncertain.

St. JOHN, the Evangelist, styled the beloved Disciple, was the Brother of James the Great, and Son of Zebedee and Salome. He was a zealous Defender of the Person of Christ, in his divine and human Nature. Besides his Gospel, he wrote three Epistles, and the Book of Revelation. He is said to have died in the Isle of Patmos, 68 Years after Christ.

St. PAUL, miraculously converted from a furious Persecutor to an eminent Apostle, abundant in Labours and Sufferings for Christ, was born at Tarsus, in Cilicia. He wrote an Epistle to the Roman, Corinthian, Galatian, Ephesian, Phillipian, Colossian, and two to the Thessalonian Converts: He also wrote two Epistles to Timothy, one to Titus, one to Philemon, and, it is generally thought, that to the Hebrews. He suffered Martyrdom under Nero.

St. JAMES the Less, called in Scripture, the Son of Alphaeus and Mary, the Brother of Jude, Joset, Simon, and of our Lord, wrote one practical Epistle to all the dispersed Christian Jews. He is supposed to have suffered Martyrdom from the Scribes and Pharisees at Jerusalem, in the 96th Year of his Age, A. D. 60, after having been 30 Years Bishop of Jerusalem.

St. PETER, or Simon Peter, the Apostle, was the son of Jonas, a Fisherman. He was a very zealous Disciple, but too self-confident, as his disgraceful Fall testified. He wrote two excellent Epistles to the dispersed Jewish Churches, confirming them in the Faith, and encouraging them to Constancy under the sharpest Trials. He suffered Martyrdom under Nero, about the Year 65.

St. JUDE, the Apostle, also called Thaddeus and Lebbaeus, was Brother to James the Less, and Son of Cleophas and Mary. He wrote a very earnest Epistle, tending to fortify the Christian Jews against the Errors and Corruptions of Seducers, and to enforce an Adherence to the Plainness and Simplicity of the Gospel. He is thought to have outlived the Reign of Nero, and the Destruction of Jerusalem.

With Regard to the Apocryphal Writers, as we have no certain unerring Information concerning the real Authors of the History and Writings contained in the Apocrypha, we must therefore content ourselves with giving the following Particulars, collected from the most reputable Authority we have been able to obtain; though it must be confessed, that with Respect to the Writers of some of the Books, the World is left altogether in the Dark.

The First Book of ESDRAS is ascribed to Ezra; and is said to have been originally a Part of the Book of Ezra; but, on Account of several Errors having crept into it, was not received as canonical, either by the Jews or primitive Christians. It is not certain who wrote the Second Book of ESDRAS, there being no Hebrew or Greek Copy of it extant. It is, however, inserted in the Popish Bible.

TOBIT appears, from divers Passages in it, to be the Production of several different Persons; but who they were cannot be ascertained at this Distance of Time. The greatest Part of it is considered as an Allegory, of which the Orientals were extremely fond.

JUDITH is supposed by some to have been written by a Jew during the Captivity; but others affirm that it was forged by a Heretic in the second Century. It was written in the Chaldee Language. St. Jerom believed it to be a true and genuine History of Facts, and accordingly translated it into Latin as one of the canonical Books. Many Things in it, however, are either fabulous or allegorical.

The Writer of the Supplement to the Book of ESTHER is entirely unknown. It must have been written before the Time of Josephus, as that Historian recites several Passages mentioned in it. The Contradictions to be met with in it, occasioned it to be rejected by the Jews, and considered by them as uncanonical.

THE WISDOM OF SOLOMON was probably written by a Jew, who lived not long before the Birth of Christ. It was never received into the Jewish Canon; but yet has many excellent Things in it, worthy the Attention of a Christian Reader.

ECCLESIASTICUS was, it is thought, penned by Jesus the Son of Sirach, who lived about 200 Years before the Birth of Christ. It was translated by his Grandson out of the Hebrew into the Greek Language. It contains a fine System of Morality, and tends to inculcate Wisdom in short and pithy Sentences.

BARUCH is believed by some to have been forged by a Jew, after the Return from the Babylonish Captivity; others think it probable, that an Epistle, in the Form of this Book, was written by Baruch, a celebrated Jew, and Captive in Babylon, to those Jews who remained in Judea.

THE SONG OF THE THREE HOLY CHILDREN is by several very learned Men supposed to have been written by the Author of the Book of Baruch.

SUSANNA is said to have been written long after the Captivity, though we are not told who was its Author.

The History of BEL and the DRAGON was probably written by some zealous Jew, who lived a few Years before the Birth of Christ, in a Province far distant from Jerusalem. It has in all Ages been considered as fabulous or allegorical.

THE PRAYER OF MANASSES, which appears to be a studied Composition, is also supposed to have been written by a Jew, who lived a few Years before the Birth of Christ.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE MACCABEES is considered as one of the most authentic and accurate in all the Apocryphal Writings. There is no mention of the Author's Name. It was originally written in the Chaldee Language, and afterwards translated into Greek, from whence our Version is taken.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE MACCABEES is believed to have been written by one of the Jews who resided in the Lesser Asia; but what is come to our Hands is only an Abridgment of a larger Work, written by one Jason, who lived in Greece and Syria. It is not so accurate as the former Book, and in some Parts of it there are apparent Falshoods and Inconsistencies.

THE ARGUMENT.

This book, in the Hebrew copies of the Bible, is generally called Bereshith, which signifies, in the beginning, being the first word of it, as the other four books of Moses are also called from their initial words: The Greek version calls it Genesis, and so we and other versions from thence. It is called the first book of Moses, because there are four more that follow; the name the Jews give to the whole is, five fifths of the law, to which the Greek word Pentateuch answers, by which we commonly call those five books, of which this is the first. It is the oldest book in the world, and contains a series of events, of the utmost importance, which we must have been for ever ignorant of, had not Moses received the revelation by immediate inspiration, from the great and almighty God.

CHAP. I.

I 1 The creation of heaven and earth, 3 of the light, 6 of the firmament. 9 The earth separated from the waters, and made fruitful. 14 The creation of the sun, moon and stars, 20 of fish and fowl, 24 of beasts and cattle, 26 of man in the image of God; and his blessing. 29 The appointment of food.

IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

5 And God called the light Day; and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.

6 ¶ And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.

8 And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.

9 ¶ And God said, Let the waters under the heaven

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. I.

1 In the beginning God created] That is, this system, before which there was nothing but eternity. The word Elohim, here interpreted God, signifies the great Creator, as the sole object of religious adoration. Being used in the plural number, it implies a plurality of distinct persons in deity, which revelation informs us are three, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who equally co-operated in the making of all things. 1 Cor. viii. 6. Eph. iii. 9. Job xxvi. 13.

The heaven and the earth] Not the solar system only, but the whole system of creation, visible or invisible. These are said to be created, that is, to be made out of nothing; for what pre-existent matter to this chaos could there be, out of which they could be formed? And the apostle says, "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear," Heb. xi. 3. From hence we learn, that the world was not eternal, either as to the matter or form of it, but had a beginning; and that its being is not owing to the fortuitous motion and conjunction of atoms, but to the power and wisdom of God, the first cause and sole author of all things, Prov. iii. 19.

2 And the earth was without form, and void] It was a fluid mass, wherein were the materials and ingredients of all bodies, but mingled in confusion with one another; so that heavy and light, dense and rare, fluid and solid particles were jumbled together, and the atoms or small constituent parts of fire, air, water and earth, were every one in every place, and all in a wild confusion and disorder; so that the matter whereof the chaos was composed was without form, without any shape or order, and void, empty and without any thing living, or growing in it.

And darkness was upon the face of the deep] Nothing was to be seen for want of light, which lay buried in the vast abyss, till an agitation was made by the Spirit, as is next observed.

And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.] Which covered the earth, Psalm civ. 6. The scriptures represent the original earth as standing out of the water, and consisting of it, 2 Pet. iii. 5. and upon the surface of these waters, before they were drained of the earth, the Spirit of God moved; which is to be understood not of a wind; since the air, which the wind is a motion of, was not made until the second day. The word moved, signifies to sit hovering or fluttering, as a bird does over her eggs, by her vital warmth, to cherish and quicken them; and, by a natural metaphor, represents the holy Spirit exerting his energy over the inactive, lifeless, lumpish mass, to impress every element with life and power, and thereby dispose them for the future ends for which they were intended.

3 And God said] This phrase is used nine times in this account of the creation, and it is most beautifully paraphrased and explained in Psalm xxxiii. 6. as expressive of the authority and efficacy of the Divine Being, whose word is clothed with power. He speaks and it is done: he commands, and his commands are instantly accomplished.

Let there be light, &c.] It appeared at once, "God commanded light to shine out of darkness," 2 Cor. iv. 6. his first production is light, that enlightens and cheers universal nature, and in its glory and beneficence bears the greatest resemblance to its Maker, the father of lights, from whom cometh down every good and perfect gift; hence, "God himself is called light." 1 John i. 5. This light was some bright, shining body, perhaps somewhat like the pillar of fire in the wilderness, and out of which the sun and stars appear to have been afterwards formed.

4 And God saw the light] He approved it, as very pleasant and delightful, useful and beneficial, according to the idea of it in his own mind, agreeable to which it was made, and what would answer the end for which he created it.

And God divided the light from the darkness] By making them take different places by turns; the light shining upon the one half of the mingled mass, and the darkness covering the other; in much the same manner, as our sun, by turns, illuminates the one half of the globe, and leaves the other in darkness.

5 And the evening, &c.] The evening, or night, is named before the morning, or day, because the darkness was before the light; hence, formerly, almost all nations, particularly the Jews, began their natural day, consisting of twenty-four hours, from the evening or setting of the sun. Lev. xxiii. 12.

6 Let there be a firmament, &c.] In the Hebrew it signifies an expansion, which includes both the region of the air, or atmosphere; and the superior and purer region of the sky, where the luminaries are placed.

7 The waters under the firmament] Are those in the rivers, lakes, and seas, and the waters above the firmament, are those exhaled into the air in vapours and clouds.

9 And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, &c.] Which are before called the waters under the firmament; and which were either on the surface of the earth, or in the bowels of it, or mixed with it, which, by the compressure of the expanse or air, were separated from it; and these, by apertures

10 And God called the dry land Earth, and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

11 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding feed, and the fruit-tree yielding fruit, after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

12 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding feed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

13 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

14 ¶ And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night: and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years:

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

tures and channels made, were caused to flow as by a straight line, unto the decreed place that was broken up for them, the great hollow or channel which now contains the waters of the ocean: this was done by the word of the Lord, at his rebuke; and when it seems there was a clap of thunder, and perhaps an earthquake, which made the vast cavity for the sea, as well as threw up the hills and mountains, and made the vallies. Job xxxviii. 10. Psalm civ. 6—8.

10 And God saw that it was good] The separation of the waters was begun on the preceding day, but not perfected till this day; which seems to be the reason why there was no such approbation of this day's work, as we find there was of the rest: but now the separation being completed, it is approved by God.

11 Let the earth bring forth, &c.] The earth, separated from the waters, was bare and barren; God therefore next clothes it with grass, and enriches and adorns it with herbs, flowers, and trees, of various kinds; and as no vegetables can be formed by mere matter and motion, however modified, God, as he produced every species of them at first by his almighty power, so he formed each of them productive of seed, by which they might be propagated and preserved to the end of time.

14 Let there be lights in the firmament, &c.] The light that he had created on the first day, it is probable God now took, divided, increased, and condensed, and formed into those luminous orbs he now created. Their primary use was to divide the day and the night, by bringing in the interchange of light and darkness upon the earth. They were also to be for signs of good and bad weather; for the times of plowing, sowing, reaping, &c. and for the seasons of summer and winter, spring and autumn; for days, by a circular motion for the space of twenty-four hours; and for years, by annual motion, for the space of three hundred sixty-five days, and odd hours.

16 And God made two great lights, &c.] These are the sun and the moon. The greater light is the sun; that most striking representation of the Deity, and effulgence of his glory in the material world; that source of life and happiness to this lower creation, which cheers with his light, and animates with his heat, universal nature. This glorious luminary is computed by astronomers to be five hundred thousand times larger than this earth: nor will this be thought incredible, if we consider that he is reckoned to be removed from us at the immense distance of eighty-one millions of miles: a space which a cannon-ball would take upwards of twenty years to pass, though flying with the same velocity with which it is discharged immediately from the piece. By this immense distance the sun's magnitude is greatly diminished in appearance, but the reality of it is indisputably confirmed. The other great light is the moon, which is here called a light: not because she shines like the sun with a light of her own, but because she reflects the light she receives from the sun to enlighten the earth; nor is she called a great light, because she is greater than the other luminaries, for she is one of the very least the Creator made; but because being placed the nearest to the earth, she is next to the sun, the greatest in appearance and utility to us.

He made the stars also.] Not the planets only, which derive their light from the sun, and compose this solar system, but the fixed stars also, which, at an inconceivable distance beyond the most distant planet, illuminate all around the immensity of the sky.

17 And God set them, &c.] He not only ordered that there they should be, and made them that there they might be, but he placed them there with his own hands; and they are placed, particularly the sun, at such a particular distance, to be beneficial and not hurtful: had it been set nearer to the earth, its heat would have been intolerable; and had it been farther off, it would have been of no use; in the one case we should have been scorched with its heat, and in the other, been frozen up for want of it.

20 Let the waters, &c.] Having finished the inanimate, the Almighty being proceeds next to the production of the animal crea-

19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

20 And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.

21 And God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

22 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, Let us make man in our image, after tion. The sea being fitted for the reception of the fishes, the firmament expanded, the earth disposed, and both enlightened, for the breath, habitation, and flight of the fowls, God now forms these classes of creatures, and lodges them in those elements he had provided for them: the fishes, in their various kinds, he formed from the water. From this verse many have been led to think that the fowls were created from the water likewise; but if we look forward to chap. ii. ver. 19. we shall find it expressly affirmed, that the fowls were formed out of the ground. These two accounts of the origin of fowls may easily be reconciled, by supposing what their nature seems indeed to indicate, viz. that they were created out of the water mingled with earth, as they were to be a middle class between the fishes and the beasts. But besides, this verse may well be rendered, "not fowl that may fly," but, "let fowl fly in the open firmament of heaven." The Hebrew pointing indicates this to be the true meaning of the text, and both this and the following verse confirm it; as in both their being created out of the waters is confined to the moving creature or fishes, without any origin being assigned of the fowls.

24 Let the earth, &c.] By cattle we may understand the tame beasts; by creeping things, those of the reptile; and by beasts of the earth, those of a wild and savage kind. All these were produced out of the earth. With regard to the animals and plants, it has been disputed whether they were created in perfection at once, or rose from seeds; howsoever this was, we may be well assured, that if they arose from seeds, the seeds must be first organized; and, after being organized, must be raised to perfection in a day at most, which could be only by the almighty power of God. But it is more natural to think, and this account of their creation seems to confirm it, that the materials of every plant and animal were collected and united, and they instantly produced in perfection; the command to be immediately fruitful and to multiply, indicates this; besides, though the earth is said to bring forth the living creatures, yet they are all declared to be created by God, ver. 25. A progressive growth from seeds, or principles, to full perfection, is the method of the divine procedure in the course of his providence; but an instantaneous perfection seems in every thing to have obtained in the work of creation.

26 And God said, Let us make man in our image] The earth being now furnished with vegetables, and the expanse of the air and sky being spread out and irradiated with the luminous orbs, the sea stocked with fishes, the air with fowls, and the earth with beasts, the Almighty proceeds now to create the last and the noblest part of this visible creation; this was man; that species of being to which we belong: the ends of his being were to be the contemplation, worship and enjoyment of his great Creator; and the government, under him, of this lower world: to qualify him for which, he must partake of both a rational and animal nature. To create a being of such a manifold nature and use, a council of the Trinity is called and held; not to express any difficulty omnipotence could find in the formation of him, but to signify our superior excellence of nature, and importance of character in this lower creation. These words, Let us make man in our image, cannot be supposed spoken to angels, much less to any inferior beings, no creature can be vested with a creative power: nor can it reasonably be pretended, that God speaks here after the manner of kings, who express themselves sometimes in the plural number, as, our will is, or, we command; this is the practice only of later times, since kings generally speak and act with the advice and consent of their council, and was not known in the earlier ages. Thus the kings of Israel speak of themselves in the singular number, Sam. iii. 28. Chron. ii. 6. so also did the eastern monarchs, even in their public decrees, which now run in the plural number, Exra. vi. 8. and vii. 13. But this sense that some have forced on these words is clearly refuted, by comparing Gen.

after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

27 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him: male and female created he them.

28 And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.

29 ¶ And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed: to you it shall be for meat.

30 And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

31 And God saw every thing that he had made, and behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. I.

Let us stand still, and admire this amazing work of God! How great, how astonishingly great is that power, who can from nothing form such prodigious and such well-ordered worlds of creatures, both animate and inanimate, rational and irrational! How superlative is his wisdom displayed in the continued variety and dependency of all things, to the good of one another! How unfathomable his goodness, in creating such an infinity of beings to participate of his liberality and the bounties of his providence! and how distinguishing is

iii. 22. "the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us." It was then evidently an address of the Father to his Son and Spirit, one in nature, but three in person, to employ their divine power and wisdom in the formation of that creature that was to be the master-piece and lord of this lower world.

In our image, &c.] This image of God, in which man was created, consisted in that natural perfection, and those moral endowments in which he was made, and in which he bears some resemblance to his all perfect Maker. It consists in that spiritual, rational and immortal soul, resembling the nature of God, and in those faculties of understanding, will, and active powers, resembling the natural perfections of the Deity, with which the human soul was endued; his body too had then some signatures of the divine perfection, in majesty and immortality, that raised it far above the brutes; and, as far as it was capable, made it resemble God. But the completing and distinguishing part of the divine image upon man, was those moral endowments of perfect knowledge, entire rectitude, and universal holiness, with which the human understanding, will, and affections, were created and adorned, in which the soul of man bore a most striking resemblance to the moral perfections of the God that made it. So St. Paul affirms, when he tells us, that if we would recover this divine image that sin hath so miserably defaced, we must be "renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created us; and put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness," Col. iii. 10. iv. 24.

27 Male and female, &c.] Hence we learn, that Adam and Eve were both created on the same day, though the particular manner of Eve's creation is related in the next chapter.

28 And God blessed them] Adam and his wife, whom he had made, with all the blessings of nature and providence, with all the good things of life; with his presence, and with communion with himself in a natural way, though the creatures; and particularly with a power of increasing their species.

And have dominion, &c.] God next invests man with an unlimited dominion over all the creatures in earth and sea, to be employed by him in sobriety, for his Maker's glory, and his own good. This was to make the external part of the divine image upon man; that, as God is the supreme ruler of the universe, man might represent him as his viceroy, in the supreme dominion over this earth.

29 I have given you every herb, &c.] Having given them the animal creatures for their subjects, God now gives our first parents the vegetable world, the herbs bearing seed, and the trees bearing fruit, for their food and sustenance. We have here no permission given them of animal food, and do not hear of its being used till after the deluge. Gen. ix. 4.

31 And God saw every thing, &c.] The Creator now takes a general survey of the great system of creation he had made; and beholding the perfection of every part, and the grandeur, consistence, and harmony of the whole, declared it was very good, expressive of the Creator's glory, and conducive to the happiness of his creatures, the great ends for which he created it. Often should we contemplate his works, and trace out the existence, power, wisdom, and goodness of the divine architect therein displayed; and "devoutly worship him that created the heavens, the earth, and the seas; for of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to him be glory and dominion for ever."

his love to man, in forming him after his own express image, enduing him with faculties that exalt him so much above the brute creation: preparing this world as a convenient habitation for him, in his progress to the everlasting abodes of light and blessedness. Let us, then, in all things that are in heaven and earth, behold the wonders of our God! Let us use them all as his property, and for his glory and honour! Let us enjoy God himself in all things, and all things in God.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. II.

1 And all the host of them] Of the heavens and the earth; the host of the heavens are the sun, moon, and stars, often so called in scripture, and also the angels; Luke ii. 13. wherefore this may be considered as a proof of their creation within the above space of time, probably on the first day, though the Jews say on the second; for if all the host of heaven were made at this time, and angels are at least a part of that host, they must be then made, or otherwise all the host of heaven were not then and there made, as here affirmed: and the host of the earth, or terrestrial globe, are the plants, herbs, and trees, the fowls, fishes, animals, and man; and these are like hosts of armies, very numerous, and at the command of God, and are marshalled and kept in order by him; even some of the smallest of creatures are his army, which are at his beck, and he can make use of to the annoyance of others, as particularly locusts are called so, Joel ii. 11, 20.

2 And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made] This no way insinuates that God did any work on the seventh day, all his works having been finished by the close of the sixth: it would read much better, if translated thus, "In the seventh day, when God had ended or finished his work."

And he rested, &c.] This resting from his work implies not that God was wearied; for the Creator of the ends of the earth fainteth not, neither is weary, Isa. xl. 28. but only that he ceased from producing any more species of being than what he had already made.

3 And God blessed the seventh day, &c.] He blessed it, by appointing it to be the weekly memorial of his having finished the creation, and a blessed time for us to worship and glorify the Creator, our noblest service; and for him to confer on us his special blessings, our greatest happiness. He also sanctified it for those ends by setting it apart, both by his own example and appointment, from common employments, and by consecrating it as a day of holy rest, to be sacred in a peculiar manner to the solemn exercises of piety and devotion. When God renews this original institution, to Israel, at Mount Sinai, he gives it under his own hand, "That in six days he made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath-day, and hallowed it." Exodus xx. 11. Philo, the Jew, calls it, "the birth-day of the world," and from the general observation of it in the first ages, the "universal festival."

4 These are the generations, &c.] What follows of this chapter, is a supplement to the account of the creation given us in the former, particularly with respect to the formation and settlement of man. Here another name is added to God, his name Jehovah, expressive of his being and perfections, particularly his eternity and immutability, being the everlasting and unchangeable I am, which is, and was, and is to come: this name, according to the Jews, is not to be pronounced, and therefore they put the points of Adonai, directing it so to be read; and these two names, Jehovah Elohim, or Adonai and Elohim, with them make the full and perfect name of God, and which they observe is here very pertinently given him, upon the perfection and completion of his works.

6 But there went up a mist, &c.] God, by his creative power, brought the vegetables at first to perfection without seed, and without concurrence of the soil, sun, rain, or any other natural cause.

7 And

Before
CHRIST
4004.

7 And the LORD God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.

8 ¶ And the LORD God planted a garden eastward, in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed.

9 And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

10 And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted and became into four heads.

11 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;

12 And the gold of that land is good; there is bdellium and the onyx-stone.

13 And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia.

14 And the name of the third river is Hiddekel: that is it which goeth towards the east of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates.

15 And the LORD God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.

16 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat:

17 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

18 ¶ And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him an help meet for him.

19 And out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

20 And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

21 And the LORD God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof;

22 And the rib which the LORD God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

23 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of man.

24 Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

25 And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

GENERAL

7 And the Lord God formed man, &c.] As we were created in the image of God, we constitute our dignity; so our bodies are formed of the dust to teach us humility. Of the dust, not dry, but moist, were we framed; so several understand it, and the name Adam signifies red earth, or fresh and moist clay, of which he was made, as the vessel by the potter. Having organized our animal frame, in all our parts, the Father of Spirits next infuses into it the vital and active principle, the immortal soul. This is expressed here by God's breathing into man's body the breath of life, to signify, that the soul is produced by God's immediate power, and not formed of any created substance, as the body was; that it is a distinct essence from the body, superior to it in nature, and the great principle of life in the human frame: which being formerly a lifeless, inactive lump, animated with this active principle, becomes a living man.

¶ And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, &c.] Eden signifies pleasure; implying, that this garden was a most pleasant and delightful place; prepared by God for the reception of Adam. Indeed the whole world was as a garden, in comparison of what it is now, since the fall: what then must this spot of ground, this garden be, which was separated and distinguished from the rest, and the more immediate plantation of God, and therefore is called the garden of the Lord, Gen. xiii. 10. Ezek. xxviii. 13. The various conjectures among the learned concerning the situation of Paradise, and the garden of Eden, are rather curious than useful, nor can the precise spot be certainly ascertained. The word eastward can only mean, that it was situated more to the east than the place where Moses was when he wrote. Some have conjectured it to be in the delightful plains of Armenia, but that opinion is not supported by any other reason but the beauty of the place. Possibly the garden of Eden never existed after the deluge, and that since that event, such alterations have happened, as render its situation difficult to be known.

9 The tree of life, &c.] Various have been the conjectures with regard to the nature and use of this tree. Some have considered it as a constant memorial only of that life, and the continuance of it, which our first parents derived from God. Others have thought it was so called, because the fruit of it had a certain vital influence, to cherish and maintain man in immortal health and vigor, till he should have been translated from the earthly to the heavenly Paradise. But though both these may well have been meant, yet it was, no doubt, called the tree of life, because it was a memorial, pledge, and seal, of that eternal life, that, had man continued obedient, he would have been raised to the possession of in the Paradise above.

The tree of knowledge of good and evil] This tree was so called, not because it had any power to inspire those who might eat of it with any useful, much less with universal knowledge, as the serpent afterwards pretended; but because, by their abstaining from, or eating of it, after it was prohibited, God would see, in fact, whether our first parents would prove good or evil in that state of probation in which he placed them; and especially, because they would know in their experience, what good they should forfeit or retain, and what evil they would escape or incur, according to whether they should eat, or not eat, of that forbidden tree.

15 And the Lord God took the man, &c.] The place from whence Adam is supposed to be taken was near Damascus, where he is said to be created; the place whereon the temple was afterwards built. In the Targum we read, that God "gave Adam the law, and he put him into the garden of Eden, that is, the garden of the law, to dress it, to do the affirmative precepts of the law, and to keep it, the negative precepts:" though Aben Ezra interprets this service, watering the garden, and keeping wild beasts from entering into it. And indeed the word may be rendered to till, as well as to dress, as it is in chap. iii. 33. and some have thought Adam was to have planted and sowed, had he continued in the garden.

17 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it] Having given Adam an unlimited grant of all the other trees of the garden to participate of, it could be no unkindness in God to prohibit this one, as a trial of his obedience to his commands, under whose government he was, and whom it was fit he should obey in all things.

For in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die.] Or, "in dying, die," which denotes the certainty of it, and may have regard to more deaths than one; not only a corporal one, which in some sense immediately took place; man became at once a mortal creature, who otherwise continuing in a state of innocence, and by eating of the tree of life, he was allowed to do, would have lived an immortal life; of the eating of which tree, by sinning he was debarred, and his natural life not now to be continued long, at least not for ever; he was immediately arraigned, tried, and condemned to death, was found guilty of it, and became obnoxious to it, and death at once began to work in him; sin sowed the seeds of it in his body, and a train of miseries, afflictions, and diseases, began to appear, which at length terminated in death. Moreover, a spiritual or mortal death immediately ensued: he lost his original righteousness, in which he was created; the image of God in him was deformed; the powers and faculties of his soul were corrupted, and he became dead in sins and trespasses; the consequence of which, had it not been for the interposition of a Surety and Saviour, who engaged to make satisfaction to law and justice, must have been eternal death, or an everlasting separation from God, to him and all his posterity; for the wages of sin is death, even death eternal, Rom. vi. 23.

18 And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone, &c.] It is not proper, either for his own personal comfort, or for my purpose of the increase of mankind to people the earth. Next to the divine favour, our greatest and most rational happiness, arises from our social relations and connections in life. Our bounteous Creator was well sensible of this, and therefore determines here to make a help-meet for the man, or of the same nature or species, diversified only into another sex; one with whom he might live in the most intimate friendship, and who, by their mutual intercourse, might promote their mutual comfort and happiness.

22 And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, &c.] God formed the woman of a rib, with the flesh thereon, out of Adam's side, to note the wife's equality with her husband; and that she is his companion, and to be treated with the utmost kindness and affection.

And brought her unto the man] To honour the institution of marriage; Adam accepted her as an help meet for him, suitable to his person, and useful on all occasions for their mutual comfort, and the propagation of their species. And God, by Adam, declared the general law of marriage, requiring the most affectionate cohabitation, inseparable union, and intimate communion, during life, as if the parties were but one person.

25 And were not ashamed] Having nothing in them, or on them, or about them, that caused shame; nothing sinful, defective, scandalous, or blame-worthy; no sin in their nature, no guilt on their consciences, or wickedness in their hands or actions; and particularly they were not ashamed of their being naked, no more than children are to see each other, or we to behold them: besides, they were

The Situation of Adam & Eve immediately after the Fall.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ■ Chap. II.

We are to observe these three things in this chapter, First, God, having created the world in six days, rested on the seventh, and hallowed that day, that the observation of the sabbath might serve afterwards to keep up among men the remembrance of the creation of the world. Secondly, God placed Adam in Paradise, that he might be happy; but, to make trial of his obedience, at the same time gave him ■ law, attended with severe threatenings; forbidding him, upon pain of death, to eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. In this proceeding of the Almighty, we see the great goodness of God towards man in his state of innocence; but we see likewise, that man could not be independent, that he was obliged to submit to the laws of his Creator, and that by his obedience alone, he was entitled to the effects of his divine love. Thirdly, What Moses relates of the institution of marriage, obliges us to acknowledge the great wisdom and goodness of God, appearing in this law, which he made at the beginning, for the good of mankind: it obliges us also to honour marriage as a holy state, which has God for its author; and to avoid every thing that is contrary to so holy an institution, particularly impurity and all manner of sensuality.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. III.

1 Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field, &c.]
From the account given of this serpent, it is evident that it was not a mere creature of the serpentine kind, as no animal, however subtil, could reason and speak as this does; but it was one of the chief of the fallen angels, "the old serpent," Rev. xii. 9. who being for his disobedience cast out of heaven, from resentment to God, and envy of man's happiness, who was God's favourite creature, bent all his malice to involve and draw our first parents into disobedience and ruin with himself. What kind of serpent it was he employed for this purpose, we are not told. But it is not improbable that good angels appeared in Paradise to our first parents, in one form or another, with them; and it may be in the form of a beautiful flying serpent, which looked very bright and shining, and that sort called seraph, Numb. xxi. 6.
So that it might not be at all surprising to Eve to hear the serpent speak, it being what she might have been used to hear, and might take this to be ■ good angel in such ■ shape, that was come to bring a message to her from God, and to converse with her for her good, and who thus accosted her:

Yea, hath God said, &c.] By this the devil seems to try her knowledge and belief of the divine prohibition, or make her question either the truth or reasonableness of it, as if he had said, are all the trees of this garden a lowed you to eat? or hath God, after giving you this the whole inferior creation, and particularly Paradise, limited the grant, by forbidding you the fruit of any of its trees?

3 God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, &c.] Finding she was perfectly clear as to the prohibition, but observing she had expressed herself a little faintly with regard to the threatening, the cunning adversary tries next to make her doubt or misbelieve the penalty denounced.

4 Ye shall not surely die.] In direct contradiction to the divine threatening, and which he would insinuate was a mere threatening, and which God never intended to put in execution; so that they had nothing to fear from that: God would never be so rigid and severe, and bear so hard upon them, as to put them to death for such an offence, if it was one; he only gave out to menace and frighten them, and deter them from it: however, at most it was not a certain thing they should die, and they might safely conclude they would not.

5 Then your eyes shall be opened, &c.] To enforce the temptation, he tells her, that the very name of the tree pointed out the effects of it to be the reverse of death; that instead of dying, she and her husband would, immediately upon their eating of it, be inspired with universal knowledge, resembling their omniscient Creator himself; and impiously appeals to God for the truth of it.

6 She took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, &c.] Overcome by the artful persuasions of the serpent, and prompted with the beauty and delicious fragrance of the tree, and the pleasing hopes of superior wisdom, our unhappy mother reaches forth her hand, takes and eats of the for-bidden fruit. In what manner she seduced her husband is merely conjecture, it not being particularly mentioned; every part of the transaction, however, seems to point out, that he was absent when she complied and listened to the force of the temptation.

No. 1.

ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it lest ye die.

4 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be ■ gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶ And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise; she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.

8 And they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

9 And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden:
and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And

7 And the eyes of them were opened, &c.] Not of their bodies, but of their minds: not so as to have an advanced knowledge of things pleasant, profitable, and useful, as was promised and expected, but of things very disagreeable and distressing. Their eyes were opened to see that they had been deceived by the serpent; that they had broke the commandment of God, and incurred the displeasure of their Creator and kind benefactor, and had brought ruin and destruction upon themselves; they saw what blessings and privileges they had lost, communion with God, and dominion of the creatures, the purity and holiness of their nature, and what miseries they had involved themselves and their posterity in; how exposed they were to the wrath of God, the curse of the law, and to eternal death. Looking down ■ themselves and on one another, they now became ashamed of their bodily nakedness; and as the fig tree presented them with the broadest leaves, they took some of its slenderest twigs, it is likely, with the leaves on them, and having twisted them together, tied them about their bodies as girdles, and the broad leaves hanging down, served for aprons to conceal their nakedness.

8 And they heard, &c.] At "the wind of the day," as the Hebrew has it, which was towards the evening, Adam and his wife heard the voice of the LORD walking in the garden, and coming toward them. By some noise or rustling among the trees, was this approach of the Deity notified to our first parents. They knew it to be the approach of their Creator. But instead of going out with joy and love, to meet and worship him, they now begin to act ■ different part.

And Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.] Conscious of their guilt, ashamed of their nakedness, ignorant of a Mediator, and therefore apprehensive that God was coming to punish them with that death they now incurred, they flee from his presence, which is every where, and seek to hide themselves from his sight, before whom every creature is manifest, be it where it will; and very foolishly fancying, that the thick trees and bushes in the garden would be a cover and shelter for them. It is in the singular in the original, "in the midst of the tree of the garden;" which some understand of the fig-tree, whose leaves they covered themselves with, and under the shade of which they now hid themselves. The Indian fig-tree is so large, that it is said, by some, that four hundred horsemen may shade themselves at noon day under it.

9 And the LORD God called unto Adam] The Jerusalem Targum is,
"The word of the LORD God," the second person in the trinity; and this is the voice he is said to have heard before.

And said unto him, Where art thou?] We are not to suppose that God was ignorant of the place where Adam was, nor of what he had done, nor the circumstances he was in, nor of the answers he would make; but rather it shews all the reverse, that he knew where he was, what he had done, and in what condition he was, and therefore it was in vain to seek to hide himself; or else ■ a summons to appear before him, the judge of all, and answer for his conduct, it was in vain for him to secrete himself, he must and should appear: the force of which words he felt, and therefore was obliged to surrender himself, as appears from what follows.

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, &c.] No sooner does Adam commit one sin, than he added another to it, by concealing the cause, and giving ■ evasive and deceitful reply to his Maker. He had often heard the voice of God with pleasure in the garden, but now he is to meet him as an almighty judge, whom he had offended: he now hides himself through fear of his wrath.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

12 And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

14 ¶ And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

15 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.

16 ¶ Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee.

17 And unto Adam he said, because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

18 Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field;

19 In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

20 And Adam called his wife's name Eve, because she was the mother of all living.

wrath and displeasure, which he had justly incurred by his disobedience, and because of his sin, which had made his soul naked, though he was not as yet ingenuous to confess it.

11, 12, 13 And he said, &c.] The trembling criminals being called from their retreat, before their judge, were asked whether they had eaten of the forbidden tree. They cannot deny their crimes; but, before they confess, endeavour as much as possible to excuse it. Adam throws the blame of his transgression upon his wife; insinuating, that the very woman who had been given as a help meet for him, pointing to her, had become his ruin; thereby tacitly impeaching the goodness of God, who had given her. The woman, convinced that the charge brought against her was just, endeavours to exculpate herself, by transferring the crime upon the serpent.

14 And the Lord God said unto the serpent, &c.] Having brought our first parents to a just sense of their crime, God next pronounces upon them and the serpent some proper punishments. He begins with the serpent, as the principal offender. As the serpent had cooperated with the devil, to the dishonour of God and destruction of mankind, God curses it above the whole animal creation, and degrades it from flying in the air, or walking with its head and breast erect, to go crawling upon the ground; and, instead of feeding on herbs and fruits, to live, in a great measure, on the dust of the earth. "That old serpent, the devil," he curses above the whole rational creation, by degrading him farther from heaven, and abandoning him finally to the love and practice of evil, as his sole delight, and to that utter disgrace and misery to which he should be condemned to all eternity.

15 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, &c.] Though this is true of the animal serpent, yet it has a particular respect to the old serpent, the devil; and implies, that however he and the woman had been combined against God, their friendship should soon issue in the greatest enmity between each other, and especially between their seed. By the seed of the woman, all interpreters understand Christ the Saviour; not excluding his friends and followers in every age and nation of the world.

16 Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow, &c.] Next to the serpent, the woman was in the transgression; and therefore next to the serpent, she receives her sentence. Her punishment was sorrow in conception, and pain in child-birth, which women above all creatures have been observed to endure; subjection in all her desires to the will of her husband, whose advice she had neglected, following her own; and, Adam's greater dominion over her than was either given him, or he would ever have exercised, in a state of innocence.

17 And unto Adam he said, &c.] Last of all, Adam received his sentence; which was, that the ground, instead of its original fertility, should be cursed with barrenness, briars, and thorns; and whereas it would have produced every thing with little culture, all things must now be forced from it by toilsome labour; that instead of the delicious fruits of Paradise, he must now go eat the herbs of the field, in-common with the beasts; that, with the sweat of his brow, 21 Unto Adam also and his wife did the LORD God make coats of skins, and clothed them.

22 ¶ And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever:

23 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground, from whence he was taken.

24 So he drove out the man: and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden, Cherubims, and a flaming sword, which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. III.

Here we are informed, how sin and death came into the world.

This account of Adam's sin was committed to writing, that it might appear that God is not the author of sin, but that man fell into it wilfully, and through his own fault. We learn also, from the fall of our first parents, how dangerous it is to disbelieve what God has declared, to give ear to temptations, and to follow the desire of the flesh; and with how much care we ought to watch over ourselves, and be obedient in all things to the laws of the Lord, even in those things that appear to be of the least importance. We may also learn from what happened to Adam and Eve after their sin, and the punishment that God inflicted on them, in making them subject to the miseries of this life, and to death itself, and driving them out of the garden of Eden, that the divine threatenings are never in vain, and that God cannot suffer man's disobedience to go unpunished. But the goodness of God, at the same time, appeared in the promise, that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head; the meaning of which was, that God would deliver men from sin and death, which were entered into the world by the seducement of the devil. Let us bless God for fulfilling this promise, by sending Jesus Christ into the world to destroy the works of the devil, and to procure us an admission into the heavenly paradise, where he has prepared for us happiness that shall never have an end.

C H A P.

he must earn his bread; and finally, that instead of being translated, soul and body, to the Paradise above, his body should return to its original dust, and the immortal spirit, to God who gave it.

20 And Adam called his wife's name Eve, &c.] The only name given to her before in the original was Ilcha, woman or wife; now Adam calls her Chavah, or Eve, "living" or "giving life;" because, by the promise of God, she was not only to live herself, but to be the mother of all mankind, and particularly of the great Redeemer, by whom they were to be recovered from death to life everlasting.

21 God made coats of skins, and clothed them.] These were made of the skins of beasts, slain, not merely for this purpose, nor for food, but for sacrifice; as a type of the woman's seed, whose heel was to be bruised, and who was to suffer death for the sins of men, and therefore to keep up and direct the faith of our first parents to the slain Lamb of God from the foundation of the world, and of all believers in all ages, until the Messiah should come and die, and become a sacrifice for sin, the sacrifices of slain beasts were appointed: and of the skins of these the Lord God, either by his almighty power, made coats for the man and his wife, or by the ministry of angels; or he instructed and directed themselves to make them, which was an instance of goodness to them, not only to provide food for them as before, but also raiment; and which, though not rich, fine, and soft, yet was substantial, and sufficient to protect them from all inclemencies of the weather; and as they might serve to put them in mind of their fall, so of their mortality by it, and of the condition sin had brought them into; being in themselves, and according to their defects, like the beasts that perish; as also they were emblems of the robe of Christ's righteousness, and the garments of his salvation, to be wrought out by his obedience, sufferings, and death: with which being arrayed, they should not be found naked, nor be condemned, but be secured from wrath to come.

22 Behold, the man is become as one of us, &c.] What God here says has generally been considered as an irony or sarcasm, upbraiding our first parents with that knowledge of good and evil, and the resemblance thereby of the divine omniscience they had acquired. But there is plainly no irony here, but on the contrary, a most pathetic lamentation over his ruined condition and gracious resolution to turn him out of Paradise, lest his vain hopes to fortify himself against death, by eating of the tree of life, should tempt him to neglect the great salvation, which was offered to him in God's covenant.

24 So he drove out the man, &c.] Who being unwilling to go out upon the orders given, some degree of force was exerted, to oblige him to depart: the word used for the turning man out of Paradise, signifies that he was turned out as a divorced woman from the house of her husband, never to be admitted back; so Adam was driven from the presence and communion with God, from his house and habitation, from his seat of pleasure and garden of delight, and from all the comfortable enjoyments of life, an emblem of that separation and distance, which sin makes between God and his creature, and of that loss which is sustained thereby.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

1 And Adam knew his wife.] Several Jewish writers are of opinion, especially Jarchi, that Adam "had known" his wife, even before he sinned and was drove out of the garden, and think he otherwise would not have observed the command, "Be fruitful and multiply:" but if Adam had begotten children in a state of innocence, they would have been free from sin, and not tainted with the corruption of nature after contracted; however others imagine it was thirty years after their expulsion out of paradise.

I have gotten a man from the Lord.] A gift or blessing from him, as children are; some render it, "I have gotten a man, the Lord;" that promised seed that should break the serpent's head; by which it appears, that she took the seed to be a divine person, the true God, even Jehovah, that should become man; though she must have been ignorant of the mystery of his incarnation, or of his taking flesh of a virgin, since she conceived and bare Cain through her husband's knowledge of her: however, having imbibed this notion, it is no wonder she should call him Cain, a possession or inheritance, since had this been the case, she had got a goodly one indeed: but in the event she was sadly mistaken, he proved not only to be a mere man, but to be a very bad man.

2 And she again bare his brother Abel, &c.] We are not informed what time elapsed between the birth of Cain and Abel, but perhaps the following year. It is the common opinion of the Jews, that with Abel, as with Cain, was born a twin-sister. Abel signifies vanity. This name, if given him from his birth, might denote the small esteem his mother had of him, in comparison of Cain, who she hoped was to be the promised seed: or if he was so called, as some have thought, only after his death, his name is expressive of that disappointment in their hopes in Cain, and their sense of the vanity of human life, that the fate of Abel plainly taught them.

3, 4 And in process of time, &c.] "In the end of days," as the Hebrew text is; that is, either at the end of the year, or of the days of the week, the two brothers brought each of them an oblation to the Lord. Cain, as an husbandman, brought of the produce of the grounds he cultivated: Abel, as a shepherd, some of the firstlings of his flock, with the fat of them. Cain's sacrifice was wholly a thank-offering to God for the blessings of his providence. Abel's was not only a thank-offering, but also of the expiatory kind; and while it was an expression of gratitude for the blessings of the divine Providence, it was also typical of the atonement of Christ, and expressive of his hope of redemption through him. Cain, it would seem, offered not the best of his fruits, but Abel the very best of his flock. But what made the chief difference between them, was, that Cain presented his offering while his heart was withheld: Abel brought both his person and sacrifice an offering to the Lord. He presented his oblation, and performed the other parts of worship, with faith in God and the promised Saviour, Heb. xi. 4. and with sincerity, humility, and love. Accordingly God had respect to Abel and to his sacrifice; and signified his acceptance of it either by words, by fire from the Shechinah consuming the sacrifice, or some other mark of approbation, conspicuous to those that beheld it. Upon seeing Abel's offering accepted, and his rejected, Cain is displeased with God, for the distinction he had made, and enraged at Abel for the preference he had obtained.

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted, &c.] To appease Cain's wrath, God here assures him, that he was no respecter of persons; that if Cain were influenced by the same faith and piety with Abel, he and his sacrifice should be equally respected; that if in any thing he acted contrary to his duty to God, or charity to his brother, the punishment due to his sin was ready to overtake him; and that whatever preference Abel held in religious matters, still, as the younger brother, he should be subject to the elder, and pay him all the respect his birth-right claimed.

8 And Cain talked with Abel his brother.] In a kind and friendly

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door. And unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 ¶ And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him.

9 And the LORD said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

10 And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground.

11 And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand;

12 When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a fugitive, and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

manner, and thereby took the advantage of him. The Jerusalem Targum give us an account of what passed between them. "Cain said to Abel his brother, there is no judgment, nor judge, nor will a good reward be given to the righteous; nor will vengeance be taken of the wicked, neither is the world created in mercy, nor governed in mercy; otherwise, why is thine offering received with good will, and mine not?" Abel replied, "There is a judgment;" and went on denying every thing Cain had advanced, that gave reason why the offering of the one was accepted, and the other rejected.

Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him.] In a furious manner assaulted him, without any just provocation, and took away his life with some instrument or other, perhaps that was used in husbandry, which might be on the spot where they were.

9 And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother?.] Here God interposes, and takes notice of the concerns of this lower world, where human society was not so regularly formed, as to admit of a judicial government. He addresses himself to Cain, and enquires after his brother, in order to bring Cain to a conviction and confession of his sin, to touch his conscience with it, and fill his conscience with remorse for it; and for the aggravation of it, observes the relation of Abel to him, his brother.

And he said, I know not.] This, however, did not strike the conscience of the murderer, for without the least regard to God, and apparently not afraid of his crime, he replies without the least concern,

Am I my brother's keeper?.] Expressing his admiration that God should put such a question to him, since he knew he had not the charge of his brother, and that he was at the age to take care of himself; and if not, it rather belonged to God and his providence to take care of him, and not to him. This shews him to be under the influence of Satan, and that he was so blinded by him, as to forget whom he was speaking to; that he was the omniscient God, and knew the wickedness he had done, and the falsehoods he now uttered, and was capable of confronting him with both, and of inflicting deserved punishment on him.

10 And he said, What hast thou done?.] The omniscient God, after Cain's evasive and irreverent answer, charges him expressly with the horrid crime of murder, and of the murder of his own brother. It is in the original bloods, in the plural number, which the Jews generally understood of the posterity that would have descended from Abel, had he not been murdered.

12 It shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength.] The earth had been cursed for Adam's sin, and was not so fruitful as in its primeval state; and now it was cursed again for Cain's sin; not the whole earth, but that part which belonged to Cain, and was cultivated by him; and so it must be supposed to be cursed, not only in the spot where he had been settled, but in every other place where he should come and occupy; and which, through this additional curse, became so barren, that it did not yield such good fruits, and such an increase of it, as before; it lost its native and vital juice, by which seed cast into it became not so fruitful, and did not increase; but instead of this, though much pains were taken to manure it, and much was sown, yet it brought forth little, at least but little to Cain, whatever it did to others; and therefore it is said, shall not yield unto thee; it would not turn much to his account, or yield much profit and increase to him, or bring forth much fruit. And God said, that he shall be banished far from the habitation of his father, to rove through the earth a fugitive, abhorred of him and man! The Septuagint render it "groaning and trembling;" the guilt of his sin lay heavy on his conscience, and filled him with such horror and terror, that he was continually fighting and groaning, and was seized with such a tremor, that he shook in all his limbs.

13 My punishment is greater than I can bear, &c.] Or, as it is in the original, "My sin is greater than can be forgiven," despairing of the mercy of God, having no faith in the promised seed, and in the 13 And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth.

14 ¶ Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

15 And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of: the length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.

16 A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark

■ The sons of God, &c.] We understand by this term the children of Seth, and, by the daughters of men, the daughters of Cain, who were immersed in wickedness, and abandoned to every vice. Hence the sense of the verse will be, that the children of Seth contracted an alliance with the daughters of Cain, and joined in the universal corruption of mankind.

3 My spirit shall not always strive with man] I will not suffer my laws and admonitions to be any longer trampled upon. God always considers men as moral agents, and therefore he makes use of every method that has any tendency to convert a rational being from the evil of his way. This, in the beautiful scriptural language, is called, drawing them with the cords of a man, with the bands of love. These are the strings of his Spirit, the struggles of his goodness, exerting itself in unwearied efforts to reclaim mankind from their extreme folly and perverseness.

Yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years] Though the wickedness of man is great, yet I will allow him one hundred and twenty years to repent in.

4 There were giants, &c.] The Hebrew word, translated giants, means men abandoned to all manner of wickedness, as well as such who were distinguished by their enormous bulk and stature.

5 That every imagination of the thoughts, &c.] This is not to be taken so strictly, as if not so much as one good thought had ever entered into the heart of any man in that age. The worst man that ever lived had some good dispositions, however transient and short-lived. But this emphatical description of the antediluvian wickedness signifies, that mankind were then arrived at the highest depravation, both in principle and practice. See parallel instances, Psalms xiv. 3. and liii. 4.

6 And it repented the Lord, &c.] All things past, present, and future, lie open at once to the view of the divine mind; and, therefore, that he is immutable in his counsels, and cannot repent, is one of the plainest dictates both of natural and revealed religion: for he is not a man that he should repent. So that the expression of God's repenting, grieving, and the like, are only figurative, and adapted to the weakness of our comprehensions; signifying not any change in God himself, but only a difference in the event with regard to us. Thus good parents and princes, without any change in themselves, encourage or discourage their respective children or subjects, according as they change their behaviour for the better or the worse. Thus laws themselves, which can have no affection, nor change of affection, towards one person or another, yet vary their effect, themselves remaining unvaried. Thus when it is here said, God repented, &c. the meaning is, that he was resolved to alter his conduct; and as men, when they repent of any thing, endeavour to undo it, so was the Almighty determined to destroy man, whom he had created; as it follows,

7 I will destroy—both man and beast, &c.] As God had made the beasts for the service and delight of man, so too they must perish with him, as part of the goods and inheritance which he had forfeited to the giver. Nor can God be charged with injustice or cruelty in their destruction, since, with respect to the innocent animals themselves, it is no more a punishment than a natural death; it is only recalling that temporary breath which God himself had given. And as the recalling at that time served to render this example of the divine severity against sin the more signal and tremendous to future ages, we may venture to affirm, it answered the purposes of God's moral government, even better than if he had saved them by miracle from the common wreck. And considered in this light, it is so far from being an imputation upon his justice, that it is rather an act of mercy: for whatever tends to reclaim inconsiderate mortals from their insatiation in counteracting the laws which infinite wisdom has devised to raise them to happiness, is an act of goodness and benevolence.

8 Found grace, &c.] Obtained grace and favour, which is noted to shew, that Noah was so far guilty of the common corruption of human nature, that he needed God's grace and mercy to pardon him. When pardoned, he was exempted from the general sentence; and having obtained forgiveness through faith, the flood that covered the world had no more power against him, than the flame which shall dissolve the elements will have to hurt those who shall at last be found sincerely penitent.

9 Noah was a just man] Noah lived in an age that was entirely depraved; when all flesh had corrupted its ways, and there were but seven persons besides himself left, who were servants of God, and lovers of righteousness: and yet, notwithstanding this universal degeneracy, behold how untouched he stood, and what a character he bore! Will any man, after this, pretend that it is impossible to withstand the influence of ill example, and to live up to the principles of religion and virtue among thousands, and ten thousand times ten thousands, that neglect and despise them?

In his generations, &c.] These words have a very significant meaning. They give us a right notion of the justice ascribed to Noah; that he was just, not in an absolute, but in a comparative sense, namely, that he was a very extraordinary man, considering the state of religion and virtue in those times, when the world was so universally wicked. He was not one of those who kept some commandments and broke others; but he was a man of uniform obedience and exact integrity.

11 The earth also was corrupt—and filled with violence.] The corruption here mentioned is thought to refer particularly to the impiety and irreligion of that age; that men had thrown off all reverence of the supreme being; were either gross idolaters, or quite profane and atheistical. And the earth's being filled with violence, plainly points to those notorious acts of oppression and injustice that were generally committed or authorized by the great, and even countenanced by the judges, who, instead of being redressors of wrong, were become the patrons of iniquity; so that the world became ripe for destruction.

12 All flesh had corrupted his way, &c.] The patience of God did not expire till he saw that the wickedness of man was grown great upon the earth, and that all flesh had corrupted his way; nor till it was necessary to drown the world to cleanse it, and to destroy mankind to reform it, by beginning a new world upon the only righteous family that was left of all the last generation of the old.

13 The end of all flesh is come, &c.] That is, the time of destruction is at hand. So the prophet expresses himself, "The end is come upon my people Israel," Amos viii. 2.

14 Make thee an ark] This was of the cypress tree, which abounded in the parts of Assyria about Babylon. Alexander built a navy of these trees, for that there was great plenty of them in the country of Assyria, but a scarcity of other timber fit for making ships. This wood is said to be very fit for the purpose, being less liable to rot than any other timber. For which reason the Egyptian sarcophagi, for preserving the bodies of their dead heroes, were made of it.

Rooms, &c.] Little cabins, or cells, to sever the beasts from the birds, the clean beasts from the unclean, and to preserve their several sorts of food.

15 The length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.] According to the common standard of one foot and a half to a cubit, the ark will be four hundred and fifty feet long, seventy-five broad, and forty-five feet high. But some make it more, every cubit, according to the Egyptian measurement, consisting of twenty-one inches, and eight hundred and eighty-eight decimals.

16 A window] Some understand, by this, one great window, which does not exclude other lesser ones. But others, with more reason, understand lights in general; nor was this the only use of windows, but to give air too to all the creatures in the ark. And it will be hard to conceive how one window could answer both these ends, especially when we consider that the ark had three stories.

ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

17 And, behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth shall die.

18 But with thee will I establish my covenant; and thou shalt come into the ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

19 And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female.

20 Of fowls after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind, two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

21 And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

22 Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. VI.

This chapter affords much improvement to every attentive reader, and particularly gives an useful admonition to comply with the will of God as graciously revealed to the children of men. "If ye are of me," says our blessed Saviour, "ye will keep my commandments:" thus the same principle is also taught throughout the scriptures. To fear God, and keep his commandments, is the whole [duty] of man. This is the one thing necessary: this is the great and only point we need to regard: this is our light, our life, our support, and the lifter-up of our head. Noah did according to all that God had commanded him, and thereby prepared an ark for the saving of his house. We should observe, that this is mentioned of Noah twice, as it were to raise our attention to such an important lesson of obedience.

Therefore these words, chap. viii. 6. "Noah opened the window of the ark," as if it had but one, might be better rendered, a window, or one of the windows.

In a cubit shalt thou finish it above.] i. e. When thou shalt have made all the rest of the ark, thou shalt then finish it by making thereto also a cover, which shall rise shelving, in order to throw off the rain and in such proportion, as that the top of the roof or cover shall rise above the sides of the ark but one cubit, or a foot and a half. Others understand it of the main window, which was to be raised a cubit above the roof of the ark.

17 Destroy all flesh, &c.] This proves, in the strongest manner, that the deluge was universal.

18 But with thee will I establish my covenant.] Made with Noah at this time, though not expressed, that on his making an ark as God directed him, and going into it at his command, he would preserve him whilst building it from the rage of wicked men, and save him in it, and his family, when the flood should come; and that they should come safe out of it, and repopulate the world, which should be no more destroyed by a flood; for this covenant respects that after mentioned, chap. ix. the promise of the Messiah, which should spring from him, for the fulfilment of which Noah and his family were spared; and this in every article God would confirm, of which he might be assured from his power, veracity, and faithfulness, and other perfections of his.

And thou shalt come into the ark] When the covenant would begin more clearly to be established, and more plainly to be fulfilled; Noah on the one hand being obedient to the divine will, having built an ark, and entering into it; on the other, God giving him leave, and in order to enter into it, and shutting him in to preserve him.

Thou and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.] That is, Noah and his wife, and his sons, and their wives, in all eight persons; and eight only, as the apostle Peter observes, 1 Pet. iii. 20. By this it appears that Noah's three sons were married before the flood, but as yet had no children.

19 Two of every sort, &c.] i. e. Of unclean beasts, chap. vii. 2.

20 Two of every sort shall come unto thee, &c.] In the foregoing verse it is said, "two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark." Which, left Noah should think impossible, is explained in these words; "they shall come unto thee;" viz. by the care of God who made them, and by instinct moved them to it; or perhaps the ministry of angels was employed in bringing them into the ark.

22 So did he.] Though the work of building the ark was laborious, costly, tedious, and seemingly foolish and ridiculous, especially when all things continued in the same posture and safety for such numbers of years together. Noah without doubt was, during this period, the sport and scorn of all those who did not believe what God had foretold. So that it is not strange that this is mentioned as an heroic act of faith in Noah, Heb. xi. 7. whereby he humbly went on in the work God had ordered him to do.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

1 The Lord said, &c.] When the ark was finished and furnished, and the time expired. Come, prepare to enter. The invitation comes from within the ark. Thy house, thy family; which consisted only of eight persons, Noah and his three sons, and their four wives: each had but one wife. If ever polygamy had been allowed, it must have been now, for the repeopling of the perishing world. Righteous, by faith, producing all the fruits of righteousness and true holiness. Before me, not only before men and seemingly, but really, and to my all-seeing eye.

2 Of every clean beast by sevens, &c.] The distinction of beasts into clean and unclean, with regard to their being eaten, was not established till the giving of the law to the Israelites. But with regard to their being offered in sacrifice, it is evident from this, that it obtained before the flood, and, it is natural to believe, was pointed out by God to mankind, from his first institution of sacrifice. Of the clean beasts Noah was to take seven seven, it is in the original, that is, seven couple; because they were to be offered in sacrifice when he came out of the ark, and were thenceforth to be given to man for food, Gen. ix. 3.

3 Of fowls, &c.] Of clean fowls: and of the unclean by two; as before of the beasts. To keep seed alive, The breed of them.

4 Yet seven days, &c.] Within seven days, which time God had allowed to the world a further space of repentance and accepting of mercy to their souls, though their bodies were doomed to death, whereof Noah doubtless gave them notice.

5 Lord commanded him.] Which is repeated, because an instance of his faith and obedience. How free from distraction that mind, which only has to know the will of God, and then to do it!

7 Noah went—into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.] Taking his last look of all the multitudes with whom he had lived, how must he be affected at their ruin: a prospect of distress, only supportable by the testimony God gave to the faithful discharge of his duty, in declaring to them, what God in mercy required him to make them acquainted with!

9 There went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female.] Of themselves, being impressed with an instinct from God so to do; or by the ministry of angels, observed on chap. vi. 20. there were two of a sort, some think four, and of some seven, or seven pairs.

As God had commanded Noah.] Which respects his own and his family's entrance and the creatures; both were commanded by God, and attended to by Noah, who was obedient in all things.

10 The waters of the flood were upon the earth.] That is, they began to be upon the earth; for it continued to rain from hence forty days and forty nights; and still the waters continued to increase, and it was an hundred and fifty days before they began to ebb.

11 All

Before
2349.

11 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heavens were opened.

12 And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

13 In the self-same day entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark;

14 They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every sort.

15 And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

16 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the LORD shut him in.

17 ¶ And the flood was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

18 And the waters prevailed; and were increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills that were under the whole heaven, were covered.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

21 ¶ And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

22 All in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died.

23 And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

11 All the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened.] It is to be remembered, that in the midst of the work of the creation, when God caused the dry land to appear, the waters under the heaven were gathered together under one place, Gen. i. 9. or, as the Psalmist instructs us, that God founded the earth upon the seas, and established it upon the floods; Psalm xxiv. 2. Now the eruption of so immense a body of water as is laid up in that capacious storehouse the centre of the earth, (especially when we add to this the other cause assigned by the historian, that the waters above the firmament came down to join those below; when the windows or sluices of heaven opened, and the waters fell upon the earth, not in ordinary showers, but in floods or cataracts) certainly will afford a supply sufficient to effect an universal deluge. And since the waters, we know, in the time of the chaos, did cover the earth, so that nothing of it could be seen, till God was pleased to make the separation, there is no reason to imagine why, upon a proper occasion, and at the will and for the service of God; they should not be able to resume their former station, and cover the earth again.

12 The rain was, &c.] How slowly does the justice of God here proceed, but how irresistible. The great rain was God's testimony to Noah's messages to mankind, and the gradual manner in which it came in the course of forty days, without intermission, was God's last call to the world to repent; and that mercy which made justice move so slowly, assuredly stood ready to receive, as at the eleventh hour, every penitent that truly turned to God, and cast itself upon his mercy, through that Mediator first promised to Adam, believed in by Abel, Enoch, and all the faithful, and so long, and so much in vain preached by Noah.

13 The self-same day entered Noah, &c.] On which the flood began: not in the dark, like one ashamed, or afraid, but when it was clear daylight, in public view of the world.

14 Every bird, &c.] The first word signifies the greater, the second the lesser sort of every kind of birds.

15 They went—into the ark, two and two of all flesh, &c.] All living creatures. And would not their ascending the ark be another call to a careless world?

16 The Lord shut him in.] Shut the door upon him. As the redeemed of the Lord will be at last shut in with God their Saviour in endless blessedness. Will there be no place of distinction for the despisers of the justice and mercy of God in that day? Shall the proofs of the flood be known to us, without occasioning any fears for the indignation which is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men?

24 ¶ And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VII.

Let us here piously reflect, that in the last period of the old world, God gives a proof that the whole earth was his, and all that is therein; that every thing existed by his will only, and that he could utterly destroy the earth, and all the inhabitants thereof, whenever he saw fit: and that men might know that this was so, he publicly declared, that he would destroy all the inhabitants of the earth, and that the manner in which he intended to do it; one hundred and twenty years before he put it in execution; that all succeeding generations might know that it was he, even he, that had done it; and from hence let us learn to fear him, before whom all the nations are as a drop of the bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance; yea, even are less than nothing, and vanity.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The waters asswage. 4 The ark resteth on Ararat. 6 Noah sendeth out a raven and a dove. 13 The earth is dried. 15 Noah, being commanded, goeth forth of the ark. 20 He buildeth an altar, and offereth sacrifice, which God accepteth, and promiseth to curse the earth no more.

AND God remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters asswaged;

2 The fountains also of the deep and the windows of heaven were stopped, and the rain from heaven was restrained;

3 And the waters returned from off the earth continually: and after the end of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 ¶ And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat.

5 And the waters decreased continually until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

17 The flood, &c.] That flood of waters which was poured down, increased, by the accession of more waters from above and beneath.

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills, that were under the whole heaven, were covered.] This verse not only clearly proves the universality of the deluge, but also fully confutes the opinion, that the face of the earth, before the deluge, was smooth, regular, and uniform; and that the rocks and mountains, which every where now appear, are owing to the violent concussions which then happened, and are nothing else but the ruins and fragments of the old world. That this deluge was not partial, is also further evident, because in every part of the known world there are certain records and traditions of it. The Americans, the Chinese, (the most distant people of Asia) and the several nations of Africa, have each their various and respective stories concerning it.

20 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail, &c.] That is, the depth of the water, on the tops of the highest mountains, was twenty-two feet.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VIII.

1 God remembered, &c.] This expression, when applied to God, signifies to regard with pity, compassion, and mercy, to take care of, succour, or support; and in this passage we may comprehend all these benevolent ideas.

4 And the ark rested in the seventh month.] That is, in the beginning of May, when the summer was making its approach, and the heat of the sun would help to carry off the waters, and warm the earth.

Upon the mountains of Ararat.] Various have been the opinions with regard to the true situation of mount Ararat; but the most consonant to reason is, that which places it about the middle of Armenia, near the river Araxes. The Septuagint and Syriac copies, which read, the mountains of Armenia, support this opinion: Josephus says, it was on the Gordycean mountains that the ark rested; and the Chaldee and Arabic, which read Cardu instead of Ararat, confirm his hypothesis. The benevolence and wisdom of God appears conspicuous in his choice of one of the highest mountains for the benefit of Noah and the creatures at their coming out of the ark; for the eminences being covered by the waters but a few days, the quantity of sediment would be inconsiderable, and the earth and vegetables in that situation, not much altered or damaged.

5 In the tenth month, &c.] This precise calculation of time shews, that the antediluvians had made their calendar of years, months, &c. though Moses the legislator afterwards reformed them.

Noah & his sons, & his Wife, & his sons Wives, & every Beast, &c. went forth out of the Ark.

6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened the window of the ark which he had made:

7 And he sent forth a raven, which went forth to and fro, until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

8 Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground;

9 But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot, and she returned unto him into the ark, for the waters were on the face of the whole earth: then he put forth his hand, and took her, and pulled her in unto him into the ark.

10 And he stayed yet other seven days; and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark;

11 And the dove came in to him in the evening; and, lo, in her mouth was an olive leaf pluckt off: so Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

12 And he stayed yet other seven days; and sent forth the dove; which returned not again unto him any more.

13 ¶ And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth: and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the second month, or the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

15 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, saying,

16 Go forth of the ark, thou, and thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

17 Bring forth with thee every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that they may breed abundantly in the earth, and be fruitful, and multiply upon the earth.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him.

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their kinds, went forth out of the ark. Before CHRIST 2348.

20 ¶ And Noah builded an altar unto the LORD; and took of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar.

21 And the LORD smelled a sweet savour: and the LORD said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done.

22 While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. VIII.

Let us here learn, from the severity of God's punishing a sinful world, what an odious thing sin is in his sight, who is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity. We may here likewise see the faithfulness of God in fulfilling his promise to Noah, when at the appointed time he delivered him out of the ark, and placed him safe on dry land. Also we here find that Noah is not forgetful of God's goodness. Humility taught, he could do nothing by which God could be profited, and therefore was thankful for the mercy shewn him. He gave the best proof he could of his sincerity; and God was so pleased with him, that his sacrifice was acceptable.

C H A P. IX.

1 God bleffeth Noah, granting him animal food, but forbidding the eating of blood, and murder. 8 God's covenant signified by the rainbow. 18 The earth is repopled from Noah. 20 He planteth a vineyard, is drunken, and mocked by Canaan, whom he curseth, and bleffeth his other sons. 28 His age and death.

AND God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

6 Forty days, &c.] This interval had elapsed after the tops of the mountains appeared, and was about the end of July.

7 A raven, which went to and fro, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, It went forth in going forth and in returning; which implies, it fluttered backward and forward, or took its flight from the ark, and returned again. The scent of dead carcases, Noah knew would draw the raven to some distance, and that when the waters were sufficiently abated, he would be so much employed in preying as not to return. The Vulgate, Septuagint, and Syriac, render this verse so as to signify that the raven went forth and did not return; and Bochart espouses this sense, on the authority of several famous rabbins, though the Chaldee, Samaritan, and Arabic support the common reading.

8 From him, &c.] The Septuagint and Vulgate translation is, after him, applying the word "him" to the raven, which preserves the connection, and shews that Noah staid some time after the departure of the raven, before he sent the dove.

9 The dove, &c.] The dove is famous for flying far; and being fond of feeding upon the ground, it was fit for making further discoveries; but finding no rest for the hollow of her foot, on account of the slime, returned to the ark.

10 And again he sent forth the dove out of the ark.] Very probably the self-same dove he had sent out before.

11 An olive leaf, &c.] This was probably brought from Assyria, a country famous for olive-trees, and might be chosen preferably to any other tree, because the leaves continue green, even under water, and might not be damaged as those of other trees were. This branch was a sufficient token that the waters were departed from the lower grounds: as the return of the dove was, that the earth was still wet, and covered with slime.

13, 14 In the six hundred and first year, &c.] Of Noah's life. The covering, though taken by most versions for the roof, seems rather, from the original, to signify some loose covering besides, like that of the tabernacle, which is expressed by the same Hebrew word: and the use of it might probably have been to hang over, and defend the windows of the ark.

20 Clean beasts, &c.] This is so far from proving that the distinction between clean and unclean beasts was made prior to the Mosaic law, that it strongly confirms the contrary. For if Moses, in his compendious manner, intended to inform the Jews what beasts were sacrificed on this occasion, he could not do it more briefly nor more plainly, than by naming them clean or the contrary. For the association of ideas acquired by the law would immediately bring to their minds the species that must have been offered.

22 The Lord smelled a sweet savour] From the purity of the intention, not from the sacrifice itself; his justice was satisfied, and the earth purged from sinful men and their corrupt manners, and, in a spiritual sense, sweetened.

Neither will I again smite any more, &c.] Referring to the destruction of the earth by a general conflagration; as if he had said, I will no more destroy the earth or its inhabitants by a flood, because I will, at the final doom, destroy it by fire. Dr. Young has judiciously censured both the cavillers at, and the supporters of the universality of the deluge. To the first he opposes the oracles of God, after the manner of our Saviour, who says, "If they will not hear Moses, or the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." The second he severely reproveth, for adopting the vain learning of the schools, who to display their erudition, drew forth the artillery of natural causes in support of the divine revelation, which supplies sceptics with weapons to beat down the fundamentals of religion, that must still rest on its own eternal basis, authority from God. However, not to omit giving some of the strongest arguments in favour of the universality of the deluge, we see the largest mountains of the earth in almost every part of it, abounding with shells, and skeletons of sea-fish, and sea-monsters of all kinds, and exhibiting incontestible monuments of the spoils of the ocean every where; secondly, if it was not to be universal, where was the occasion of an ark, the repository of all then living, since Noah might as well have been instructed to retire to some country where the flood was not to have prevailed? The beasts might have saved themselves by flight into remote continents, and the birds of the air might have fled to the remote dry grounds; but, indeed there are so many rational proofs for the universality, and so few for the partial flood, that divine authority stands in need of no support.

22 While the earth remaineth, &c.] In the original, "As yet all the days of the earth, and of sowing and harvest." The sense of this verse is, that as, during the former year, there had been neither reaping, sowing, nor any destination of the seasons, and the day differed but little from the night, while the rain continued; the world should not be subjected any more to a similar calamity, but that it should be destroyed by the general conflagration.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IX.

1 And God blessed Noah, &c.] The blessing pronounced upon Noah and his posterity, is renewed by this vast grant, no less than universal possession and dominion of the new earth; the flood was the forfeiture and penalty for non-allegiance, whereas by this renewal of lease and tenure, the curse on the old territory of man was fully accomplished, and man made a free tenant again, the Almighty still reserving to himself the clause of service and obedience, from the date of the flood.

2 And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air; upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered.

3 Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the green herb have I given you all things.

4 But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

5 And surely your blood of your lives will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it, and at the hand of man; at the hand of every man's brother will I require the life of man.

6 Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man.

7 And you, be you fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

8 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him saying,

9 And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

10 And with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.

11 And I will establish my covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

12 And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

13 I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

3 Every moving thing that liveth, shall be meat for you, &c.] In this general grant there were implied exceptions as appears by the law of Moses afterwards, who forbade the use of several moving things: this was, however, the first grant of animal food to man, either to shorten his duration with respect to age, or to cut off gradually the overstock of animals, subsequent from their future propagation; or as more nutritious food, substituted to supply the deficiency of the fruits of the earth, and to retrieve the enfeebled radical moisture of men, arising from an esculent food.

4 But flesh with the life thereof, &c.] These and the foregoing precepts, are general interdicts, not only with regard to the wanton infringements before the flood, but preliminary to future violations on the animal species; for it may be supposed that men sported with the animal creation; and departing from the allotment of esculent food, made excursions on the creatures, which this divine institution guards against, confining them to a proper use of animal food. The Tartars, Indians, and other wild savages, break in upon this wise fundamental to this day. The precept is also written or delivered to inspire a due sense of tenderness to the blood of the animals, as the grand preservative against murder, with all its train of human sacrifices, which, notwithstanding this institute, prevailed in the world soon after, and still subsists among several barbarous nations.

5 And surely your blood, &c.] This, in the Hebrew, is "for surely," as an inference implying the commutation of blood for blood reciprocally.

6 In the image of God, &c.] Murder is the most heinous sacrilege, because, of all things in the world, nothing is more sacred, nothing stamped with more lively characters of the divinity, than man. Murder is an act of high treason against the divine majesty, whom man represents in this lower world.

13 I do set my bow in the clouds, &c.] When the covenant is with the whole race of mankind, and so the sign of the covenant to serve only for a remembrance, that sign may be either a moral duty, or a natural phenomenon. This was the case of God's promise in the text. Here the Almighty made a natural and beautiful phenomenon, seen over the whole habitable world, the token of that covenant. It is wonderful to consider how this matter has been mistaken. Perhaps the word "set" did not a little contribute to it: the expression being understood absolutely, when it should have been taken for the qualified sense of setting for a token; and in this sense, and only in this sense, the bow was then first set in the cloud. Burnet supposing the Phenomenon of the rainbow did not exist before the flood, says, "It could not be a token of God's covenant, because being a common appearance, it would have given no extraordinary assurance of security." Tindal asserts, "Perhaps, not knowing the natural cause of the rainbow, occasioned that account we have in Genesis of its institution. God's appointing the rainbow to be a token, for perpetual generations, of his covenant with mankind, is called his institution of the rainbow." The words shew, this author took it for granted, that Moses represents God as then first setting his

14 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

15 And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

16 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

17 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

18 ¶ And the sons of Noah, that went forth of the ark, were Shem, and Ham, and Japheth: and Ham is the father of Canaan.

19 These are the three sons of Noah: and of them was the whole earth overspread.

20 ¶ And Noah began to be an husbandman, and he planted a vineyard:

21 And he drank of the wine, and was drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent.

22 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and told his two brethren without.

23 And Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father; and their faces were backward, and they saw not their father's nakedness.

24 And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him.

25 And he said, Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.

26 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

bow in the clouds. But this is founded in gross ignorance, of the nature of simple compacts and promises, in which the only security for performance is, the known good faith of the promiser. But in the case before us, the most novel, or most supernatural appearance, could add nothing to their assurance, arising from the evidence of God's veracity. As, on the contrary, had the children of Noah been ignorant of this attribute of the Deity, such an extraordinary phenomenon could have given no assurance at all. For what then, served the rainbow? For the wise purpose so well expressed by the sacred writer, "for a token of the covenant," that is, for a memorial or remembrance of it throughout all generations; a method of universal practice in contracts of all civilized nations.

20 And Noah began to be an husbandman, &c.] The word which we translate "began," signifies also "continued;" and the true sense is, Noah continued to be an husbandman; that is, he returned to the occupation he followed before the flood.

21 And he drank of the wine, &c.] It has justly been observed, that the word which we render "drunken," does not absolutely imply a great degree of intoxication, but only that he was discomposed, or heated by the liquor. And with regard to his being uncovered, the loose dress of those times rendered it easy for the wind, or any slight movement of the body, to expose those parts, which nature teaches us to conceal.

22 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness, &c.] Interpreters are divided with regard to the crime of Ham; but that which seems most consonant to reason is, that seeing the nakedness of his aged father, he made him the subject of his wanton mirth and raillery. Some are of opinion that Ham's crime consisted in committing incest with his father's wife; as the scripture phrase, to see or uncover his father's nakedness, signifies to lie with his father's wife. He supposes that Ham took the opportunity of his father's drunkenness, to execute his wicked design; that his brethren, having surprised him in the act, threw their garments over him and his accomplice, and then went and gave an account to their father of all they had seen: that Noah, highly enraged at this base action, ordered that Canaan, the issue of that incestuous commerce, should be wholly deprived of the inheritance. The text may be explained easily, if we consider the passage as a prophecy, which Noah then uttered, in order to mortify his wicked son, by foretelling that his violation of filial duty, would be retaliated upon him in the wretchedness and degeneracy of his children, particularly of Canaan's race. Nor will this appear at all forced, when it is considered that the words in the original are only "curse Canaan," as much as to say, ah, wretched, ill-fated Canaan! "A servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren."

26 Blessed be, &c.] If we refer the word "blessed," directly to Shem, as the word "curse," is to the father of Canaan, the words may be rendered, "blessed of Jehovah, my God, be Shem;" or, if we follow our own translation, we may observe the patriarch does not say, "blessed be Shem," as he said, "curse be," &c. for

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. IX.

We cannot help inserting here, the following practical remarks. It is one excellence of the holy scriptures, ■ well ■ a mark of their veracity, that they relate the frailties of good men, so as to make them an useful example of instruction to us, in all circumstances. In the scriptures we find no flattering and extravagant praises of its worthies, no absolute perfection is attributed to them, their faults are recorded as well as their virtues. Noah, we learn, had kept himself undefiled from all the pollutions of the old world; it is recorded of him, that even God himself said to him, "Thee have I seen righteous before ■ in this generation." But we here find him giving way to intemperance, and overcome with wine. Useful example to us of perpetual caution, and to keep a constant guard over ourselves, lest, when we think we shall stand, we may shamefully fall. Instructive example too, of the deceitfulness of strong drink, and how unawares it intoxicates and overthrows all the powers of the human reason; and of consequence how much it behoves us to be upon our guard against its enticements; and that we "look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright, for at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder." Its fatal mischiefs steal upon us like ■ treacherous enemy, unnoticed and unmasked: Who hath woe? (says the wife man) who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babblings? who hath wounds without cause? They that tarry long at the wine. It maketh the eyes to behold strange women, and the heart to utter perverse things.

We may further observe in this place, that the scriptures never mention any wickedness, without remarking the deceitfulness of sin; that it never gives us what it promiseth us, but the direct contrary. We have already seen how much all Cain's hopes and expectations from the murder of his brother failed him; instead of honour, and praise, and pleasure, and satisfaction, which it promised him, it gave him nothing but disgrace, and want, and trouble, and anguish of mind, and bitterness of soul. Noah expected pleasure, joy, and gladness of heart, from indulging in wine, but found himself thereby, made a derision to his children, and experienced disgust, and shame, and anguish.

It is a great truth, and the holy scriptures inculcate it, that sin always brings its punishment in its consequences, and that it never profiteth: "When ye were the servants of sin, what profit had you?"—We shall always find that sin will beguile us, and produce the contrary of what it promiseth us.

NOW these are the generations of the sons of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth: and unto them were sons born after the flood.

for men's evil springeth from themselves, but their good from God. The Lord being called the "God of Shem," intimates he would be so in ■ particular manner; and accordingly, the church of God was among the posterity of Shem for many generations; and of them, Rom. ix. 5. as concerning the flesh, came Christ.

27 God shall enlarge Japheth] That is, God shall enlarge the bounds of the countries possessed by the children of Japheth; a prediction which was fully accomplished; for not only Europe, but Lesser Asia, Media, part of Armenia, Iberia, Albania, and the vast regions towards the north, antiently inhabited by the Scythians, but now by the Tartars, fell to the share of his posterity.

He shall dwell in the Tents of Shem, &c.] That is, some of the countries of Shem shall be possessed by the descendants of Japheth, a prediction fully accomplished, when the Medes and Babylonians overthrew the Assyrian empire, and the Greeks and Romans conquered that part of Asia belonging to Shem.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

1 Generations, &c.] It is to be observed, that though this chapter be placed before the eleventh, yet, in order of time, it ought to follow; for the foundation of Nimrod's kingdom, and the dispersion of mankind through the different regions of the earth, are facts posterior to the confusion of Babel, in chap. xi.

This genealogy is of singular advantage to confirm the truth of Moses's history, by giving an account ■ of the succession of mankind from the creation to the flood, and from the flood to his own time; shewing from whom all nations were derived, and how they came to be dispersed. Besides, by tracing these genealogies, we come to know how exactly the predictions in the former chapter, relating to Noah, were fulfilled.

13 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, 14 And Pathrusim, and Casluhim, (out of whom came Philistim,) and Caphtorim.

15 ¶ And Canaan begat Sidon his first born, and Heth,

18 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite: and afterward were the families of the Canaanites spread abroad.

19 And the border of the Canaanites was from Sidon as thou comest to Gerar unto Gaza; as thou goest unto Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim, even unto Lasha.

20 These are the sons of Ham, after their families, after their tongues, in their countries, and in their nations.

21 ¶ Unto Shem also, the father of all the children of Eber, the brother of Japheth the elder, even to him were children born.

5 Isles of the Gentiles, &c.] We are not to understand by the word "isles," only such countries as are surrounded by the sea, but all such countries as were divided from the land of Canaan by the sea; for the word which we translate "isle," signifies also a country, region, or province.

8 He began to be a mighty one, &c.] The original, translated "a mighty one," or powerful, is differently rendered by the antient versions; the Septuagint translate it "a giant," an appellation in scripture, applied to persons of prodigious stature and strength, and likewise to such who delighted in martial toils, in barbarity, and wickedness. The Chaldee renders the word "a robust man." But the Syriac and the Arabic confirm the reading of the Septuagint, and seem to include, under the term, the ideas of immense stature, extraordinary strength, and insatiate barbarity.

9 He was a mighty hunter before the Lord, &c.] That is, he taught the people to chase and destroy the wild beasts. And if we consider that men now dwelt in tents, weakly defended, and consequently exposed to the ravages of wild beasts, we shall not be surprised that Nimrod, by delivering his associates from these savage enemies, should so far gain their affection, that it was an easy transition to raise himself from the state in which he was considered as their friend and benefactor, to the sovereign authority. He seems to have been ■ very tyrannical prince, his very name signifying a rebel, ■ apostate. He was the founder of the Babylonish empire, whence the prophet Micah calls it "the land of Nimrod."

10 The beginning of his kingdom was Babel, &c.] We may, by this expression, understand either that Babylon was the first city that he built, or the capital of his kingdom. He began his reign in the year of the world one thousand seven hundred and fifty-seven, and reigned about one hundred and forty-eight years.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. X.

In the latter part of this chapter, we see the origin of all the different nations now on the earth; which may teach us to look upon all men, of whatever country or nation, however different in manners and customs, with respect, brotherly good nature, and affection. For, in reality, however separated, we are all brethren, as being descended from one and the same stock, or family.

25 Peleg, for in his days was the earth divided, &c.] Abram was descended from this son of Eber. His name was called Peleg, which implies "division," because about the time of his birth, the great dispersion of mankind, related in the succeeding chapter, happened. From the deluge to Peleg's birth, is that period which the antient poets call the golden age, because then men enjoyed all things in common; and Noah, whom they call Saturn, governed them, not as kings do their subjects, but as parents their children.

27 Hadoram.] Some footsteps of this name, it is thought, are preserved in the Drimoti of Pliny, towards the Persian gulf.

Uzal, &c.] This is the name given to Sanaa, the capital of Yaman, by the Jews who dwelt there.

28 Obal.] The Arabic pronunciation is Aubal, whose posterity passed the Arabian gulf, out of Arabia Felix, into that part of Africa, called Troglodytica, where we meet with some traces of his name, in the gulf named Abalites, and a great trading town of the same name.

Abimael, &c.] Which the Arabians pronounce Ahimal, i. e. the father of the Mali or Malitæ, a people in Arabia, mentioned by Ptolomy and others. So that Mali is probably the contraction of Abimali, as Salem for Jerusalem.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XI.

1 Of one language, &c.] The language now universally spoke, is allowed to be the same with that used by Adam, from whom it might easily be communicated to Methuselah, and from him to his grandson Noah, who propagated it among his posterity to this time.

2 And they found a plain in the land of Shinar, &c.] The plain here mentioned, is situated on the banks of the Tigris, and is supposed to comprehend the whole country of Eden, the happy seat of man in a state of innocence.

3 Slime they had for mortar.] The slime here mentioned, is the asphaltites, or what some authors call bitumen, a kind of liquid pitch. Suidas says, that this cement, being mixed with bricks and small stones, became as strong as iron.

4 Let us build us a city, and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven.] Some interpreters are of opinion, that the raising a tower to heaven implies, erecting a temple in honour to heaven, or the heavenly bodies. It has also been conjectured, that this tower was consecrated, by the builders of it, to the sun, as the cause of drying up the waters of the deluge. Others, with better authority, think they began a strong city.

Let us make us a name, &c.] That is, let us render our name tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

5 And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

6 And the LORD said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.

7 Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.

8 So the LORD scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called Babel: because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

10 ¶ These are the generations of Shem; Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood:

13 And Arphaxad lived after he begat Salah four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

14 And Salah lived thirty years, and begat Eber:

15 And Salah lived after he begat Eber four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

16 And Eber lived four and thirty years, and begat Peleg:

20 And Reu lived two and thirty years, and begat Serug.

21 And

famous among future generations, by some monument that may command their admiration. Thus we see ambition was what animated them to undertake this laborious task. They had no sooner fixed on a place to settle in, but they determined to render it remarkable to future ages, by building a strong city, which should be the wonder of the world. Their intention was to settle here, and build an useless monument for fame, instead of replenishing the earth, as was then necessary; and therefore God, in his wisdom, scattered them abroad.

5 The Lord came down, &c.] That is, he observed their works, and knew the intention of their hearts.

6 And now nothing will be restrained from them, &c.] The true sense is evidently this. And now nothing will hinder them from executing their project, unless I interpose, or rather, they imagine to do as they will.

7 Let us go down, and there confound their language, &c.] We have here an account of a transaction which has greatly perplexed the heathen philosophers, namely, how mankind came to speak such a multiplicity of languages. But the sacred historian has cleared up this difficulty, by shewing us that it was effected by the same almighty power, which taught our first parents to speak one tongue in the beginning, and, in after ages, inspired the apostles of our blessed Redeemer, with the gift of many.

8 And they left off to build the city.] This structure, however, long remained a monument of human vanity. Herodotus, who viewed the building attentively, tells us, that it was a square of a furlong on each side, and consequently half a mile in circumference. The height was equal to the circumference of the base, and divided into eight towers, built one upon another; but probably what made it appear like eight towers, was, the manner of its ascent, which was a circular, or winding way, carried round the outside of the building to its highest point. This ascent was so very broad, that it afforded room for horses, and carriages to pass by each other, and even to turn: and the towers, which appeared like so many stories, one upon another, were each of them seventy-five feet high, containing many stately rooms, with arched roofs, supported by pillars, which were made parts of the temple, after the tower was consecrated to the worship of false gods.

9 The name of it called Babel, &c.] Which is not that tower which was built by Belus, and which perpetuated his name to future ages; for that was a production of great art: whereas this tower of Babel cannot well be imagined to have been any other but a rude, mountainous structure, raised with no great art, by a multitude of untaught, and unexperienced builders.

1923. 31 ¶ And Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter in law, his son Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there.
1921. 32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XI.

We may observe, in the above chapter, a remarkable particular: the great decrease of the number of years of man's life after the flood. Many are of opinion, that this proceeded from an alteration in the air, and other natural causes: however, we have reason to think it an act of great wisdom in God. For, had the lives of men been continued to the length they were at first, the earth would, in a course of years, have been overstocked; whereas now, life and death keep nearly an equal pace with each other. Besides this, it is highly probable, that the great length of the lives of those before the flood made men insolent, and thoughtless of any thing but the present world; and therefore the shortening of the lives of men, without doubt, was an act of great benevolence as well as wisdom, and contributed to make them less vain of their own strength, and to reflect that they were but weak mortal creatures, beings, as it were, of a day.

26 And Terah lived seventy years, and begat Abram, &c.] This is the first time that we meet with Abram, the father of the faithful, and though he is named first, does not appear to be the eldest, but rather Haran; nay, it seems pretty plain, that Abram was not born until the hundred and thirtieth year of his father's life, for Terah was two hundred and five years old when he died, ver. 32. and Abram was but seventy-five years of age when he went out of Haran to Canaan, chap. xii. 4. and that was as soon as his father died there; and so that if seventy-five were taken out of two hundred and five, there will remain one hundred and thirty, in which year, and not before, Abram must be born: the wife of Terah, of whom Abram was born, according to some Jewish writers, was named Chamtelaah, the daughter of Carnebo; and others call her Amthai: the Jews say Terah was the first that found out the way of coining money, and that in his days men began to worship images, and that he was the chief of their priests, but afterwards repented; and that he was an idolater, appears from Josb. xxiv. 2.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah] In his father's presence, before his face, in his life-time, as Jarchi; he seeing him, as Aben Ezra: It does not so much respect the time of his death, that it was before his father, though this is true, as the place where he died, his father being present there, at the time this was.

In the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Chaldees.] Ur, which some translate a valley, was the place of his birth, as it was of Abram's; it was in Mesopotamia, that part of it next to Assyria, being called the land of the Chaldeans. Josephus says, that Haran died among the Chaldeans, in a city called Ur, where, he adds, his grave is shewn to this day. The Jews have a fable concerning the death of Haran: they say that Terah was not only an idolater, but a maker and feller of images; and that one day going abroad, he left his son Abram in the shop, to sell them, who, during his father's absence, broke them all to pieces, except one; upon which, when Terah returned and found what was done, he had him before Nimrod, who ordered him to be cast into a burning furnace, and he should see whether the God he worshipped would come and save him; and whilst he was in it, they asked his brother Haran in whom he believed? he answered, if Abram overcomes, he would believe in his God, but if not, in Nimrod; wherefore they cast him into the furnace, and he was burnt; and with respect to this it is said, "and Haran died before the face of Terah his father," but Abram came out safe before the eyes of them all.

CHAP. XII.

Before
1921.

- 1 God calleth Abram, and blesteth him with a promise of Christ. 4 He with Lot departeth from Haran. 6 He journeyeth through Canaan, which is promised him in a vision. 10 He is driven by a famine into Egypt, where fear maketh him feign his wife to be his sister. 14 Pharaoh taketh her into his house, but by plagues is compelled to restore her; and sendeth Abram away.

NOW the LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

2 And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

3 And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4 ¶ So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

6 ¶ And Abram passed through the land into the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mount on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

9 And Abram journeyed, going on still toward the south.

10 ¶ And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

1 Had said unto Abram] The Almighty had revealed himself to Abram before his father's death, while he lived in Ur of the Chaldees; but probably it was by a voice, the Shechinah, or symbol of the Divine presence; for Stephen expressly says, The God of glory appeared unto him before he dwelt in Haran, Acts vii. 2.

Get thee out, &c.] As the Lord did not shew him whither he was to go, the readiness with which he complied, added to the merit of his faith, as appears from Heb. xi. 8. "He went out, not knowing whither he went."

3 And in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed.] This part of the promise is remarkable, as containing the proper end of God's choice, and separation of him and his posterity, and so very fitly made, by the sacred writer, the foundation of the history of God's dispensations to him, and a mark to direct the reader to what they are all ultimately to be referred.

5 The souls that they had gotten, &c.] The word rendered "souls," signifies "persons, or servants," and the word translated "gotten," signifies "to secure or get possession of." The sentence, therefore, implies "domestics, or servants." The Jews add, which the text seems to countenance, that these servants were profelyted to the belief of the true God.

6 The place of Sichem, &c.] That is, the spot where Sichem was built afterwards. "The plain of Moreh," is the sense of the Chaldee, but the Hebrew signifies, "the oak of Moreh;" the Septuagint read, "the lofty oak," but the Syriac and Arabic, "the oak of Mamre." This place was probably grown with oaks, or remarkable for an exceeding high one. The Samaritan will bear the sense of "the valley of vision," which sense the Vulgate supports, by rendering "the illustrious valley." The faith of Abram is strongly recommended, by his venturing into these parts, which were settled or invaded by the Canaanites, a cruel and savage people.

7 Unto thy seed, &c.] Abraham, at his first leaving his father's house, entirely resigned himself to the disposal of heaven, without knowing for certain whither he was to go. When he was come into the land of Canaan, his faith was rewarded by God, with a farther revelation of his will, and he was now told that this was the land which God said he would shew him, and which was to be inherited by his seed.

8 And called, &c.] The Chaldee renders these words, "he prayed in the name of God;" to distinguish his addresses and his confidence

Before CHRIST 1921. 10 ¶ And there was a famine in the land : and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was grievous in the land.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art a fair woman to look upon.

12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife : and they will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

13 Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister : that it may be well with me for thy sake; and my soul shall live because of thee.

1920. 14 ¶ And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians beheld the woman that she was very fair.

15 The princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house.

16 And he entreated Abram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen, and he asses, and menservants, and maidservants, and she asses, and camels.

17 And the LORD plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai Abram's wife.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

20 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XII.

We may here see that the world was not as yet become so corrupt and full of violence since the flood, as it had been before. We find in Pharaoh, and afterwards in the case of Abimelech, on the like occasion, a kind of integrity of mind, love of justice, even to strangers, and respect for the sacredness of the marriage union, even in kings who had power in their hands to do what they would. From this, and Abram's travelling unmolested through different countries, we are of opinion, that the Egyptians, and several other kingdoms, still continued in the worship of the true God.

C H A P. XIII.

1 Abram and Lot return out of Egypt. 7 On a strife between their servants they agree to part. 10 Lot goeth to Sodom. 14 God reneweth his promise to Abram. 18 He removeth to Hebron, and there buildeth an altar.

AND Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the south.

confidence towards the true God, from those of the surrounding idolaters.

10 Went down into Egypt, &c.] This kingdom is represented as abounding in corn, and capable of relieving others in a time of famine, which no kingdom can do, where agriculture has not been improved by art, and regulated by a civil policy.

13 Say—thou art my sister, &c.] This action of Abram has been severely censured by several of the ancient fathers; but Sarai was in reality his sister, both having the same father, though a different mother. The Chaldee renders "because of thee," by "because of thy words."

17 The Lord plagued Pharaoh] To prevent abuse, God inflicted some terrible distemper upon the king and his court, which is thought to have been of such a nature, that they who were seized with it, were rendered incapable to enjoy her, or any other woman. Josephus says Pharaoh was visited with a plague and sedition at once, and that in this distress he had recourse to the priests, who, upon sacrificing, reported that this calamity was befallen him for the violence and abuse he designed upon the wife of a stranger.

Because of Sarai, Abram's wife.] We are apt to imagine, that because Pharaoh clears himself of any intention to violate a married woman, he was therefore quite innocent in this matter. But it was an argument of very intemperate lust, to desire and seize on a strange woman, merely because she was commended for her beauty. He was guilty in taking from a stranger his supposed sister, to make her his concubine, thus breaking all the sacred laws of hospitality.

20 And Pharaoh, &c.] Here is a mention made of Abram's reply by way of excuse, he having doubtless been sensible of his weakness in that particular, and acknowledged the same freely, together with the special favor of the Lord, in managing the whole business to such an issue.

2 And Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys from the south even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Hai;

4 Unto the place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there Abram called on the name of the LORD.

5 And Lot also, which went with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and tents.

6 And the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 ¶ And there was a strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: and the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled then in the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.

9 Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

10 ¶ And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto Zoar.

11 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelled in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

13 But the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

15 For all the land which thou seeest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.

16 And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

18 ¶ Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and built there an altar unto the LORD.

GENERAL

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIII.

4 And called on the name of the Lord.] See ch. viii. 12.

6 The land was not able to bear them, &c.] This was not so much owing to its want of fruitfulness, as want of room, it being already settled by other nations.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, let there be no strife, I pray thee, &c.] How ready was Abram to prevent all kinds of animosity! To prevent any misunderstanding between him and Lot, he proposes a friendly separation; nor does he propose even this, without adding an endearing reason, "for we be brethren."

10 As thou comest unto Zoar.] Zoar was not in the land of Egypt, but at a prodigious distance from it. But if we insert the words, "even as the garden of the Lord, like the land of Egypt," in a parenthesis, then the meaning of the verse will amount to this; that before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, the plain of Jordan was like a delightful garden, well watered, even to the utmost skirts of the plain, where Zoar was situated. But if, with the Syriac version, instead of Zoar, we read Zoan, the ancient seat of the kings of Egypt, Numb. xii. 22. which stood in the south part of it, in a country well watered, the true import of the passage will be this; that the plain of Jordan, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, was well watered every where; yea, the plain was so well watered, that it was like the garden of Eden, or the land of Egypt, and particularly as thou goest to Zoan.

13 Sinners before the Lord, &c.] Abominably wicked. This is added to prepare the reader for their terrible catastrophe, related ch. xviii.

14, 15 Look from the place, &c.] Every successive revelation given to Abram, was a reward of his piety, and clearer than that which preceded. Thus God marks out the bounds of the land, which he assured him should be given to him, and his seed for ever; which seed should be as the dust of the earth for number.

COMMENTARY

The above chapter naturally furnishes us with this reflection, that Love is called, in the New Testament, the royal law, the fulfilling of the law, Rom. xii. ult. and is accounted one of the two pillars on which hang all the law and the prophets. Jesus Christ himself, the light of the world, our true instructor, after having told men, "that to love the Lord our God with all our heart, and with all our soul, and with all our mind, is the first and great commandment," adds, "and the second is like unto it, thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

What great inducement is here to be kind and affectionate to each other, to avoid strife, contention, and quarrelling, to love as brethren: how instructive is Abram's behaviour! Though he was the elder, and might justly claim some superiority over Lot, yet how nobly and modestly does he give it up! "Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me; if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left."

What a noble example have we of modesty and condescension; to give up what may be our just due, for the sake of brotherly love; to be humble, how great forever our station; and to be kind and submitting upon all occasions!

AND it came to pass in the days of Amraphel king of Shinar, Arioch king of Ellasar, Chedorlaomer king of Elam, and Tidal king of the nations;

3 All these were joined together in the vale of Siddim, which is the salt sea.

4 Twelve years they served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

5 And in the fourteenth year came Chedorlaomer, and the kings that were with him, and smote the Rephaims in Alhteroth Karnaim, and the Zuzims in Ham, and the Emims in Shaveh Kiriathaim,

6 And the Horites in their mount Seir, unto Elparan, which is by the wilderness.

7 And they returned, and came to Enmishpat, which is Kadesh, and smote all the country of the Amalekites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt in Hazezon-tamar.

8 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboim, and the king of Bela (the same is Zoar;) and they joined battle with them in the vale of Siddim;

1 Shinar, &c.] That is, Babylon; Ellasar is Syria; Elamis, Persia; nations of a country inhabited by many nations; perhaps the same with that afterwards called Galilee. Josh. xii. 23.

10 Full of slimepits, &c.] Pits or wells of bitumen, with which the country abounded.

12 And they took Lot—who dwelt in Sodom, &c.] Lot being a neighbour of the men of Sodom, and a sojourner among them, partakes of their punishment, he and his family being taken captives, and all his substance, his cattle, wealth, and riches of every sort, were carried off by the invaders: and that was a just correction of him, for being allured by temporal conveniences, to dwell among such wicked people.

13 Abram the Hebrew, &c.] The word "Heber," rendered "the Hebrew," signifies "the side," and accordingly the Septuagint translate it, "the stranger from beyond the river:" an appellation given by the Canaanites to Abram and his family, from their coming, "from the other side of the Euphrates."

18 Melchizedek.] Some think it was Shem. But can it be thought that Shem should reign over the children of Ham? Shem's progenitors were known, but Melchizedek's were not, Heb. vii. Besides, Abram paid his tithes to one who was of a different family, Heb. vii. 6. consequently Melchizedek could not be Shem. 14 ¶ And when Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he armed his trained servants, born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them unto Dan.

15 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants, by night, and smote them, and pursued them unto Hobah, which is on the left hand of Damascus.

16 And he brought back all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

22 And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lift up mine hand unto the LORD, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth,

23 That I will not take from a thread even to a shoe-latchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich:

24 Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre; let them take their portion.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIV.

In this chapter is an instance, as there are many in other places, of particulars omitted in Moses' narration, which are to be understood or gathered from the circumstances. For it is plain, from the last verses, that some of the neighbouring people had joined Abram in the pursuit of the kings, although Moses has not given the least indication of it in the narrative.

took him for the Son of God, who appeared to Abram in the form of a man; while others say, how could the Son of God be a type of himself, as the apostle plainly tells us Melchizedek was a type of Christ. Heb. vii. 3. Some suppose him to be Ham; and others, one of the princes of Canaan, who, on account of his singular virtue and piety, was called Melchizedek, that is, king of righteousness, which the Arabic translates as his character, not his name.

King of Salem.] By Salem, most commentators, and the Chaldee, understand Jerusalem, which is called Salem in scripture. "In Salem, also, is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion." Psal. lxxvi. 2.

He was the priest of the most high God.] The word "cohen," translated priest, signifies a high-priest, and a nobleman; it was probably borrowed from the Egyptians; the Hebrews having no order of priesthood before that instituted by Moses. It is used here with great propriety to communicate the idea of the dignity as well as sacredness of Melchizedek's character.

20 And he gave him tithes of all.] i. e. Abram, as it is explained, Heb. xvii. 2. gave Melchizedek, as the priest of God, the tenth of all the spoil he had taken in the battle, according to the custom of those times, Gen. xxxviii. 22. Those tithes were thus consecrated to God; they were set apart for the maintenance of religion, for the relief of the poor, and other pious uses.

1 God encourageth Abram, who complaineth for want of an heir. 4 God promiseth him a son, and a numerous seed. 6 He is justified by his faith. 7 The promise of Canaan is renewed, and confirmed to him by a sign and a vision.

AFTER these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward.

2 And Abram said, Lord God, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

3 And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir.

4 ¶ And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be.

6 ¶ And he believed in the LORD; and he counted it to him for righteousness.

7 ¶ And he said unto him, I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle dove, and a young pigeon.

10 And he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcases, Abram drove them away.

12 ¶ And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

13 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years;

14 And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance.

15 And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

16 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.

17 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a burning lamp that passed between those pieces.

18 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates:

19 The Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites,

20 And the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims,

21 And the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XV.

In this chapter we have a clear proof of God's knowing what will come to pass through all times; and that however much the affairs of the world may seem to be ordered and governed by the inhabitants of the earth, yet that God's providence superintends and directs, in all. Here we have the state of a particular nation marked out for four hundred years to come, and distinguished by very remarkable events, of which there were then no appearance. It is the incommunicable character of God, to see into futurity. In the scriptures we often find him challenging the false deities to foretell what is to come: "Shew the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know ye are gods," Isaiah xli. 23, &c.

We may likewise further observe, that these events came to pass seemingly by accident, and in the natural course of things, though it is plain God ordered them; and therefore we have reason to conclude, that God at all times, and in all countries, and even families, does order those frequent changes, revolutions, and events, which happen to them, as best suits with the purposes of his infinite wisdom and goodness, though they all seem to us to happen by natural causes, and as it were by chance.

Thus we may observe, that the seed of Abram were not, nor did they return into the land of Canaan, till it became fit, in the wisdom of God's providence, or government of the world, to punish the iniquity of the Amorites, then come to such a height, that it was not consistent with God's wisdom or justice to suffer them to go any longer unpunished.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

1, 2, 3, 4 Fear not, Abram, &c.] After the gracious and repeated assurances of a numerous posterity, Abram was now grown uneasy at his wife's barrenness, and his own want of issue to inherit the promises. Accordingly, we find him disturbed with those apprehensions; and that God, to remove them, appeared to him, in a vision, and said, "Fear not, Abram, &c." That his fears were not occasioned from any apprehensions of danger from the nations among whom he was settled; but solely for the reason assigned, is evident, as appears from the words immediately following. For Abram being thus encouraged to tell his grief, confessed it to be for want of issue, and for that he suspected the promised blessings were to be inherited by his adopted children, the sons of his servant Eliezer of Damascus.

9 And he believed, &c.] Though his wife had been long barren, was very much advanced in years, and it was contrary to the course of nature for him to expect children; yet, against hope, he believed in God; and on account of the strength of his faith, which had so many objections to weaken it, he shewed he had a true idea of the divine veracity and omnipotence; and it was pleasing in the sight of God.

10 Divided them, &c.] St. Cyril, St. Chrysostom, and others, assert, that the ancient manner of making alliances at this time, was, to divide the victims into two parts, and to lay them on two altars opposite each other; after which, the contracting parties walked between, signifying, that the party which violated the covenant should be cut asunder as the victim was. Jeremiah alludes to this custom, chap. xxxiv. 18, 19, and conformed to it by passing between the altars in the similitude of a camp. ver. 17.

11 When the fowls came down, &c.] The Hebrew, as well as the Septuagint, signify, he placed the birds upon the quarters or carcases of the victims, in the same manner as the sacrifices in Leviticus are ordered to be covered with fat. The word we translate "drove away," signifies, when read according to the Vulgate, "to breathe upon or whistle;" and alludes to the custom observed in sacrificing, which was either to play upon the flute, or to sing an hymn. According to this interpretation, the sense of this verse is, that Abram placed the birds upon the quarters of the victims, and passed between the altars singing or playing on the flute, in honour of the covenant which the Lord made with him, by passing between the two victims in the form of a camp.

13 Four hundred years.] These years must be counted from Isaac's birth; for from the birth of Isaac to that of Jacob were sixty years; thence to the birth of Joseph were ninety; thence to Joseph's death, one hundred and ten years; thence to the birth of Moses, sixty years; and in the eightieth year of Moses's life the children of Israel came out of Egypt. These several sums, added together, amount to four hundred years, the time determined by this vision. Abram was now satisfied that the seed of his loins was to inherit the promises; but Sarai, being uneasy on account of her sterility, persuaded her husband to go in unto her hand-maid Hagar, the Egyptian. In this she indulged her own vanity and ambition; she would have a son whom she might adopt, and she flattered herself with being at the same time an instrument to promote the designs of Providence.

16 In the fourth generation] Reckoned from Jacob's descent into Egypt: Aaron and Moses were the fourth descent from Levi, Exod. vi. 16, 18, 20.

The iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.] Hence we may learn, God is long suffering, and infinitely merciful, as well as infinitely just.

17 A smoking furnace and a burning lamp, &c.] The Hebrew word signifies a lamp of fire, or lightning, and is used to signify the Shechina or divine presence.

18 Unto thy seed.] The Lord, for the farther assurance of Abram, having instructed him in the various fortunes of his posterity, ver. 13, 14, he more particularly marks out the bounds of the promised land, and reckons up the several nations which then inhabited it. And Moses, by this anecdote, animates the Israelites to undertake the conquest of their dominions.

19 The Kenites, &c.] Some, for want of observing the fore-mentioned distinction, both the possession and dominion promised to the Israelites, have taken the Kenites for the descendants of Canaan. But what is said of the Kenites, 1 Sam. xv. 6. is commonly understood of the Midianites, who shewed kindness to the children of Israel by the direction of Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, Exod. xvi. 1. Num. x. 29.

COMMENTARY

CHAP. XVI.

1 Sarai being barren giveth Hagar to Abram. 4 Hagar having conceived despiseth her mistress, and being hardly treated runneth away. 7 An angel sendeth her back to submit herself, and informeth her of her son's fortunes. 15 Ishmael is born.

NOW Sarai Abram's wife bare him no children: and she had an handmaid, an Egyptian, whose name was Hagar.

2 And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD hath restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her. And Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

3 And Sarai Abram's wife took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, after Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram to be his wife.

4 ¶ And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was despised in her eyes.

5 And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong be upon thee: I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: the LORD judge between me and thee.

6 But Abram said unto Sarai, Behold, thy maid is in thy hand; do to her as it pleaseth thee. And when Sarai dealt hardly with her, she fled from her face.

7 ¶ And the angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, by the fountain in the way to Shur.

8 And he said, Hagar, Sarai's maid, whence comest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.

9 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hands.

10 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

11 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Behold, thou art with child, and shalt bear a son, and shalt call his name Ishmael; because the LORD hath heard thy affliction.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

4 He went in unto Hagar, &c.] Abram not yet having had any special assurance that the promised seed should spring from Sarai in particular, took Hagar to bed, thinking, perhaps, that God would fulfil his promise in this way.

11 Shall call his name Ishmael, &c.] Ishmael is derived from the Hebrew word ishma, "he will hear," and El, "God;" which alludes to the words immediately following. The word rendered "affliction," signifies a cry or prayer caused by affliction: the Chaldee and Arabic render it "a prayer made in affliction;" and Josephus, that Hagar prayed to God to pity her distress.

13 A wild man] In the original, "a wild-ass-man," or one resembling that creature, described Job xxxix. 5, 6, 7. This was fulfilled not only in Ishmael himself, Gen. xxi. 20. but likewise by the Ituseens, the men of Kedar, Job xxi. 17. and by the wild Arabs or Bedoweens, his descendants.

His hand shall be against every man] Ishmael lived by prey in the wilderness, and his posterity have continued to infest Arabia, and all the neighbouring countries, to this day, with their robberies and incursions; and it is remarkable that they assign the hardships of Ishmael as a reason for their justification.

He shall dwell in the presence, &c.] The original word signifies, to "dwell in tents;" the Scenites formerly, and Bedoweens at present, do so. This clause of the prophecy was fulfilled in the person of Ishmael, chap. xxv. 17. His posterity likewise dwelt in the presence of all their brethren, and still continue a distinct people, and inhabited the country of their progenitors, notwithstanding the perpetual enmity between them and the rest of mankind: They were never reduced by the Persians; neither could the Assyrians, Medes, or Macedonians, subdue them. Modern travellers still assert their depredations and independency.

13 She called, &c.] The original signifies, she called the name of Jehovah, that spake unto her, the God of vision; for she said, What do I see here after the vision? The vulgar explains the latter clause, by rendering it, Truly, I have seen the hinder parts of him that saw me. The Chaldee paraphrases the whole thus: She prayed in the name of the Lord, who spake unto her; saying, Thou art a God that seeth all things; because, she said, I began 12 And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him; and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

13 And she called the name of the LORD that spake unto her, Thou God seest me: for she said, Have I also here looked after him that seeth me?

14 Wherefore the well was called Beer-lahai-roi; behold, it is between Kadesh and Bered.

15 ¶ And Hagar bare Abram a son: and Abram called his son's name, which Hagar bare, Ishmael.

16 And Abram was fourscore and six years old, when Hagar bare Ishmael to Abraham.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVI.

God knows all things; he understands what they will be, long before they happen; all the circumstances of our lives, where we shall be placed on the earth, and the bounds of our habitation, are known to him before we are born. We have here, and in some of the following chapters, the distinguishing particulars of Ishmael, and his descendants, to this very day, after the long space of above three thousand years: for it is to be remarked, that, according to the language of scripture, what is spoken of the head or founder of any people, must be understood to be spoken of his descendants likewise, and to be their general character, as well as his in particular.

CHAP. XVII.

1 God reneweth his covenant with Abram: 5 Abram's name is changed in token of greater blessings. 9 Circumcision is instituted. 15 Sarai's name is changed, and Isaac with the blessing of a numerous issue, promised her. 23 Abraham, his son Ishmael, and all his men-servants are circumcised.

AND when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

3 And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations.

5 ¶ Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

6 And

to see, after he appeared unto me. But the Arabic reads, She called the name of God, that conversed with her, Thou art powerful, thou seest; because, she said, I have seen or experienced thy mercy, after I had seen affliction. The religion of names was of great consequence in Egypt; it was one of their essential superstitions; it was one of their native inventions. Thus when Hagar, who was an Egyptian, saw the angel of God in the wilderness, she called the name of the Lord, that spake unto her, Elrai, "the God of vision," or the visible God; that is, according to the established custom of Egypt, she gave him a name of honour; not merely a name of distinction; for such all nations had, before their communications with Egypt.

14 The well was called, &c.] That is, the well of the living vision.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVII.

1 Almighty God, &c.] The Hebrew is El Shaddai, from El, "God," and Shaddai, derived from shin, put instead of shem, signifies "who," and dai, "sufficient;" a title assuring him, that he was able to perform the promise. The Septuagint translate the latter end of the verse, "Do thou that which is well pleasing in my sight, and be blameless before me." The Chaldee renders "do thou serve," instead of "do thou walk;" the Syriac, "do good before me, and be without blot;" and the Arabic, "walk in my obedience," &c.

4 Father of many nations.] In a literal sense, the inhabitants of Arabia, Idumea, and Canaan, besides the tribes, sprung from his children by Keturah, were the descendants of Abram; in a spiritual sense, he is the father of the faithful in all nations. See Rom. iv. 16, 17. Gal. iii. 7.

5 Neither shall thy name be any more called Abram; but thy name shall be Abraham, &c.] If the name Abraham be derived from the Hebrew, it should have been written Abhammon; i. e. the father of a multitude. Others, indeed, derive it from ab, "a father," rab, "many," and hammon, "a multitude;" but then it should have been written Abrahmon. But this objection vanishes, if it be derived from the Arabic, where abu signifies "a father," and rahman "a multitude." His former name was derived from ab, "a father," and ram, "high," i. e. a high father.

1911.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee.

7 And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

8 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

9 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

10 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised.

11 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

12 And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man-child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

13 He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

14 And the uncircumcised man-child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

15 ¶ And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be.

16 And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her.

17 Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

18 And Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee!

19 And God said, Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

20 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I make him a great nation.

21 But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

22 And he left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.

23 ¶ And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house; and circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the self-same day, as God had said unto him.

24 And Abraham was ninety years old and nine, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

25 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

26 In the self-same day was Abraham circumcised, and Ishmael his son.

27 And all the men of his house, born in the house, and bought with money of the stranger, were circumcised with him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVII.

What a noble example have we, in this chapter, of a ready obedience to God's command! Here is, indeed, a pattern of such obedience, which is truly and rightly due, from all created beings, however exalted, to their great Creator. For it is not only founded in the right of sovereignty, but in the nature of things; for all created beings whatsoever must have less of every attribute than their original, and consequently ought to conclude, that every thing he orders must be right, and wise, and good.

Though circumcision was so severe, so painful, and was so dangerous an injunction, at Abraham's years, and which undoubtedly he might not see the necessity of, yet in the self-same day that God commanded it, did he submit himself unto it. And in this we are taught to be resigned, under all God's dispensations of providence, however grievous they may seem; and in every thing to submit ourselves to God.

CHAP.

6 Kings shall, &c.] That is, the kings of the Jews, Ishmaelites, Idumaeans, Midianites, Saracens, Arabians, Babylonians, Egyptians, Africans, Spaniards, and, lastly, our great king the Messiah.

7, 8 I will establish, &c.] This promise contains in it both a literal and a spiritual sense, though some will have a spiritual to be the only one. In the literal sense, it contains a promise of the land of Canaan to Abraham and his posterity; and in this sense it was literally fulfilled, though Abraham was never personally in possession of it; since Abraham and his posterity, put collectively, signify the race of Abraham, and that race possessed the land of Canaan. Though God tells Abraham, he would give him the land, yet at the same time, he assures him it would be many hundred years before his posterity should be put in possession of it, chap. xv. 13. A whole country is given to Abraham and his seed. Could it possibly be God's design to place his family in the land of Canaan, till they were numerous enough to occupy and defend it? His posterity was his representative, and therefore putting them into possession, was putting him into it. The giving him heavenly Canaan could not be the literal sense, because an earthly Canaan is the direct, immediate sense of the promise. Manasseh Ben Israel contends for a spiritual Canaan, as the literal; but then he holds, that, at the resurrection, Abraham will arise, and take possession of the land of Canaan.

11 And ye shall circumcise, &c.] The revelations of God to this patriarch were gradual, and the rite of circumcision could not have been enjoined him, before his going into Egypt; nor, indeed, at any other time than that in which we found it to have been given. Had Abraham borrowed it as an Egyptian rite, he would have been circumcised in Egypt, or soon after his return; for in Egypt it was a personal, not a family rite; and those who went into Egypt, either to copy their manners, or to be initiated into their wisdom, were, as a previous ceremony, commonly circumcised by the Egyptian priests themselves. Circumcision was not given to Abraham and his race as a mark of distinction and separation from all other people, but what its constant use made it only fit for, a standing memorial of the covenant between God and Abraham. But though it was not given as a mark of separation, yet it effectually answered that purpose; for it preserved the memory, it was a token of a covenant, which naturally kept them separate and distinct from the rest of mankind.

14 That soul shall be cut off from his people, &c.] This expression refers to the parents, who were to be cut off for neglecting, as appears from Exod. iv. 24. to perform this ceremony on their children.

and this sense is supported by the Syriac version, which renders, "whoever shall not circumcise, &c." shall be cut off; other think it related to the children themselves, who were to be cut off, unless they took care to have this ceremony performed before they were thirteen years of age. By cutting off, is implied an untimely death, which was generally inflicted by God himself. See Lew. xvii. 10.

15 Thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be.] The word Sarai, in the Hebrew, signifies "my princess," and Sarah, "princess of multitudes."

16—21 The good patriarch was now grown fond of Ishmael, and reckoned upon him for the inheritor of the promises: to correct the mistake, God gave him a new revelation, in which he is told, that it was not the son of the bond-woman, but of Sarah, who was ordained to be heir of the promises. But Abraham had so long indulged himself in his mistake, and consequently in his affection for Ishmael, that he begs God would indulge it too—"O that Ishmael, &c." And God, in compassion to his paternal fondness, graciously promises that the posterity of Ishmael should become great and powerful (which we find accomplished, chap. xxv.) but that his covenant should be with Isaac. But this promise having been received with some kind of doubt, as appears from ver. 17. God was pleased to repeat the promise of a son by Sarah, and even to mark out the time of his birth, according to which she conceived and bare a son. The word translated "laughed," is by the Chaldee rendered "rejoiced," and the Arabic confirms this sense by paraphrasing it "laughed for joy." The name of Isaac alludes to this circumstance, the Hebrew word for "laughed" being jitzbach, and the Hebrew for Isaac being jitzbach likewise.

22 God went up, &c.] The Chaldee renders it, "the glory of the Lord went up, &c." The Syriac, "God was taken up, &c." and the Arabic, "the angel of the Lord was taken up, &c."

23 In the self-same day, &c.] The faith and piety of Abraham are conspicuous in his performing this rite the same day, notwithstanding the operation must have been both painful and dangerous to a person of his age.

25 Ishmael was thirteen years old when he was circumcised.] And hence Josephus tells us, the Arabians, descended from Ishmael, did not circumcise their children till they were thirteen years old.

27 And all the men of his house, &c.] All the males, whether children or adults, by their consent, they being before trained up by him in religious exercises, were easily prevailed upon to follow his example.

COMMENTARY

1 Abraham entertaineth three angels. 9 The promise of Isaac is renewed, at which Sarah laugheth, and is reproved. 17 The destruction of Sodom is revealed to Abraham, 23 who strongly intercedeth for the inhabitants of it.

AND the LORD appeared unto him in the plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day:

2 And he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

3 And said, My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant:

4 Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree:

5 And I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: for therefore are ye come to your servant. And they said, So do, as thou hast said.

6 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

7 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetcht a calf tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.

8 And he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat.

9 ¶ And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, in the tent.

10 And he said, I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life; and, lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent door, which was behind him.

11 Now Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women.

12 Therefore Sarah laughed within herself, saying, After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my lord being old also?

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 Is any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

15 Then Sarah denied, saying, I laughed not; for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

16 And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them to bring them on the way.

17 ¶ And the LORD said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation; and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

19 For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

20 And the LORD said, Because the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because the sin is very grievous;

21 I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, I will know.

22 And the men turned their faces from thence, and went toward Sodom: but Abraham stood yet before the LORD.

23 ¶ And Abraham drew near, and said, Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

24 Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

25 That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked: and that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: shall not the judge of all the earth do right?

26 And the LORD said, If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

27 And Abraham answered and said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am but dust and ashes:

28 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

29 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And he said, I will not do it for forty's sake.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

1 And the Lord appeared unto him, &c.] Many are of opinion that it was the Logos, or Son of God, who now deigned to visit him. The text sufficiently indicates, that he was eminently conspicuous from the other two, because Abraham makes his addresses to him as chief. Compare chap. xiii. 18. Isa. ix. 6. Rev. xix. 12.

3 Pass not, &c.] The epistle to the Hebrews seems to allude to this instance of hospitality, and the reward which was the consequence of it, chap. xiii. 2.

5 I will fetch, &c.] The goodness and humility of the patriarch are conspicuous, in his offering little, and in giving much. See ver. 8.

6 Three measures, &c.] A measure weighing about twelve pounds, the quantity of bread must have amounted to thirty-six pounds, which, with the calf, a great delicacy in those countries, was not only an ample, but likewise an elegant entertainment.

¶ They did eat.] Some qualify this sentence, by rendering it "they seemed to eat."

10 I will return, &c.] Many explain this verse thus: The angels said they should return soon, and should then find Sarah pregnant. This occasioning her ridicule, as expressed in the next verse, they discovered themselves to be angels; and that one of them was sent to notify the birth of a son to Abraham; but the other two to destroy Sodom.

12 Laughed within herself, &c.] Some assert, that Isaac, which signifies "Laughter," received his name from Sarah's laughing at the prediction of the angels; but it appears, from the foregoing chapter, he received it from Abraham's laugh, occasioned by excessive joy.

20 Because the cry of Sodom, &c.] An old translation illustrates this expression thus: "Because the cry of those who were oppressed in Sodom," &c.

21 I will go down, &c.] The Chaldee paraphrases it thus: "I will appear, and will judge whether," &c. The Arabic is remarkable, and reads thus: "I will send my monitor, or messenger to them, that he may see whether or no they all do according to their cry, which hath reached my ear." See Gen. xi. 7.

22 Stood before the Lord, &c.] In the presence of the angel, who was the word of God, the Son of God, the visible image of the invisible God, representing the majesty of his Father, and acting in his name, the angel who appeared to Manoah, Judges xiii. 18. described in Isa. ix. 6. and spoken of in Rev. xix. 12. For there were three angels who appeared to Abraham, but only two of them went to Sodom; and he who remained is, in the Hebrew, honoured with the title of Jehovah, the incommunicable name of God. The Chaldee translates the words, "prayed before the Lord."

25 Judge of all the earth, &c.] This is a confirmation of what we have asserted, ver. 22. It expressly confines the sense to that Being, who is the express image of God, who made the worlds, and who, as the writer of the epistle to the Philippians asserts, thought it no robbery to be equal with God. These dawns, or faint glimmerings of the incarnation, demand our most profound attention, reverence, and adoration; and as the day-spring from on high hath visited us, we ought to arise from the death of sin, and to shine in good works; for our light is now come, and the glory of our Lord is upon us, Isa. lx. 1.

26 If I find in Sodom] This city is mentioned as the metropolis, and comprehending the rest of the country of Pentapolis, Gen. xiv. 12.

¶ Then will I spare, &c.] Not Sodom only, but the whole country.

27 Who am but dust and ashes.] An humble expression of his meanness and unworthiness in the sight of God. It carries a plain allusion to the vile and perishable materials, out of which the human body was originally composed.

Before CHRIST 1898. 30 And he said unto him, Oh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak: peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And he said, I will not do it, if I find thirty there.

31 And he said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: peradventure there shall be twenty found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.

32 And he said, Oh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: peradventure ten shall be found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.

33 And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with Abraham: and Abraham returned unto his place.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XVIII.

How urgent and moving is the intreaty of Abraham for the men of Sodom, though, from the corruption of their manners, it may be presumed that he had little society with them; and therefore his was a pure and generous philanthropy, which looked upon all mankind as his friends or brethren.

We may likewise observe in this place, how highly precious and regarded in the sight of God, the good and righteous are, and how much they contribute to the happiness of the world; for it is not only by their just and kind conduct or behaviour in life, that they do good to mankind, but it is probable from the instance before us, that they contribute to avert God's severe judgments from the respective communities they live in. And this, perhaps, may account for God's delay in making examples of cities and kingdoms, which are notoriously wicked. The few righteous mingled among them, who would be involved in their ruin, are so dear to him, that it turns aside his anger, and he cannot do any thing whilst they are there.

CHAP. XIX.

1 Lot entertaineth two angels. 4 The vicious Sodomites beset the house, and are stricken with blindness. 12 Lot is directed to flee with his family to the mountain, but obtaineth leave to retire into Zoar. 24 Sodom and Gomorrah are destroyed. 26 Lot's wife is made a pillar of salt. 27 Abraham seeth the dreadful overthrow. 30 Lot retireth from Zoar to a cave in the mountain. 31 The incestuous origin of Moab and Ammon.

AND there came two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom: and Lot seeing them rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground;

2 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

1 There came two angels, &c.] These are called men, ch. xviii. 2, 22, on account of the manner in which they appeared. That they were beings of an inferior order to the third, who remained talking with Abraham, we have shewn in the notes on the place just quoted; and, at the same time, have enabled the reader to detect an error of most modern commentators, who roundly assert, that all the three angels went towards Sodom, though we find from this place, that only two came there.

2 Turn in, I pray you, &c.] The warm benevolence, and hearty hospitality of Lot, are remarkable, in the importunities which he uses to the angels; and they are the more remarkable, as he was then settled among a people who were insolent on account of their wealth, void of benevolence to men, or piety to God; who were strangers to hospitality, and lost to every principle of virtue. Amidst this sink of vice, Lot remained untainted; receives the heavenly guests with the greatest humanity, and seems not only to have been an exact imitator, but likewise a rival of Abraham's hospitality.

3 Unleavened bread, &c.] This shews the haste he was in to accommodate his guests: For bread without leaven in it, was sooner baked than that which had leaven in it.

4 All the people, &c.] This shews that their depravity was universal, and had seized not only on all ranks, but likewise on all ages. We need not, therefore, wonder to find, chap. xviii. 32. that there were not "ten righteous persons in the city."

5 Bring them out unto us, &c.] The inhabitants were struck with the extraordinary beauty of the divine messengers, and were on that account so furious as to infringe the laws of hospitality, and burst through the barriers of virtue.

Before CHRIST 1898. 3 And he pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.

4 ¶ But before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young; all the people from every quarter:

5 And they called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them.

6 And Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him,

7 And said, I pray you, brethren, do not so wickedly.

8 Behold now, I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

9 And they said, Stand back. And they said again, This one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee, than with them. And they pressed fore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut the door.

11 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with blindness, both small and great: so that they wearied themselves to find the door.

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, Hast thou here any besides? son in law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place:

13 For we will destroy this place, because the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD; and the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons in law, which married his daughters, and said, Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city. But he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons in law.

15 And when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here; lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city.

16 And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the LORD being merciful unto him: and they brought him forth, and set him without the city.

17 And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, Escape for thy life; look

8 Behold now, I have two daughters, &c.] The sacred laws of hospitality, thus attacked by these furious wretches, Lot endeavours to maintain inviolate, even at his own expence; and by an heroic effort of disinterested generosity, offers to sacrifice his own daughters, to preserve the guests, who had taken refuge under the shadow of his roof. Some have, indeed, blamed this action, as carrying the ideas of hospitality too high; and endeavour to excuse Lot, by saying his perturbation was so great, that he spoke unadvisedly; but he is thus vindicated: "Lot made his remonstrance to the multitude, shewing the iniquity of their demand, and the sacredness of the laws of hospitality; adding, that if they remained obstinate, notwithstanding his advice, he would rather subject his daughters to their intentions, than yield up his guests." This proposal required some time for deliberation, and was not to be put in force till the rabble had given their answer; but their answer was perhaps, as Lot expected, such as freed him from exposing his daughters, though he was determined not to give up his guests.

9 Stand back, &c.] They who are abandoned to wickedness, are so far from being sensible of their danger, that they are rather enraged against the friendly person who endeavours either to convince them of the nature of their condition, or the consequences of their actions. Thus it happened to Lot; thus it happened to the prophets; thus it happened to our blessed Lord and his apostles; and thus it happened, and will happen, to the ministers of the gospel, who are sent as lambs among wolves.

11 Blindness, &c.] This was only a temporary defect of sight, such as is mentioned 2 Kings vi. 8.

15 Take thy wife, &c.] This illustrates the twenty-fourth verse of the preceding chapter, and demonstrates, that God is no less just than he is merciful.

GENESIS, Chap. XIX. Ver. 30-33.

He dwelt in a Cave, he and his two Daughters; And they made their Father drink Wine, &c.

Before CHRIST 1898. look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

18 And Lot said unto them, Oh, not so, my Lord:

19 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest some evil take me, and I die:

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: oh, let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

21 And he said unto him, See, I have accepted thee concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither. Therefore the name of the city was called Zoar.

23 The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

24 ¶ Then the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven;

25 And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.

26 ¶ But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where he stood before the LORD:

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And Lot went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

31 ¶ And the firstborn said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man in the earth to come in unto us after the manner of all the earth:

Before CHRIST 1898. 32 Come, let us make our father drink wine, and we will lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

33 And they made their father drink wine that night: and the firstborn went in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

34 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the firstborn said unto the younger, Behold, I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

35 And they made their father drink wine that night also: and the younger arose, and lay with him; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

36 Thus were both the daughters of Lot with child by their father.

37 And the firstborn bare a son, and called his name Moab: the same is the father of the Moabites unto this day.

38 And the younger, she also bare a son, and called his name Ben-ammi: the same is the father of the children of Ammon unto this day.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XIX.

In the course of our preceding remarks, we have seen several signal and evident interpositions of God in the affairs of the earth, to shew mankind that he was the Lord of all; that they depended entirely on him; that he could alter their condition as he pleased; that virtue and goodness were regarded, protected, and rewarded by him; and that vice was hateful to him, and contrary to his will, and what he would take cognisance of, and punish.

What is related in the twenty-fifth verse, is another signal instance, intended to inculcate these great truths in the hearts of mankind; and this was wisely ordered to that end; for by God's acquainting Abraham before-hand with what he purposed to do, it was sufficiently made known, beyond a doubt, in his numerous family, and through them, when dispersed, to the rest of the world, that it was, indeed, God himself that did it. And Lot being called out from the very place where he had lived for some years, the moment before it was destroyed, was another corroborating evidence of God's particular ordering of the whole affair; so that by these means, God, in his great wisdom, took care that this remarkable destruction should not be attributed to any natural causes, but to his anger only, that thereby man might be brought to fear him. And this could not but contribute greatly to the keeping alive virtue in the world, and to the restraining of vice; particularly, as God so ordered it, that the place remained a perpetual witness of its own destruction.

CHAP.

¶ [Therefore the name of the city was called Zoar.] The reason of its receiving this name, is comprehended in ver. 20. because Zoar signifies little.

23 [The sun was risen, &c.] We imagine that this particularly was intended to shew that Zoar was near Sodom: and that when God is said to have rained, it might not be thought to be natural, but miraculous, as there were no clouds, commonly mentioned in other great rains.

24 [The Lord rained, &c.] The brimstone and fire, in the Hebrew, signifying lightning; and the addition of the words "from the Lord," implies, that thunder, or the thunderbolt, attended this dreadful storm; or that the Lord cast his dart, or bolt, from heaven. As this country abounded in slime-pits, it is easy to account for the destruction of these places from this cause; a dreadful destruction! of which there are ocular proofs remaining, even in latter days.

25 [And he overthrew those cities, &c.] The storm of thunder and lightning, or, as others think, of liquid fire, which overthrew these cities, is thought to have been also accompanied with a dreadful earthquake. But, be this as it may, we should learn from hence, that if God spared not the old world, but brought in a flood upon the ungodly; and if he, turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, or, according to St. Jude, condemned them to the vengeance of eternal fire; we need not doubt, but that, as he is in all ages the same, God of justice as well as of mercy, no iniquity can ultimately escape, for though he does not on every occasion lay bare his vindictive arm; though he is strong and patient, so that he seldom whetteth his sword, and prepareth the instruments of death; yet a few of these remarkable instances of his severity against sin, are sufficient to convince us, that he hath reserved the unjust, however they may escape at present, unto the day of judgment, to be punished. Treasure up these reflections in thy remembrance, O reader; recollect them with the most serious attention, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up; when thou walkest, receive them as thy companion; when thou talkest, listen to them as thy prompters; and whatever thou doest, consult them as thy directors. Influenced by these considerations, thy views will enlarge, thy affections be exalted, and thou thyself raised above the tantalizing powers of perishing things. Duly mindful of these, it will be the sum of thy desires, and the scope of thy endeavours, to gain the approbation of that sovereign being, who, at the last day, will fill the throne of judgment, and pronounce the decisive sentence. Thou wilt see nothing worth a wish, in comparison of having his will for thy guide, his glory for thy aim, and his holy Spirit for thy ever-actuating principle.

26 [His wife looked back, &c.] The Jerusalem Targum says, that she was a native of Sodom, and she might, for that reason, have been guilty of shewing too great an affection for the calamity of her native place, in contradiction to the command given her and her husband, ver. 17: Some, indeed, from our Saviour's words, Luke xviii. 31. infer, that she really turned back, and by that means met with her fate. Commentators are divided in their opinion concerning the words "a pillar of salt," some take them figuratively to imply a lasting monument of the divine wrath, a lasting covenant, being stiled a covenant of salt, Numb. xviii. 19. others as for taking them in a literal sense. Josephus says, that he saw this pillar himself. Some of the fathers are for supporting this literal sense, which others are for turning into ridicule, imagining the Jewish writers might have been imposed upon by the natives, which a traveller from our own country insinuates to be possible, when he writes, On the west side is a promontory, near which, our guides told us, stood the monument of Lot's wife; part of which, if they may be credited, is visible at this day.

31 [In the earth, &c.] That is, in the land; though some take the word in its utmost latitude, and represent the expression as implying an apprehension that the whole human race would be extinct.

32 [Come let us, &c.] It is no improbable opinion, which has been adopted by bishop Patrick, and other commentators, that their anxiety to preserve seed of their father, proceeded from an eager desire after the Messiah, who, they might hope, would spring from them, their father being a descendant of Shem, and a son of Abraham's eldest brother: and in fact, Ruth the Moabitess, who was of the race of the eldest daughter of Lot, stands in the genealogy of our Lord.

37, 38, [Moab, &c.] Alluding to the person from whom he owned his birth, she called his name Moab; that is, in the Hebrew, "from my father." Ben-ammi, the name given by the second daughter to her son, implies, "the son of my people."

1 Abraham sojourneth at Gerar, and denieth his wife; Abimelech taketh her, but is reprov'd of God in a dream, and commanded to restore her. 9 He rebuketh Abraham, who excuseth himself. 14 Sarah is restored with presents after a gentle reproof. 17 Abimelech and his house are healed at Abraham's prayer.

AND Abraham journeyed from thence toward the south country, and dwelled between Kadesh and Shur, and sojourned in Gerar.

2 And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, She is my sister: and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and took Sarah.

3 But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife.

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart and innocency of my hands have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

7 Now therefore restore the man his wife, for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid.

9 ¶ Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and what have I offended thee, that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that ought not to be done.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely the fear of God is not in this place; and they will slay me for my wife's sake.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XX.

2 Abimelech, &c.] This was a name common to the kings of Palestine, as Pharaoh was to those of Egypt; it signifies, my father the king. The translation here related, is recorded out of the due order of time, as her age and her pregnancy rendered her no fit object to captivate the heart of a sovereign lover.

3 But God came to Abimelech.] He was afflicted with a very dangerous disease, to restrain him from his intended crime; and in a vision, when his life was despaired of, he was forbidden to violate the wife of his guest; which he afterwards related to his physicians; adding, that God had struck him with the disease, to prevent his being guilty of adultery.

4 A righteous nation.] That is, an innocent people, they certainly were. See ver. 17, 18. The Septuagint renders, a just and ignorant, &c. which agrees with the Vulgate; but the Arabic applies the sentence to Abimelech himself, translating the words, a chaste or modest man.

6 For I also withheld thee from sinning, &c.] The word for, renders the sense obscure, and therefore should be omitted, as it is not in the original.

16 A thousand pieces of silver, &c.] The Chaldee explains the sum given to be a thousand shekels, for the word pieces is not in the Hebrew: now a shekel being two shillings and four-pence farthing of our money, the whole sum amounts to a hundred and twenty pounds. The sense of this verse has very much embarrassed some commentators; but it may be easily collected from comparing the ancient versions. The original may be translated, Behold he is to thee a covering of the eyes unto all who are with thee, and with all, and he reprov'd himself. The Vulgate translates, lo, I have given, &c. that shall be unto thee a covering of the eyes unto all that are with thee, and whithersoever thou shalt go, and remember thou hast been detected. The Septuagint, as well as the Vulgate, make the relative agree with the present given, rendering, They shall be as a reward, or honour of thy face, and to all the women with thee, and always be ingenuous, or speak the truth. The Chaldee con-

12 And yet indeed she is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.

13 And it came to pass, when God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother.

14 ¶ And Abimelech took sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and womenservants, and gave them unto Abraham, and restored him Sarah his wife.

15 And Abimelech said, Behold, my land is before thee: dwell where it pleaseth thee.

16 And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given thy brother a thousand pieces of silver: behold, he is to thee a covering of the eyes, unto all that are with thee, and with all other: thus she was reprov'd.

17 ¶ So Abraham prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maidservants; and they bare children.

18 For the LORD had fast closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah Abraham's wife.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XX.

On this chapter, we find Abraham reasoned, that if there was no awe of religion among them there could be no sufficient restraint from doing any act of injustice and cruelty, which tended to the gratification of their appetites. And herein he reasoned right; for there cannot be any perfect morality expected, where there is no belief of the first principles of religion. Thus, as it is agreeable to experience, so it has always been the sentiment of the wisest men in all ages. It is our fixed opinion, that if piety towards God was once taken away, there would be an end of all fidelity, a dissolution of the bonds of human society, and even of justice itself, the sun of all virtues.

C H A P. XXI.

1 Isaac is born, and circumcised. 6 Sarah's joy. 9 Hagar and Ishmael are cast forth at Sarah's instance, and by God's direction. 15 Hagar in distress is relieved and comforted by an angel. 22 Abimelech's covenant with Abraham, 33 who calleth upon the LORD in Beer-sheba.

AND the LORD visited Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah as he had spoken.

¶ For Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

3 And

strues the relative in the same manner, saying, It shall be a veil of honour, on account of my having sent for thee, and having seen thee, and all that are with thee; and she was rebuked or provoked upon, or by, all that he had said. The Syriac renders, I have granted them to thee, because thou hast veiled or covered the eyes of all that were with me, and above all things, hast reprov'd me. The Arabic translates, I have now given thy brother a thousand shekels, let them be laid out for thee for a beautiful vesture, for all that are with thee, and in all things that are for thy modesty. From hence we may conclude, that the money, not the brother, was for a covering of the eyes; and that the sense of the verse is, that Abimelech, by that present, acknowledged both the charms and the modesty of Sarah, and that he gave it with a design to make her virtue conspicuous to all her attendants, at the same time he made her a compensation for the injury he intended.

17 So Abraham prayed unto God, &c.] Not being able to requite Abimelech for his favours to him in kind, he interceded with God in behalf of him and his family, which he had the more reason to do, as he had drawn him and them into a snare, by relapsing into this piece of dissimulation, after he had seen the ill effects of it in a former case.

18 Had fast closed up, &c.] God had smitten them with barrenness. Hence Sarah must have spent some considerable time at Abimelech's court, otherwise the Philistines could not have known whether their wives were barren or not: a circumstance which seems to confirm the opinion, that this piece of history is recorded out of the order of time when it happened. But if the case was as others understand it, that they were struck with such swellings in the secret parts, that the men could neither enjoy their wives, nor the women who were with child be delivered, they must have been quickly sensible of such an alteration.

GENESIS, Chap. XXI. Ver. 17. 19.

The Angel called to Hagar, & she saw a Well of Water, & gave the lad drink.

3 And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac.
 4 And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac being eight days old, as God had commanded him.
 5 And Abraham was an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him.
 6 ¶ And Sarah said, God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear will laugh with me.
 7 And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? for I have born him a son in his old age.
 8 And the child grew, and was weaned; and Abraham made a great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.
 9 ¶ And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had born unto Abraham, mocking.
 10 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac.
 11 And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's sight because of his son.
 12 And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice: for in Isaac shall thy seed be called.
 13 And also of the son of the bondwoman will I make a nation, because he is thy seed.
 14 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and sent her away; and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Beer-sheba.
 15 ¶ And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.
 16 And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bowshot: for she said, Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lift up her voice, and wept.
 17 And God heard the voice of the lad; and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee Hagar? fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.
 18 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for I will make him a great nation.

19 And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink. Before CHRIST 1897.
 20 And God was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became an archer.
 21 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran: and his mother took him a wife of the land of Egypt.
 22 ¶ And it came to pass at that time, that Abimelech and Phichol the chief captain of his host spake unto Abraham, saying, God is with thee in all that thou doest:
 23 Now therefore swear unto me here by God that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned. 1892.
 24 And Abraham said, I will swear.
 25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away.
 26 And Abimelech said, I wot not who hath done this thing: neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to day.
 27 And Abraham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them made a covenant.
 28 And Abraham set seven ewe lambs of the flock by themselves.
 29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What mean these seven ewe lambs which thou hast set by themselves?
 30 And he said, For these seven ewe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that they may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well.
 31 Wherefore he called that place Beer-sheba; because there they swore both of them. 1891.
 32 Thus they made a covenant at Beer-sheba: then Abimelech rose up, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines.
 33 ¶ And Abraham planted a grove in Beer-sheba, and called there on the name of the LORD, the everlasting God.
 34 And Abraham sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

GENERAL

6 God hath made me to laugh, &c.] The laughter mentioned, chap. xviii. 12. proceeded from distrust, and was the effect of ridicule, but that mentioned in this verse, proceeded from joy, arising from the fruition of a great and unexpected blessing. The Chaldee translation confirms this sense, by rendering the words, the Lord has caused me joy, every one who shall hear it, will rejoice together with me. The Syriac likewise paraphrases it, the Lord has this day given me great joy, &c.

9 Mocking.] The original implies laughing, and alludes to Isaac's name, which signifies laughter; and as the verb resembles the name so much, it may have caused the omission of Isaac, the object of Ishmael's derision or ridicule, which is preserved in the Septuagint. The Jewish doctors imagine, that Ishmael derided or ridiculed Isaac, on account of his piety; and as the apostle, Gal. iv. 29. styles it persecution, we may conclude, that Isaac's piety was the continual subject of Ishmael's ridicule, derision, or hard usage.

11 And the thing was very grievous, &c.] Our translators have in this verse adhered to the sense of the Arabic paraphrase. From hence we may collect, that Abraham was not yet cured of his unreasonable partiality for Ishmael, but still reckoned upon him as his second hopes, in case any disaster or misfortune should happen to Isaac. This appears from Ishmael's insolent behaviour, from Abraham's great unwillingness to dismiss him, and from God's assuring him, in order to make him easy, that in Isaac his seed should be called, ver. 12.

14 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, &c.] The behaviour of Abraham towards his son Ishmael, has been represented as cruel to the last degree. In order to remove the opprobrium that has been thrown upon it, it will be necessary to observe, that though Ishmael was called a child in our translation, yet he was really fifteen or sixteen years old; and that by bread and water, is meant in scripture all kinds of provision. These observations being premised, we proceed to assert, that it was no difficult thing for any person to find a livelihood in this early age of the world; those who had flocks, found ground enough to spare in every country, to maintain them; and creatures were so numerous, that a person who had no flocks, might, in cultivated places, kill enough of all sorts for his maintenance, and accordingly we find, that Ishmael chose to reside in the wilderness, where he became an archer.

And it appears from the sequel, that Hagar met with no great difficulty in providing for herself, and her son. Jacob was dismissed in the same manner from Isaac, without servants or attendants. All the provisions, therefore, made by parents for their younger sons in those days, was, the sending them abroad to acquire an independent settlement. Consequently it is only from our not being acquainted with the customs of the times, that we imagine Abraham was guilty of a cruel action, in thus dismissing Hagar and Ishmael. And though wandering in the wilderness, till their water was consumed, had almost destroyed both her and the child, yet this was no fault of Abraham's, but purely an accident, occasioned by her missing the way.

17 And God heard the voice of the lad, &c.] By which it appears that he cried also; but whether it was in prayer to God, or through the distress and misery he was in, is not certain; and, be it which it may, his cries came up into the ears of the Lord, and he had compassion on him, and supplied his wants, and delivered him out of his miserable condition.

19 God opened her eyes, &c.] The angel of the Lord met her, shewed her a well that was near, and commanded her to take care of the child.

25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech, &c.] In these hot and dry countries, a well of water was an inestimable treasure, and the digging it a work of prodigious labour, both on account of the rockiness of the soil, and the great depth it was necessary to dig before they could find a spring.

31 He called that place Beer-sheba, &c.] Beer signifies a well, and sheba, both "an oath," and "seven," so that the name alludes not only to the oath, as mentioned in the text, but likewise to the seven sheep given by Abraham, in purchase for the well.

32 They returned into the land of the Philistines.] To that part of it where they dwelt; for this covenant was made in the land of the Philistines.

33 And Abraham planted a grove, &c.] The silence and natural gloom which reign in these bowery solitudes, dispose the mind to serious contemplation; in which account they were chosen, by the pious fathers of antiquity, as their temples, and solemn places of devotion.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXI.

This chapter may also lead us to reflect with great seriousness and attention, on those promises and threatenings, made to us in the gospel, which, though according to our thinking, they are long delayed, and all things continue as they were, from the beginning of the creation; yet were they notwithstanding, as surely to be accomplished, as was the promise of Isaac, which, according to the nature of the thing, to Abraham's thinking, was long delayed. Though we see things go on in their accustomed manner; though we see men inconsiderate, and not thinking about it; though we even see scoffers who cry out with taunts, Where is the promise of his coming? Yet the day of the Lord may come notwithstanding; when the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall awake to appear before the judgment seat of Christ; for every one to receive for the things done in his body, according to that he has done, whether it be good or bad. And we have sufficient information from the scriptures, that this great and tremendous day will come, when it is least expected, like a thief in the night, when the world is going on at its usual rate, while men are eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, hurrying in business, immersed in pleasure, fixing their thoughts and hopes on earth, and believing themselves in security.

C H A P. XXII.

Abraham is tempted to offer Isaac. 3 He giveth proof of his faith and obedience: 11 The angel stayeth him from slaying his son, in whose stead he offereth a ram. 15 Abraham is blessed again. 20 The generation of Nahor, from whom came Rebekah.

AND it came to pass after these things that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, Behold, here I am.

2 And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXII.

1 God did tempt Abraham, &c.] It is evident, from the words of Christ, John xxii. that Abraham was desirous of being acquainted with the manner in which the promise of the redemption of mankind should be effected. The principal intention of this command was, to reveal to Abraham by action, instead of words, the manner of this redemption; yet, as this was a favour of a very high nature, and conferred on Abraham at his earnest request; it was but fit he should himself approve it by some proportionable trial. On this account, therefore, God was pleased by the very manner in which this mystery was revealed, to tempt or try Abraham; where the making the favour itself the trial of his deserving it hath all the superior elegance and beauty which is conceived in the dispensations of divine wisdom only. The very manner in which this reason is recorded, shews it an inferior one: for it is not said that God gave this command to try Abraham, which expresses a principal reason, but, that in giving the command, God did try him, which only implies an inferior one.

2 Take now thy son, thine only son.] The order in which the words are placed in the original, gradually increase the sense, and raise the passions higher and higher. Take now thy son, thine only son, whom thou lovest, even Isaac: This was to preclude any doubt in Abraham. Abraham desired earnestly to be let into the mystery of the redemption: and God, to instruct him, (in the best manner humanity is capable of receiving instruction) in the infinite extent of the divine goodness to mankind, who spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all; let Abraham feel, by experience, what it was to lose a beloved son; the son born miraculously, when Sarah was past child-bearing, Jesus was miraculously born of a virgin. The duration too of the action, ver. 4. was the same as that between Christ's death and resurrection, both which were designed to be represented in it; and still farther, not only the final arch typical sacrifice of the Son of God, was figured in the command to offer Isaac, but the intermediate typical sacrifice in the Mosaic economy, was represented by the permitted sacrifice of the ram offered up, ver. 13. instead of Isaac.

Land of Moriah.] Conformably to the interpretation given of this command, Abraham calls the land to which he went with Isaac, the land of vision, according to Jerom's interpretation; which shews, that the words of Jesus, "Abraham saw my day," evidently allude to this extraordinary circumstance. In a word, Jesus says, "Abraham saw my day;" and Abraham, by the action he imposed on the scene of action, declares the same thing.

Offer him, &c.] The command was only the conveyance of an information by action, instead of words, in conformity to the common mode of conversing in former times; and as it was only the grant of an earnest request, and known by Abraham at the time of imposing, to be such a grant, he could not possibly have any doubt concerning the author of it. The action likewise being mere scenery, and, like words, only of arbitrary signification,

3 ¶ And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt offering, and laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?

8 And Abraham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood.

10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

11 ¶ And the angel of the Lord called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me.

13 And

tion, it had no moral import; consequently, the injunction in such an action, as it hath not, can in no way affect the moral character of the person commanding; and consequently, this could occasion mistakes concerning the divine attributes, with regard to God's delighting in human sacrifices.

6 Abraham took the wood and laid, &c.] In this was represented another circumstance attending the crucifixion, that of Christ's bearing his own cross.

7 And Isaac said my father, &c.] This sentence is the most expressive, and, if we may be allowed the expression, the most voluminous that ever was uttered. Let the tender parent substitute himself in the stead of Abraham, and then he will not only understand, but likewise feel all the pathos comprehended in these few words; words that were echoed by our dearest Saviour, amidst his agony, in the garden of Gethsemane; "Abba, Father," said he, "all things are possible for thee, &c." Mark xiv. 36.

9 Bound Isaac his son, &c.] The sacred historian has, like the celebrated painter, drawn a veil over the sorrows of Abraham, and the resignation of Isaac; that the imagination of the reader might paint to him more forcibly the struggles of the parent, and the agonies of the son, than it is in the power of language to express. An excellent author has, upon this occasion, presented us with a very pathetic speech to Isaac, to prevail upon him to submit to this sacrifice; but the silence of Moses is abundantly more expressive: Isaac was, at this period, about five and twenty years of age, and his father enfeebled with years; his resignation, therefore, at this time, must certainly have been voluntary; and in this respect he was a strong and exact type of our ever blessed Saviour, who voluntarily laid down his life for us, though no one could otherwise take it from him, John x. 17, 18. 1 John iii. 16.

12 Lay not thine hand, &c.] As by the command Abraham understood the nature of man's redemption; he must know how the scenical presentation was to end. Isaac was made the person, or representative of Christ's dying for us: the Son of God, he knew, could not possibly be under the dominion of the grave. Hence he must needs conclude, either that God would stop his hand when he came to give the sacrificing stroke; or, that, if the revelation of this mystery was to be represented throughout in action, that then his son, sacrificed under the person of Christ, was soon to be restored to life; accounting, that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead, as the author of the epistle to the Hebrews assures us, chap. xi. 19. The law of nature commands us to protect and cherish our offspring: was that transgressed in giving a stroke, whose hurt was presently to be repaired? The law of nature forbids all injury to our fellow creature; and was he injured, who, being thus highly honoured, in becoming the representative of the Son of God, was to share with his father in the rewards of his obedience? Thus it appears, that this command was a mere information by action; and, when regarded in this view, all the arguments against God's giving it to Abraham, are absolutely enervated and overthrown. This interpretation of the command,

They came to the place which God had told him of, and Abraham built an Altar, and laid the wood in order, &c.

13 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of his son.

14 And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, in the mount of the LORD, it shall be seen.

15 ¶ And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

16 And said, By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

17 That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

18 And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.

19 So Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to Beer-sheba; and Abraham dwelt at Beer-sheba.

20 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that it was told Abraham, saying, Behold, Milcah, she hath also born children unto thy brother Nahor;

21 Huz his firstborn, and Buz his brother, and Kemuel the father of Aram, 22 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

23 And Bethuel begat Rebekah: these eight Milcah did bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother.

24 And his concubine, whose name was Reumah, she bear also Tebah, and Gaham, and Thahash, and Maachah.

for the real sacrifice of Christ, and the proper redemption of mankind. For if the command was an information by action, instead of words the proof conveyed in it is decisive, there being here no room for their evasion of its being a figurative expression, since the figurative action, the original of such expression, denotes either a real sacrifice, or nothing at all.

Fearful God, &c.] This was not a servile, superstitious fear, arising from narrow ideas of the divine goodness and power, but a filial fear, which generated hope in the greatest extremity, and indicated such a generosity of disposition, as is better conceived than expressed.

14 Called the name of the place Jehovah-jireh, &c.] When Isaac asked his father, Where is the lamb? he answered in the Hebrew, "Elohim-jireh;" which this name alludes to. The answer of Jesus to the Jew in these words, "Abraham rejoiced to see my day," alludes to this verse. Jehovah-jireh signifies, the Lord shall be seen. But with what propriety could this name be given to it by Abraham, if, in this transaction, he had not seen the representation of our Lord's passion? And, if he did see it, how apposite was the name? The historian goes on: "As it is said to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen; or, more exactly to the Hebrew, for he said, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen. In the first part of the verse, the sacred historian tells us; that Abraham called the mount, The Lord shall be seen; and in the latter part he acquaints us with the manner how Abraham imposed that application; namely, by the use of a proverbial speech, implying the reason of the name. In a word, Jesus says, Abraham saw his day; and Abraham, by the name he imposed upon the mount, declares the same thing. But as the vision was of a public, not of a private nature, he expresses himself in terms which signify what mankind in general shall see, not what he himself had seen. The Lord shall be seen.

16 By myself, &c.] In the preceding verse it is said, the angel of the Lord called; but in this, "by myself have I sworn, saith the Lord." This was, therefore, the Deity himself, as appears from Heb. vi. 13. "When God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, swore by himself."

20 And it came to pass, &c.] The following genealogy is chiefly set down to shew whence Rebekah the wife of Isaac was descended, and it connects with the beginning of chap. xxiv. for this news of Nahor's having children born to him, puts Abraham upon the resolution of seeking a wife from thence for his son.

21 Huz] Or Uz. There was likewise one of this name among the posterity of Edom, chap. xxxvi. 28. from whom Idumea was called the land of Uz, Lam. iv. 21. But from this son of Nahor, Job's country is supposed to be called the land of Uz.

Buz] From whom came Elihu the Buzite, Job xxxii. 2. A people likewise in Arabia, Jer. xxv. 23.

Aram] Probably settled in the same country. There was another of the name, a son of Shem, the father of the Syrians.

22 Chesed, &c.] Thought to be the father of the Chaldeans, called Chaddim in scripture.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXII.

In this chapter we should observe, that, in the greatest extremities, God will make a suitable provision for the deliverance and support of those who fear and trust in him, even as he did to Abraham upon the mount itself, when he was in the greatest extremity, and had no immediate prospect before him of any deliverance.—And this points out to us the great moral of this passage of sacred history; namely, that in the most difficult duties, we ought to be obedient and resigned to the will of God; and something similar to the order given to Abraham to offer up Isaac, as to the spirit of it, is commanded us by Christ, when he says, "He that loveth father and mother more than me, is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son and daughter more than me, is not worthy of me," Matt. x. 37. that is, he who will not relinquish or leave them all; if he cannot, without doing it, professes the religion of Christ, and live according to his precepts.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 The age and death of Sarah. 3 The purchase of Machpelah, 19 where Sarah was buried.

AND Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in Kirjath-arba; the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

4 I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a buryingplace with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, my lord: thou art a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And

24 His concubine, &c.] His secondary wife, who was not the mistress of the family, but only taken according to the custom of those times, for the increase of children. The Jewish doctors make this distinction between concubines and legitimate wives; that the children of concubines could only enjoy legacies, not inherit the estate; which they confirm by the example of Abraham, who left all to Isaac, but to the sons of the concubines he only gave gifts, chap. xxv. 5, 6. But this practice seems to have depended more upon the pleasure of the parent, than to have been established by any law, or fixed rule of acting, as may be gathered from the instance of Jacob's children by concubines, who shared equally with his other children. See Gen. xxi. 10. It is probable that concubines were upon a much more precarious footing than the legitimate wives, and that they might, upon occasion, be turned away by the husband, even though guilty of no breach of conjugal fidelity, as in the case of Hagar, chap. xxi. 14.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIII.

1 Sarah was, &c.] Sarah is the only woman whose age is reckoned in the holy scripture.

2 To mourn and weep, &c.] This is a kind of pleonasm frequent in holy writ; though some imagine that mourning implied private sorrow, but weeping public grief. In the second verb in the Hebrew, which expresses Abraham's weeping, the caph, the fourth letter, is less than the preceding or following letters. The Cabalistic Jews inform us, that Moses wrote that letter less than the rest, to intimate to us, that we are not to indulge grief for our departed friends, since Abraham wept but little for Sarah; appears from the little letter. But as the most ancient manuscripts acknowledge no such irregularity in the letters, we may reject this observation, being rather ingenious than true.

Stood up, &c.] Though most commentators imagine this expression alludes to the eastern manner of mourning, Job ii. yet as they find the word used again in the seventh verse, the alteration of posture was only to shew reverence to the council, whom he could not have addressed with any decorum, especially as he was requesting a favour, in any other attitude.

4-5, Give me possession, &c.] The most ancient and natural method of burying the dead, was by interment: it was reckoned ignominious for any person to bury in a sepulchre belonging to another. Abraham, who was, as the Hebrew expresses it, a prince of Elohim, or God, justly complied with this custom; and the reason assigned by the children of Heth for their acquiescence, gives us a noble idea of the patriarch's character.

6 In the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead, &c.] As they had many, every family a distinct sepulchre for itself; they made offer of them to him, to bury his dead in the choicest of them, the most grand and magnificent, or in which of them forever he pleased; which was very kind, generous, and respectful.

Before
CHRIST

7 And Abraham stood up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and intreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar,

9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for as much money as it is worth he shall give it me for a possession of a burying place amongst you.

10 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth: and Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate of his city, saying, 11 Nay, my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people I give it thee: bury thy dead.

12 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

13 And he spake unto Ephron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

14 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

15 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

16 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

17 And the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made sure

18 Unto Abraham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

19 ¶ And after this, Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

20 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a burying-place, by the sons of Heth.

9 Machpelah, &c.] This word signifies a double cave; it might possibly be the name given to a field, on account of its having such a cave in it; though it must be confessed the Septuagint, and oriental translations, make use of it as an appellative, not as a proper name, mentioning only the words "double cave."

10 Ephron dwelled.] The word rendered, dwelled, by our translators, the Vulgate and Syriac interpret, sat, and is rendered in that sense by the Septuagint. The Chaldee translates it stood, and the Arabic, he spake in the presence, &c. whence it follows, that Ephraim was present at this assembly, sitting, while Abraham addressed them, but that he rose after the patriarch had finished his harangue, in order to make the reply which follows, v. 11.

In at the gate, &c.] The Hebrew word for "gate," implies that they were citizens, or inhabitants of that place. See chap. xxxiv. 24.

16 Four hundred shekels, &c.] This amounted to forty-six pounds thirteen shillings, and upwards, and was weighed, because at that time no coinage was invented; its currency, which the merchant mentioned at the end of the verse, implies, that no base alloy was mixed with it, nor any artifice or fraud used to impose on the seller.

18 For a possession.] This purchase not only prevented any dissension between the posterity of Abraham and the natives, but likewise verified in part, the promise which God had made, that he and his seed should have a possession in that land.

Before all that went in at the gate, &c.] See ver. 10. This is added, because the leaders of the people, in ancient times, used to hold their assemblies in some apartment, in or over the gates of their cities, chap. xxxiv. 20. Deut. xxi. 19. Ruth iv. 1.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIV.

¶ And Abraham was old, &c.] Abraham was an hundred years old when Isaac was born, and Isaac was forty when he married Rebekah; consequently Abraham was now about one hundred and forty years of age.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIII.

From Abraham's treating with the people of Heth, and from many other transactions related in the scriptures, it seems as if kings in those days, did nothing of a public nature, but in conjunction with the people; and that the people had a great share in the management of all affairs.

We may remark in this chapter, that Abraham finds favour in the sight of every people, wherever he goes: such a noble, candid, upright, generous character as Abraham's, will naturally procure love, esteem, and respect; but undoubtedly the peculiar favour he found amongst all people, was owing more to the providence of God; for the scriptures always speak of finding favour in the sight of man, as one of God's blessings.

C H A P. XXIV.

1 Abraham sweareth his servant to seek a wife for Isaac.

10 The servant's journey; 12 his prayer and sign. 15 Rebekah meeteth him and fulfilleth his sign. 22 She receiveth jewels, sheweth her kindred, and inviteth him home; he blesteth God. 29 Laban entertaineth him. 34 The servant telleth his errand, and asketh for Rebekah. 50 Laban and Bethuel approve of his proposal, and on his desiring to be gone, Rebekah consenteth to go with him. 62 Isaac meeteth her on her way, and bringing her home, marrieth her.

AND Abraham was old, and well stricken in age: and the LORD had blessed Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said unto his eldest servant of his house, that ruled over all that he had: Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

3 And I will make thee swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell:

4 But thou shalt go unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

7 The LORD God of heaven, which took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send

2 Put thy hand under my thigh.] This was the common method of taking an oath, both among the Hebrews and all the oriental nations. The reasons assigned for this ceremony, are entirely conjectural; however, as it was not the ceremony, but the words of the oath which were binding, we need not be careful to explain the ceremony.

3 The Lord, the God of heaven.] This oath strongly proves the purity of Abraham's religion, and asserts the unity of the supreme Being. The gods of the nations round him, were either the celestial bodies, or deified heroes; they were local and tutelary, not universal and omnipresent deities! as they did not make, they could not be supposed to protect the universe; their power was restrained within bounds almost as narrow as their existence; and the sphere of their knowledge being consequently circumscribed, their assistance was supposed limited to the country in which they were born. In opposition to these deities, Moses represents Abraham as swearing by the Lord, the God of heaven, and the God of earth; his omnipresence rendering him a fit object of so solemn an appeal, and his omnipotence capable of punishing any violation of it.

¶ Thou shalt not take, &c.] The Canaanites were immersed in practices which were the disgrace of humanity; they were likewise, on that account, devoted to destruction; an intermarriage of the promised seed to any of them, would therefore have counteracted the divine predictions, would have been inconsistent with the design of Providence, in making choice of Abraham's posterity to preserve the idea of the unity of the Deity, and would consequently have endangered both their religion and their morals.

4 But thou shalt go into my country, &c.] To Mesopotamia, the place of Abraham's nativity, and where he lived many years.

5 Must I needs bring thy son again into the land from whence thou camest?] That is, if the woman refuse to follow me into the land of Canaan, must I return and fetch thy son to her? A question which Abraham immediately resolves in the negative. No consideration could prevail upon him to let his son return to a land, which he himself was obliged to quit, on account of the inhumanity and idolatry of its inhabitants.

send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and swore to him concerning that matter.

10 ¶ And the servant took ten camels of the camels of his master, and departed; for all the goods of his master were in his hand: and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.

12 ¶ And he said, O LORD God of my master Abraham, I pray thee, send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.

13 Behold, I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:

14 And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel was very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

17 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.

18 And she said, Drink, my lord: and she halted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.

19 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.

20 And she halted, and emptied her pitcher into a trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.

21 And the man wondering at her held his peace, to wit, whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden earring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold;

23 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

24 And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor. Before CHRIST 1857.

25 She said moreover unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

26 And the man bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

27 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD led me to the house of my master's brethren.

28 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house these things.

29 ¶ And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man, unto the well.

30 And it came to pass, when he saw the earring and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me; that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

31 And he said, Come in, thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

32 And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and gave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

33 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, I will not eat, until I have told mine errand. And he said, Speak on.

34 ¶ And he said, I am Abraham's servant.

35 And the LORD hath blessed my master greatly; and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maidservants, and camels, and asses.

36 And Sarah my master's wife bare a son to my master when she was old: and unto him hath he given all that he hath.

37 And my master made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell:

38 But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.

39 And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me.

40 And he said unto me, The LORD before whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house:

41 Then shalt thou be clear from this my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.

42 And I came this day unto the well, and said, O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do prosper my way which I go:

43 Be-

12 And he said, O Lord God of my master Abraham, &c.] We have here a pleasing instance of the patriarch's care in training up his servants in the paths of religion, as well as a noble example of trust in providence.

14 Let it come to pass, &c.] After his prayer, he addressed himself to the first damsel that came, who, with the greatest humanity, granted his request of drinking. Her extraordinary kindness raised the curiosity of Abraham's steward, who inquired into her family, and was informed by her, that her name was Rebekah; that her father Bethuel was dead; and that she lived with Laban her brother, who took care of her mother and herself.

19 I will draw water, &c.] It was customary for the young women in the east to draw water for the cattle, and the use of the family, as appears from 1 Sam. ix. 11. The kindness which Rebekah shewed on this occasion, strongly marks the simplicity of those early ages, and vindicates the fidelity of Abraham's servant, choosing a person whose morals rendered her worthy of Isaac's affection.

22 The man took a golden earring, &c.] The word translated "ear-ring," being in the singular number, it is probable that it was some ornament worn on the face, or forehead, called in other parts of scripture, a nose-jewel, which was worn in most of the eastern countries. The value of these presents, is estimated differently by different authors; for while some compute them at eighteen guineas, others raise them to upward of twenty-five pounds sterling. These presents were intended as Rebekah's dowry; it being customary for the husband to bring a portion to his wife, in former ages.

28 Mother's house, &c.] The women in the eastern countries had, in those days, separate tents for themselves, as at present they lodge by themselves in seraglios.

31 Come in, thou blessed of the Lord, &c.] How amiable a picture of ancient hospitality and warm benevolence, does this verse present us with! Abraham's servant was a stranger, whom Laban had never seen: he had not, as yet, imparted his business, but is received with all the tenderness of a brother, and is complimented with a title which every man must wish to deserve: with the title of the blessed of the Lord.

32 He ungirded, &c.] Though the relative "he," seems to imply that the man ungirded his camels, yet it was Laban, or his servants, that performed this kind office, as appears from the bishop of Chester's comment on this place.

33 I will not eat, until I have told mine errand.] We have here a picture of a faithful servant, one who prefers his master's business to his own pleasures; and is, therefore, impatient till he has delivered his message, and satisfied himself whether his journey should be prosperous or not.

Before
1857.

43 Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink;

44 And she say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

45 And before I had done speaking in mine heart, behold Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

46 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.

47 And I asked her, and said, whose daughter art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I put the earring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.

48 And I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the right way to take my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

49 And now if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

50 ¶ Then Laban and Bethuel answered and said, The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we cannot speak unto thee bad or good.

51 Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

52 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

53 And the servant brought forth jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother precious things.

54 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, Send me away unto my master.

55 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go.

56 And he said unto them, Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away that I may go to my master.

57 And they said, We will call the damsel, and enquire at her mouth.

58 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

49 That I may turn to the right hand, &c.] Some take this expression literally, interpreting the right hand by the Ishmaelites, and the left hand by Lot and his posterity; but it rather seems to be a figurative expression, signifying alteration of conduct.

55 Abide with us a few days, &c.] Though some interpret the Hebrew word iamim, by "years," which it sometimes signifies, yet as this sense is inconsistent with the eagerness that Abraham's servant expresses to return, in the fifty-sixth and preceding verses, the sense of our translators seems the best. The Arabic, indeed, renders the words a whole year, or at least, ten months; the Syriac, A month of days; the Samaritan, Days or a month; the Chaldee, For some time, or ten months; the Septuagint, About ten days; and the Vulgate, at least ten days.

58 And she said, I will go.] The authority which parents have over children, being founded in nature, was, and must be always the same. But we find that no force was put upon the will of Rebekah in this case, and why should it? The happiness of the connubial state, depends upon the reciprocal affection which the parties bear to each other; but this affection must proceed from the will, and the will cannot be forced; the choice, therefore, should be voluntary, nay, if it be not voluntary, the seeds of unhappiness are sown by the person who compels, because we are generally displeased with that which is forced upon us.

63 To meditate, &c.] The word translated "meditate," is rendered, in the Syriac, To walk; and by the Chaldee, the Samaritan, and Arabic translations, To pray; in which sense it 59 And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and her nurse, and Abraham's servant, and his men.

60 And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.

61 And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

62 ¶ And Isaac came from the way of the well Lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the south country.

63 And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac, she lighted off the camel.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a vail, and covered herself.

66 And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

67 And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac was comforted after his mother's death.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIV.

We may remark here, how careful Abraham is, that his son should not marry with one of corrupt manners. He, we find, was in so high estimation with the Canaanites, that undoubtedly he could have married his son to one of the daughters of the princes of the land: but this has no weight with him; one whose manners were not corrupted, is all that he fixes his thoughts upon. He knew what an important matter this was, and how much his son's happiness depended on it; and therefore sends even to a different country for such a one. Alas! how different is this from our manners! Wealth is the chief object we fix our thoughts on, in marrying our children: we seek not, in our choice, those that are sincere and devout worshippers of God, but those who have the largest possessions; not those rich in good works, but those rich in the things of the world. And this, perhaps, is one chief and principal cause of the too great corruption of manners amongst us.

C H A P. XXV.

1 The sons of Abraham by Keturah. 4 The division of his goods. 7 His age, death, and burial. 11 God bleisseth Isaac. 12 The generation of Ishmael, his age, and death. 19 Isaac's descent and alliance by marriage. 21 Rebekah being barren, he prayeth for her; she conceiveth; the children strive in her womb, which is a token of the future fortunes of their posterity. 24 The birth of Esau and Jacob. 27 The difference of their life and manners. 29 Esau selleth his birthright to Jacob.

THEN again Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah.

used likewise in Psalms cii. 1. Whence we may collect, that the employment of Isaac's thoughts was religious; and can any thing give us a nobler idea of Isaac's piety, than this verse, wherein he is represented as abstracting himself from society, in order to meditate on the beauties of the creation, and offer up his prayers and praises to that Being, who openeth his hands, and filleth all things living with good!

65 She took a vail, and covered herself.] The word translated "vail," is by the Septuagint, rendered, A summer cloak, or garment. It was a common practice among the women of the east, to wear a vail whenever they went abroad; but this particular action of Rebekah's seems to be done in conformity to the custom of all brides, who covered themselves with the nuptial vail, when they were first introduced to their husbands.

67 And Isaac was comforted after his mother's death.] A remarkable instance of filial affection! Sarah had now been dead three years, and yet Isaac continued to lament her.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON Chap. XXV.

1 Took a wife, &c.] It appears from 1 Chron. i. 32. that she was only a concubine, a person admitted to his bed without the usual forms of matrimony; but in order to prevent his posterity from imitating a practice necessary for replenishing the earth in the first ages of the world, Moses probably calls her by the honourable name of a wife.

2 And

■ And he bare him Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah.
3 And Jokshan begat Sheba, and Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were Asshurim, Letushim, and Leumim.
4 And the sons of Midian; Ephah, and Ephher, and Hanoth, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the children of Keturah.
5 ¶ And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.
6 But unto the sons of the concubines which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto the east country.
7 ¶ And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.
8 Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people.
9 And his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;
10 The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife.
11 ¶ And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac; and Isaac dwelt by the well Lahai-roi.
12 ¶ Now these are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's hand-maid, bare unto Abraham:
13 And these are the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: the firstborn of Ishmael; Nebajoth, and Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam,
14 And Mishma, and Dumah, and Massa,
15 Hadar, and Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah:

16 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; twelve princes according to their nations. Before CHRIST 1800.
17 And these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and he gave up the ghost and died; and was gathered unto his people. 1773.
18 And they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, as thou goest toward Assyria: and he died in the presence of all his brethren.
19 ¶ And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: Abraham begat Isaac:
20 And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padan-aram, the sister to Laban the Syrian. 1857.
21 ¶ And Isaac intreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: and the LORD was intreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived. 1838.
22 And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? And she went to enquire of the LORD.
23 And the LORD said unto her, Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger.
24 ¶ And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.
25 And the first came out red, all over like a hairy garment; and they called his name Esau.
26 And after that came his brother out, and his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them. 1837.
27 ¶ And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was a plain man, dwelling in tents.
28 And Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison: but Rebekah loved Jacob.

29 And

2 And she bare, &c.] This was a pledge of the divine veracity, in fulfilling the promise made him, chap. xvii. 6.
8 Gave up the ghost] Signifies a death without pain or agony. The ancient translators are industrious to preserve this sense, as reflecting honour on Abraham's memory.
Full of years] In the Hebrew text there are no words for "years," printed by our translators in italics; but the sense not being perfect without the addition of some such word, we must allow that the word iamim, "days," not "years," is omitted. This appears to be more than conjecture, when we remark, that the Samaritan, the Septuagint, the Syriac, Arabic, and Vulgate, have supplied this word; besides, it is a phrase often used on these occasions; and the very word we have supplied occurs Gen. xxxv. 29. See 1 Chron. xxiii. 1. Though the word iamim, or "days," is omitted in the Targum of the London polyglot, yet some printed copies, such as those of the Complutensian and Antwerp editions, preserve it. It is found in a manuscript of the Hebrew and Chaldee, in the Bodleian library, numbered five thousand two hundred and thirty-three; and is likewise preserved in one belonging to the Harleian collection at the British Museum.
Was gathered to his people.] In the eastern language, which gives action or motion to every thing, this sentence signifies, to be reduced to one common lot or condition; besides, as the Hebrew abounds in pleonasm, "to die, and to be gathered to his people," are but two different phrases of the same thing. It must still be allowed, that this phrase originally arose from the notion of some common receptacle of souls. But we know how soon terms and phrases lose the memory of their original. The truth of this interpretation is confirmed by the several contexts wherein these expressions occur; the historian's purpose being evidently nothing else than to record the period of their existence here on earth.
18 He died in the presence of all his brethren.] In the Hebrew it is, He fell; in the Chaldee and Arabic, He dwelt; and in this sense the verse is an accomplishment of the prediction at his birth.
20 And Isaac was forty years old, &c.] Many of the following particulars happened several years before the death of Abraham; though they are related after that event; for the patriarch lived fifteen years after Esau and Jacob were born.
22 If it be so, why am I thus?] The Chaldee renders it, If it was to be so, why did I conceive? The Arabic paraphrases it thus, If I knew that the thing would have been so, I would not have requested it. That is, Why did I conceive, if I must suffer such uncommon excruciating pains? Yes, better for me to die, than to live in such continual misery.
She went to enquire of the Lord.] The Chaldee renders it, She went to enquire of the oracle. Some commentators are not agreed in what manner Rebekah enquired of the Lord; they seem in general to agree, that she had recourse to some prophet, but who that prophet was, is difficult to determine, unless it was God himself.

23 Two nations] The founders of two nations; namely, the Israelites and Idumeans, the former being descended from Jacob, and the latter from Esau. The Edomites were the offspring of Esau, the Israelites were of Jacob; and who but the author and giver of life could foresee that two children in the womb would multiply into two nations! But they were not only to grow up into two nations, but into two very distinct nations, and two manner of people were to be separated from her bowels. And have not the Edomites and Israelites been all along two very different people in their manners, customs, and religions, which made them to be perpetually at variance one with another? The children struggled together in the womb; and when they were grown up, they manifested different inclinations. The like diversity ran through their posterity: there was a continual enmity between the two nations. The king of Edom would not suffer the Israelites, in their return out of Egypt, to pass through his territories; and the history of the Edomites afterwards is little more than the history of their wars with the Jews.
The elder shall serve the younger.] The Hebrew may be translated, The greater shall serve the lesser. The family of Esau was the elder, and for some time the greater and more powerful of the two, these having been dukes and kings in Edom, before there reigned any king over the children of Israel. But David made an entire conquest of the Edomites, and compelled them to become his tributaries. In this state of servitude they continued about one hundred and fifty years. In the reign of Jehoram they recovered their liberties; but were afterwards defeated by Amaziah. Judas Maccabeus took their capital city; and his nephew Hyrcanus reduced them to the necessity of embracing the Jewish religion, or leaving their country.
25 Red all over like a hairy garment, &c.] This expression may denote, either that Esau, at his birth, was wholly covered with red hair, or that the colour of his flesh was ruddy, like a garment of red hair. And hence his name was called Esau, from Eschau, which, among the ancient Hebrews signified "a hair cloth."
26 His name was called Jacob, &c.] From hekeb, "the heel;" whence the Hebrew verb, to supplant, and Jacob a supplanter.
27 A plain man dwelling in tents.] He was of a mild and gentle nature, one that delighted in the soft acts of peace, and the innocent pleasures of a pastoral life. The word, in the original, signifies not "plain," but "perfect;" and in this sense it is rendered by the Syriac, Samaritan, and Chaldee; and by the Arabic, Perfect virtues. But the word perfect being a general term, and put in opposition to the rough and rustic manners of Esau, it must import that Jacob was more humane and gentle, as we have explained it.

Before
CHRIST
1837. 29 And Jacob sod pottage: and Esau came from the field, and he was faint:

30 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called Edom.

31 And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright.

1805. 32 And Esau said, Behold, I am at the point to die: and what profit shall this birthright do to me?

33 And Jacob said, Swear to me this day; and he swore unto him: and he sold his birthright unto Jacob.

34 Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles; and he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birthright.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXV.

In this place we cannot but consider it as wonderful, that the same people should retain the same disposition for so many ages, without changing their manners at all in so long a course of years; their continuance is still more astonishing: the great empires around them have all in their turns fallen to ruin, while they have continued the same from the beginning, and are likely to continue the same to the end. And this, in the natural course of human affairs, was so highly improbable, if not altogether impossible, that as nothing but a divine prescience could have foreseen it, so nothing but a divine power could have accomplished it.

We may with more confidence believe the particulars related of Abraham and Ishmael, when we see them verified in their posterity at this day. This is having, as it were, ocular demonstration for our faith. This is proving by plain matter of fact, that the Most High ruleth in the kingdoms of men, and that his truth, as well as his mercy, endureth for ever.

C H A P. XXVI.

1 Isaac because of the famine goeth to Gerar. 2 God instructeth and blesteth him. 6 He denieth his wife, and is reprov'd by Abimelech. 12 He groweth rich, and the Philistines envy him. 18 He diggeth sundry wells. 23 God appeareth to him in Beer-sheba, and blesteth him. 26 Abimelech maketh a covenant with him there. 34 Esau's Canaanitish wives are a grief to his parents.

1804. AND there was a famine in the land, beside the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And 29 Sod, &c.] This signifies to boil, and is the old preterite of the verb, to seethe.

30 Feed me with that same red pottage, &c.] The words in the original are, Feed me with that red, that same red; which some consider as a plain proof that Esau did not know the ingredients of which this pottage was made; but others think the repetition is used to express his extreme faintness, and the impatience of his appetite.

31 Sell me this day thy birthright.] It is thought that whoever enjoyed the birthright, had a right to the land of Canaan; which included a blessing promised to the peculiar seed of Abraham, from whom the Messiah was to descend. It is evident that fathers in those early days conferred a blessing on their first-born, which was conceived to extend to their posterity, according to the words of the son of Sirach: "The blessing of the father establisheth the houses of children; but the curse of the mother rooteth out foundations," Eccles. iii. 9. And hence we see the propriety of the epithet applied to this action by the apostle; for it doubtless shewed a profane, dissolute mind, to be thus regardless of his future dignity, unmindful of his posterity, and, for a trivial consideration, to give up his right to a father's dying benediction.

32 I am at the point to die, &c.] We have here a true picture of a profane sensualist, who, for a sordid momentary pleasure, will give up the most solid and permanent joys of futurity.

34 He did eat, and drink, and rose up, and went his way, &c.] He shewed no concern at what he had done, hoping, perhaps, to recover that by force, which he had lost by his brother's craft. And possibly he might depend so much upon Isaac's partial fondness for him, as to imagine he would not suffer Jacob to deprive him of any privileges of his birthright, notwithstanding this solemn agreement.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVI.

1 Beside the first famine.] See chap. xii. 10. We are of opinion that this event preceded the birth of Jacob and Esau, because it is not probable that Rebekah would dissemble her being a wife after she had borne twins.

Unto Abimelech, &c.] Probably the son of him to whom Abraham went. Abimelech was the common appellation of the kings of Palestine, as is said chap. xx. 2. Thus he who is called Achish, 1 Sam. xxi. 10. is styled Abimelech, Psal. xxxiv.

2 Go not down into Egypt.] It appears from this passage, that Isaac had formed a design of going into Egypt, because of the Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.

¶ And the LORD appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of:

3 Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father;

4 And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

5 Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

6 ¶ And Isaac dwelt in Gerar:

7 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and he said, She is my sister: for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah; because she was fair to look upon.

8 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.

12 ¶ Then Isaac sowed in that land, and received in the same year an hundred-fold: and the LORD blessed him:

13 And the man waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great:

famine which then raged in the land of Canaan; but God dissuaded him from it, lest that fruitful country should have induced him to fix his residence there; his seed, by that means, would have been confounded with the Egyptians; and the doctrine of the one God (a principle which they were separated in order to preserve) should by that means be lost.

3 The oath, &c.] All the promises which God had confirmed to Abraham by an oath; namely, "that he would multiply his seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand that is upon the sea-shore; and that his seed should possess the gate of their enemies."

4 I will make thy seed to multiply, &c.] Not to mention the vast increase of their other posterity, how soon did their descendants by Jacob grow up into a mighty nation! and how numerous were they formerly in the land of Canaan? How numerous were they in other parts of the world, according to all accounts? How numerous are they still in their present dispersion among all nations! It is impossible to fix the number this nation is at present composed of; but yet we have reason to believe there are still three millions of people who profess this religion; and, as their phrase is, are witnesses of the unity of God in all the nations of the world. And who could foretel such a wonderful increase by propagation of a branch only of one man's family, but the same divine power that could effect it?

5 Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, &c.] By using such a variety of expressions, God seems to indicate how highly he was pleased with the punctuality of Abraham's obedience to every thing he commanded him.

7 She is my sister, &c.] Isaac, in this particular, imitated the weakness of his father, and made use of a prevarication which was more dangerous than the truth.

8 Abimelech king of the Philistines, &c.] This occurrence shews the difference between an Egyptian monarch, and a petty king of the Philistines. Abimelech is described as little different from a simple person without his guards, or great princes; so jealous and afraid was he of Isaac's growing power, that he obliged him to depart out of his dominions; and not satisfied with that, went afterwards to beg a peace of him, and would swear him to the observance of it.

12 Sowed in the land, &c.] All the patriarchs, like their posterity, were under an extraordinary providence; and the blessings which were heaped upon them were all designed to reader the ends of infinite wisdom effectual; in preserving them, in order to perpetuate the idea of the one supreme being, till it was a proper season to propagate it all over the world.

14 For he had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of servants: and the Philistines envied him.

15 For all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than we.

17 And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 ¶ And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well Eshek; because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it Sitnah.

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it Rehoboth; and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence to Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake.

25 And he builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, and Phichol the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore came ye to me, seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

28 And they said, We saw certainly that the LORD was with thee: and we said, Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now the blessed of the LORD.

30 And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up betimes in the morning, and sware one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it Shebah: therefore the name of the city is Beer-sheba unto this day.

34 ¶ And Esau was forty years old when he took to wife Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Basemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXVI.

Let us here with grateful satisfaction reflect, that God never forsakes his servants in distress; he is not as the sons of men, but as a ready help in the time of trouble. It is better to trust in the Lord, than to put confidence even in princes, or the most powerful of men. God is a help that will never forsake or deceive us; God's love is like his essence, immutable, eternal, reaching from everlasting to everlasting. What St. James tells us, that "every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the father of lights," chap. i. 17. he adds, (to complete our consolation) "with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." And what God once said to Joshua, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," he says and performs to all that fear him.

CHAP. XXVII.

Isaac sendeth Esau for venison. 6 Rebekah instructeth Jacob to obtain the blessing. 18 Jacob under the person of Esau obtaineth it. 30 Esau bringeth venison; Isaac is alarmed, but confirmeth the blessing to Jacob. 34 Esau complaineth, and by importunity obtaineth a blessing. 41 He threateneth Jacob's life, 42 whom Rebekah sendeth away.

AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I know not the day of my death:

3 Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and take me some venison;

4 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die.

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶ And

preceded, as appears from chap. xxxi. 54. Feasting, or eating and drinking, were likewise esteemed a token of friendship and mutual benevolence, as may be collected from Joshua ix. 14. Judges xiii. 23, &c.

35 A grief of mind unto Isaac, &c.] In the Hebrew and Samaritan, bitterness of soul; the Septuagint render it, They were disobedient or contentious, &c. the Chaldee, they were rebellious and provoking; and the Arabic, They both contradicted, or were contrary to the opinion of, &c. Esau's marriage without his father's consent was the cause of his uneasiness. And if it be considered that they were Canaanites, a people notorious for atrocious inhumanity, and enemies to the religious sentiments of Isaac, his sorrow was well founded.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVII.

¶ Isaac was old, &c.] He was now an hundred and thirty-seven years old, as appears from comparing the several parts of his history, but he lived thirty years after this transaction happened.

3 Thy quiver, &c.] The Chaldee and Syriac render it, A sword, or hanger.

4 Make me savoury meat, &c.] Isaac, who always loved Esau better than Jacob, now desires his son to procure him some venison, and make him savoury meat, that his spirits might be exhilarated, and his mind properly disposed for giving the prophetic benediction; such as pious parents in those days always bestowed upon their children, and which was held sacred, being prophetic of their future fortunes.

5 And Rebekah heard, &c.] She well knew that Isaac preferred Esau to Jacob, and had now sent him to take venison, that he might pronounce upon him the blessing of Abraham. She was therefore determined, if possible, to prevent it, and by stratagem get it pronounced upon her younger son.

16 Go from us] Notwithstanding all the friendship which Abimelech had shewn to Isaac, and the league that had been made with Abraham; yet, when he feared that Isaac would rival him in power, he acts according to the policy of kings, and desires Isaac to retire from him.

Thou art much mightier than we.] This passage might be better rendered, Because thou art increased, or made mighty by us; a plain indication that envy was the motive that induced Abimelech to act in this ungenerous manner.

18 Which they had digged, &c.] The relative "they" having no antecedent but the word Isaac, we may suppose some mistake, and may correct it by the Samaritan text, which reads ebedi, "the servants," instead of beiyomi, in "the days." This correction is not only necessary in the Hebrew context, but the Samaritan is confirmed by the Greek, Syriac, and vulgar Latin translations. By these means the sentence will be, And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which the servants of Abraham his father had digged, &c.

19 Of springing water.] In the Hebrew it is, living waters; name the orientals gave to waters of perennial springs, in contradistinction to rain water, which they saved in cisterns. And the value of such a spring was doubtless the cause why the herdmen of Gerar strove with those of Isaac for the well, pretending they had a right to it, because it was found in their soil, and hence Isaac called the well "Eshek," that is, contention.

21 Sitnah.] i. e. Hatred, according to the best interpretation.

22 Rehoboth, &c.] Free space, or room; because his flocks had now room to feed at large, and range the country in search of the richest pastures.

24 I am with thee, &c.] The Chaldee reads, My word shall be thy help.

30 And they made a feast, &c.] This was customary between the parties when they entered into a covenant; especially when a sacrifice

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the LORD before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a deceiver; and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took goodly raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with him in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son:

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck:

17 And she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy firstborn; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it to me.

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

13 Upon me be thy curse, &c.] Rebekah seems to have been persuaded, that Jacob had a just title to the first blessing which Esau had sold with his birthright, and which God had designed for Jacob from the beginning; whence she thought it her duty to deceive Isaac into an action which he ought to have done voluntarily, and therefore takes the whole curse upon herself, provided Isaac should discover the fallacy. But though these circumstances have a great tendency to palliate the guilt either of Jacob or his mother, yet they are far from being sufficient entirely to exculpate them; the former having increased his crime by affirming himself to be Esau, which was an absolute falsehood. We should therefore lament the weakness of human nature, which cannot always stand upright; and at the same time admire the impartiality of the sacred writings, in which the very blemishes and transgressions of those who make the greatest figure therein are recorded for our instruction.

21 Come near that I may feel thee, &c.] Isaac still suspected that this was not Esau; and therefore desires his son to approach his bed, that he might feel him, being persuaded that he should by that means fully satisfy himself, whether it was Esau or not.

27 He smelled the smell of his raiment, &c.] From hence we may infer, that the orientals perfumed their garments with the odouriferous scent of flowers, in which the country of Arabia abounded; and this elegant smell had such an influence on the spirits of Isaac, that he breaks out into a kind of rapture, "See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the Lord hath blessed." That is, the smell of my son's raiment conveys to my mind the enchanting idea of a field adorned with fruits, and enamelled with flowers.

28 Give thee of the dew of heaven.] In the hot country where Isaac dwelt, showers being less frequent than with us, the morning and evening dews were of the utmost importance to refresh the earth, and produce that plenty for which the country was so remarkable.

And the fatness of the earth, &c.] Under these expressions Isaac wishes his son all the blessings which a fruitful country can produce.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, I am.

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine:

29 Let the people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee, be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy firstborn Esau.

33 And Isaac trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath taken venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, and he shall be blessed.

34 ¶ And when Esau heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father.

35 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, Is not he rightly named Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birthright; and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I sus-

And this prophecy was remarkably verified by God's settling the Israelites in the possession of Canaan, a land flowing with milk and honey.

29 Let the people serve thee.] What is predicted concerning Esau and Jacob, was not verified in themselves, but in their posterity. Jacob was so far from bearing rule over Esau, that he was forced to fly his country for fear of him. When he returned, he sent a supplicatory message to his brother Esau. When he heard of Esau's coming to meet him with four hundred men, he was greatly afraid and distressed. He sent a magnificent present before him to appease his brother, calling himself Esau's servant: and after he had found a gracious reception, acknowledged, "I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, &c." chap. xxxiii. 3. Jacob then had no temporal superiority over Esau, and therefore we must look for the completion of the prophecy among their posterity.

Cursed be every one, &c.] The same promise was made to Abraham in the name of God, chap. xii. 3. and it is here repeated, and thus paraphrased: "He who shall curse thee, my son Jacob, shall be cursed, like Balaam the son of Beor; and he who shall bless thee, shall be blessed, as Moses the prophet, the lawgiver of Israel."

33 Isaac trembled very exceedingly.] The Hebrew is, Isaac trembled with a great trembling greatly. What words can convey anxiety, solicitude, and agonizing terror more forcibly!

Who? where is he? Astonishment and perturbation not only confused the ideas, but likewise stopped the voice of the patriarch; and the broken and imperfect sentences the sacred historian has put in his mouth, are the voice of nature, and inimitably proper.

Yea, and he shall be blessed.] Perhaps it would be more expressive of the original to read, Yea, and he will be blessed: for the whole of this transaction seems not to have been so much the private wishes of a parent, as a prophecy inspired by God; and if we consider it in this sense, which is confirmed by the event, the patriarch's character is freed from that partiality which obscures it, and the interposition of Providence is rendered more conspicuous.

God! give thee of the Dew of Heaven, & the fatness of the Earth, & plenty of Corn & Wine.

re I sustained him: and what shall I do unto thee, my son?

38 And Esau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father. And Esau lifted up his voice, and wept.

39 And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, Behold thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above;

40 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother; and it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

41 ¶ And Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, The days of mourning for my father are at hand; then will I slay my brother Jacob.

42 ¶ And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah: and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother to Haran;

44 And tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send, and fetch thee from thence: why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

39 Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, &c.] Some modern authors render these words, Thy dwelling shall be remote from the fatness of the earth; and say, Idumea, the country of the Edomites, was a dry, barren, and desert country. But it is not probable that any good author should use the very same words, with the very same prepositions in one sense, and within a very few lines after in a quite contrary sense; which the sacred writer must do, to justify the new translation. Besides, Esau solicited for a blessing; and the author of the epistle to the Hebrews says, that "Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau;" whereas, had he consigned Esau to such a barren and wretched country, it would have been a curse rather than a blessing. Wherever the Edomites were situated, whether at Mount Seir, or any other place, we find, in fact, that in temporal blessings they were little inferior to the Israelites. Esau went to dwell in Mount Seir, of his own accord; and he would hardly have removed thither with so many cattle, had it been such a barren and desolate country as some would represent it. When the Israelites desired leave to pass through the territories of Edom, Numb. xx. 17. it appears, that the country abounded in fruitful fields and vineyards; and the prophecy of Malachi, chap. i. 2. which is commonly alledged a proof of its barrenness, is rather an argument to the contrary; for it implies, that the country was fruitful before, and that its present unfruitfulness was rather an effect of war and devastation, than any natural defect or failure in the soil.

40 When thou shalt have dominion, &c.] Some render the words, Thou shalt have dominion by laying down, shaking off; thou shalt shake off, and shalt loose his yoke from off thy neck. Others, If thou shalt repent, his yoke shall pass from off thy neck. But our translation is the most approved. It is not said that they should have dominion over the seed of Jacob, but simply have dominion, as they had when they appointed a king of their own. We shall thus paraphrase the whole: And it shall be when the sons of Jacob attend to the law, and observe the precepts, they shall impose the yoke of servitude upon thy neck; but when they shall turn away themselves, from studying the law, and shall not keep the precepts, behold, then thou shalt shake off the yoke from thy neck. It was David who imposed the yoke. Toward the latter end of Solomon's reign, Hadad, the Edomite, raised some disturbances, but was not able to recover his throne. But in the reign of Jehoram, the Edomites revolted and made themselves a king. Jehoram could not subdue them. "So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day," Chron. xx. 8, 10. and hereby this part of the prophecy was fulfilled, about nine hundred years after it was delivered. It may not be improper to consider, that the younger was to be greatly superior in spiritual blessings. Jacob was a man of more religion than Esau. The posterity of Jacob likewise preserved the true religion, and the worship of one God, while the Edomites were sunk in idolatry; and of the seed of Jacob was born the Saviour of the world. This was the peculiar privilege and advantage of Jacob: this was his greatest superiority over Esau: and in this sense St. Paul understands the prophecy, "the elder shall serve the younger," Rom. ix. 12. And when the

In this chapter we observe one thing of a very striking nature, viz. that Rebekah and Jacob seem to have fallen into the great error of our lives, the depending on our own wisdom rather than on God's. Though Rebekah, and probably Jacob, knew that God had declared that his posterity should become superior to Esau, yet they could not wait with patience till God should bring it to pass by his infinite wisdom, but must have recourse to their own; and Jacob must take an ungenerous advantage of his brother's necessity to procure one privilege, and Rebekah persuades her son to impose on his father by deceit and falsehood, in order to gain another; which can never be justifiable on any account. And accordingly, though Jacob's posterity obtained the blessing which God had purposed they should have, yet Jacob and his mother brought evil upon themselves (which will always be the consequence of bad deeds) by the means they took to obtain the blessing; for Jacob, we find, was thereby obliged to fly from his friends and country, and endure a long exile and many hardships; and fond Rebekah was obliged to send away her beloved son, not for a few days only, as she flattered herself, ver. 44. but never to set her eyes upon him more, as her life was finished before his return.

Gentiles were converted to Christianity, the prophecy was fulfilled literally, and will be more amply fulfilled, when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in.

41 The days of mourning for my father, &c.] In this, however, he was mistaken: for his father lived at least forty years longer; for he was now one hundred, being sixty at the birth of Esau, chap. xxv. 26. who was past forty when he married, chap. xxvi. 34. and Isaac was one hundred and eighty when he died, chap. xxxv. 28. Esau, we see, had some reverence for his father; but none, it would seem, for his mother, who had helped Jacob to supplant him.

45 I will send and fetch thee from thence] Which however she did not, for Jacob lived with Laban twenty years, chap. xxxi. 38. either because Esau's anger lasted longer than she expected, or because she was prevented by death.

Why should I be deprived of you both, &c.] If Esau had killed Jacob, he would either have been punished with death according to the law of God, chap. ix. 6. or he must have fled from justice, and been an exile, as Cain and Absalom were when they had slain their brothers, chap. iv. 12. 2 Sam. xiii. 24. and either way she would have been deprived of them both.

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac,—If Jacob take a wife] She assigns only this reason for sending Jacob away among her kindred, without taking any notice of the danger his life was in, lest she should have afflicted her husband by telling the true reason.

What good shall my life do to me?] I shall have no comfort in it; death would be more eligible than such a life: this she said with great vehemence and affection, to move and work upon Isaac to lay his commands on Jacob, and give him orders and directions to go to her family and friends, and there take him a wife; and she succeeded according to her wishes, as the following chapter shews.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVIII.

1 Thou shalt not, &c.] The anxious apprehensions shewn by Rebekah and Isaac on this occasion, flowed not only from parental affection, but likewise from a proper sense of the blessing entailed upon their posterity. To intermarry with a people who were decreed to destruction on account of their vices, would be, in one respect, to counteract, if not to frustrate, the plan of Providence. Besides, it might be the design of heaven to render its omnipotence conspicuous in the settlement of the Israelites in Canaan, which intermarriages with the natives would, in some respect, have obscured or rendered less remarkable. If these were the motives of Israel's conduct in this case, can we sufficiently admire his wisdom, or applaud his oratory?

5 God Almighty bless thee, &c.] As the blessing in the preceding chapter was obtained by fraud, this repetition of it may appear no ways unnecessary. It is likewise an addition to that given in the former chapter, and was a confirmation of that which Isaac had himself received from Abraham, and Abraham himself had derived from God.

4 And give thee the bleſſing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy ſeed with thee; that thou mayeſt inherit the land wherein thou art a ſtranger, which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Iſaac ſent away Jacob: and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, ſon of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Eſau's mother.

6 ¶ When Eſau ſaw that Iſaac had bleſſed Jacob, and ſent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he bleſſed him he gave him charge, ſaying, Thou ſhalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

7 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Eſau ſeeing that the daughters of Canaan pleaſed not Iſaac his father;

9 Then went Eſau unto Iſhmael, and took unto the wives which he had Mahalath the daughter of Iſhmael Abraham's ſon, the ſiſter of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-ſheba, and went toward Haran.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, becauſe the ſun was ſet; and he took of the ſtones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to ſleep.

4 The bleſſing of Abraham, &c.] What this was, may be underſtood by comparing chap. xii. 2, 3. with chap. xxii. 17, 18.

9 He went unto Iſhmael] As Iſhmael was now dead, and had been dead about fourteen years, it is evident we muſt not take this expreſſion without ſome qualification. Patrick ſays, that the text means either the family or houſe of Iſhmael: other commentators imagine, it ſignifies no more than Iſhmael's country; and the Arabic, which renders the words, The nation or country of Iſhmael, ſeems to confirm this conjecture.

Mahalath, the daughter of Iſhmael, &c.] He imagined, that the affinity which ſhe bore to Abraham, the founder of Iſaac's family, would pleaſe his father, who inſiſted ſo much on Jacob's marrying one of his own relations. It is remarkable that this wife of Eſau is called Baſhemath, chap. xxxvi. 3. though ſhe is ſaid to be the daughter of the ſame perſon as Mahalath: whence we may conclude, it was the cuſtom of thoſe times for one perſon to have two names, which were uſed indifferently. Thus Eſau is likewiſe named Edom; and the mother of Abijam is called both Maacah and Micaiah, 1 Kings xv. 2. 1 Chron. xiii. 2.

11 Upon a certain place, &c.] So ſcrupulous was the patriarch in obſerving the command of his father, that he would not enter into any houſe that belonged to a Canaanite, but choſe rather to ſleep in the open air. The hardineſs in which he had been bred, rendered him indifferent to the manner in which he lodged; and he ſlept with as much comfort upon a pillow of ſtone, as thoſe who repoſed upon the bed of luxury. The place might perhaps have been pitched upon on account of its ſhade, eſpecially as it is named Luz, which ſignifies an almond, and might probably have received that name on account of the abundance of almond trees which grew there.

12 Behold a ladder, &c.] The explication of this viſion, formed of ſymbolic hieroglyphics, will be eaſy, if we attend either to the circumſtances of the patriarch, or the mode of information ſuited to thoſe rude and early ages. Jacob had now left his father's houſe without attendants, without any certain proſpect of ſucceſs in acquiring a wife or a ſettlement. It is true, he had obtained his father's bleſſing; but, having obtained it by fraud, had irritated his elder brother, who threatened his life, on account of the injuſtice he had been guilty of, and would perhaps have avenged himſelf if Jacob had not fled from his father's houſe. In theſe circumſtances he had much to fear, and little to hope; his confidence could only ariſe from his perſuaſion of the doctrine of a Providence, and that there was perpetual, though inviſible communication between heaven and earth. This was the intent of the viſion; and what could be better adapted to communicate this truth, than the ſymbol of a ladder ſtanding upon the earth, and reaching to heaven, on which the angels of God were continually aſcending and deſcending. Nothing could teach him better, that there was a conſtant intercourſe between the angelic beings, the miniſters of a Providence, and the earth. Nothing conſequently could more effectually baniſh any anxious ſuſpicion from his boſom, or compel him to reſign himſelf entirely to the direction of Providence, and conſide in the parental care of the God of his father. When ſpeech was rude and imperfect, ideas were not only conveyed by words, but likewiſe by ſigns, actions, and a perpetual representation of material images; and when God taught the patriarch, he condeſcended to the ſame mode of inſtruction, and the ſignificative action was changed into a viſion: a viſion that elevated his heart with the pleaſing aſſurance, that though he was an exile from his native country, and travelling alone uninhabited deſerts; though he was endangered by the wild beaſts that roamed in the night-time for prey, and was ſurrounded by barbarous nations, who were loſt to every principle of humanity; yet he was ſtill in the preſence of his maker, whoſe almighty arm would protect him from danger, whoſe angels

12 And he dreamed, and behold a ladder ſet up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God aſcending and deſcending on it.

13 And, behold, the LORD ſtood above it, and ſaid, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Iſaac: the land whereon thou lieſt, to thee will I give it, and to thy ſeed;

14 And thy ſeed ſhall be as the duſt of the earth, and thou ſhalt ſpread abroad to the weſt, and to the eaſt, and to the north, and to the ſouth: and in thee and in thy ſeed ſhall all the families of the earth be bleſſed.

15 And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goeſt, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his ſleep, and he ſaid, Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not.

17 And he was afraid, and ſaid, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the houſe of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob roſe up early in the morning, and took the ſtone that he had put for his pillows, and ſet it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

19 And

pitched their camp about his bed, and under the ſhadow of whoſe wings he might dwell in ſafety.

13 Behold, the Lord ſtood] The Hebrew for Lord, is Jehovah, the incommunicable name of God. The Chaldee renders it, the glory of the Lord, that is, the Shechinah; but the Arabic is remarkable, which reads, The angel of the Lord ſtood before him. ſpoke unto him for, or the name of, the Lord, I am, &c.

I am the Lord God of Abraham] The nations which ſurrounded the family of Abraham were idolaters, and imagined that their ſeveral deities were local and tutelary; they looked upon themſelves as peculiarly under their protection, and as intitled to diſtinguiſhing marks of their favour. The different names they aſſigned them, demonſtrate the truth of this aſſertion. In compliance with this cuſtom, God diſtinguiſhes himſelf to Jacob by the title of “the God of Abraham, &c.” and in aſſuming this title, he aſſures Jacob of his extraordinary providence and peculiar protection, at the ſame time as he recalls to his mind the noble acts he had done for his anceſtors, and reminds him that he was the true and only Deity, in oppoſition to the falſe Gods of the neighbouring nations.

To thee will I give it, &c.] Though it may be objected that this prophecy was not perſonally verified to Jacob, yet the objection will ſoon vaniſh, if we conſider what has been offered concerning this promiſe, when delivered to Abraham and to Iſaac.

14 And in thee, and in thy ſeed, &c.] This promiſe attended upon the birthright. It was that which peculiarly diſtinguiſhed the bleſſing which Iſaac gave to his ſons, Jacob and Eſau, and was truly a conveyance of the birthright to him in the family of Abraham. Iſaac himſelf calls this right of primogeniture in his houſe, the bleſſing of Abraham; and God himſelf, in confirmation of Jacob's right of primogenation, aſſures him, that in him, and in his ſeed, all the families of the earth ſhall be bleſſed. And it is very obſervable, that this bleſſing ſo peculiarly belongs to this covenant, that it is never mentioned with reſpect to any other perſon whatever, than ſuch only to whom the right of this covenant, and the promiſe of the land of Canaan, deſcended.

16 Surely, the Lord is in this place, &c.] Had Jacob ſuch low ideas of the Deity, as to imagine that he was not preſent throughout all ſpace, and beyond all ſpace? Surely, he had not. The ſentence, therefore, ſignifies no more than this: that he could not have imagined before, that the Lord would have choſen that ſpot to manifeſt his peculiar and glorious preſence. This ſenſe is confirmed by the antient translations, eſpecially by the Chaldee, which renders the words, Certainly, the glory of the Lord dwelleth in this place, and the Arabic, which paraphraſes it, The light of God is in this place.

17 How dreadful is this place, &c.] Or, as the Chaldee translates it, This is no common place. Here the Deity keeps his court, as earthly monarchs did then, in the gates. This is the place wherein God has been pleaſed to manifeſt his glorious preſence; and if majeſty excites awe, the preſence, the glorious preſence of God, renders this place awful and dreadful indeed! O that all mankind would entertain the ſame idea of the Deity, who is preſent every where; but eſpecially when they approach the courts of the Lord's houſe, “where his honour loveth to dwell.”

18 Took the ſtone—and ſet it up] Not only to preſerve the memory of this heavenly viſion, but likewiſe to make uſe of it as an altar, as appears from the words immediately following.

20 ¶ And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

21 So that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God:

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXVIII.

We may observe, in the above portion of divine writ, the modesty of Jacob's petitions; he desires nothing but to be preserved in his journey, and food and raiment. This seems to be of the same nature as Agur's prayer, and is a proper pattern for our petitions and desires of this sort: and we are not to understand it as if Jacob bargained with God, but only that he vows or professes, that when these things should have happened to him, according to God's promise and good pleasure, he would make a public acknowledgment, by grateful praise of the goodness and faithfulness of his God.

CHAP. XXIX.

■ Jacob cometh to the well of Haran; 9 meeteth Rachel, maketh himself known to her, and is entertained by Laban, 15 whom he covenanteth to serve for Rachel. 21 He is deceived with Leah; 28 marrieth Rachel also, and serveth for her seven years more. 31 Leah is fruitful and beareth Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah.

THEN Jacob went on his journey, and came into the land of the people of the east.

to Jerusalem, and from thence to Scotland; yet the sober part of mankind must look upon the legend in the same light as that of the journey to the house of the Virgin Mary from Jerusalem to Loretto.

19 Beth-el] That is, the house of God, from beth, "a house," and el, "God."

That city was called Luz, &c.] This by no means contradicts the assertion above, wherein we say, that Jacob laid himself down to sleep in the open air, chusing rather to lie on the ground, than to enter into any house of the Canaanites: for in the first place, this spot might have been within the inclosure of the city walls; but if this be looked upon as an evasion, we may reply, secondly, that the place where Jacob slept, and the city of Luz, were not the same, as appears from the expression of, that place, when applied to the spot where he had his vision, and that city, when applied to Luz. There might have been a city near, which was at first named Luz, or Ulamluz, according to the translation of the Vulgate and Septuagint, which signifies, The porch of nuts or almonds; but, in process of time, it might have changed its name for that of Beth-el, which was given it on account of this celebrated vision.

21 Then shall the Lord be my God] The Hebrew is more expressive, Then shall Jehovah be my God; which implies, that he would acknowledge and worship the only and true God, in opposition to the gods of the neighbouring nations; and that he would adore him as his tutelary God and defender, in allusion to the custom of the surrounding idolaters. Though this vow was conditional, we must not imagine that it betrays either want of faith, or want of religion in Jacob; for the condition expressed was necessary for the performance of his vow, it being impossible that he should fulfil it, unless God preserved him, and brought him back again to that place. Some call the vow eucharistical, as proceeding from a due sense of the divine veracity, and the blessing promised him, ver. 13. ■ sense which it will bear even in the former acceptance; it being evident that the patriarch would, on his return, be filled with a grateful sense of the divine favour, and would accompany his offering with thanksgiving and praise.

22 And this stone—shall be God's house.] Every place set apart for divine worship, or honoured with any extraordinary manifestation of the divine presence, is in scripture stiled God's house. In either of these senses, we may understand the words ■ used by Jacob; for it was his intention to set that place or stone apart for the worship of the Deity, in return for which he might reasonably expect that God would manifest himself to him there. Some indeed understand by Jacob's saying, "this stone shall be God's house," that he intended to erect a structure there for the public worship of God; but it should be remembered, that in those early ages they adored their great Creator under the open canopy of heaven, and that groves and mountains were their only temples.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIX.

■ Land of the people of the east.] In the Hebrew, The land of the children of the east. This was Mesopotamia, which lay eastward from Canaan.

■ And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth. Before CHRIST 1769.

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of Haran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, Is he well? And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, Lo, it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

9 ¶ And while he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep: for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

adding the word shepherds: but if it be supposed that the Hebrew word bederei, "flocks," was erroneously substituted by the transcriber instead of roe, "shepherds," this sense will be complete; the participle, lying, is, in Isaiah xiii. 20. applied to shepherds in this recumbent posture, and affords some argument in favour of this emendation.

3 Flocks gathered.] In the four first verses of this chapter, we are presented with a dialogue; and yet no man is mentioned but Jacob; the only living creature present besides him being three flocks of sheep. The truth seems to be, that the word shepherds was originally expressed, and some transcriber has writ baderim, "flocks," instead of barvaim, "shepherds." That this mistake has actually been made, is certain from the Samaritan and the Arabic; but it may be said, that, with this emendation, the words, "all the shepherds were there gathered together," in this verse, is contrary to those in the eighth, which informs us, that the shepherds were not yet all assembled together: but to reconcile these two passages, it should be observed, that this verse speaks only of the custom of the shepherds assembling at that well, and watering their flocks all together; for all the verbs in this verse, though preter, have a future signification, on account of the converive particle prefixed to every one of them; and therefore, as future, cannot express a past assembly or action. But being frequentative, and implying the continuance and custom of doing a thing, expresses this sense. And there (at this well) all the shepherds usually met together, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth. The signification given to this verse, as expressive of a custom, is confirmed by the Vulgate, which renders it, It was customary; but indeed reads, according to the Hebrew, Sheep, instead of shepherds.

4 Unto them, &c.] This expression contains the emendation proposed in the preceding verse, and receives great light from it.

8 Until all the flocks, &c.] The word rendered "flocks," should be shepherds, as appears from the note on ver. 3. and is supported by the Samaritan, the Arabic, and the Septuagint; nay, even from the context. The stone is represented to have been very large, so large, that it could not be moved any other way, than by rolling. It was probably too heavy for the three shepherds lying by it; if so, their excuse is intelligible, when they tell Jacob, that they could not water their sheep till it was rolled away; and being too much for their strength, it was necessary for them to stay till that obstacle was removed by the united efforts of all the shepherds who watered their sheep at that place.

9 Rachel came, &c.] Whether she received her name, which in Hebrew signifies a sheep, on account of her occupation; or whether it was given her to intimate that meekness and innocence are the supreme ornament of her sex, we leave to the determination of the reader. Her employ in those early ages was reputed no disgrace; the greatest heroes of antiquity, the sons of kings, and kings themselves, are represented as engaged in this kind of employment, which was then ■ honourable as it is at present despicable.

10 And rolled the stone, &c.] Though Jacob only is mentioned in the text, yet it is probable that he might be assisted by the shepherds. He is only mentioned, in order to shew the readiness he discovered to oblige Rachel, who had already captivated his heart.

4 And give thee the bleſſing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy ſeed with thee; that thou mayeſt inherit the land wherein thou art a ſtranger, which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Iſaac ſent away Jacob: and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, ſon of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Eſau's mother.

6 ¶ When Eſau ſaw that Iſaac had bleſſed Jacob, and ſent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he bleſſed him he gave him a charge, ſaying, Thou ſhalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

7 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Eſau ſeeing that the daughters of Canaan pleaſed not Iſaac his father;

9 Then went Eſau unto Iſhmael, and took unto the wives which he had Mahalath the daughter of Iſhmael Abraham's ſon, the ſiſter of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-ſheba, and went toward Haran.

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, becauſe the ſun was ſet; and he took of the ſtones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to ſleep.

4 The bleſſing of Abraham, &c.] What this was, may be underſtood by comparing chap. xii. 2, 3. with chap. xxii. 17, 18.

9 He went unto Iſhmael] As Iſhmael was now dead, and had been dead about fourteen years, it is evident we muſt not take this expreſſion without ſome qualification. Patrick ſays, that the text means either the family or houſe of Iſhmael: other commentators imagine, it ſignifies no more than Iſhmael's country; and the Arabic, which renders the words, The nation or country of Iſhmael, ſeems to confirm this conjecture

Mahalath, the daughter of Iſhmael, &c.] He imagined, that the affinity which ſhe bore to Abraham, the founder of Iſaac's family, would pleaſe his father, who inſiſted ſo much on Jacob's marrying one of his own relations. It is remarkable that this wife of Eſau is called Baſhemath, chap. xxxvi. 3. though ſhe is ſaid to be the daughter of the ſame perſon as Mahalath: whence we may conclude, it was the cuſtom of thoſe times for one perſon to have two names, which were uſed indifferently. Thus Eſau is likewiſe named Edom; and the mother of Abijam is called both Maacah and Micaiah, Kings xv. 2. 1 Chron. xiii. 2.

11 Upon a certain place, &c.] So ſcrupulous was the patriarch in obſerving the command of his father, that he would not enter into any houſe that belonged to a Canaanite, but choſe rather to ſleep in the open air. The hardineſs in which he had been bred, rendered him indifferent to the manner in which he lodged; and he ſlept with as much comfort upon a pillow of ſtone, as thoſe who repoſed upon an account of its ſhade, eſpecially as it is named Luz, which ſignifies an almond, and might probably have received that name on account of the abundance of almond trees which grew there.

12 Behold a ladder, &c.] The explication of this viſion, formed of ſymbolic hieroglyphics, will be eaſy, if we attend either to the circumſtances of the patriarch, or the mode of information ſuited to thoſe rude and early ages. Jacob had now left his father's houſe without attendants, without any certain proſpect of ſucceſs in acquiring a wife or a ſettlement. It is true, he had obtained his father's bleſſing; but, having obtained it by fraud, had irritated his elder brother, who threatened his life, on account of the juſtice he had been guilty of, and would perhaps have avenged himſelf if Jacob had not fled from his father's houſe. In theſe circumſtances he had much to fear, and little to hope; his confidence could only ariſe from his perſuaſion of the doctrine of a Providence, and that there was a perpetual, though inviſible communication between heaven and earth. This was the intent of the viſion; and what could be better adapted to communicate this truth, than the ſymbol of a ladder ſtanding upon the earth, and reaching to heaven, on which the angels of God were continually aſcending and deſcending. Nothing could teach him better, that there was a conſtant intercourſe between the angelic beings, the miniſters of a Providence, and the earth. Nothing conſequently could more effectually baniſh any anxious ſuſpicion from his boſom, or compel him to reſign himſelf entirely to the direction of Providence, and conſide in the parental care of the God of his father. When ſpeech was rude and imperfect, ideas were not only conveyed by words, but likewiſe by ſigns, actions, and a perpetual representation of material images; and when God taught the patriarch, he condeſcended to the ſame mode of inſtruction, and the ſignificative action was changed into a viſion: a viſion that elevated his heart with the pleaſing aſſurance, that though he was an exile from his native country, and travelling alone uninhabited deſerts; though he was endangered by the wild beaſts that roamed in the night-time for prey, and was ſurrounded by barbarous nations, who were loſt to every principle of humanity; yet he was ſtill in the preſence of his maker, whoſe almighty arm would protect him from danger, whoſe angels

12 And he dreamed, and behold a ladder ſet up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God aſcending and deſcending on it.

13 And, behold, the LORD ſtood above it, and ſaid, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Iſaac: the land whereon thou lieſt, to thee will I give it, and to thy ſeed;

14 And thy ſeed ſhall be as the duſt of the earth, and thou ſhalt ſpread abroad to the weſt, and to the eaſt, and to the north, and to the ſouth: and in thee and in thy ſeed ſhall all the families of the earth be bleſſed.

15 And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goeſt, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his ſleep, and he ſaid, Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not.

17 And he was afraid, and ſaid, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the houſe of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob roſe up early in the morning, and took the ſtone that he had put for his pillows, and ſet it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

19 And

pitched their camp about his bed, and under the ſhadow of whoſe wings he might dwell in ſafety.

13 Behold, the Lord ſtood] The Hebrew for Lord, is Jehovah, the incommunicable name of God. The Chaldee renders it, the glory of the Lord, that is, the Shechinah; but the Arabic is remarkable, which reads, The angel of the Lord ſtood before him. ſpoke unto him for, or the name of, the Lord, I am, &c.

That city was called Luz, &c.] This by no means contradicts the assertion above, wherein we say, that Jacob laid himself down to sleep in the open air, chusing rather to lie on the ground, than to enter into any house of the Canaanites: for in the first place, this spot might have been within the inclosure of the city walls; but if this be looked upon as an evasion, we may reply, secondly, that the place where Jacob slept, and the city of Luz, were not the same, as appears from the expression of, that place, when applied to the spot where he had his vision, and that city, when applied to Luz. 21 Then shall the Lord be my God] The Hebrew is more expressive, Then shall Jehovah be my God; which implies, that he would acknowledge and worship the only and true God, in opposition to the gods of the neighbouring nations; and that he would adore him as his tutelary God and defender, in allusion to the custom of the surrounding idolaters. Though this vow was conditional, we must not imagine that it betrays either want of faith, or want of religion in Jacob; for the condition expressed was necessary for the performance of his vow, it being impossible that he should fulfil it, unless God preserved him, and brought him back again to that place. Some call the vow eucharistical, as proceeding from a due sense of the divine veracity, and the blessing promised him, ver. 13. a sense which it will bear even in the former acceptation; it being evident that the patriarch would, on his return, be filled with a grateful sense of the divine favour, and would accompany his offering with thanksgiving and praise.

adding the word shepherds: but if it be supposed that the Hebrew word bederei, "flocks," was erroneously substituted by the transcriber instead of roe, "shepherds," this sense will be complete; the participle, lying, is, in Isaiah xiii. 20. applied to shepherds in this recumbent posture, and affords some argument in favour of this emendation.

3 Flocks gathered.] In the four first verses of this chapter, we are presented with a dialogue; and yet no man is mentioned but Jacob; the only living creature present besides him being three flocks of sheep. The truth seems to be, that the word shepherds was originally expressed, and some transcriber has writ haderim, "flocks," instead of hadrain, "shepherds." That this mistake has actually been made, is certain from the Samaritan and the Arabic; but it may be said, that, with this emendation, the words, "all the shepherds were there gathered together," in this verse, is contrary to those in the eighth, which informs us, that the shepherds were not yet all assembled together: but to reconcile these two passages, it should be observed, that this verse speaks only of the custom of the shepherds assembling at that well, and watering their flocks all together; for all the verbs in this verse, though preter, have a future signification, on account of the conversive particle prefixed to every one of them; and therefore, as future, cannot express a past assembly or action. But being frequentative, and implying the continuance and custom of doing a thing, expresses this sense. And there (at this well) all the shepherds usually met together, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth. The signification given to this verse, as expressive of a custom, is confirmed by the Vulgate, which renders it, It was customary; but indeed reads, according to the Hebrew, Sheep, instead of shepherds.

4 Unto them, &c.] This expression contains the emendation proposed in the preceding verse, and receives great light from it.

8 Until all the flocks, &c.] The word rendered "flocks," should be shepherds, as appears from the note on ver. 3. and is supported by the Samaritan, the Arabic, and the Septuagint; nay, even from the context. The stone is represented to have been very large, so large, that it could not be moved any other way, than by rolling. It was probably too heavy for the three shepherds lying by it; if so, their excuse is intelligible, when they tell Jacob, that they could not water their sheep till it was rolled away; and being too much for their strength, it was necessary for them to stay till that obstacle was removed by the united efforts of all the shepherds who watered their sheep at that place.

9 Rachel came, &c.] Whether she received her name, which in Hebrew signifies a sheep, on account of her occupation; or whether it was given her to intimate that meekness and innocence are the supreme ornament of her sex, we leave to the determination of the reader. Her employ in those early ages was reputed no disgrace; the greatest heroes of antiquity, the sons of kings, and kings themselves, are represented as engaged in this kind of employment, which was then as honourable as it is at present despicable.

10 And rolled the stone, &c.] Though Jacob only is mentioned in the text, yet it is probable that he might be assisted by the shepherds. He is only mentioned, in order to shew the readiness he discovered to oblige Rachel, who had already captivated his heart.

Before
1769.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.

14 And Laban said to him, Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month.

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender eyed; but Rachel was beautiful and well favoured.

18 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

19 And Laban said, it is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.

21 ¶ And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may go in unto her.

22 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and made a feast.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

24 And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah Zilpah his maid for an handmaid.

25 And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Leah: and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?

12 Her father's brother, &c.] The word brother is used in a greater latitude in the Hebrew, than in the English; in this place it signifies only a kinsman, or relation, as appears from ver. 13. and it is used in that sense, chap. xiii. 8.

13 All these things.] That is, he gave him a detail of his circumstances, and recapitulated what he had before related to Rachel.

14 Surely, thou art my bone and my flesh.] The Chaldee renders it, Thou art my kinsman and my flesh.

The space of a month.] In the Hebrew, A month of days. The bishop of Chester, in his comment, supposes that this space was agreed on for a trial of his service.

17 Leah was tender eyed.] The Septuagint render it, Weak-eyed; the Vulgate, Blear-eyed; the Syriac agrees with our translation; but the Chaldee and Arabic read, Leah had beautiful eyes.

Rachel was beautiful and well favoured.] The Hebrew signifies, that she was beautiful in shape, as well as in her face.

20 And Jacob served seven years, &c.] The reason which some assign for Laban's accepting this term of service for Rachel is, that he was unwilling to part with her sooner, on account of his entertaining a bad idea of the Canaanites; but we must not suppose with them, that Jacob did actually serve seven years before he married her, because he could not then have thought, as this verse asserts, that they seemed unto him but a few days; his love, which is represented as very ardent, would rather have made this space appear intolerably tedious and long.

21 Jacob said.] The Hebrew word may be translated, Had said, which gives some countenance to the sense we have affixed to the preceding verse.

My days are fulfilled, &c.] By this is meant no more than the month of trial. It is certain it cannot be applied to the expiration of the seven years which he was to serve; for then Jacob must have had twelve children in the space of seven years, which is inconsistent with the positive assertion of scripture. Leah had seven children at seven births, which might have been in seven years. Besides, it is certain, from chap. xxix. 35. and xxx. 17. she intermitted from bearing; and in the mean time we have an account of the birth of Dan, Naphtali, Gad and Asher, before Leah bare Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah. If we compare the age of Jacob when he went to Laban, with the birth of Hezron and Hamul, chap. xlv. 12. Judah could not have been more than four years older than Joseph; these difficulties, when put together, strongly convince, that Jacob did not serve his first seven years before, but after he married Leah.

23 Took Leah, and brought her unto him, &c.] As the women at that time wore vails, they were introduced to their husbands with them

26 And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country, to give the younger before the firstborn.

27 Fulfill her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

28 ¶ And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week: and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

29 And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his handmaid to be her maid.

30 And he went in also unto Rachel, and he loved also Rachel more than Leah, and served with him yet seven other years.

31 ¶ And when the LORD saw that Leah was hated, he opened her womb: but Rachel was barren.

32 And Leah conceived, and bare a son, and she called his name Reuben: for she said, Surely the LORD hath looked upon my affliction; now therefore my husband will love me.

33 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Because the LORD hath heard that I was hated, he hath therefore given me this son also: and she called his name Simeon.

34 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Now this time will my husband be joined unto me, because I have born him three sons: therefore was his name called Levi.

35 And she conceived again, and bare a son: and she said, Now will I praise the LORD: therefore she called his name Judah; and left bearing.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIX.

Here we may observe, the despised Leah is regarded by God, and blessed with children, to make up for her want of beauty; while Rachel, over whom Jacob was enamoured, has not the happiness of giving one child to her husband; whereby Jacob was punished for his not treating Leah with a proper regard; who seems to have been blameable in nothing, however Laban might: an example to us, how we treat any one with injurious contempt. We may also observe, Leah attributes every child to the goodness and blessing of God. Thus should we do in all things.

on, and the darkness likewise contributed not a little to favour the fraud.

25 Wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?] Jacob had not only consented to serve, but had really served one month, (ver. 14.) for Rachel; and ought to have received her as the reward of his labours. It is somewhat remarkable, that Jacob, who by fraud deprived Esau of the blessing his father intended him, lost what he esteemed an invaluable blessing, by fraud likewise.

27 Fulfil her week, &c.] Consummate thy marriage with Leah, by keeping the solemnity of seven days feasting, the space allowed for marriage feasts, as appears from Judges xiv. 15.

28 And he gave him Rachel, &c.] Though some assert that Jacob did not obtain Rachel before the expiration of seven years; yet it is evident from ver. 27 and 30 that the term of servitude was to commence from his being in possession of Rachel, not that it was to expire before he obtained her.

31 Leah was hated, &c.] The word rendered "hated," though explained in that sense by the Chaldee and Arabic, is used in scripture, for shewing a less degree of love; and the Vulgate, which renders the word to be despicable, countenances this sense. In this instance, we may see the kind severity of Providence in the means it uses to divert us from caressing any person or thing with an immoderate affection, and we are taught at the same time, that no condition is without its inconveniences, no misery without its comforts. Jacob despised Leah, but she was fruitful; Jacob loved Rachel, but she was barren. Leah, amidst the coldness of her husband's affection, was blessed with many a tender pledge to attract his love; while Rachel, amidst his warmest caresses, had no tie to secure her against the loss of his fondness.

32 Reuben, &c.] This name signifies, divine regard, or, divine mercy, alluding to her expression, "Surely the Lord hath looked upon my affliction."

33 Simeon.] This name signifies, God hath heard, or considered me, from the Hebrew word shama, "to see," &c.

34 Levi.] This word signifies, joined, and is derived from the Hebrew lavah, "to join," used in this sentence, "my husband will be joined."

35 Judah.] That is, praise, and thanksgiving, alluding to the words, "I will praise the Lord;" the Hebrew word we render, Will praise, being the root from whence Judah, or Jehudah, is derived.

Left bearing.] The Hebrew signifies, She was at a stand from bearing; which the Septuagint have translated word for word; the word "left," in our translation, is rather too strong, and conveys the idea

1 Rachel in grief for her barrenness giveth her maid Bilhah unto Jacob. 5 Bilhah beareth Dan and Naphtali. 9 Leah giveth Zilpah her maid, who beareth Gad and Asher. 14 Reuben findeth mandrakes, for which Rachel yieldeth her husband to Leah. 17 Leah beareth Issachar, Zebulun, and Dinah. 22 Rachel beareth Joseph. 25 Jacob desireth to depart, but is retained by Laban on a new agreement. 37 Jacob's policy, whereby he becometh rich.

AND when Rachel saw that she bare Jacob no children, Rachel envied her sister; and said unto Jacob, Give me children, or else I die.

2 And Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel: and he said Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the fruit of the womb?

3 And she said, Behold my maid Bilhah, go in unto her; and she shall bear upon my knees, that I may also have children by her.

4 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid to wife: and Jacob went in unto her.

5 ¶ And Bilhah conceived and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said; God hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called his name Dan.

7 And Bilhah Rachel's maid conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With great wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name Naphtali.

idea of her not having any more children; whereas the series of the history informs us she had several children afterwards, and was only at a stand, according to the Hebrew, or passed some time before she had any more children. It is remarkable, that the Syriac omits this sentence, though it is, in all the oriental versions, in the Septuagint and in the Vulgate.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXX.

1 Rachel envied her sister. Though barrenness was always considered as a curse, yet Rachel had another motive for envy, namely, the desire of fulfilling the promise to Abraham, that his seed should be as the stars of heaven, and that in him all nations of the earth should be blessed.

Give me children, or else I die. We have here a lively picture of human folly in general. If children are like a flowery chaplet, whose beauties blossom with ornament, death, or some dreadful misfortune, may blast it. Does Providence withhold the thing that we long for? It denies in mercy, and only withholds the occasion of our misery, if not the instrument of our ruin.

Am I in God's stead, &c. The Chaldee paraphrases these words thus: Why dost thou ask children of me? Oughtest not thou to have asked them from the face of the Lord? who has, &c. The Arabic renders it, Am I above God, who hath, &c. All of which shew the impropriety, if not irreligion, of her application; it being the received opinion, that children, rain, and the resurrection of the dead, are the prerogative of God.

6 God hath judged, &c. The word "judged," is used in a good, as well as in a bad sense: in a good sense, it implies, to decide in favour of a person, as in Psalms xxvi. 1. in a bad sense, it signifies, to cast, condemn, or decide against. If we take the word here in a good sense, it implies, that God had declared himself in her favour, by granting her a son; in a bad sense, it implies, that by blessing her with offspring, he had condemned her hastiness in accusing her husband, in envying her sister, and in despairing of the blessing of Providence. The name given her son, which signifies, judging, alludes to this sentence, and is derived from dannani, the Hebrew word, which is translated "judged."

8 Naphtali. This name signifies "struggling," or "wrestling," and plainly alludes to the Hebrew, which reads Naphtali, "with strugglings," Niphtalti, "have I struggled;" and then concludes, therefore "she called him Naphtali." Yet as the word pahtal, from whence Naphtali is derived, signifies, "to contrive," "counterplot," instead of "great wrestlings," or "the wrestlings of God." The Hebrew may be rendered, By a great, or excellent artifice or contrivance; and Naphtali will then signify, My plot, or contrivance. Rachel's artifice to secure her husband's love, was, to have children from him by her maid, whom she might adopt for her own; but this artifice was counteracted by Leah, who likewise gave

10 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name Gad.

12 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, Happy am I, for the daughters will call me blessed: and she called his name Asher.

14 ¶ And Reuben went in the days of wheat harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.

15 And she said unto her, Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to night for thy son's mandrakes.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

17 ¶ And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived, and bare Jacob the fifth son.

18 And Leah said, God hath given me my hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name Issachar.

19 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

20 And Leah said, God hath endued me with a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name Zebulun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name Dinah.

22 ¶ And God remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and opened her womb.

23 And she conceived, and bare a son; and said, God hath taken away my reproach:

24 And her husband one of her maids, by whom he had this son, who received his name from the success of Leah's counterplot.

11 Gad. That is, "a troop."

13 Asher. This name signifies "blessed," and alludes to the Hebrew word in the beginning of the verse, beashri, "in my happiness," and ashroni, "they have blessed, or called me happy."

14 Mandrakes, &c. The Hebrew word dudaim, is rendered "mandrake apples." The word occurs only once more in scripture, namely, in Solomon's Song, chap. vii. 13. and there they are celebrated for the pleasantness or fragrance of the smell, and mentioned together with other pleasant fruits. But it is well known that the mandrake has a very strong, stupefying smell, and has nothing inviting, either in taste or colour, to induce a child like Reuben, six years old, to chuse them for either of those qualities. Besides, the time when they were gathered, shews that they could not have been the mandrake; for the wheat-harvest in those hot countries is in May, at which time the apples of this plant are far from being ripe. Their virtue in helping conception is so far from being an argument in their favour, that it is probable Leah would not have parted with them, had she known they had that effect; nor would Rachel have bought them at so dear a rate, nor would she have continued barren after the possession of them. The word may be rendered, desirable flowers, for it signifies, loves, or womens breasts, in the plural number. Hence they have been taken for violets, lilies, jessamin, citron, and by others for a fruit, which the Syrians call mauz, resembling the fanana, or Indian fig tree, in shape and taste. But however, they must have possessed something pleasant and inviting, in taste and smell, to a child, which the mandrake had not.

17 God hearkened, &c. The Chaldee renders it, God received the prayers of Leah. Whence we may conclude, that she made her addresses to him to remove her temporary barrenness, as a means to recover the affections of Jacob, which appears from ver. 15. to have been alienated from her.

18 Issachar. The name implies, A man of reward, from ish, "a man," and sachar, "reward;" and alludes to the Hebrew word, used in the beginning of the verse, shachri, "my reward," or "mine hire."

20 Zebulun. This signifies "dwelling," and is derived from the Hebrew word jesebeleni, "he shall dwell with me," in the former part of this verse.

21 Dinah. This is the feminine of Dan, which signifies "judging," and seems to have been given as an acknowledgment that God had judged, or decided in her favour, by granting her so numerous offspring, which she preferred to the greatest present or dowry a man could bring his wife.

23 Reproach. As fruitfulness is represented a blessing, Gen. i. 28. Deut. vii. 14. and was peculiarly promised to Abraham and his seed, Gen. xii. 3. xv. 5. and xviii. 18. so barrenness was likewise esteemed a great unhappiness and reproach. See Isaiah iv. 1. 1 Sam. i. 11. Luke i. 25.

Before
CHRIST
1745.

24 And she called his name Joseph; and said, The LORD shall add to me another son.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my country.

26 Give me my wives and my children, for whom I have served thee, and let me go: for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

27 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience that the LORD hath blessed me for thy sake.

28 And he said, Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

29 And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee since my coming: and now when shall I provide for mine own house also?

31 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me any thing: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock:

32 I will pass through all thy flock to day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and of such shall be my hire.

33 So shall my righteousness answer for me in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me.

34 And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.

35 And he removed that day the he goats that were ringstraked and spotted, and all the she goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hand of his sons.

36 And he set three days journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.

37 ¶ And Jacob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chestnut tree; and pilled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

38 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ringstraked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ringstraked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle.

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maidservants, and menservants, and camels, and asses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXX.

With respect to what is here said of Jacob's conduct, we may conclude that his behaviour was generous, fair, and candid; that he chose the ring-straked cattle without any view but to prevent disputes, trusting that God would so order it, agreeable to his petition at Beth-el, that he should have enough, being determined to be contented with what God's providence should think fit to give him; and that when he made use of the rods, it was an act of faith, and in obedience to God's command, without having any previous knowledge of what would be the event. We have the more reason to think this to be the case, because we find nothing but good arose to Jacob from it; whence we may remark, that though the scripture often mentions the misconduct of good men, yet it always takes care to inform us, that evil arose to them in consequence of such actions.

We may also observe God's faithfulness; he had promised Jacob at Beth-el to be with him in all places whither he should go, and we find him accordingly blessing Laban because he was with him: so that though Laban had but little when Jacob came to him, it was under him it increased to a multitude. We ought too to take notice, that though Jacob, from what he says to Laban in the following chapter, appears to have been a most industrious faithful servant, yet he attributes all the increase of the flock to the blessing of God, and not to his own care.

C H A P.

24 Joseph, &c.] In the Hebrew this name signifies "adding," and alludes to the Hebrew word yeseb, "shall add," in the subsequent sentence: some explain it, The addition of something future.

25 When Rachel] Jacob had now served for Rachel fourteen years, was about ninety, his parents were much advanced in years, and was impelled, by the longings of filial piety, to visit them before they were gathered unto their fathers.

My place, &c.] To my native place, or my father's house, as appears from the Vulgate, and other antient versions.

30 Since my coming] The Hebrew is, At my foot; which the Arabic explains, For my sake, by my means, or because of me.

Mine own house, &c.] The generosity of Jacob's temper is manifested, in his delay to make any provision for his family, till he had enriched his father-in-law by his service. Afterwards prudence, as well as paternal affection, called upon him to make some provision for his own house or posterity.

32 I will pass through—removing] According to this reading it appears, that Jacob removed the party-coloured cattle; though in the 35th and 36th verses, it is evident that this was done by Laban. The Vulgate affords us an expedient to reconcile this seeming inconsistency, by rendering the passage, Go round all thy flocks, and separate all the speckled, &c. The Septuagint read likewise, Go through all thy flocks to-day, and separate, &c. The Chaldee confirms this sense, except that it assigns the act of passing through to Jacob, and the separating of the speckled cattle to Laban, which reconciles this verse with the 35th. This version reads, I will pass through all thy flocks this day, and do thou remove from thence all the speckled, &c.

Speckled] The Hebrew signifies, small specks, or points, and the word immediately following, large spots, like those which frequently appear in cattle.

Of such shall be my hire.] Jacob doth not mean all the cattle already speckled, as appears from his refusing any thing out of Laban's present store, ver. 31. "thou shalt give," but that he would separate out the speckled sheep and goats; and then, whatever those of one colour produced afterwards with the above variety, he would take for his wages; that Laban, whenever he pleased to look unto Jacob's cattle, might be convinced that they were really his own.

33 Answer for me, &c.] Jacob had already experienced Laban's want of honesty, and this covenant was to guard against it for the future; if we translate, When it shall come for my hire, by, When thou shalt come against my hire, this will appear plainly to have been the design of Jacob in this compact. The Chaldee confirms this version, by rendering the sentence in that manner; the Arabic gives it a farther support, by reading, My equity shall appear to-morrow, when I shall come to demand my hire.

36 He set three days journey, &c.] Three times the distance the flocks were able to travel in one day.

37 Hazel, &c.] The Hebrew word Luz, signifies rather the almond-tree, as we before observed.

39 The flocks conceived, &c.] The Samaritan copy inserts, between the 36th and 37th verses, a narrative of the vision described ver. 11. of the following chapter, which, though not to be found in any other version, throws a great light upon this passage, and vindicates the character of Jacob from the aspersions of fraud, freely bestowed on him by infidels. It signifies, in the first place, the reason why he made use of this artifice, which was, the command of God: it obviates the objection drawn from the power of the peeled rods to produce this effect, by ascribing it entirely to the interposition of the Deity; and it further furnishes us with an amiable idea of the divine justice, and the extraordinary providence, which at once protected the patriarchs, and enabled them to get the better of their enemies.

43 And the man increased exceedingly, &c.] Throughout this narrative of Jacob's contract with Laban, we cannot help remarking, that covetousness generally overshoots the mark, and disappoints itself. Thus Laban's covetousness would not allow him to settle upon Jacob any fixed wages, though he owed the greatest part of his riches to his care; but he eagerly embraced Jacob's offer, because it seemed an advantageous one; though, by the wise order of Providence, which takes the crafty in their own snares, he found himself deceived in the event.

CHAP. XXXI.

1 Jacob is regarded with an evil eye by Laban and his sons; 3 is commanded by God to return to his own land, and proposeth his departure to his wives. 17 He removeth secretly with his family and substance; Rachel stealeth her father's images. 22 Laban pursueth after him; is warned of God, and overtaking Jacob complaineth of the wrong. 31 Jacob, ignorant of the theft, permitteth Laban to search for the images; Rachel's policy to hide them. 36 Jacob's complaint of Laban. 43 The covenant of Jacob and Laban: Laban returneth home.

AND he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken away all that was our fathers; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this glory.

2 And Jacob beheld the countenance of Laban, and, behold, it was not toward him as before.

3 ¶ And the LORD said unto Jacob, Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.

4 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock,

5 And said unto them, I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father hath been with me.

6 And ye know that with all my power I have served your father.

7 And your father hath deceived me, and changed my wages ten times; but God suffered him not to hurt me.

8 If he said thus, The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled; and if he said thus, The ringstraked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattled ringstraked.

9 Thus God hath taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me.

10 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the rams which leaped upon the cattle were ringstraked, speckled, and grissled.

11 And the angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob: And I said, Here am I.

12 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ringstraked, speckled, and grissled: for I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

13 I am the God of Beth-el, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now ^{Before CHRIST 1739.} arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

14 And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

15 Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

16 For all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is our's, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

17 ¶ Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the images that were her father's.

20 And Jacob stole away unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

21 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the river, and set his face toward the mount Gilead.

22 ¶ And it was told Laban on the third day that Jacob was fled.

23 And he took his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.

24 And God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

25 Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and carried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and steal away from me; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away with mirth, and with songs, with tabret, and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me to kiss my sons and my daughters? thou hast now done foolishly in so doing.

29 It is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXI.

1 All this glory.] The ancient versions explain what is meant by "glory" in this place. The Chaldee renders it, Substance; the Syriac, Possession; and the Arabic, Riches.

7 Ten times, &c.] That is, very often, appears from Levit. xvi. 26. Numb. xiv. 22. and 1 Sam. i. The number ten is peculiarly remarkable among the rabbinical writers.

8 All the cattle, &c.] That is, the greatest part. See chap. xli. 57.

11 The angel of God, &c.] This was surely no created being, but rather God the Son; he being, ver. 13. expressly named, The God of Beth-el. The note of ver. 39. of the foregoing chapter, enables us to fix the time when Jacob had this vision, and shews that he was guided in every step of his conduct by the divine direction.

13 I am the God of Beth-el, &c.] God communicates himself to the patriarch in terms adapted to the ideas of the surrounding nations, who looked on their deities as local, or confined to a particular place; and, at the same time, recalls to his mind the idea of his distressful circumstances, and the vow he had made at Beth-el.

14 Is there yet any portion, &c.] Interrogation in the Hebrew frequently carry with them a strong negation, as is evident from the book of Job; and that this is the meaning of this sentence, is confirmed by the Syriac, which renders it, We have not any portion, &c.

15 Sold us, &c.] The purchase of slaves, though inconsistent with every social instinct, and with the principles of humanity, seems from hence to have been of great antiquity: and the unkind usage by which Laban extorted so many years servitude from Jacob, at the same time that it shewed him to be void of paternal affection towards his daughters, made them appear in their own eyes as slaves, that were purchased at a dear rate. According to the custom of those times, the husband used to bring a portion to his wife; but as the labour of Jacob was the only means he had of acquiring such a dowry, they might truly say, that when Laban defrauded Jacob of his right, he had devoured also their money.

18 The cattle of his getting, &c.] This sentence is omitted in the Septuagint, Arabic, Vulgate, Syriac, and Chaldee, though inserted in the Samaritan. Dr. Kennicot remarks, that they are wanting in the Samaritan manuscript, No. 1, at the Bodleian library. It is asserted, that Jacob, in order to conceal his flight, took only half his cattle with him; which is inconsistent with the express words of scripture.

19 Images, &c.] The Hebrew word teraphim, signifies "idols," as appears from ver. 30. where they are termed elohai, or "gods;" but more especially from Zech. x. 2. "the teraphim have uttered vain things." The Vulgate, Septuagint, and Samaritan translations, render the word, Idols. That they were of human form, is evident, from the using the word for the image what Michal put into David's bed, 1 Sam. xix. 14. They were consulted to foretel what was to come, to discover what was lost, or to reveal what was hidden. It is imagined that they received this power either from some particular aspects of the planets, or from some characters engraved upon them; both which suppositions are equally weak. Some apprehend that Rachel stole them to prevent her father from discovering her flight, by consulting him; but others are of opinion, that her intention was, by those means, to secure something which might appease her father's anger, if he should overtake them in their flight.

21 The river, &c.] This was the Euphrates, as appears from the Chaldee and Arabic.

23 Seven days journey, &c.] The distance between Haran and Mount Gilead is near two hundred and fifty miles; consequently Laban must have marched thirty-five miles each day.

24 Either good or bad.] That is, with a design to bring him back, or to do him any harm.

30 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou fore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou stolen my gods?

31 ¶ And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: before our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into Leah's tent, and into the two maidservants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camels' furniture, and sat upon them. And Laban searched all the tent, but found them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease my lord that I cannot rise up before thee; for the custom of women is upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household stuff? set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

38 This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

39 That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it; of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

40 Thus I was, in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle: and thou hast changed my wages ten times.

42 Except the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and the fear of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty. God hath seen mine affliction and the labour of my hands; and rebuked thee yesternight.

43 ¶ And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?

44 Now therefore come thou, let us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

45 And Jacob took a stone, and set it up for a pillar.

46 And Jacob said unto his brethren, Gather stones, and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.

47 And Laban called it Jegar-sahadutha: but Jacob called it Galeed.

48 And Laban said, This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed;

49 And Mizpah; for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness betwixt me and thee.

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm.

53 The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge betwixt us. And Jacob swore by the fear of his father Isaac.

54 Then Jacob offered sacrifice upon the mount, and called his brethren to eat bread: and they did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

55 And early in the morning Laban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, and blessed them: and Laban departed, and returned unto his place.

GENERAL

30 My gods.] Laban seems to have imbibed the doctrine of intercommunity, so universal among the heathens, which taught them not only to worship the local, tutelary gods of their own country, but likewise to adore those of other nations. Thus it is evident he acknowledged the true God, ver. 48. though at the same time his wrath for the loss of his teraphim shews he was a worshipper of idols. It was the constant language of idolaters in all ages, to call their consecrated statues, or images, their gods: because they not only considered them as symbols or representations of Divinity, but as proper pledges or receptacles of a divine presence; consequently, to rob them of their idols, was to deprive them of the presence and protection of their gods.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, &c.] We infer from hence, that theft was at this time punished with death.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, &c.] The Septuagint reads, Laban went and searched diligently in Jacob's tent. That this word was omitted in the Hebrew by some transcriber, seems very evident from the words, "but found them not," in the latter part of the verse, which imply a search. The printed Samaritan reads indeed, vaiechabesh, which signifies, "he prostrated; but it appears from some Samaritan manuscripts, that instead of vaiechabesh, we should read vaiechapelsh, which signifies, "to search with care," confirms the translation of the Septuagint, and agrees with what Jacob asserts, ver. 37. "thou hast searched or felt all my stuff."

37 Thou hast searched, &c.] We think it would be better rendered, Thou hast felt, or handled.

40 And the frost by night, &c.] In these countries it was customary for the shepherds to watch their flocks in the night, as appears from Luke ii. 8. The solicitude which Jacob describes in this verse, throws a noble splendor upon his character, and represents him as exemplary for his fidelity, as he was for his devotion.

42 The God of my father, &c.] It is remarkable that Jacob, in describing the true God under the tutelary titles of the God of his father, and the God of Abraham, adds, "the fear," not the God "of Isaac." Grotius says, that this variation is owing to a custom among the Jews, who never style the Deity the peculiar God of the living, as Isaac then was, but always confine this title to the deceased.

46 Gather stones.] The custom of heaping up a great number of loose stones, as a memorial of some remarkable action, is of the highest antiquity, and may be traced in the earliest records of the history of all countries.

And they did eat there, &c.] In making covenants, the ancients were accustomed either to offer up a sacrifice, or make a feast; and the contracting parties used to eat together in token of their friendship, and their intention to keep the conditions without violation.

47 And Laban called it Jegar-sahadutha, &c.] The words used by the two parties, though different in language, were in sense the same. Laban, who used the Syriac, named it "Jegar-sahadutha," which signifies, "the heap of witness;" and Jacob, who spoke in Hebrew, Galeed, which signifies, "the heap of ocular inspection."

53 The God of their father, &c.] As Laban speaks to Jacob, the pronoun "their" can refer only to Abraham and Nahor, and their father was Terah. But the God of Terah is an expression which has no authority from scripture; and besides, Terah was an idolater. The Septuagint entirely omits this sentence, reading, The God of Abraham and the God of Nahor judge between us; which shews that it was introduced, and might have happened from the transcriber's beginning to write the same line twice. The difference between the oath taken by Laban and Jacob, is very remarkable: that of Laban is conformable to the idea of a local, gentilitical, and tutelary deity; and the name he ascribes to him was, like that of other tutelary deities, a name of distinction. But Jacob, who had more enlarged ideas of the divine nature, appeals to God as the object of worship, and gives him not a name of distinction, but a name of honour.

54 Jacob offered sacrifice.] In gratitude to God for the peace he had obtained with Laban.

Called his brethren to eat bread, &c.] i. e. He invited Laban and his friends to partake of the remains of the sacrifice, in token of their hearty reconciliation. This shews, that however Jacob and Laban might differ in some modes or forms of worship, yet they agreed in the belief and adoration of the one supreme being, since they partook of the same sacrifice which Jacob offered to the true God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXXI.

Let us observe the gracious hand of the Divine Being towards Jacob in this chapter. God, who ordereth all things aright, having blessed Jacob with greater substance in the house of Laban, than he could have obtained in his father's house, without great inconveniencies, perhaps irreconcilable and fatal hatred between him and his brother Esau, now orders him to return to the land of his fathers; whereby he must be understood not what was properly theirs, but only that in which they sojourned, and which was promised to them for their seed: and ■ Jacob was an inheritor of the promise, it was proper that he should sojourn in the land, to keep alive the hopes of it to his posterity.

CHAP. XXXII.

1 Jacob's vision at Mahanaim. 3 His message to Esau. 6 He is afraid of Esau's coming, 9 and prayeth for deliverance. 13 He sendeth a present to Esau; 24 wrestleth with an angel at Peniel, and is called Israel. 31 He balteth.

AND Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's host: and he called the name of that place Mahanaim.

3 ¶ And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother unto the land of Seir, the country of Edom.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye speak unto my lord Esau; Thy servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

5 And I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and menservants, and womenservants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that I may find grace in thy sight.

6 ¶ And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also he cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.

7 Then Jacob was greatly afraid and distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

■ And said, If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.

9 ¶ And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the Lord which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXII.

1 The angels of God met him.] As Jacob was favoured with a heavenly vision when he first departed from his father's house; so the divine Being thought proper again to favour him with the same token of his protection at his return.

2 Mahanaim.] That is, "two hosts or camps;" because the angels appeared like two armies drawn up on either side for his protection, according to that elegant expression of the Psalmist, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." Psalm xxxiv. 7.

3 And Jacob sent messengers.] Though this patriarch had the greatest reason to rely on the protection of the Almighty, yet he thought it his duty to make use of all prudential methods for his safety. He therefore sent this message to Esau, in order to soften his resentment, and to regain his affection.

The country of Edom.] The Hebrew might be better rendered, The field of Edom.

7 Greatly afraid, &c.] The fear of Jacob, though represented by some commentators as arising from ■ consciousness of guilt, was rather the effect of wisdom than cowardice. He had left his brother highly exasperated against him, resolved to put him to death, and owed his life purely to his flight. On his return he hears that Esau was making towards him with no less than four hundred men. This was a number sufficient to raise suspicion, when he recollected what disposition he had left his brother in: it was enough to make him apprehensive of the consequences which such ■ step might have with respect to his substance; but when he considered how easy a prey his numerous herds of cattle would be to an enemy; ah! when he considered the danger which threatened his wives and his children, the dear pledges of his love; he could not help agonizing for their sakes, and shuddering at the approach of an enraged brother! Yet amidst his terror, he shewed the most consummate prudence; he made use of every expedient to divert the impending storm; did all that he could to protract the fate of his wives and his children; marched before them to defend them, or die in the attempt; and having done all that was in the power of human wisdom, has recourse to the God of his father for protection and deliverance.

No. 5.

10 I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with my staff I passed over this Jordan; and now I am become two bands. Before CHRIST 1739.

11 Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and the mother with the children.

12 And thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that which came to his hand a present for Esau his brother;

14 Two hundred she goats, and twenty he goats, two hundred ewes, and twenty rams.

15 Thirty milch camels with their colts, forty kine, and ten bulls, twenty she asses, and ten foles.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept of me.

21 So went the present over before him: and himself lodged that night in the company.

22 And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two womenservants, and his eleven sons, and passed over the ford Jabbok.

23 And he took them, and sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

24 ¶ And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day.

25 And

10 I am not worthy of the least.] If we consider the purity and holiness of the Deity, and the infinity of created beings: if we collect that he chargeth his angels with folly, and that in his sight no man living can be justified; if we reflect on the infinitude of the divine blessings showered down upon us, and at the same time ponder on the innumerable sins we are guilty of, we must acknowledge with Jacob, that "we are not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and all the truth, he hath shewed unto us."

With my staff, &c.] The Chaldee translates it, By myself, or alone, which illustrates the contrast mentioned in the latter end of the verse, "now I am become two bands." The original word signifies not only ■ staff, but likewise a military weapon, and it is mentioned among the instruments of war, Ezek. xxxix. 9.

11 Smite—the mother with the children.] This should rather be rendered, Smite the mother upon the children; and signifies ■ havock and extirpation of all without mercy, like that mentioned in Hosea, chap. ii. 14. The Arabic translates it, Those that are with me, the mother and the children; but the Syriac, Smite both me, and the mother, and the children. It is ■ proverbial expression, signifying, extirpation.

24 And there wrestled a man with him, &c.] That is a celestial being in the form of a man, called God, ver. 28, 30. and probably the Son of God. Information by action was at this time ■ very familiar mode of instruction, and the deficiencies of language were supplied by significative signs. If we turn back to Jacob's prayer, and consider the circumstances he was in, when it pleased God to wrestle with him, we may perceive that his intention was to inform him of the happy issue of his adventure, and that his petition was granted, by a significative action. But as this is not followed by ■ express explanation, this circumstance in Jacob's history has afforded abundant mirth to illiterate libertines, and manifested their ignorance likewise: for this information by action concerning only the actor, who little needed ■ behold the meaning of ■ mode of instruction, at that time in vulgar use, hath now an obscurity, which the scripture relations of the same mode of information to the prophets are free from, by reason of their being given for the use of the people ■ whom they were to be explained.

25 And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh: And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou blest me.

27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name: And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

30 And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

31 ¶ And as he passed over Peniel the sun rose upon him, and he halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the finew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the finew that shrank.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXII.

Toward the beginning of this chapter we find Jacob, having done what prudence directed, put himself under the divine protection, as that which could avail him most, by an humble and fervent address to God; in which he acknowledges his great goodness towards him, and his faithfulness. Thus should we have recourse to God, the sure and almighty protector, in all our dangers; and thus should we acknowledge all our blessings, all our substance, to be derived from him.

C H A P. XXXIII.

1 The kindness of Jacob and Esau at their meeting. 17 Jacob cometh to Succoth. 18 At Shalem he buyeth a field, and buildeth an altar called El-elohe-Israel.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindmost.

25 He touched the hollow of his thigh, &c.] To inform how easily he could have overpowered him.

28 No more Jacob] The Arabic renders it, Thy name shall not always be called Jacob only, but Israel likewise. Israel signifies "a prince powerful with God," and alludes to the Hebrew, Share-sha em Elohim, "Thou hast acted, or behaved, like a prince (in wrestling) with God."

For a prince, &c.] According to our translation, Jacob is asserted to have prevailed over men, as well as over the angels; whereas he had been obliged to flee from Esau and Laban, the only two enemies he ever had. The words should therefore be translated, Thou hast acted, or behaved, like a prince with God, and thou shalt also prevail over men. The Vulgate renders it, Because if thou hast been strong or powerful, or prevailed with God, how much more shalt thou prevail with man! The Chaldee, Because thou hast been as a prince with God, and shall prevail against men.

30 Peniel] or (as it is in the next verse) Penuel: That is, "the face of God."

I have seen God face to face] I have been admitted to the greatest familiarity with this representation of the Almighty, and by his means enjoyed such happy intercourse with God, as is the portion of those blessed spirits who approach nearest the divine presence.

And my life is preserved.] Here Jacob preserves and perpetuates, not the memory of his valour or victory, but the mercy of God's free grace.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not, &c.] The finew here meant is that which fastens the hip-bone into its socket, comprehending the flesh of that muscle which is connected to it.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIII.

¶ Rachel and Joseph, &c.] Jacob places his wives in the rear of his retinue, that they might rather be the spectators, than the subject of Esau's attack. They were the most remote from danger, and the situation assigned Rachel and Joseph strongly marks the superior fondness he had for her and her son.

¶ Bowed himself—seven times, &c.] The words "seven times" are used to signify many times. See 1 Sam. ii. 5. Prov. xxvi. 25.

4 Esau ran to meet him, &c.] The ardour of Esau's affection is painted by the sacred historian in the strongest colours, which shew that his reconciliation was sincere. He does not stay till Jacob comes up to him, but runs to meet him; he embraces him; he hangs,

3 And he passed over before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

4 And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those with thee? And he said, The children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaids came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

7 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves: and after came Joseph near and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

8 And he said, What meanest thou by all this drove which I met? And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

9 And Esau said, I have enough, my brother; keep that thou hast unto thyself.

10 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

11 Take, I pray thee, my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have enough. And he urged him, and he took it.

12 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me: and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be able to endure, until I come unto my lord unto Seir.

15 And Esau said, Let me now leave with thee some of the folk that are with me: And he said, What needeth it? let me find grace in the sight of my lord.

16 So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 ¶ And

rushes, or falls upon his neck; he kisses him, and, no longer able to support his transport, pours out a stream of affection from his eyes, which mingles with that which issued from the eyes of his brother. "Behold, how good and pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! &c."

8 These are to find grace in the sight, &c.] This was not merely a temporal expedient, invented by Jacob to mollify the resentment of his brother, but in pursuance of a constant custom among the eastern and other nations, who always made a present to the person whom they visited or paid their court to. See Matt. iii. 11.

9 I have enough, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, Much, and implies that he was as much contented with his circumstances, as he was really reconciled to his brother; and that he was as great a stranger to avarice, and a mercenary spirit, as to an unforgiving and malicious temper.

11 Because I have enough, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, All, and intimates, that Jacob was not inferior to his brother, either in affluence or gratitude to God, who had given him all that he enjoyed.

12 Let us take our journey, &c.] This invitation which Esau gives his brother, to accompany him to mount Seir, is a further proof of his perfect reconciliation.

13 With young, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, Giving suck, which the Chaldee and Arabic have followed; but the Vulgate, Septuagint, Samaritan, and Syriac, agree with our translation.

14 According as the cattle, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, According to the foot of the work, and to the foot of the children. The Chaldee renders it, According to the pace of my family which is with me, and according to the pace of the little ones. The Syriac is the same; but the Arabic, I will lead them slowly, on account of the substance I have with me, and on account of my sons. This verse may be looked upon as an evasion of Esau's offer, and has given occasion to some to suppose, from the historian's silence, that Jacob, notwithstanding his promise, never went to Mount Seir. But the professed brevity of Moses would rather incline us to imagine, that Jacob might have gone to Seir, though he has not recorded that circumstance; as we reasonably may suppose, that he visited his father before his return to Canaan and coming to Mamre, which he has omitted likewise.

15 Let me now leave, &c.] This is agreeable to the Vulgate. But the Hebrew signifies, I will cause some of my people to stay with thee; and the Septuagint confirm this sense.

17 ¶ And Jacob journeyed to Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth.

18 ¶ And Jacob came to Shalem a city of Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padan-aram; and pitched his tent before the city.

19 And he bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of Hamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred pieces of money.

20 And he erected there an altar, and called it El-elohe-Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXXIII.

In this portion of divine revelation, we cannot help being struck with admiration at the noble and tender behaviour of Esau: though the elder brother, though he had received great injuries, yet his affection for his brother is so tender, that he cannot wait for the tediousness of ceremony, but runs to meet him, embraces him, falls on his neck, kisses him, and weeps. What brother can have received greater injuries than Esau had? and yet what implacable, and never to be mollified hatred do we too often see in brothers? Let them behold Esau, and blush with shame. The passage in the original is marked with some marginal points, intimating that it is a remarkable passage: and indeed it is most highly worthy of our observation and imitation. We do not read of any extraordinary interposition of Providence here, in the case of Laban; and therefore we may conclude, that reflection and brotherly affection, and a noble generosity of soul, extinguished his resentment, and worked him up even to love and tenderness for a brother that had injured him. It is no less worthy of observation, if we conclude that God wrought this sudden change in the heart of Esau, it shews the power of him who is thus able to turn the hearts of men as he pleases; and how able a protector he is of us, since in a moment he can make our worst enemies our most tender friends.

AND Dinah the daughter of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob, went out to see the daughters of the land.

17 To Succoth, &c.] This name is given it by anticipation, for it appears it was given to this place on account of the booths he made for his cattle: the word succoth signifies "booth."

18 Came to Shalem a city of Shechem, &c.] Though the Vulgate, Septuagint, and Syriac, concur in this sense, yet it seems probable that "Shalem" is not a proper name of a place, but an appellative or common town, signifying "peace" or "safety:" according to which the sentence should be rendered, Jacob came in peace, or safety, to the city of Shechem.

19 An hundred pieces of money.] The Septuagint, Vulgate, Chaldee, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, agree in translating the original words, Lambs; but it is the unanimous opinion of all the Jewish writers, and expressly asserted by St. Stephen, Acts vii. 16. that they were pieces of money. To reconcile this difference, some have imagined that the coin was stamped with the figure of a lamb, and received its name from that circumstance: to this it is objected, that money was not coined or stamped in those days, but paid by weight, as appears from Gen. xxiii. 6. Exod. xxii. 17. The word keseth, from whence kesita is derived, signifies "truth," and implies that justness of weight, and purity of metal, which rendered money current, as appears from Gen. xxiii. 16. The Jewish writers assert, that the money thus denominated was equal to the gerah, which was valued at five farthings and one-fourth of a farthing: according to which estimate, Jacob appears to have paid no more than ten shillings for the field; however inconsiderable this sum may appear to us, yet if we reflect the proportion between the value of money then and at the present time, it will not be so trifling as it seems at first. One of these pieces of money was the value of a lamb then, and a hundred of them was worth one hundred lambs; which, if given in purchase for a field, would even now amount to an inconsiderable sum.

20 El-elohe-Israel.] In Hebrew, God, the God of Israel; the Vulgate renders it, He called upon the most mighty God of Israel; the Chaldee, And sacrificed upon it before the mighty God of Israel; the Samaritan, The mighty God of Israel; the Syriac, He called, or named it, the most mighty God of Israel; the Arabic, He prayed before the name of the God of Israel; but the Septuagint, He called upon the God of Israel.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIV.

1 Dinah—went out to see the daughters of the land.] On one of the festival days, of the Shechemites, Dinah, who was now about

■ And when Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, prince of the country, saw her, he took her, and lay with her, and defiled her. Before CHRIST 1732.

3 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake kindly unto the damsel.

4 ¶ And Shechem spake unto his father Hamor, saying, Get me this damsel to wife.

5 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: now his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Jacob held his peace until they were come.

6 And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.

7 And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth, because he had wrought folly in Israel in lying with Jacob's daughter; which thing ought not to be done.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

10 And ye shall dwell with us: and the land shall be before you; dwell and trade ye therein, and get you possessions therein.

11 And Shechem said unto her father and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

12 Ask me never so much dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

13 ¶ And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father deceitfully, and said, because he had defiled Dinah their sister:

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for that were a reproach unto us:

15 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised; sixteen years of age, and desirous of seeing the dresses and ornaments of the women of that country, ramblod from her mother's tent. This transaction must have happened seven or eight years, at least, after Jacob's return into the land of Canaan, because his sons were grown up to manhood.

■ Took her] That is, Ravished, or took her by force.

Defiled, &c.] In the Hebrew, Afflicted, or humbled. The Septuagint confirm this sense.

3 Spake kindly, &c.] In the Hebrew, Spake to the heart of the damsel. The Septuagint render it, According to the opinion; which is confirmed by the Samaritan. The Syriac translates it, He comforted the virgin; and the Arabic, He soothed her grief.

5 And Jacob held his peace until they were come.] He concealed his resentment till his sons returned, who were then with his cattle in the field, and probably at some distance; it being common for them to range about the country in search of pasture.

7 When they heard it, &c.] The Arabic connects this sentence with the following, thus: When they heard it, they were very sad, &c. and is supported by the Septuagint, Vulgate, and Syriac; but our translation connects it with the sentence preceding, assigning it ■ the reason why the sons of Jacob came out of the field; which sense is supported by the Chaldee and Samaritan.

8 Haith longed, &c.] No words can express more ardent affection than the original; and it is remarkable that all the antient translations seem to have laboured to retain the force of the original. The sons of Jacob, and perhaps Leah herself, were present at this application, which shews that the words, "your daughter," were grammatically proper.

Trade ye therein] The Hebrew signifies, To circuit, and alludes to their custom of ranging about for pastures. The Vulgate, Septuagint, Chaldee, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, confirm our translation.

Get you possessions, &c.] In the Hebrew, Inherit, or acquire inheritances.

12 Ask me never so much dowry, &c.] In those times marriage-portions were given by the men; and in the east, especially amongst the Turks and Persians, this custom is preserved even to this day.

13 Deceitfully] The Chaldee renders it, Wisely.

And said, because, &c.] The Vulgate renders it, They answered (saying, on account of the rape of their sister) we cannot, &c. The Septuagint particularize who the persons were that made the reply: and Simeon and Levi, the brethren of Dinah said, "We cannot, &c."

16 Then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then we will take our daughter, and we will be gone.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was more honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶ And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying, 21 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

23 Shall not their cattle and their substance and every beast of theirs be our's? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.

24 And unto Hamor and unto Shechem his son hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city; and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

25 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day, when they were fore, that two of the sons of Jacob, Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister.

28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field,

29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.

17 We will take our daughter, &c.] Some suppose from hence, that Jacob's sons were commissioned to act in his name.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, &c.] The transaction informs us, that though Shechem had committed this action, yet he was passionately fond of Dinah. We may also observe, that both Hamor and all the inhabitants of the city had a great affection for Shechem, since they submitted to so painful an operation, merely to serve their prince.

23 Shall not their cattle, &c.] They were moved by principles of interest, as well as respect to their prince, to submit to this rite.

24 All that went out of the gate, &c.] All the inhabitants, or citizens.

25 Two of the sons of Jacob, &c.] Notwithstanding the Shechemites had submitted to the painful rite of circumcision, the proposed condition of reconciliation with Jacob's family; yet Simeon and Levi took the advantage of their pain and anguish, when they were least able to resist, to fall upon the city, and destroy all the male inhabitants: an action shocking to humanity; for doubtless many of the sufferers were entirely innocent of their leader's crime; and even the guilty, by submitting to the proposed terms of agreement, had made a proper compensation to Jacob for the injury offered. Well, therefore, might their father detest so base an action, and, on his death-bed, cry out in these emphatical words "O my foul, come not thou into their secret: unto their assembly, mine honour, be not thou united: for in their anger they slew a man—Curled be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel," chap. xlix. 6, 7.

30 Make me to stink, &c.] The Vulgate renders it, Made me odious; the Chaldee, Ye will occasion, or put enmity between me and the Canaanites; the Arabic, Ye have rendered me infamous, and corrupted my condition with respect to the Canaanites; and the Syriac, Ye have offended me to bring evil between me and the inhabitants, &c.

31 And they said, Should he deal, &c.] Jacob, we see, was much concerned at these furious proceedings of his sons; but Simeon and Levi were so warmed with the thoughts of the dishonour done to their sister and family, that they repented not of what they had done, but seem to think all was little enough to vindicate their sister's reputation, that she might not be reputed as a common woman.

30 ¶ And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, Ye have troubled me to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, should he deal with our sister as with an harlot.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIV.

Well might Jacob, in the above chapter, reproach his sons, and say they had troubled him. Well might he always keep it in remembrance, and mention it with indignation on his death-bed; for nothing could be more treacherous, base, and cruel, than their conduct. We may also learn, what great evils are often the consequence of love; and how detestable and dreadful it is to follow the furious dictates of revenge without consideration.

CHAP. XXXV.

1 God commandeth Jacob to go to Beth-el; he purgeth his house of idols; 6 and buildeth an altar at Beth-el. 8 Deborah Rebekah's nurse dieth, and is buried under an oak. 9 God again blesteth Jacob, and confirmeth to him the name of Israel, and the promise of the land of Canaan. 14 Jacob setteth up a pillar at Beth-el. 16 Rachel travailing of Benjamin dieth near Bethlehem, and is buried there. 22 Reuben lieth with Bilhah. The twelve sons of Jacob. 27 Jacob cometh to Isaac at Hebron. 28 Isaac's age, death, and burial.

AND God said unto Jacob, Arise, go up to Beth-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, that appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

2 Then Jacob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the strange gods that are among you, and be clean and change your garments:

3 And let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went.

4 And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hands, and all their earrings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem.

5 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXV.

1 And God said unto Jacob, &c.] The national inhumanities of the Chaldeans, the cruelties by which Jacob's sons had exasperated them to make reprisals, and the defection which some of his family were making to idolatry, seem to have been the motives for ordering him to remove his settlement, and repair to that place which he had dedicated to the worship of the true God.

2 Put away the strange gods] The Hebrew signifies, The gods of the stranger. The Chaldee renders, put away the idols of the people that are among you: but the Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, support our translation. Jacob, say some, perhaps meant the teraphim, which Rachel had stolen from Laban; but others suppose that they were the idols of the Canaanites or Shechemites, who were taken prisoners and incorporated into his family: and it must be confessed that the Chaldean translation gives some countenance to this opinion.

Be clean, &c.] The word properly signifies, The washing away filth by water. As there is some analogy between external cleanliness and internal, it may denote repentance, by which the soul is cleansed and purified, as the body is by washing it in water. And hence this rite of washing the body with water was used as a sign of inward purification, not only among the idolatrous heathens, but also by the worshippers of the true God, both before and under the law. "Wash ye, make ye clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes," Isaiah i. 16. And as men should at all times have their souls adorned with this inward purity, it was highly commendable in Jacob, on this solemn occasion, to enjoin all under his care to cleanse and purify themselves particularly from idolatry, and from those guilty stains lately contracted by shedding innocent blood, as they would otherwise be very unfit to hold an intercourse with their God: as if the patriarch had said, put off your sordid apparel, especially those garments in which you were so lately defiled with blood, and put on the cleanest raiment, as an emblem of your being divested of all impure affections, and clothed with those internal graces which are the ornament of the soul.

4 And all their earrings, &c.] It was customary for the Syrians to dedicate them to some idol; and they were worn to render their deities propitious; and being thus subservient to the uses of idolatry, we need not wonder they are particularly mentioned by Jacob.

5 And

5 And they journeyed : and the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

6 ¶ So Jacob came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Beth-el, he and all the people that were with him.

7 And he built there an altar, and called the place El-beth-el; because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

8 ¶ But Deborah Rebekah's nurse died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el under an oak; and the name of it was called Allon-bachuth.

9 ¶ And God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram, and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob : thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name : and he called his name Israel.

11 And God said unto him, I am God Almighty : be fruitful and multiply ; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins ;

12 And the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And God went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

14 ¶ And Jacob set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone : and he poured a drink offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

15 And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him, Beth-el :

16 ¶ And they journeyed from Beth-el ; and there was but a little way to come to Ephrath : and Rachel travailed, and she had hard labour.

17 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not ; thou shalt have this son also.

18 And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died) that she called his name Ben-oni : but his father called him Benjamin.

19 And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Beth-lehem.

20 And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave : that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.

5 And the terror of God was upon the cities, &c.] Some render it, A great terror. It was doubtless very singular, that the inhabitants of the land should neglect to take signal vengeance on the sons of Jacob, for the cruelty they had exercised on the unfortunate Shechemites : the sacred historian, therefore, thought proper to insert the reason for this supineness, namely, " the terror of the Lord ;" which operated so strongly upon their minds, that they durst not attempt to follow the Hebrews, but suffered them to retire unmolested with their substance.

7 El-beth-el, &c.] That is, " the God of Beth-el."

8 Deborah Rebekah's nurse died, &c.] This woman came with her mistress from Mesopotamia to Canaan, when she married Isaac. Her death is here mentioned to shew the reason why the oak was called allon-bachuth, that is, " the oak of mourning."

9 God appeared, &c.] The Chaldee renders it, The angel of God appeared.

10 Israel shall be thy name, &c.] The word Israel implies, " a prince powerful with God," and was given before by the angel when they wrestled together; but was now repeated to confirm his faith. See chap. xxx. 11, 28.

13 God went up from, &c.] The Chaldee renders it, The glory of the Lord, &c. and the Arabic, The angel of the Lord was taken up, &c. whence we may infer, that God had manifested himself to him by his glorious presence, which now vanished, or else by the ministry of angels, who now ascended out of his sight.

14 He poured a drink-offering, &c.] Or, He poured mixed wine and oil.

18 As her soul was in departing.] Rachel had impatiently longed for children; but was now fatally convinced, that what she considered as the greatest happiness, was really the greatest pain; and thence called this son Ben-oni, " the son of my sorrow."

His father called him Benjamin.] Benjamin, in the Hebrew, signifies, " the son of my right hand," and might intimate the intense affection which Jacob had for this dear pledge of his beloved wife; the right hand, and the right eye, being used in scripture for some thing that engrosses our affections; yet as Jacob may be supposed to have used the Syriac language, others interpret the name, according to its signification in the Syriac, The son of my days, or old age; which carries with it the idea of equal fondness.

No. 5.

21 And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond the tower of Edar.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and lay with Bilhah his father's concubine: and Israel heard it. Now the sons of Jacob were twelve:

23 The sons of Leah: Reuben, Jacob's firstborn, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulon:

24 The sons of Rachel; Joseph, and Benjamin:

25 And the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Dan, and Naphtali:

26 And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad, and Asher: these are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Padan-aram.

27 ¶ And Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto Mamre, unto the city of Arbah, which is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac sojourned:

28 ¶ And the days of Isaac were an hundred and fourscore years.

29 And Isaac gave up the ghost, and died, and was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days: and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXXV.

It being a principal design to produce as great a variety as possible in the course of the General Reflections, we shall offer to our readers, as a practical remark, that Rachel, who longed for children so impatiently as to say, " Give me children, or else I die," died in child-bearing—a lively instance of the folly of our wishes! which, it is to be hoped, will be seriously attended to by all.

NOW these are the generations of Esau, who is Edom. 1796.

21 The tower of Edar.] That is, " the tower of the flock." It is thought to have been situated near Jerusalem, and is mentioned by the prophet Micah, chap. iv. 8. " And thou O tower of the flock, &c."

22 And Israel heard—Now the sons, &c.] In the Hebrew manuscripts, a blank space is left between the words translated " heard it," and " now the sons." The Jews acknowledge in the margin, that some words are wanting to complete the sense; and the Septuagint has preserved the words that are wanting, by adding, that Jacob detested the crime of Reuben as vile and atrocious. According to this reading, the verse should be translated, And it came to pass when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and lay with Bilhah his father's concubine: and Israel heard it, and it appeared evil in his sight. " Now the sons of Jacob, &c."

26 Which were born unto him in Padan-aram.] Benjamin was not born in Padan-aram, but several years after Jacob's return into the land of Canaan, and is therefore to be excepted, as his birth is mentioned but a few verses before.

29 And Isaac—was gathered unto his people] His soul was gathered to the righteous, and his body was laid where his parents were buried.

And his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.] In the cave of Machpelah, where the remains of Abraham and Sarah, his father and mother, were deposited. See chap. xlix. 31.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXVI.

1 These are the generations of Esau, &c.] This genealogy of Esau was inserted to answer a double intention; first, to shew how truly his father's prophetic blessing was fulfilled; and secondly, to inform the Israelites which were the tribes of Edom, and the extent of the country they inhabited, that they might not, through ignorance, attack any of their cities, which God himself had given them for their inheritance, the Amalekites only being excepted.

2 The daughter of Anah, &c.] It appears from ver. 24. that Anah was Zibeon's son: the Hebrew transcriber, therefore must have written bath, " daughter," instead of ben, " son;" which might easily have been occasioned by writing twice the word bath in the beginning of the verse. The Septuagint, Syriac, and Samaritan, have avoided this error by reading, Son.

6 And went into the country, &c.] Some, instead of "the," put his, understanding, by his country, the country of Seir, which he inhabited before he visited his father in the land of Canaan. The Septuagint translation, and the Samaritan text, read, Out of the land of Canaan ; which seems to be the true reading.

8 Esau is Edom.] Though the word Esau occurs a second time in the Hebrew, yet it is omitted in the Vulgate, which reads, And Esau dwelt in Mount Seir : he is Edom. One of the Hebrew manuscripts, in the Bodleian library confirms this omission, by reading, Esau dwelt in Mount Seir ; that is, Edom. Esau had the name of Edom, which signifies "red," given him on account of his being of a red colour, at the instant of his birth, chap. xxv. 25.

14 The daughter of Zibeon, &c.] The Samaritan text, and the Septuagint, read with great propriety, The son of Zibeon ; the Hebrew being undoubtedly corrupted. See the note on ver. 2.

15 These were dukes, &c.] The persons styled dukes were not rulers of provinces, but the heads or chiefs of particular families ; for it was many years after that the Horites were conquered, before these were dukes of Edom, which was mentioned ver. 42, 43 ; but are plainly distinguished from those mentioned above, the former being styled dukes in the land of Edom, and the latter, "the dukes of Edom."

16 Duke Korah, &c.] It appears from ver. 4. that Eliphaz was Esau's son by Adah, and from ver. 11, 12. that Eliphaz had but six sons. It is also certain from ver. 5, and 14. that Korah was the son of Esau (not of Eliphaz, as asserted in this verse) by Aholibamah, and such he is properly enumerated in ver. 18. Both the Samaritan text and translation have omitted these two words ; which, though found in the Septuagint, Chaldee, Vulgate, Arabic, and Syriac, are undoubtedly interpolated.

24 The mules, &c.] The original, hayemim, has been interpreted "baths" and "hot waters ;" by others, the first discovery of some useful plant ; but the word must be severely tortured to make it capable of either of these significations. The word matza, translated, "found," imports the discovery of what has an existence already ; consequently it could not mean the invention of breeding mules ; besides no mention is made of Anah's feeding horses, but asses, the former of which were essential to his invention ; and we may add, that no mules are mentioned in scripture till the days of David. From the Septuagint and Samaritan, hayemim seems to be the proper name of a people, whom Anah fell upon by surprise and defeated ; a sense which has the countenance of several other places in scripture.

35 Who smote Midian, &c.] The Chaldee, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, concur in translating it, The Midianites. They were marching to invade him, but were defeated in the field of Moab, which was on the frontiers of his country. Moses recorded this exploit, as it proved a calamity to Jethro his father-in-law ; and that it was Midian himself, who, according to the Hebrew text, was slain, being at the period one hundred and nine years old.

COMMENTARY

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXVI.

Here let us observe, that Moses, having given an account of the principal heads of Jacob's posterity, who, the special seed of Abraham, inherited the land of Canaan, before he proceeds farther in their history, settles the account of Esau's family, in the most remarkable branches thereof; and that in order to shew how truly what was before prophetically spoken of him, chap. xxv. 23. and xxvii. 39. was fulfilled. Moses in this narrative, seems likewise to have had a particular view to let the Israelites distinctly know the tribes of the Edomites, and the country which they inhabited, that they might not offer to attack them, they were their brethren.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXVII.

1 Wherein his father was a stranger] The Hebrew signifies, In the land of his father's sojournings. The Septuagint render it, In which his father dwelt. The Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic, Of his father's habitations or dwelling. In either of these senses, the text is free from the objection to which it is exposed by our translation; for it is evident that Isaac was a native of Canaan, had resided in it many years, and could not truly be named a stranger; but as he had made no conquests, and extended his authority no farther than the circle of his own family, he might, with the greatest propriety, be called a sojourner, according to the express sense of the Hebrew.

In the land of Canaan.] And particularly in Hebron, where Isaac and Abraham before him had dwelt.

2 These are the generations] See chap. ii. 4. vi. 9. and xxv. 19.

Seventeen years old.] This is the reading of the Hebrew, Septuagint, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic: but the Vulgate renders it, Sixteen years old. In order to reconcile this with the original, we must observe, that a person is said in scripture to be of that year of which he is only turned, in Exod. xii. 5. To this we may add, that the Jews lay it down as a maxim, that part of the month is the whole, and that of the year as the whole.

And Joseph brought unto his father, &c.] The Vulgate translates it, And he accused them to his father of the worst of crimes. The Chaldee renders it, Their criminal accusation; and the Arabic styles it, The worst species of obscenity; but the Septuagint make the brethren the accusers, translating the words, They brought an evil report of Joseph unto his father. Some say, that Joseph's motive, in accusing his brethren, was no other but that they should be reformed by their father's remonstrance.

3 The son of his old age.] An ancient author assigns a different reason for Jacob's extraordinary fondness, ascribing it to his personal, as well as his intellectual graces; in the latter of which, especially in prudence, he supposed him to have surpassed all his brethren. The Chaldee supports this opinion, by rendering the words, Because he was a wise son unto him. It must be confessed, that the Vulgate, Septuagint, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, concur with the Hebrew, it is rendered by our translators; yet we may observe, that they have confounded the original words ben zekenaim, "the son of senators or elders," with ben ziknah, "the son of old age." Joseph's being merely the son of Jacob's old age, could scarcely be the reason why his father had more affection for him than his brethren, because his brother Benjamin was fifteen years younger than he: but if we suppose that his father's preference of him was founded on his prudence, which was not only beyond what might have been expected from one of his years, but likewise surpassing that of his other children, the character of Jacob is vindicated from objections, and his extraordinary affection appears consistent with reason. And that this was really the case, seems evident from the sequel of Joseph's history, wherein he is represented as a person of consummate prudence, and one of the ablest counsellors that ever was employed in the most critical and difficult conjunctures.

Many colours.] The Hebrew is, Many pieces. The Arabic renders it, A silken coat. Whatever the matter might be of which it was made, it is plain that it was composed of different colours: some imagine it to have been woollen with threads of different colours; and others, that it was embroidered with variegated flowers and figures. It is evident that such garments were in high esteem among the eastern nations, and worn by persons of the highest distinction; whence we may infer, that Jacob's cloathing Joseph in a garment of this sort argues his having a peculiar affection for him, and, as brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives: and Joseph brought unto his father their evil report.

Before CHRIST 1729.

3 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many colours.

4 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

5 ¶ And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

6 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

7 For, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

8 And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? and they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

9 ¶ And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; and, behold, the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

it distinguished him above his brethren, gave rise to their envy and machinations against him.

4 And when his brethren saw—they hated] We must ascribe the hatred of Joseph's brethren to his superior knowledge and wisdom.

Could not speak peaceably unto him.] Our translation agrees with the Chaldee. The Arabic renders it, They could not salute him; which conveys to us the sense of the historian better than our translation. "Peace be unto thee," was the usual salutation of the eastern nations, and was always looked upon as a compliment of civility: it was this which Joseph's brethren denied him, and consequently treated him with great incivility, and with marks of enmity. This address is still retained in the east, and called, the compliment of peace.

5 Joseph dreamed a dream, &c.] The method of conveying ideas is either by figures or sounds. In conveying ideas by figures, the picture or image of a thing to be conveyed was represented: thus the idea of a horse was represented by the picture of that animal; but this method being attended with inconveniences, 1. The principal circumstance in the subject was made to stand for the whole; thus a scaling-ladder was painted to represent a siege. 2. The instrument of a thing, whether real or metaphorical, was put for the thing itself; thus an eye eminently placed denoted omniscience, and an eye and a sceptre, a monarch. 3. One thing stood for another when any quaint resemblance, or analogy in the representative, could be collected from nature or tradition; thus the sun-rise was designed by the two eyes of the crocodile, because they seem to emerge from its head; and he who had borne misfortunes with courage, and surmounted them, was signified by the hyæna, because the skin of that animal was supposed to be invulnerable. In sleep, where the information is rather by figures than by sound, ideas are commonly conveyed by pictures, which are termed dreams: and the whole art of the interpretation of dreams is founded upon this hypothesis; dreams may be divided into speculative and allegorical; the first kind is that which represents a plain and direct picture of the thing predicted; the second is an oblique intimation of it by tropical or symbolical images. The dream of Joseph was of this latter species.

6 This dream, &c.] We are told by a Jewish author, that it was a vision; and that he saw it when sent together with his brethren to gather in the harvest; and the subject of it gives some countenance to his assertion.

8 Shalt thou indeed reign over us? &c.] That dreams, consisting of symbolic hieroglyphics, were a common mode of information in those times, and generally understood by most persons, seems evident from this interrogation of Joseph's brethren. But when they were more complicate, and consisted of mysterious symbols, it was customary to have recourse to interpreters, who founded their solution on the mysterious sense concealed under the sacred symbols, which they made their peculiar study, as the Egyptian priests always did.

9 He dreamed yet another dream] This repetition was not only intended to confirm the event predicted by the former, but to heighten its signification, by foretelling, that not only the brethren, but likewise the parent of Joseph, should acknowledge the superiority of his condition.

The sun and moon, &c.] The heavenly bodies in symbolical hieroglyphics signified persons invested with authority and family power, as appears from Horapolis; and Artemidorus, who wrote the art of interpreting dreams upon the principles of symbolic hieroglyphics, asserts, that he who dreams that he has dominion over the stars and other heavenly bodies, shall subdue all the world: agreeable to this interpretation, understood in those times, Jacob might well ask his son, "Shall I and thy mother bow down to thee?" &c.

Before
1729.

10 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

11 And his brethren envied him; but his father observed the saying.

12 ¶ And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem.

13 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, here am I.

14 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

15 And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

16 And he said, I seek my brethren: tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

17 And the man said, They are departed hence; for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.

18 ¶ And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they conspired against him to slay him.

19 And they said one to another, behold this dreamer cometh.

20 Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

21 And Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

22 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

11 His father observed the saying.] The Arabic renders the last word, Speech; but the Syriac, Speeches; applying it to both the dreams. Jacob had been no stranger to these nocturnal informations; and finding them repeated by the divine Being, stored them up in his memory, as predictions of events that would certainly come to pass.

13 Come, and I will send thee, &c.] It was no wonder that Jacob was uneasy with regard to his sons, who were now feeding their flocks in Shechem, the scene of their late inhuman cruelty; for fear that the inhabitants of the land should take the first favourable opportunity of revenging the death of their countrymen. He therefore thought proper to send Joseph to them, though it was near sixty miles distance from Hebron, the place where he now dwelt.

17 And found them in Dothan] Joseph repaired to Shechem, but he found his brethren were retired from thence in quest of pasture; he continued his search till he found them in Dothan, a place about eight miles north from Shechem.

19 Behold, this dreamer cometh.] In the Hebrew it is, Behold, this maker of dreams cometh; a proof that they considered his dreams as fictions of his own inventing.

20 Come now therefore, and let us slay him, &c.] This instance teaches us the natural progress of sin. The seeds of envy and emulation grew into actual hatred; and hatred, by an easy transition, degenerated into intentional murder.

22 And Reuben said, &c.] Reuben, who was the eldest brother, and consequently had the greatest authority among them, despairing to protect him by any open or direct method, persuaded them to cast him into a pit, that he might have an opportunity of delivering him again to his father.

25 A company of Ishmeelites] The Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic, translate, Arabians; or Arabian merchants descended from Ishmael. See ver. 28.

Spicery and balm and myrrh, &c.] The ingredients made use of in embalming the dead, as appears from a prophane author, who says, that after the body had lain above thirty days in a different preparation, they preserved it with myrrh, cinnamon, and other spices. The merchants carrying down such a large quantity of these ingredients shews, that embalming was at this time become a general practice in Egypt, and the traffick which they carried in young slaves, which are commodities only for rich and luxurious people, sufficiently declares the established power and wealth of this celebrated nation.

28 There passed by Midianites] In ver. 25. they are called Ishmeelites. The Caravan seems to have consisted of both; for they were near neighbours, and appear to have lived promiscuously, and 23 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stripped Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours that was on him.

24 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

25 And they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of Ishmeelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

26 And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother, and conceal his blood?

27 Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmeelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother and our flesh. And his brethren were content.

28 Then there passed by Midianites merchantmen and they drew and lifted Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

29 ¶ And Reuben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit; and he rent his clothes.

30 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child is not; and I, whither shall I go?

31 ¶ And they took Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood;

32 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

33 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

34 And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

35 And all his sons and all his daughters rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, For I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

36 ¶ And the Midianites sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's, and captain of the guard.

GENERAL

joined together in trade. And it has always been the custom in the eastern countries for merchants to travel together in companies, for security against robbers and wild beasts.

Twenty pieces of silver, &c.] The word "pieces" is not in the original; but as the sentence is elliptical, the word omitted is generally understood to be a shekel, so that the whole sum will be about forty-seven shillings sterling.

29 He rent his clothes.] This was one of the signs of ancient mourning, and used in cases of the greatest distress. From this behaviour of Reuben it is plain, that he was not privy to the transaction of selling Joseph to the Ishmeelites.

30 Whither shall I go?] Whither shall I fly to conceal myself from my father's anger? For, being the eldest, he considered himself as responsible for the child's safety.

34 Jacob rent his clothes, and put sackcloth on his loins, &c.] An affecting idea. The hoary patriarch rends his cloaths, covers his aged body with sackcloth, and refuses to be comforted.

35 I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning, &c.] The Arabic renders it, I will go down into the dust. Some, instead of, Unto my son, read, For the sake of my son: and it must be confessed, that the Hebrew particle el is used in that sense, 2 Sam. xxi. 2. The word scheol, translated "grave," is undoubtedly, in the prophetic writings, used for the mansion, or separate state of departed souls. The Arabic, which renders the words, I will go into the dust, countenances the sense we have given this sentence: and we add besides, that the words imply no more, than to be reduced to the same condition; and therefore Jacob might properly say, he would go down to the grave to a dead son, who was never buried, i. e. that he should find no ease to his sorrows, till he was reduced to the same condition.

36 An officer of Pharaoh's, &c.] In the Vulgate, Septuagint, Samaritan, Syriac, it is translated, An eunuch; probably in allusion to the eastern custom of appointing eunuchs to the great offices of state. But it is plain that the Hebrew word seris does not always signify an eunuch, but is sometimes used to signify a chamberlain, or a person having some considerable office about the king's person; and in this sense we must here take the word, especially as we find that the historian mentions his having a daughter who was married to Joseph. He is likewise dignified in the original by the title of "captain of the guard;" but as the word tabach signifies "to kill," some have thought that it should be translated, chief of the cooks or butchers; while others contend positively, that it should be captain of the guard, or soldiers who were dispersed about the royal palace. To clear up this difficulty, we should observe, that Potiphar is styled the priest of On; and it appears, that in the time of Joseph

Let this one great and certain truth be always fixed deeply in our minds, that God orders every thing in the world, and orders it for the best for every one who trusteth in him, "that all things work together for good to those that love God." This is what the holy scriptures strongly inculcate; this is what reason teaches; and this alone, really and firmly believed, it ought to be, would banish all trouble from the breasts of men; it would hush all the storms which assault us on the sea of life, into a peaceful calm; it would pour a healing balm into every wound we might receive in our war with the world; it would sweeten every bitter cup which is necessary for us, in the present state of things, to drink.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

1 Judah begetteth Er, Onan, and Shelah. 6 Er marryeth Tamar, and dieth. Onan's trespass and death. Tamar stayeth for Shelah. 12 She deceiveth Judah; 27 to whom she beareth twins, Pharez and Zarah.

AND it came to pass at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and turned in to a certain Adullamite, whose name was Hirah.

2 And Judah saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose name was Shuah; and he took her, and went in unto her.

3 And she conceived, and bare a son; and he called his name Er.

4 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and called his name Onan:

5 And she yet again conceived, and bare a son; and called his name Shelah: and he was at Chezib, when she bare him.

6 ¶ And Judah took a wife for Er his firstborn, whose name was Tamar.

7 And Er, Judah's firstborn, was wicked in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD slew him.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, go in unto thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should not be his:

and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother. Before CHRIST 1727.

10 And the thing which he did displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew him also.

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter in law, Remain a widow at thy father's house, till Shelah my son be grown: for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did. And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

12 ¶ And in process of time the daughter of Shuah Judah's wife died; and Judah was comforted, and went up unto his shepherders to Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold thy father in law goeth up to Timnath to shear his sheep.

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a vail, and wrapped herself, and sat in an open place, which is by the way to Timnath; for she saw that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter in law.) And she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?

17 And he said, I will send thee a kid from the flock. And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it?

18 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.

19 And she arose, and went away, and laid by her vail from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

20 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the the people of Egypt were divided into three classes, the king, the priests, and the people. The priests were an order in the highest reverence for their piety, their consummate wisdom, and their application to their studies. With their revenues, they supplied all Egypt with public sacrifices, supported a number of inferior officers, and maintained their families. They were constantly attached to the person of the king, as his coadjutors, counsellors, and instructors; were exempted from all charges and imposts, and held the second honours under the king in the administration. As Potiphar was priest of On, or Heliopolis, which was superior in nobility to all the other classes of the priesthood, the terms "officer of Pharaoh's," and "captain of the guard," in our translation, imply no more nor less than that he was prime minister, or chamberlain, to the Egyptian king. That he could not belong to the soldiery is evident, because the Egyptian priesthood was always a separate and distinct order, whose office was transmitted as an unalienable inheritance to their posterity.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXVIII.

1 And it came to pass, at that time, &c.] Although these words seem to connect the following events with the preceding chapter, yet all the transactions were not actually performed after Joseph was sold into Egypt; for Judah's marriage happened long before, even about the time that Jacob came out of Mesopotamia into Canaan, though the sacred historian thought proper to place them here. The words therefore, "in those days, at that time, &c." often refer in scripture to a considerable space of time.

2 A certain Canaanite, &c.] This marriage with a Canaanitish woman was opposite to the received custom of his predecessors, who guarded their sons from making any alliance with this nation. The Chaldee and Tigurine translation render the word, A merchant, in which sense it is likewise used, Prov. xxxi. 24.

3 He called his name] It is observable, that Judah names the first child, but his wife the other two.

Er.] In Hebrew, A watch, or enemy.

5 Shelah] In Hebrew it signifies something that breaks, or unties; so that the names of all the three sons, which Judah had by this match, prefigured their future calamities.

And he was at Chezib, &c.] Though the Septuagint, Samaritan, and Arabic read the word Chesib as the proper name of a place; yet the Vulgate, Chaldee, and Syriac render the sentence, And he ceased to bear any more children after he was born. Grotius asserts, that the word is used to signify, Cease, as in Isaiah xiii. 11. but in the place quoted by this learned author, it may be read, Lye, or deceive, and is used in that sense, Micah i. 14. "The houses of Achzib shall be Achzab," i. e. A lye. That the word used for the proper name of a place, is evident from the last quotation, and from Joshua xv. 44. but if it is meant in that sense by the sacred historian, it must have been by anticipation, because it received this name from the circumstance of Shuah's delivery, whether it was because she then ceased to bear, or that she was delivered of a spurious child, which seems to be intimated by those translations which lay a particular stress on the absence of Judah at the time of her delivery.

7 Wicked in the sight of the Lord, &c.] In the Hebrew, In the eyes of the Lord; that is, remarkably, or excessively wicked. Though the scripture is silent with respect to the nature of his sin, yet the Jewish rabbins pretend that it was the same with that of his brother, though from a different motive.

8 Go in unto thy brother's wife, &c.] This was an Egyptian custom. It was therefore no new thing, though adopted by Moses in his institutes, Deut. xxv. 5.

11 Remain a widow, &c.] Hence we may infer, that the contract of marriage in those days obliged the woman, in case her husband died without issue, to marry his next brother, and that as long as any of his brethren remained, they were bound to marry his wife, unless she had a child.

14 And sat in an open place, &c.] The original implies, that she sat in a place where two ways met. Among the Jews, as well as other nations, the harlots were not suffered to ply in the streets, but haunted the common roads without the walls.

15 Thought her to be a harlot, because she had covered her face] If the women of those days commonly wore vails, it may be asked, how could Judah imagine that Tamar was a harlot upon that account? To this it may be replied, that though the words at first sight may seem to convey this sense, yet a mature consideration they signify more than that he did not know her to be his daughter-in-law; the word translated "harlot" is by the Samaritan rendered, A vagabond, or one without the city, the usual haunts of prostitutes; and Judah finding her in that situation, might very well take her to be a prostitute, because she was veiled; which he would not, he could not have done, had her vail been off, and he had seen her face.

18 Thy bracelets, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, a scarf or girdle. The Chaldee renders it, Handkerchief; but it is variously rendered by the Syriac and Arabic, which translate it, Something twisted, &c. It seems indeed to have been made of gold, twisted in the manner of a thread, and suspended from the neck, not, like a bracelet, from the arm.

Before CHRIST 1727. the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not.

21 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot, that was openly by the way side? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.

22 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said, that there ~~was~~ no harlot in this place.

23 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we be ashamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

24 And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter in law hath played the harlot; and also behold, she is with child by whoredom. And Judah said, Bring her forth, and let her be burnt.

25 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father in law, saying, By the man, whose these are, ~~am~~ I with child: and she said, Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the signet, and bracelets, and staff.

26 And Judah acknowledged them, and said, She hath been more righteous than I; because that I gave her not to Shelah my son. And he knew her again no more.

27 ¶ And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb.

28 And it came to pass, when she travailed, that the one put out his hand: and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.

1729. 29 And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out: and she said, How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was called Pharez.

30 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Zarah.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXXVIII.

With regard to the conduct of Judah, in this chapter, the moral turpitude of the action filled him with conscious shame, and made him rather chuse to suffer the loss of his property, than blemish his reputation, by making any further search after a person of her

21 Where is the harlot, &c.] The Hebrew word used in this verse is kedushah, which implies something sacred; whence we are of opinion, that she was one of those women who worshipped Baal-phegor, or some other impure deity, by an annual prostitution.

23 Lest we be ashamed, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, Become a contempt. The Septuagint, Chaldee, and Syriac, render it, Lest we should be a derision.

26 She hath been more righteous than I, &c.] The Chaldee renders it, She is justified, she has conceived by me. The Samaritan, She is truer than me; the Syriac, She is more innocent than I and the Arabic, She has said truly that it was by me.

29 This breach be upon thee, &c.] That is, Be thou for ever called irruption or breach; which is the meaning of the word Pharez. Perhaps she considered this circumstance as the presage of a future rupture between the two brothers for the right of primogeniture.

40 Zarah.] In Hebrew, He ariseth; because, like the sun, he had given a sign of his coming, by putting out his hand; or from the Arabic, Zaraba, To move, on account of the motion he had made, by withdrawing his hand. It is remarkable that Josephus has omitted the subject of this chapter in his history; a liberty he generally takes with the scripture, whenever it records any transactions that are not for the credit of his countrymen the Jews.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIX.

1 Joseph was brought down, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, Joseph was made to descend into Egypt; and the expression is extremely proper; first, because his descent was involuntary; and, secondly, because Egypt being situated in a lower ground, his journey thither was properly a descent. The historian now resumes his history, which had been interrupted by the transactions relative to Judah's family, highly necessary to our tracing the genealogy of our blessed Saviour, as will appear to the reader, on a perusal of the first chapter of St. Matthew.

¶ And the Lord was with Joseph] The Chaldee reads, The word of the Lord was an help to Joseph. The Psalmist informs us, that God sent him for certain wise purposes into this country, and the patriarch himself avows the same, chap. xlv. 5. His extraordinary vicissitude from the abject state of slavery to the highest post of honour, strongly marks the interposition of divine Providence, which afflicts to bless, and humbles to exalt.

character. From whence we may learn, that this crime, however lightly made of in these days, was accounted highly shameful of in those early times. The original words, that we translate, "lest we be ashamed," have a stronger sense, viz. lest we become a contempt.

C H A P. XXXIX.

¶ Joseph is advanced in Potiphar's house. 7 He resisteth his mistress's temptation, is falsely accused by her, and cast in prison. 21 God is with him there.

AND Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Joseph was a goodly person, and well favoured.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, Lie with me.

8 But he refused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand;

9 There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

10 And

And he was in the house, &c.] His master gave him a liberal education, treated him in a manner superior to his condition, and made him overseer of his household.

6 He knew not ought—save the bread, &c.] The Arabic renders it, He did not look into any thing that he had, save the meat, &c. This conveys the idea of a boundless confidence in Joseph's integrity; and, at the same time, raises the character of the master above the conception of the suspicious and ungenerous.

Cast her eyes, &c.] The Hebrew reads, Lift up her eyes: Modesty is celebrated for a downcast look, and is fearful to stare any person in the face. But lust gazes undaunted, and, by amorous glances endeavours to captivate the object of desire, as Joseph's mistress did by her looks endeavour to captivate him.

¶ But he refused, and said—Behold, my master, &c.] The shameful and heinousness of ingratitude is extremely great: this was strongly urged by Joseph against committing the crime to which he was so strongly excited. A man, such conduct towards one of his own equals was absolutely indefensible; but from a servant to his master, who had highly cared and honoured him, and loaded him with signal favours, it was so utterly unnatural, that whoever attempted it must be extravagantly wicked, and sunk to the very lowest degree of degeneracy. Ingratitude, added to adultery, would have rendered what is, in itself, one of the foulest stains to man's nature, infinitely more black and detestable, and have swelled the guilt of it to so vast a size, that it would scarce have admitted of any further aggravation. When we recollect all the instances we have met with in our reading, we cannot find one so generous, so honest, and so noble, as that of Joseph. When his master had trusted him so unreservedly, he was so unhappy as to appear irresistibly beautiful to his mistress; but when this shameless woman proceeds to solicit him, how gallant is his answer! The same argument which a base mind would have made to itself for committing the evil, was to this brave man the greatest motive for forbearing it, that he could do it with impunity.

9 How can I do this great wickedness, &c.] Joseph was a slave, and in a strange country; he was tempted by a lascivious and a vindictive mistress; had he complied, he could have been sure both of secrecy and rewards; would have been firmly rooted in his place, and been preferred to greater honour; but if he resisted, he could expect nothing less than to be accused and treated like a criminal, to be deprived of his place, and to lose his liberty, his fame, and perhaps his

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her.

11 And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was none of the men of the house there within.

12 And she caught him by his garments, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

13 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth,

14 That she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in an Hebrew unto us to mock us; he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a loud voice:

15 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

16 And she laid up his garment by her, until his lord came home.

17 And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, The Hebrew servant which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me:

18 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

19 And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that his wrath was kindled.

20 And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison.

21 ¶ But the LORD was with Joseph, and shewed him mercy, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

22 And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

his life; yet all this could not influence him. Deaf to the solicitations of his mistress, he chuses to submit to chains, to ignominy, to death, rather than be guilty of so foul a crime, and sin against God. From hence we may learn, that the fear of God is a most effectual preservative against all criminal indulgencies. It was this that restrained Joseph from complying with the loose solicitations of his mistress; and will have the same effect on all mankind upon all other occasions, and in every scene of life. It strikes every passion, every spring of human action, and includes in it all the most powerful motives by which the conduct of mankind is determined. If interest be the principal thing that sways us, surely that cannot be so certainly promoted, as by the securing the favour of God, and avoiding his displeasure. If we are governed by our fears, he is the most formidable being in the universe to a mind that has perverted its faculties, and transgressed the laws of its maker. If by hope, he is the supreme good. If by love, he is the most amiable and perfect excellence. If by gratitude, he is the author of all our happiness.

10 She spake—day by day, &c.] This expression conveys a very high idea of the patriarch's chastity, which was proof against so many repeated assaults; and his avoiding her company is a great testimony of his consummate prudence.

11 About this time, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, On a certain day; which the Vulgate, Septuagint, Chaldee, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, have faithfully rendered. It was a public festival, to which she had avoided going, under pretence that she was indisposed.

13 He left his garment, &c.] The ancient translations render it, A cloak or mantle; which he might easily have quitted, in order to free himself from her embraces.

20 Put him into prison, &c.] From the Psalmist it appears, that the patriarch was treated with the greatest rigour and inhumanity. He was secured with fetters, which ate into his flesh, or put him to the most exquisite tortures, Psalm cv. 18. he was thrust down into the most noisome place of the prison. Such were the sufferings of Joseph, which he endured without murmuring, and submitted, like our blessed Saviour, without attempting to refute the charge which malice had forged, and passion had credited.

21 The Lord was with Joseph] Now he seems to have been quite lost, and abandoned to misery and despair: but vain are the counsels of man; for this very circumstance was the occasion of his being introduced into the presence of Pharaoh, and of his appearing again on the stage of the world with extraordinary lustre and dignity, for

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIX.

The history of Joseph is one of the finest and most remarkable in the scriptures, which affords us the clearest evidence of the providence of God, conducting all things with amazing and stupendous wisdom, and making all things tend to promote the happiness of them that love and fear him. We are led to admire and adore the ways of divine wisdom, which makes use even of the wickedness of men to accomplish his designs. God's design was, to raise Joseph to such a degree of greatness and power, as should oblige his brethren to bow down humbly before him; Joseph's brethren opposed it; but what they did to humble him, was the first step by which God led him to elevation and glory; and the horrible calumny of his unchaste mistress, which seemed to complete his misfortunes, was the circumstance which advanced him almost to the throne. This may afford us great comfort under all troubles, as we may from hence be assured, that God can make whatever shall be designed against us, the means of promoting our real good.

C H A P. XL.

- 1 Pharaoh's butler and baker in prison are committed to Joseph's charge. 5 He interpreteth their dreams, 20 which come to pass according to Joseph's interpretation. 23 The ingratitude of the butler.

AND it came to pass after these things, that the butler of the king of Egypt and his baker had offended their lord the king of Egypt. 1720.

2 And Pharaoh was wroth against two of his officers, against the chief of the butlers, and against the chief of the bakers.

3 And he put them in ward in the house of the captain of the guard, into the prison, the place where Joseph was bound.

4 And the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them, and he served them: and they continued a season in ward. 1718.

5 ¶ And they dreamed a dream both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which were bound in the prison.

6 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, behold, they were sad.

7 And he asked Pharaoh's officers that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, Wherefore look ye so sadly to day?

¶ And

the preservation and support of his own family, which afterward sprang up into a great and flourishing nation.

And gave him favour, &c.] We may ascribe this sudden revolution in the circumstances of Joseph not only to the interposition of Providence, but likewise to his graceful appearance, and to his industry and fidelity in discharging the gaol-keeper's command; in reward for which he rendered the rigours of his confinement more tolerable, and treated him better than the rest of his prisoners.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XL.

1 The butler—and the baker] It is evident from the second verse, that these were men in considerable posts in the king's household, where they were styled in the Hebrew, saraisai, which, as we have seen in the note on chap. xxxviii. 36. implies an officer in some high and considerable post.

Had offended, &c.] The crime for which these persons were committed is not expressed; some have therefore imagined, that it may be inferred from the word translated "lift up thine head," ver. 13. which signifies, To reckon or examine an account, that they were accused of embezzling the king's treasure, by bringing in false accounts.

3 In the house of the captain of the guard] By this title it seems, that Potiphar, Joseph's former master, was the warden of this prison, and if so, we need not wonder that Joseph's confinement was so easy. See chap. xxxvii. 36.

Was bound.] It should have been rendered, according to the Vulgate, Chaldee, and Arabic, Where Joseph had been bound, or imprisoned; because it is evident from the close of the xxxixth chapter, that he was released from his chains, and employed by the under-keeper as his deputy.

4 And the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them] This was Potiphar, his old master, who must have now been convinced of his innocence, by the confidence he placed in him; though to conceal the dishonour of his wife, he thought proper still to confine him.

A season in ward.] The word translated "season," signifies, Days or years. The Vulgate renders it, A little while; the Chaldee, Some days; and the Arabic, They were detained for some time. The English word "ward," signifies, Guard or custody.

5 Each according to the interpretation of his dream, &c.] That is, their dreams were very suitable to the respective offices they held, and the events that were soon to happen to them.

Before
1718.

8 And they said unto him, We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. And Joseph said unto them, Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.

9 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said to him, In my dream, behold, a vine was before me;

10 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes:

11 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

12 And Joseph said unto him, This is the interpretation of it. The three branches are three days:

13 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thine head, and restore thee unto thy place: and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.

14 But think on me when it shall be well with thee, and shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house:

15 For indeed I was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews: and here also have I done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.

16 When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good, he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and, behold, I had three white baskets on my head:

17 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of bakemeats for Pharaoh: and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

18 And Joseph answered and said, This is the interpretation thereof: The three baskets are three days:

19 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thy head from off thee, and shall hang thee on a tree; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

20 ¶ And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's birthday, that he made a feast unto all his servants: and he lifted up the head of the chief butler and of the chief baker among his servants.

21 And he restored the chief butler unto his butler'ship again; and he gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand:

22 But he hanged the chief baker: as Joseph had interpreted to them.

23 ¶ Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but forgot him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XL.

How admirable is the behaviour of Joseph! how worthy of imitation! However severe and unjust the treatment which Joseph met with, he never let fall the least word of murmuring or complaint. The great point he kept always in view was, to do his duty, whatever case or station he was in. He never abandoned himself to despair whilst he was a bond-slave, but gave himself up intirely to the service of his master. When condemned unjustly, he had too much generosity to make any remonstrances to bring dishonour on his master, though he might have vindicated himself thereby. And when prudence here required him to recommend himself to the chief butler, he does it with such a moderation and charity, as cannot be sufficiently admired: "For indeed I was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews, and here also I have done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon." He neither names his brethren who had sold him, nor his mistress who had unjustly accused him.

C H A P. XLI.

1 Pharaoh's two dreams. 9 His butler telleth him of Joseph. 14 Pharaoh sendeth for and consulteth him. 25 He interpreteth the dreams, and giveth Pharaoh counsel. 38 Joseph is advanced, and marrieth an Egyptian wife. 46 His wife's provision in the years of plenty. 50 Ephraim and Manasseh are born to him. 53 The famine beginneth.

AND it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreamed: and, behold, he stood by the river.

2 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven well favoured kine and fatfleshed; and they fed in a meadow.

3 And,

8 Do not interpretations belong to God, &c.] In this question Joseph may seem to allude to their opinion, which was, that the gods were the authors of dreams, and that the Egyptian priests, who interpreted them on the principles of symbolical hieroglyphics, were assisted by them, especially as they imagined that hieroglyphic writing was given to the gods likewise. The argument might likewise be pursued: you acknowledge that your deities are the authors of dreams, and assist your priests in interpreting them; why will you not acknowledge that God whom I serve is possessed of equal power, and can enable me to interpret your dreams, as well as your deities can enable their votaries to explain them?

13 Joseph said unto him, This is the interpretation, &c.] It is a received opinion, that our dreams generally consist of such images as make a strong impression upon our minds when awake. The ideas which composed the dream of the chief butler countenance this opinion; and the interpretation which Joseph gave of it as strongly support what we said, in the preceding notes, concerning the principles and art of interpretation of dreams. That the three branches should signify three days, could not be deduced from any of the symbolical characters in Horapollon, or from the rules of Artemidorus, though the restoration of the butler possibly might; whence then did Joseph acquire his interpretation? The scripture informs us, from God, ver. 8.

13 Lift up thine hand, &c.] The Hebrew word, translated "lift up," signifies to reckon, muster, or to audit an account, and rosh, the word translated "head," signifies likewise an aggregate, or sum total of any number added together, may be perceived from comparing Exod. xxx. 12. with Numb. i. 49. wherein both these words are used in that sense; hence we may infer, that this opinion is plausible who imagine, that the crime for which these delinquents were committed, was for a fraud, or bringing in false accounts, and that when they were audited, the butler's account appeared to be just, while that of the baker was confirmed to be fraudulent and false. Our translators have therefore been thought to have rendered this sentence too literally, as it implies that both the butler and baker would have met with the same fate, which is contrary to fact. We must not admit, that some commentators apprehend the sentence implies only that Pharaoh would muster or number the butler among his servants; and, to support this sense, pretend that on certain days the names or muster roll of all the officers of his court were called over, and such as heinously offended were struck out of the roll, while the less guilty were pardoned, released from prison, and restored: the 20th verse of this chapter is referred to as supporting this conjecture, but it must be wrested miserably to support it. If the former expression should be objected to, it may suffice to add, that the lifting up a person's head is often used in scripture to signify deliverance from misery, or the restoring of a person to his former dignity; thus did Evil-merodach lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah, 2 Kings xxv. 27. Thus the Psalmist, when restored to his kingdom, after he had been obliged to fly from thence by his son Absalom, addresses himself to God, as "the lifter up of his head," Psalms iii. 3. The antient translations confirm this sense, by rendering the word Pharaoh shall remember thee, or thy office.

14 But think on me when it shall be well with thee, &c.] Joseph being divinely assured of the certainty of his predictions, conjures him to think on the person who foretold the happiness he was to enjoy.

16 On my head.] The Egyptian men used always to carry their burdens on their heads, but the women carried them on their shoulders.

19 Thy head from off thee, &c.] The baker, in relating his dream to Joseph, had, ver. 17. made use of the Hebrew words meal roshi, "upon my head;" and in interpreting the dream, Joseph echoes the words back again to him in this sentence, roshbeka mealeka, translated, "thy head from off thee." Though it may seem strange to find the historian asserting, that the baker should be beheaded first, and hanged afterwards; yet it was customary to behead a criminal, and then to hang him up. Jeremiah seems to confirm this assertion, when he laments, "that the princes were hanged up by their hands." Lam. v. 12, which intimates that they had lost their heads before.

23 Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, &c.] This charge argues him not only to have been guilty of ingratitude, but of a breach of promise, and of inhumanity likewise. He must certainly have been a man of a narrow mind to be so soon corrupted with the pleasures of a court, as to forget the danger from whence he had so lately escaped; he must have been ungrateful to have lost all sense of the person who had freed his mind from anxiety, when tormented with a vision in the horrors of a prison; he must have been void of humanity to have so soon forgotten the miseries of a person who had done him a remarkable piece of service, and was left by him languishing in a confinement which he had never merited: but luxury and grandeur too soon corrupt the mind, blunt its sense of social happiness, and obliterate every generous sentiment from the heart.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLI.

¶ He stood by the river.] That is, by the Nile.

¶ There came up out of the river.] Egypt owed its fertility to the overflowing of the Nile, and these fat and lean kine are with great propriety represented as rising out of it.

3 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and leanfleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.

4 And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good,

6 And, behold, seven thin ears and blasted with the east wind sprung up after them.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

8 And it came to pass in the morning that his spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dream: but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

10 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

11 And we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

13 And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.

14 ¶ Then Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they brought him hastily out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.

In a meadow.] The original word signifies, A flag; which was a common name given to every vegetable that grows in a marshy place. The word in the original is baachu, which is Egyptian, resembles the Arabic acham, pools, or places overflowed with water; and may be translated, Luxuriant pastures, caused by the overflowing of the Nile.

3 Upon the brink of the river.] As the overflowing of the Nile was the cause of fruitfulness, when its waters were so included within its banks that the kine resorted thither for drink, nothing else but famine could be expected. That if any one sees a river overflowed, it is a sign of fertility; a river sunk within its banks, is a sign of scarcity.

¶ The magicians, &c.] The interpretation of dreams made up a considerable part of the ancient pagan religion, as we have observed on ver. 8. of the preceding chapter; and the Egyptian priests were the first who professed this art. Their interpretation was founded upon the symbolic hieroglyphics, in which they were deeply read, and which are generally believed to have been given them by the gods. This system of sacred learning was not only preserved by them in characters termed sacred, but likewise recorded in a dialect of their own invention, and deemed sacred likewise.

9 I do remember my faults, &c.] This may imply more than a bare recollection of the fault for which he had been committed, the confession of which included a tacit acknowledgment of Pharaoh's mercy; for it may be supposed to imply likewise, a consciousness of his being ungrateful to Joseph, in forgetting his request to make use of his interest with Pharaoh for his release.

14 They brought him hastily.] In Hebrew, They made him run. He shaved himself, &c.] Joseph seems to have copied the manners of the Egyptians and other oriental nations, who used in times of distress to let their beards grow, but at other seasons to shave, and appear in linen garments remarkably clean.

15 That thou canst understand a dream, &c.] In Hebrew, Thou wilt hear a dream to interpret it. But it must be observed, that the word shama signifies both to hear and to understand. The Samaritan confirms the literal sense, by reading, When thou hast heard dreams, thou canst interpret them; and the Chaldee and Arabic support this translation.

16 It is not in me, &c.] Joseph, in his reply, disclaims the rules of interpretation used by the Egyptian priests, and ascribes all his knowledge to immediate revelation.

No. 6.

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace. Before CHRIST 1715.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine fatfleshed and well favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill favoured and leanfleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:

20 And the lean and the ill favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine:

21 And when they had eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears, withered, thin, and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them:

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

25 ¶ And Joseph said unto Pharaoh. The dream of Pharaoh is one: God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do.

26 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one.

27 And the seven thin and ill favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be seven years of famine.

28 This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: What God is about to do he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

29 Behold, there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

30 And there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land;

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grievous.

32 And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice;

17 Pharaoh said unto Joseph, &c.] Relating both his dreams in a more ample manner, though to the same purpose, than before related.

18 There came up out of the river, &c.] Phantasms in dreams were superstitiously thought to be symbolical; God, therefore, when it was his good pleasure to send dreams to Pharaoh, made the foundation of them two well known symbols; and this, doubtless, in order to engage the dreamer's more serious attention: but then, to confound the Egyptian interpreters of dreams, these dreams were so circumstanced with matter foreign to the principles of their art, that there was need of a truly divine interpreter.

25 The dream of Pharaoh is one.] The Arabic explains the meaning of this expression, by rendering, The sense or meaning of the two dreams is one, or the same.

God hath shewed Pharaoh, &c.] That is, the dream is a prediction of some future event. The Jewish rabbins pretend that the magi had interpreted the kine to signify Pharaoh's daughters.

26 The seven good kine.] Pharaoh had two dreams, one of the seven kine, the other of seven ears of corn. Both of these phantasms were symbols of Egypt; the ears, denoting its distinguished fertility; the kine, its great tutelary patroness, Isis. Pharaoh knew thus much without an interpreter: and hence arose his solicitude and anxiety to understand the rest, as a matter that concerned the public: accordingly when Joseph came to decypher these dreams, he does not tell the king that the two sevens denoted seven years in Egypt, but simply seven years.

Are seven years, &c.] Kine are said to signify years: likewise we are informed, that cows denote time, or seasons; if they be fat, they signify fruitful seasons; but if lean, dearth or scarcity.

30 The famine shall consume, &c.] This circumstance was plainly signified by the lean kine eating up the fat ones, ver. 20.

32 Doubled—twice—because the thing is established by God, &c.] The natural cause of plenty or famine in Egypt is the Nile; for when that river in its annual overflowing rises only twelve cubits, a famine ensues; when fourteen, they have a good year; when fifteen, to very good; and if it rises to sixteen, they have a luxuriant plenty. Now that this river should overflow so largely for seven years successively to produce an extraordinary plenty, and during the next seven years rise so little as to lay a long and grievous famine, is a circumstance out of the common course of nature, could only be caused by the interposition of Providence, and could only be foreseen and foretold by an omniscient being.

twice; it is because the thing is established by God. and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wife, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint officers over the land, and take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plentiful years.

35 And let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through the famine.

37 And the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

38 ¶ And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man in whom the spirit of God is?

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wife as thou art:

40 Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck;

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow the knee: and he made him ruler over all the land of Egypt.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

35 And lay up corn, &c.] This should have been translated sea, or "spelt," in conformity to the Egyptian manners; for they accounted it a reproach to eat bread made of barley or wheat. Instead of this, they used a fine flour, called by some olyra, and by others zea, or "spelt;" and the bread made with it they named collestris, from its glutinous quality.

37 The thing was good, &c.] Or, the word was good, &c. The Vulgate renders it, The counsel pleased Pharaoh.

38 Can we find, &c.] In Hebrew, Can we find any thing like the man, who has the Spirit of God in him? The Chaldee renders it, Can we find such a man, in whom is the spirit of prophecy from the face of the Lord? and the Arabic, Can we find a man so skilful as this, in whom the Spirit of God is?

40 Shall all my people be ruled.] Some commentators, finding that the original word is translated, Armed, as it is rendered in Chron. xii. 2. imagine, that Pharaoh invested Joseph with the military power; which seems inconsistent with the words immediately following in this verse. The Psalmist, who is a good commentator on this text, Psal. cv. 22. on the contrary, shews that it was the civil power, and the reason why he was presented to this dignity, assigned in ver. 34, 35, and 36, shews it could be no other.

Only in the throne will I be, &c.] This shews that the office with which Joseph was invested was purely ministerial.

42 The ring from his hand.] The ring or signet which the eastern kings wore was a badge of the royal dignity, which generally descended to their ancestors. This ceremony, therefore, was not only a mark of Pharaoh's favour, but likewise a mark of the authority with which he invested Joseph.

Vestures of fine linen, &c.] The linen of this country was celebrated for fineness all over the world; it was therefore dyed purple, and was the usual dress of the priests, who were the chief persons in the administration. The antient translations, for want of attending to this circumstance, have rendered the words, Vestures of silk.

43 Second chariot.] The chariot which immediately followed his own in any public cavalcade. The Samaritan translation renders it, His double chariot; and the Arabic, He was mounted upon his second horse.

They cried before him.] Or, they cried to his face. The Vulgate renders it, A herald proclaiming; with which the Septuagint agrees. The Chaldee translates, He ordered to be proclaimed before, &c.

Bow the knee, &c.] That is, his guard that attended him when he rode out in his chariot, called to the people as they passed along, to bow the knee to Joseph, as a token of veneration and respect; or they proclaimed him abrech, "this is the father of the king."

45 Zaphnath-paaneah] Which signifies one to whom hidden things are revealed. It was customary for princes to give foreigners a new name, to denote their naturalization, to take away all invidious distinction, and to declare them worthy of their most intimate favour. See Dan. i. 7.

Gave him to wife the daughter of Poti-pherah] That the king

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zathnath-paaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah priest of On. And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 ¶ And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plentiful years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

50 ¶ And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came, which Asenath the daughter of Poti-pherah priest of On bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the firstborn Manasseh: For God, said he, hath made me to forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

52 And the name of the second called he Ephraim: For God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction.

53 ¶ And the seven years of plentifulness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

54 And the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

was in a disposition to do Joseph the highest honours, is plain from the circumstances of the story; and that he principally consulted his establishment in this alliance, as appears also plain. The public administration was in the hands of the priesthood, who would unwillingly bear a stranger at the head of affairs. The bringing Joseph, therefore, into their family, an order which was hereditary, was the best expedient to allay their prejudices and envy; and this Pharaoh did most effectually, by marrying him into that cast which was then of greatest name and credit among them.

Priest of On] The same with Aven. Ezek. xxx. 17. about twenty-two miles from Memphis, and said to be the metropolis of the Heliopolitan name; and has been since called Heliopolis, as it is here in the Septuagint version, which signifies the city of the sun, and is the same with bethshemesh, "the house of the sun," Jer. xlii. 13.

Went out, &c.] The Chaldee and Arabic render it, He went as a ruler, or exercising his authority.

46 Joseph was thirty years old.] He must consequently have been thirteen years in slavery, as he was but seventeen when he first came to Egypt.

Stood before Pharaoh, &c.] In the eastern countries, none but the great officers of state were admitted into the royal presence; this phrase therefore intimates the dignity of his post.

47 Brought forth by handfuls.] The fertility of Egypt was so remarkable, that it was by tradition supposed to be the first place that was inhabited on that account. But how great soever its fruitfulness was by nature, it seems by this account to be so much increased, that the miraculous interposition of providence was not only visible, but, if we may use the expression, palpably likewise.

48 Gathered up all the food, &c.] The word "all" cannot be used in its utmost latitude, but must be restrained either to signify the fifth part, mentioned ver. 34. or else all the superfluous corn which he acquired by purchase, and laid up, not only to support the wants of the Egyptians, but likewise those of the neighbouring states, during the seven years of famine.

49 As the sand of the sea, &c.] This is the common phrase used in scripture, to express a prodigious quantity or number.

51 Manasseh] In Hebrew, Forgetfulness. This name alludes to the Hebrew words, nassaneh Elohim, rendered, "God hath made me to forget."

All my toil, and all my father's house.] That is, all the troubles to which I was exposed while I lived with my father, and all the distress which I endured in Egypt from the perfidy of my brethren.

And when all the land of Egypt was famished, &c.] As the increase was extraordinary, Joseph could not have occasioned this scarcity, by exacting only a fifth. But it is probable that the famine was felt sooner in the neighbouring nations than in Egypt, and that the Egyptians had made large exports, in order to supply their demands.

56 And the famine was over all the face of the earth: And Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XLI.

This chapter furnishes us with an useful admonition respecting the imprisonment of Joseph, who remained in confinement three years. This may seem a long time to us, and as if God was not mindful of him. We should have looked upon him with concern, had we seen him in bonds, and known his innocence: we should have hastened to have freed him. But God, who had a far more indulgent and tender compassion for him, left him in a condition from which we should have delivered him. He knew what was necessary to confirm Joseph in humility, patience, and submission to his will. He knew what was wanting to his virtue, he saw his future temptations and dangers, and prepared him by his bondage for his advancement. Thus he often deals with good men; he strengthens them in patience and humility, and does not expose them to temptation till they are duly prepared to resist it.

C H A P. XLII.

1 Jacob sendeth ten of his sons to buy corn in Egypt. 6 They are imprisoned by Joseph for spies, but set at liberty on condition to bring Benjamin. 21 Their remorse for Joseph, who commandeth his tenderness, and detaineth Simeon for a pledge. 25 They return with corn and their money. 29 Their relation to Jacob. 35 He is afraid, and refuseth to send Benjamin.

NOW when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another?

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die.

3 And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren; for he said, Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Joseph was the governor over the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came and bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLII.

1 Saw, &c.] The Hebrew word translated "saw," signifies to understand, and is substituted instead of hearing, as appears from ver. 2. Exod. xx. 18. and from Acts vii. 12.

2 I have heard, &c.] This confirms the sense we have given in the first verse; though it is not at all improbable but Jacob might have seen the corn brought by those persons, who informed him that it was to be purchased in Egypt.

4 Lest peradventure mischief, &c.] His extraordinary affection to Benjamin was, because he was the son of Rachel, whom he loved more than her sister; and what still heightened his affection was, his imagination that Benjamin was the only surviving son that was left by her.

6 Joseph was the governor] The word shailit, which we render "governor," has two senses: 1. Absolute and independent authority; or, 2. That derived from another. It is here used in the latter sense, Joseph being deputy-governor under Pharaoh.

And bowed down themselves before him, &c.] This manner of salutation was not in use among the Egyptians; but by using the customary form of their family, the dreams of Joseph, as far as they had any relation to themselves, had doubtless brought those dreams to Joseph's remembrance.

8 And Joseph knew—but they knew not, &c.] He had been separated from them when young, and his features might probably have been so much altered by age, that they could not recollect him; but if we consider the alteration made by dress and grandeur, and that he spake unto them by an interpreter, they could not possibly have had the least suspicion that he was their brother.

9 Ye are spies] This expression should have been rendered interrogatively, Are ye not spies? and is rather to be understood as a charge than a positive affirmation.

To see the nakedness of the land, &c.] To observe the fortifications, and remark the weakness or nakedness of the land. And it should be observed, that Joseph's brethren entered Egypt through those passes, by which alone it is liable to be invaded.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, from the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

9 And Joseph remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies; to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons; we are true men, thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one is not.

14 And Joseph said unto them, That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: By the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be kept in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else by the life of Pharaoh surely ye are spies.

17 And he put them altogether into ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for I fear God:

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses:

20 But bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.

21 ¶ And they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us.

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore, behold, also his blood is required.

11 We are all one man's sons, &c.] As if they had said, Thy servants are no spies, but all the sons of one man; and surely it can never be suspected that any person would send all his children on so dangerous a design, nor that a whole country has any thing to fear from the efforts of a single family.

15 By the life of Pharaoh, &c.] This expression is by the generality of interpreters considered as an oath, though the words could not signify any more than, As sure as Pharaoh liveth; or, As sincerely as I desire the life of Pharaoh. If we consider the words attentively, we shall be soon convinced that they only imply a solemn asseveration, that he would certainly do so and so, as he valued the life and honour of his prince. Thus Hannah, when she presented her son to Eli, the priest, makes a similar asseveration, "As thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here praying unto the Lord." That the sons of Jacob understood it only in this sense, is sufficiently evident from the words of Judah to his father, "The man did solemnly protest unto us," chap. xliii 3. It must however be confessed, that this was the most solemn appeal an Egyptian could make.

18 For I fear God.] This was either a solemn assurance of his veracity, according to the literal sense of the words, and added to gain credit with them; or else it was a tacit reproach of their perfidy towards him.

20 Bring your youngest brother, &c.] The roughness with which Joseph treated his brethren may be justified, if we suppose it was with an intention to bring their treatment of him to their minds; and induce them to repent of the evil they had done him. His asperity was designed to try how they were affected to each other. Accordingly, his view in insisting upon seeing his brother Benjamin, was no other than to satisfy some suspicions he entertained, that they were capable of treating him with the same inhumanity as he himself had experienced from them.

21 We are verily guilty concerning our brother, &c.] Adversity is often the most effectual monitor to awaken conscience, and make mankind acquainted with themselves. The behaviour of Joseph's brethren

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for he spake unto them by an interpreter.

24 And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

25 ¶ Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn; and to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and thus did he unto them.

26 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

27 And as one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money; for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and their heart failed them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them; saying,

30 The man, who is the lord of the land, spake roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country.

31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies:

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father; one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, Hereby shall I know that ye are true men; leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone:

34 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall traffick in the land.

35 ¶ And it came to pass as they emptied their sacks, that, behold, every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me.

37 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

38 And he said, My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he is left alone: if mischief befall him by the way in the which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

brethren affords us a lively instance of this. They, who before were so blinded with envy and passion, to be insensible of the anguish and supplication of their brother, now relent into pity, when experience had convinced them what poignant grief and distress an innocent suppliant feels, when all his prayers and intreaties are rejected.

23 Spake he unto them by an interpreter.] In Hebrew, An interpreter was between them. Joseph, doubtless, did this in order to support an air of majesty, and at the same time to prevent his being discovered.

24 And he turned—from them and wept.] Though Joseph could counterfeit the stranger in his looks, his air, his voice, he still retained the brother in his heart. The confusion and distress of his brethren awakened all his fraternal tenderness, and drew tears of compassion from his eyes.

And took—Simeon, and bound him, &c.] Simeon was the principal actor in the murder of the Shechemites, and there is reason to think from his fiery nature, that he was one of the most implacable enemies to Joseph. The rabbins say, that he was the very person who put him in the pit.

28 Their heart failed them, &c.] In Hebrew, their heart went forth; the Arabic translates it, Their hearts were much distressed. Hence we may conclude, that they were under a great consternation, and, as the original expresses it, shuddered at the consequences.

36 All these things are against me.] In Hebrew, All these things are (ala) upon me; which shews the burden of grief under which Jacob laboured, and is a tacit charge against his sons, as conspiring together to render his old age miserable.

37 Reuben spake unto his father.] He was Jacob's first born, and GENERAL REFLECTIONS ■ Chap. XLII.

In the above chapter we see the happy use of affliction, how effectual it is to awaken conscience, and shew men to themselves when nothing else will produce that effect. Men can never entirely efface the sense which God has impressed upon their hearts, of his presence and justice. They will never succeed in persuading themselves that sin is in its nature indifferent, or was not seen, or will remain unpunished. Their fears may be removed sometimes by the patience and silence of their judge, or the number of accomplices; but when vengeance comes to shew itself, they shall be the first to own that they have deserved it, and their accomplices will then seem to shun as so many witnesses, who are ready to accuse and confound them.

C H A P. XLIII.

1 Jacob is hardly persuaded to send Benjamin. 15 Joseph's brethren are brought into Joseph's house. 19 They discover their fears to the steward, who pacifieth them. 26 Joseph maketh them a feast.

AND the famine was sore in the land.

2 And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, Go again, buy us a little food.

3 And Judah spake unto him, saying, The man did solemnly protest unto us, saying, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

4 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food:

5 But if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down: for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

6 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

7 And they said, The man asked us straitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? and we told him according to the tenor of these words: could we certainly know that he would say, Bring your brother down?

8 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the lad with me, and we will arise and go; that we may live, and not die, both we, and thou, and also our little ones.

9 I will be surety for him; of my hand shalt thou require him: if I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever:

10 For except we had lingered, surely now we had returned this second time.

11 And their father Israel said unto them, If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and carry down the man a present, a little balm, and a little honey, spices, and myrrh, nuts, and almonds:

on that account presumed to address him; he had likewise addressed Joseph in Egypt, and might imagine that he should be more certain of succeeding than any other of his brethren.

Slay my two sons, if I bring him not unto thee, &c.] Reuben could not but know that it was not in his power to secure Benjamin's safe return; but he was so fully convinced of his own and his brethren's intention, and so confident that Joseph would inviolably observe his promise, that he dares stake the life of his two sons on the event; and who could do more?

38 Bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.] This verse is remarkably pathetic and picturesque; it paints to us the hoary patriarch in the attitude of grief, lamenting the loss of his children, in the most melting expressions of paternal fondness.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLIII.

3 Judah spake, &c.] Reuben had already addressed him without success: Levi probably was still odious to him on account of the massacre of the Shechemites; Judah therefore, being the next in birth, and a man of a warm and sanguine disposition, undertakes to persuade him, and speaks to him with some warmth.

8 Send the lad, &c.] Benjamin was now twenty-four years of age, and had children of his own, but is here called a lad, because he was the youngest of all the sons of Jacob, and the darling of their aged father. The word in the Hebrew properly signifies, A young man, and is so rendered, Sam. xviii. 12.

11 Take of the best fruits.] In Hebrew, Take of the praise of the land.

12 And take double money in your hand; and the money that was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

13 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man.

14 And God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may fend away your other brother, and Benjamin. If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

15 ¶ And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the ruler of his house, Bring these men home, and slay, and make ready; for these men shall dine with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade; and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

18 And the men were afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house; and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time are we brought in; that he may seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 ¶ And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house,

20 And said, O sir, we came indeed down at the first time to buy food:

21 And it came to pass, when we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and we have brought it again in our hand.

22 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put the money in our sacks.

23 And he said, Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: I had your money. And he brought Simon out unto them.

24 And the man brought them into Joseph's house, and gave them water, and they washed their feet; and he gave their asses provender.

25 And they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

26 ¶ And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and bowed themselves to him to the earth.

27 And he asked them of their welfare, and said, Is your father well, the old man of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?

28 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive. And they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Benjamin, his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

30 And Joseph made haste; for his bowels did yern upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians, which did eat with him, by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

33 And they sat before him, the first born according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

34 And he took and sent messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of their's. And they drank, and were merry with him.

GENERAL

Balm] The Vulgate and Chaldee translate it, Refin; but it was certainly the balm of Gilead, a valuable commodity.

Honey] In the Hebrew, debysb, which signifies likewise "dates," as the Jewish rabbins observe; and as Judea abounded in palm-trees, this was one of the fruits of the land. But honey was so common every where, that it could not possibly have been selected by Jacob as a rarity.

Spices] In Hebrew, nekoth. The Septuagint translates it by Frankincense, or the aromatics used in sacrifices; it seems indeed to have been storax, a precious aromatic gum, used in most spicy ointments, and it is so translated by the Vulgate.

Myrrh, &c.] In Hebrew, lot. This was the stacte, or laudanum of the Septuagint and Chaldee. It is supposed to be the gum of the cypress-tree.

12 Take double money, &c.] That is, both the money that was returned in the mouth of your sacks, and as much more, to purchase a second supply of corn.

14 If I be bereaved—I am, &c.] The Vulgate renders it, And I shall be without children, as if I had no children surviving; the Arabic, I am afraid that I shall be bereaved of my children, as I have been bereaved. This sentence may be understood in different senses, all of which are expressive of deep distress; it may signify, I resign myself to the will of God, and if it be agreeable to him that I should be robbed of all my children, I must be robbed of them; or it may denote the exclamation of sudden distress, generally expressed by the repetition of the cause of sorrow, and this the Hebrew seems expressly to denote, shacholiti, shacholiti, "I am bereaved! I am bereaved!" Or it may paint the melancholy circumstances they would leave him in, without one of his children left behind to comfort him, and full of apprehensions that all his offspring might fall as victims to the resentment of Joseph, whom they had represented as an austere and rough man.

16 Slay] The Hebrew is, Kill ■ Killing; which expresses a very great slaughter of animals for their feast. From this expression, compared with Joseph's interpretation of the dream of Pharaoh's baker, it is evident that animal food was customary in Egypt long before the time ascribed for its introduction by Sir Isaac Newton.

Shall dine, &c.] In Hebrew, Shall eat.

18 Seek occasion against us, &c.] In Hebrew, To roll himself upon us; this expression is used again, Job xxx. 14. and is borrowed from wrestling, wherein the person who throws his antagonist rolls himself upon him to keep him down; and implies, that Joseph would omit no stratagem to justify his ill-treatment of them.

23 Peace be to you] This was a usual salutation of civility; and being used by Joseph's servant, testified his friendly disposition, and quieted their perturbations.

No. 6.

Treasure] The Hebrew word signifies something hidden or concealed: and may intimate that he was not concerned, or privy to the putting of the money in their sacks; for, adds he, according to the Hebrew, your money came to me."

He brought Simon out unto them.] We have gathered from profane history, that he was dressed very neat.

26 bowed themselves, &c.] This circumstance is a more complete accomplishment of Joseph's dream.

27 Is your father well, &c.] The bursts of filial affection and impetuous curiosity are strongly marked by these interrupted expressions, which are extremely natural, and vastly affecting: but let us read them again: "Is your father well? The old man of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?"

29 Is this your younger brother—God be gracious] There never was a stronger picture of nature, than this whole narrative of the interview between Joseph and his brethren. He sees his brother Benjamin, and lest he should be mistaken by the alteration which age had wrought in his lineaments, he asks whether it really was their younger brother. But nature answered his question, and before his brethren could reply, he addresses him with the warm glowings of fraternal love, "God be gracious unto thee my son." Which was an appellation of the greatest tenderness, and suitable to the characters of a supreme magistrate, who is properly the father of his country.

30 Joseph made haste, &c.] Joseph's affection was now worked up to the highest pitch, and where can we read of a more affecting, a more natural description of the effects of fraternal love?

32 Because the Egyptians, &c.] From this verse we find, that the common provision for the entertainment was animal food, and no one can doubt but Joseph conformed to the Egyptian diet; therefore the reason assigned by the Chaldee paraphrase for the Egyptians refusing to eat with the Hebrews, namely, Their eating sheep, which were worshipped by the Egyptians, is not just. Joseph sat single, out of state, with regard to the Egyptians; the Egyptians sat apart with regard to the shepherds, and both were supplied from the governor's table, which was furnished from the steward's slaughter-house. The enmity, therefore, which subsisted between the Egyptians and Hebrews was not on account of their eating animal food, but on account of their being shepherds; a profession which they abominated on account of the heavy slavery they groaned under from the invasion and conquests of the Hyksos, or royal shepherds, in the reign of Timaus.

34 Sent messes unto them] This was a custom observed amongst most ancient nations.

Benjamin's mess was five times, &c.] This seems to have proceeded from Joseph's extraordinary affection, and was intended as a GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XLIII.

1707. In this chapter we have a lively picture of the good old patriarch's firm and pious confidence in God, for obtaining favour with Joseph, at the same time that his grief sorely pressed him in parting with Benjamin; which should teach us, that in all our troubles, the protection and assistance of the Almighty should be implored. We may also remark, that notwithstanding the corruptions of a court, Joseph still taught his family to fear God, and retained on his mind a sense of true religion; and remark likewise, from the tender and fraternal affection Joseph expressed towards his beloved brother Benjamin, that when religion has its proper influence on the mind, it will evidence itself in the display of every social relative virtue.

C H A P. XLIV.

1 Joseph's policy to stay his brethren. 6 His cup is found in Benjamin's sack. 14 They are brought before Joseph. 18 Judah's humble supplication to him.

AND he commanded the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

2 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

5 Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth? ye have done evil in so doing.

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing:

8 Behold, the money which we found in our sacks' particular kindness; possibly it might be designed to try whether they had conquered their inclination to envy, which had been the cause of his own slavery. But Joseph's placing his brethren according to their respective ages, and his distinguishing kindness to Benjamin, might be intended for the unravelling of the plot preparative to his discovery of himself, and designed to give credit to his assertions, when he declared himself to be their brother.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLIV.

2 Put my cup—in the sack's mouth of the youngest, &c.] Joseph made use of this artifice to try the affection of his brethren towards Benjamin, and whether, when they found him chargeable with theft, and in danger of slavery, they would surrender him without difficulty, and return unconcerned to their father.

5 My lord drinketh, and—divineth, &c.] That this was a common drinking-cup, and not one used in libations or divinations, is expressly asserted in this verse. Besides which, it cannot be supposed that Joseph would apply the same vessel to both uses; nor was it ever customary to do so. It must therefore follow, that the word translated "divineth" is improperly rendered, if it will bear any other sense; and that it will bear another sense appears from chap. xxx. 17. and 1 Kings xx. 33. where it signifies, To try, search, or make experiment.

8 Behold, the money, &c.] This is a most excellent defence, and indeed the argument made use of was a very conclusive one. The Vulgate has thus rendered it, The money which we found in the mouths of our sacks we have brought again unto thee from the land of Canaan; how improbable then is it that we should take out of thy master's house either gold or silver?

10 Ye shall be blameless.] The Hebrew signifies, Innocent or faultless; in scripture language, sin is substituted instead of punishment, and innocence instead of impunity. See Gen. xlix. 9. 1 Kings i. 21. Exod. xx. 7. and xxxvii. 7.

11 They speedily, &c.] In Hebrew, They hastened and took down. What could be a stronger proof of their innocence?

13 Rent their clothes, &c.] This is an instance of that kind of beauty which is so highly admired in the works of the greatest masters, who, by singling out one striking circumstance in a narrative, infuse into the mind a whole series of ideas which are connected with it. When Moses says, "they rent their clothes," he at the same time paints their inward anguish and confusion in more lively colours than the strongest expressions could have done; and pleases the reader more than if he had expressed the whole, by leaving room for the exercise of the imagination.

14 They fell before him on the ground.] What scene could be mouth, we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

9 With whomsoever of thy servants it be found, both let him die, and we also will be my lord's bondmen.

10 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

11 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

12 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest: and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack.

13 Then they rent their clothes, and laded every man his ass, and returned to the city.

14 ¶ And Judah and his brethren came to Joseph's house; for he was yet there: and they fell before him on the ground.

15 And Joseph said unto them, What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly divine?

16 And Judah said, What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants: behold, we are my lord's servants, both we, and he also with whom the cup is found.

17 And he said, God forbid that I should do so: but the man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you, get you up in peace unto your father.

18 ¶ Then Judah came near unto him, and said, Oh my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant: for thou art even as Pharaoh.

19 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father, or a brother?

20 And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and a child of his old age, a little one; and his imagined more affecting than the sight of a whole family with their clothes rent, tears streaming from their eyes, and their bodies lying prostrate on the ground.

15 Wot ye not? The word "wot" is derived from the Saxon weitan, "to know;" the sentence therefore should be rendered, according to our present mode of writing, Know ye not?

Can certainly divine?] The art of divination and interpretation of dreams was monopolized by the Egyptian priests; and these priests were the constant companions of the king, and held the chief posts in the administration. Joseph's question alludes to this custom, and implies thus much, You see by my office, that I am one of the great officers of the state, but these are preferred only from the college of priests; divination is professed only by the priesthood; and therefore, when you consider the dignity of my office, could you help acknowledging that it was in my power to divine or detect your robbery?

16 And Judah said] Judah had persuaded his father, though very reluctantly, to send Benjamin with him; besides which, he was of a bold, enterprising, warm, and sanguine disposition; and being hurried by his natural impetuosity, undertook to plead the common cause of his father, his brother Benjamin, and the rest of his brethren.

What shall we speak?] The crimes they stood charged with were a violation of the sacred rites of hospitality, and the most heinous ingratitude; crimes that are subversive of society, and contrary to the social nature of man. When Judah reflected on the miseries to which Benjamin was exposed; when he thought on the consequences his detention would have on a fond parent, whose life was wrapped up in the life of his son, his grief might reasonably swell too big for words, and his consternation express itself in broken sentences like these, "What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves?"

God hath found out, &c.] This may be interpreted a tacit or oblique acknowledgment of Joseph's charge, in order to appeal to his mercy and conciliate his favour. This sense seems to be supported by the Chaldee, which renders it, Sin hath been found in thy servants from the face of God. But the Arabic is more explicit, translating, God has made thy servants to fall into their crime. Some commentators imagine that the words "found out" signify to punish; and that the sentence implies an acknowledgment of the justice of God, in taking this method of punishing them for their former sins.

18 Thou art even as Pharaoh.] That is, equally absolute in thy determinations, equally to be dreaded by us, and, like him, invested with the power of pardoning crimes, and inflicting punishment.

ore his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, 1ST and his father loveth him.

21 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him.

22 And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

23 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.

24 And it came to pass when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

25 And our father said, Go again, and buy us a little food.

26 And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down: for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

27 And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that my wife bare me two sons:

28 And the one went out from me, and I said, Surely he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since:

29 And if ye take this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

30 Now therefore when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; seeing that his life is bound up in the lad's life;

31 It shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

32 For thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father, saying, If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father for ever.

33 Now therefore, I pray thee, let thy servant abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.

34 For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that shall come on my father.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XLIV.

In this chapter we have a very strong expression of paternal affection, which denotes that the father's life so entirely depended upon that of his son, that he could not survive the thought of his being dead.

30 His life is bound up, &c.] This is a very strong expression of fraternal affection. The very same phrase is used in speaking of Jonathan's love to David, which surpassed the love of woman, 1 Sam. xviii. 1.

34 Lest peradventure I see, &c.] In Hebrew, That shall meet, &c. When misfortunes are foreseen, they may either be evaded or rendered more tolerable; but when they meet us, their weight is increased, and it is impossible to shun them. This whole speech of Judah highly deserves the reader's attention. He acts the part both of a faithful brother, and dutiful son, who rather than behold the misery of his father, in case Benjamin was left behind, submits to become a bondman in his stead. Such an act of candour and generosity runs through the whole, the sentiments are so tender and affecting, the expressions so pathetic, and flow so much from artless nature, that it is no wonder they came home to Joseph's heart, and rendered it impossible for him to conceal himself any longer.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLV.

1 Could not refrain himself] The efforts of nature could be no longer suppressed; his tender passions, by the moving speech of Judah, are wound up to such a pitch as to oblige him to throw off all disguise, notwithstanding the presence of so many spectators.

No man with him, &c.] The Vulgate explain it, by rendering it, No stranger.

He wept aloud] Words are but ill adapted to express the sentiments of the heart on such an important occasion, joy, pity, fraternal love, intermixed with a high veneration of Providence, in bringing about so surprizing an event, swell his soul with motions too big for utterance, and which can only be vented by the more expressive language of nature, that of tears and sighs.

And the Egyptians, &c.] The Hebrew is very nervous, The Egyptians heard, and Pharaoh's house heard. This strongly marks the impetuosity of his passion, and agrees with fact; the passions generally growing the more impetuous the more they are restrained.

CHAP. XLV.

Before CHRIST 1707.

1 Joseph maketh himself known to his brethren; comforteth them in ascribing all that had past to God's providence; sendeth for his father by them; 14 and cordially embraceth them. 16 Pharaoh confirmeth Joseph's invitation: 21 Joseph furnisheth his brethren for their journey, and exhorteth them to concord. 25 Jacob at first hardly believeth, but is at length revived with the news.

THEN Joseph could not refrain himself before all them that stood by him; and he cried, Cause every man to go out from me. And there stood no man with him, while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.

2 And he wept aloud: and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I am Joseph; doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; for they were troubled at his presence.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you. And they came near. And he said, I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt.

5 Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life.

6 For these two years hath the famine been in the land: and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be earing nor harvest. 1706.

7 And God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

8 So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me a father to Pharaoh; and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

9 Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, tarry not:

10 And thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast:

11 And there will I nourish thee; for yet there are five years of famine; lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

12 And,

3 I am Joseph, doth my father yet live?] How quick the transition! his soul is so full of filial affection for his father, that before he has finished his sentence, he enquires after him, though they had before told him he was alive. And how must such an abrupt declaration affect his brethren! No wonder they were dumb for some time with astonishment, and unable to answer the question proposed to them.

His brethren could not answer him] This silence was certainly very expressive; it shews the inspired writer to be a consummate master of nature, and conveys to the mind a truer idea of conscious guilt and anxious terror, than could have been expressed by any words.

Troubled, &c.] In Hebrew, They were terrified.

5 Now therefore be not grieved, &c.] Abundantly convinced by their whole behaviour that they repented of what they had done; with sentiments equally generous and pious, he bids them think no more of their former ill usage of him, but adore the divine Providence that had turned their action into so signal a blessing to them and the whole family.

6 Earing nor harvest] The word "earring," in our translation, is derived from the Saxon, To plow or till the ground. The Egyptians have not the laborious task of plowing, digging, or harrowing; but when the river Nile is retired after its inundations, they only mingle a little sand with the mud to abate its strength, after which they sow without pains or expence. Antiently they used to put their hogs to tread the seed into the ground, and when the harvest came, let the hogs in again to tread the corn out of the ear.

8 It was not you that sent me hither, but God] The good event of their selling him was indeed to be imputed to God, though the fault was theirs. This spontaneous apology for the perfidy of his brethren is a noble instance of magnanimity and a forgiving temper.

Hath made me a father to Pharaoh, &c.] The Arabic renders it, As a master unto Pharaoh; which implies that he consulted him in all his measures, and was honoured by him for his prudence, a father is by his son.

Before
CHRIST
1706.

12 And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste and bring down my father hither.

14 ¶ And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

15 Moreover he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.

16 ¶ And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and it pleased Pharaoh well, and his servants.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan;

18 And take your father and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land.

19 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you wagons out of the land of Egypt for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come.

20 Also regard not your stuff; for the good of all the land of Egypt is your's.

21 ¶ And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them wagons, according to the commandment of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

22 To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment; but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and five changes of raiment.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way.

25 ¶ And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan to Jacob their father, 26 And told him, saying, Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. And Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed them not.

27 And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him, the spirit of Jacob their father revived:

28 And Israel said, It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XLV.

We may gather an important instruction from what Joseph remarks in this chapter; as from hence we may learn, that however happy the first appearances of sufferings may be, and however wicked the intentions of those who are the instruments of them, they are under the disposal of a wise and good providence, which knows how to bring good out of evil.

C H A P. XLVI.

1 Jacob is comforted by God at Beer-sheba. 5 He goeth thence with his family into Egypt. 8 The number of those that went with him. 28 Joseph meeteth Jacob.

31 He instructeth his brethren how to answer Pharaoh.
AND Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Isaac.

2 And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I.

3 And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation:

4 I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.

5 ¶ And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him:

7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt.

8 ¶ And these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: Reuben, Jacob's firstborn:

9 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

11 And

12 Your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, &c.] That is, you must surely be convinced, when you view me attentively, and hear me speak in your own language, that it is certainly your brother who now talks with you.

15 After that his brethren talked with him.] When they were recovered from their astonishment, and he had tenderly embraced them, they began to talk familiarly with them, 20 Regard not your stuff, &c.] Be not too solicitous about implements of husbandry, or other moveables; for the land of Egypt will abundantly supply you with whatever you want.

24 See that ye fall not out by the way.] Joseph was no stranger to the tempers of his brethren, and therefore thought proper to admonish them in this gentle manner, which at the same time implied a reproof. Probably he suspected that they might accuse each other with the cruelty they had exercised towards him, or cast invidious reflections on Benjamin, because he had been eminently distinguished by him.

26 Jacob's heart, &c.] The tide of joy which suddenly rushed upon him at hearing that his favourite son, whom he had so long considered as dead, was still in being, was too impetuous to be resisted.

27 Revived.] The bare mention of the name of Joseph, whom he had long accounted to be dead, revived his sorrows for his loss, and overpowered his spirits. But when he saw the carriages sent by his beloved son, his diffidence vanished, and joy revived his heart, just as fresh oil poured upon a dying lamp, makes it rekindle and burn with a new and more vigorous blaze.

28 It is enough; Joseph my son, &c.] The Vulgate translates it, It is sufficient for me: my son is yet alive: the Septuagint, It is a great thing to me, &c. and the Chaldee, The chief thing with me is this, that my son is yet alive. His sons had informed him that Joseph was alive, and that he was governor of Egypt; the latter was what Joseph had particularly ordered them to acquaint him with; but the good patriarch was so little affected with the advancement of his son, that he replies, "It is enough! Joseph my son is yet alive."

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLVI.

1 Came to Beer-sheba.] This lay in his road from Hebron; Abraham had formerly planted a grove here, and offered up his adorations to the everlasting God, chap. xxi. 31.

The God of—Isaac.] The appellation was ascribed to God, because Isaac was dead. See chap. xxxv. 29.

2 Here am I.] This translation agrees with the Vulgate, Samaritan, and Syriac. The Septuagint render it, What is it? and the Arabic, What is thy pleasure? The expression is often used in scripture, in reply to an immediate call from God, and implies a curiosity to know, and a readiness to obey the will of God.

3 I am God, the God.] The Vulgate renders it, I am the almighty God of thy father; and is supported by the Chaldee and Samaritan. It is an elliptical expression, and the sense is, God has commanded me to say unto thee, &c.

Fear not to go down.] Jacob might have been disinclined to go into Egypt, had he not been honoured with this vision, on several accounts. Abraham had been injured there; it had been predicted that his seed should be afflicted by the Egyptians; Isaac had been warned not to go thither, and the occupation of his family was odious to the Egyptians. See chap. xii. 15. xv. 13. xxvi. 2. ver. 34. of this chapter, and xliii. 32.

For I will there make of thee a great nation.] This prophecy was miraculously fulfilled; there were no more than seventy that went into Egypt, and behold, in the space of two hundred and fifteen years, they increased to about six hundred thousand.

4 Shall put his hand upon thine eyes.] This last and solemn office that could be paid a dying parent was generally performed by the nearest relations of the deceased. And the prophecy must have afforded great consolation to Jacob; for what could have given him greater comfort, than to be assured, that the son whom he loved most, should be present with him, and perform this last office of kindness to a beloved parent?

7 Brought he with him into Egypt.] The promise God had made to Abraham, to give his posterity the land of Canaan, could not be performed

12 And the sons of Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron and Hamul.

13 And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah and Job, and Shimron.

14 And the sons of Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These be the sons of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

16 And the sons of Gad; Ziphion, and Haggi, Shuni, and Ezbon, Eri, and Arodi, and Areli.

17 And the sons of Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister: and the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

18 These are the sons of Zilpah, whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter, and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 The sons of Rachel Jacob's wife; Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 And unto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath the daughter of Potipherah priest of On bare unto him.

21 And the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, Ehi, and Rosh, Muppim, and Huppim, and Ard.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

23 And the sons of Dan; Hushim.

24 And the sons of Naphtali; Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillel.

25 These are the sons of Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six;

27 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten.

28 ¶ And he sent Judah before him unto Joseph, to direct his face unto Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

31 ¶ And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me;

32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

33 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation?

34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XLVI.

Let us here call to mind the blessed situation of the good patriarch. O happy Jacob! that had God to go with thee whithersoever thou wentest. O happy every one of us! since we may have the same divine almighty protector to guard us from all evil, if we will put ourselves under his protection, and trust under the shadow of his wings.

CHAP. XLVII.

Joseph presenteth five of his brethren and his father before Pharaoh. 11 He giveth them habitation and maintenance. 13 He getteth all the money, cattle, and lands of the Egyptians, the land of the priests only excepted, for Pharaoh. 23 He letteth them the land again for the fifth of the increase. 27 Israel multiplieth in Goshen. 28 Jacob's age: he sweareth Joseph to bury him with his fathers.

THEN Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in the land of Goshen.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh.

performed till that family was grown strong enough to take and keep possession of it. In the mean time, therefore, they were necessitated to reside amongst idolaters, and to reside unmixed; but whoever examines their history will see, that the Israelites ever had a violent propensity to join themselves to Gentile nations, and to practise their manners. God therefore, in his infinite wisdom, brought them into Egypt, and kept them there during this period, the only place where they could remain, for so long a time, safe and unconfounded with the nations; the ancient Egyptians being, by numerous institutions, forbidden all fellowship with strangers; and bearing besides a particular aversion to the profession of the Israelites who were shepherds. From the Israelites going into Egypt, arises a new occasion to adore the footsteps of eternal wisdom in his dispensations to his chosen people.

15 Thirty and three.] Most commentators agree in including Jacob himself in this number, because otherwise there would be only thirty-two. The whole number of Jacob's posterity by Leah, including Er and Onan, amounted only to thirty-five; but as these two are excluded from the pedigree by the historian himself, there consequently remain only thirty-two; how then can we authenticate the sacred text, which asserts, that there were thirty and three? By including Jacob himself in the number, as he certainly is in ver. 27.

21 Sons of Benjamin, &c.] If, with some commentators, we suppose that Benjamin was at this time seven-and-twenty years of age, and that he might possibly have two wives, according to the mode of the times, he might certainly have had all the sons mentioned before the descent into Egypt.

28 To direct his face unto Goshen, &c.] In the Hebrew, To prepare before him Goshen; the Vulgate renders it, To acquaint him of his coming, that he might meet him in Goshen; which is supported by ver. 29. The Chaldee translates, To prepare for him in Goshen.

29 Presented himself unto him, &c.] In Hebrew, Was seen by him; the Vulgate and Oriental translations render, When he saw him.

30 Now let me die, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, May I, or I No. 6.

will die now; the Vulgate renders it, I shall now die gladly, since, &c. and the Chaldee, Though I should die now, I shall be comforted, &c. an expression that implies the greatest resignation, joy, and affection, and is similar to that of Simeon, Luke ii. 29.

32 The men are shepherds, &c.] In Hebrew, They have been men of cattle. See chap. xliii. 32.

34 That ye may dwell in the land of Goshen, &c.] Though the Septuagint call it in this verse Goshen, yet in verse 29. they call it Heroopolis. It lay on the north-westerly part of the Arabian gulph, towards the confines of Canaan. It was Abaris which Pharaoh gave them, and that it was then void of cattle. The chief motives which induced Joseph to acquire this settlement for his family, were, to prevent their dispersion, and to provide for their attendance upon his aged father, and likewise to prevent any misunderstanding or enmity between them and the Egyptians, as they could not look upon them as rivals, on account of their following a profession which they esteemed as illicit. Some commentators say, that he was induced to this measure because this country was not only very fertile and proper for that employment, but likewise because, with respect to situation, it lay the most convenient to favour their return into Canaan. Besides which, it was at a proper distance from the snares of the court, and kept them freer from the contagion of idolatry than a nearer situation to Memphis, the capital, would certainly have done.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XLVII.

¶ Behold, they are in the land of Goshen.] They stopt there till they knew the king's pleasure; for it was in the entrance of Egypt. See chap. xli. 34.

¶ Some of his brethren, &c.] The Hebrew word ketzeb, translated "some," signifies, Extremity, or the meanest, as appears from 1 Kings xii. 31. It sometimes signifies, The best, as in Judges xviii. 2. yet it must be confessed, that it signifies likewise, A part, and may be used in that sense, according to our translation, which is supported by the Septuagint, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic.

Before
1706.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers.

4 They said moreover unto Pharaoh, For to sojourn in the land are we come; for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 The land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

7 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

10 And Jacob blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

11 ¶ And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded.

12 And Joseph nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread, according to their families.

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt and all the land of Canaan fainted by reason of the famine.

14 And Joseph gathered up all the money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

15 And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

16 And Joseph said, Give your cattle, and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses: and he fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle; there is not ought left in the sight of our lord, but our bodies and our lands:

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh: and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.

22 Only the land of the priests bought he not; for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them: wherefore they sold not their lands.

23 ¶ Then

4. To sojourn, &c.] As their intention was not to settle, but only to sojourn, their request seemed the more modest; and their desire to be situated in the land of Goshen, which lay on the confines of Canaan, shewed them sincere in their intention to return to their own country. The propriety of desiring this place will appear more plainly, if we recollect that the land of Canaan was higher than that of Goshen, which, lying in a low, marshy ground, might afford some sustenance for their cattle, when all the forage of Canaan was entirely consumed. Pharaoh seems to confirm this motive, in ver. 6. wherein he first orders Joseph to settle his family "in the best of the land," and immediately adds, "in the land of Goshen let them dwell."

6. In the land of Goshen, &c.] The Septuagint omit this sentence; the Arabic renders it, Said; which if it be the ancient Thebais, or country now styled Al Saida, is more southerly than that wherein Hieropolis was situated.

7. Jacob blessed Pharaoh.] The word "bless," when applied to God signifies to thank or praise, to reward, or bestow some singular favour; but when applied to men, it signifies to wish health, prosperity, or happiness. The Septuagint version confirms this exposition, by asserting, that he saluted the king, and prayed for the prosperity of his kingdom.

9. The days of the years of my pilgrimage.] From this speech it is concluded, that Moses taught a future state; and especially since the author of the epistle to the Hebrews hath brought it, chap. xi. 13. as a proof that Jacob and the patriarchs looked for a better country: that Jacob did so, is unquestionable; but it can never be allowed, that the words in their literal and obvious meaning express any such thing. Pharaoh is here questioning the patriarch not of human life in general, but of his own; therefore, to make the reply pertinent, Jacob must be understood to mean, by his "pilgrimage," the unsettled way of life, living in tents, and removing from place to place, as the convenience of pasturage gave him invitation, and by the "evil of his days," the straits he suffered from the fraud of Laban, and the hatred of his brother Esau. As for the complaint of the "fewness of his days," he himself explains it to be, not on account of the shortness of human life in general, but because he "had not attained unto the days of the years of the life of his fathers." The sense, therefore, which the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews puts upon these words, must needs be the spiritual sense.

Have not attained, &c.] Abraham was one hundred and seventy years old, and Isaac one hundred and eighty.

11. Rameses, &c.] They who imagine that this is the place mentioned Exod. i. 11. and xii. 37. suppose that it is so named here by anticipation. Yet it must be recollected that the land of Egypt was divided among the king, priests, and soldiery; and Rameses, was at this time the reigning king of Egypt; the land of Rameses will then signify only that part of the land which was the king's own property; that it was the best, we need not doubt, and that he had a right to bestow it on the Israelites, on one can object to. The land invested in the priests, or soldiery, was certainly at that time not in the king's disposal, though that which was his own property was, and that might with the greatest propriety be styled, from his own name, the land of Rameses, as in the text.

14. Found in the land, &c.] The word rendered "found," signifies, Received, chap. xxvi. 12. and implies that Joseph collected all the money that was received, and brought it in into the king's house, or treasury. Joseph was guilty of no injustice in making the Egyptians pay for the corn he sold them, because part of it belonged to Pharaoh, as his fifth, the revenues of Egypt being collected from the produce of the land; and the other part was plainly purchased with Pharaoh's money.

16. Give your cattle, &c.] This demand was made with a view of saving their cattle; which they could not provide food for, as they would scarcely purchase corn enough for themselves. Besides, as they were by this means rid of the expence which their cattle would subject them to, they were the more able to supply their own necessities.

19. We and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh, &c.] According to profane history the lands were divided between the king, the priests and the soldiery, as before observed; and Moses, speaking of this famine, expressly says, that they were divided between the king, the priests, and the people. Now, as contrary as these two accounts look, it will be found, upon comparing them, that human testimony fully supports all that Moses hath delivered concerning this matter. Moses tells us, that before the famine, all the lands of Egypt were in the hands of the king, the priests, and the people; but that this national calamity made a great revolution in property, and brought the whole possessions of the people into the king's hands; which must needs make a prodigious accession of power to the crown. But Joseph, in whom the minister and patriot supported each other, and jointly concurred to the public service, prevented for some time the ill effects of this accession, by his farming out the new domain to the old proprietors, on very easy conditions.

21. The people, he removed them to cities from, &c.] The purport of Joseph in transplanting the people, reciprocally, from one end of Egypt to the other, was, to secure Pharaoh in his new property, by defeating the ill effects of that fondness which people naturally have to old paternal inheritances. Others assign a different motive, which they support as follows: in chap. xli. 48. Joseph is said "to gather up the food of every field, which was round every city, and to have laid it up in that city." So that he removed them into the cities where the corn was laid up, for the better convenience of feeding them; an act of the greatest prudence, compassion, and generosity.

22. Only the lands of the priests bought he not, &c.] The priests were a distinct order in the state, and had a fixed landed revenue; and 23 ¶ Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day and your land for Pharaoh: lo, here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

24 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that ye shall give the fifth part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

25 And they said, Thou hast saved our lives: let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.

26 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part: except the land of the priests only, which became not Pharaoh's.

27 ¶ And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions therein, and grew, and multiplied exceedingly.

28 ¶ And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years: so the whole age of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.

29 And the time drew nigh that Israel must die: and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now, I have found grace in thy sight, put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and deal kindly and truly with me; bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt.

30 But I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying place. And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

31 And he said, Swear unto me. And he swore unto him. And Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XLVII.

In this chapter Joseph acts with a noble generosity; instead of taking advantage of the necessities of the Egyptians, instead of even insisting on the bargain they had made themselves, he returns them their estates, only laying a tax on them, for the better support of the government, at the rate of a fifth part, which he found by trial, from what was taken up in the seven years of plenty, Egypt could well spare.

CHAP. XLVIII.

1 Joseph with his sons visiteth his sick father, who strengtheneth himself to bless them. 3 He repeateth God's promise; taketh Ephraim and Manasseh as his own; and telleth Joseph of his mother's grave. 8 He bleffeth Joseph's two sons with their father, and preferreth the younger before the elder. 21 He prophesieth their return to Canaan, in which he giveth Joseph a double portion.

AND it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

and that when the famine raged so severely that the people were compelled to sell their lands to the crown for bread, the priests still kept theirs unalienated, and were supplied gratis. Thus we see not only the reverence in which the order was held, but the public uses of religion, to which two-thirds of their revenues were applied, kept Pharaoh from attempting on their property.

23 I have bought you, &c.] Nothing can be more unjust and absurd, than the accusation of Joseph's making the free monarchy of Egypt despotic: for allowing it did at this time suffer such a revolution, who is to be esteemed the author of it, but Pharaoh himself? Joseph indeed was prime minister, but it does not appear that his master was of that tribe of crazy monarchs who entrusted their sceptre to the hands of their servants. Moses describes him as active, vigilant, jealous of his authority, anxious for his country, and little indulgent to his officers of state. But the terms in which he invests Joseph in his office, shews that office to be purely ministerial, "Thou shalt be, &c." Gen. xli. 40. i. e. thou shalt administer justice, but I will reserve to myself the prerogative of giving law.

29 Under my thigh, &c.] See chap. xxiv. 2.

31 Bowed himself upon the bed's head.] The Chaldee translates it, He worshipped upon the bed's head; the Vulgate, He worshipped God, having turned towards his bed's head; this passage signifies, that he prostrated himself on his bed, supporting himself upon his pillow to return thanks to God for the burial Joseph had promised him, in the same manner David is said to have done, 1 Kings i. 47. The Septuagint have rendered the sentence, And Israel worshipped upon the top of his staff; the Chaldee is much the same; and the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews, chap. xi. 21. is quoted as confirming the sense of the Septuagint. But to this it is objected, that the writer alludes to a different action, namely, Jacob's blessing Joseph's children, which did

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed. Before CHRIST 1689.

3 ¶ And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession.

5 And now thy two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

6 And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Beth-lehem.

8 ¶ And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

9 And Joseph said unto his father, They are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them.

10 Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see. And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, I had not thought to see thy face: and, lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.

13 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand towards Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the first born.

15 And he blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day.

16 The Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let not happen till some time after. In this passage the patriarch seems to have been confined to his bed; but in the other, referred to by the writer to the Hebrews, to have received fresh spirits, and to have sat on it, leaning, perhaps, on his staff.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON Chap. XLVIII.

1 One told Joseph, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, And it was after these things; and he said unto Joseph, Behold thy father, &c. The Oriental translations agree in rendering, It was told, or news was brought; which implies, that a messenger was dispatched with this news to Joseph.

2 Strengthened himself, &c.] In Hebrew, He comforted himself. The Chaldee and other translations render, Israel was comforted.

5 And now thy two sons, &c.] That is, shall become the heads of distinct tribes, and have each an inheritance in the land of Canaan, equal with the rest of his sons. Thus Jacob bestows a double portion upon Joseph, which was the privilege of the first-born, by making his sons equal with his own children.

6 And thy issue which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, &c.] That is, they shall not make distinct tribes, but be considered as the descendants of my other sons.

7 Rachel died by me, &c.] Jacob seems to mention this circumstance as a reason why he adopted Ephraim and Manasseh, being willing to honour her memory, who died in child-birth, by adding her two grandchildren to the number of his own sons.

14 Who was the younger] The preference of the younger before the elder occurs so frequently in scripture, that it is very remarkable; thus Abel was preferred before Cain, Shem before Japheth, Isaac before Ishmael, Jacob before Esau, Judah and Joseph before Reuben,

Before CHRIST 1689. let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

17 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him: and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

18 And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father: for this is the firstborn; put thy right hand upon his head.

19 And his father refused, and said, I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.

20 And he blessed them that day, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

21 ¶ And Israel said unto Joseph, Behold, I die: but God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

22 Moreover I have given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XLVIII.

The promise of the land of Canaan to the seed of Abraham is several times repeated in this book of Genesis, as well as in this chapter: it is always spoken of with the utmost assurance, through the long course and various revolutions of above four hundred years; and it was not even till the death of Moses, who wrote these things, that the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the promise was made, got possession of the land under the command of Joshua; and then they remained in possession of it for several ages: so that here is a plain demonstration that God certainly made his purpose known to the patriarchs long before it was executed; and that Moses, in writing, only recorded what had been divinely revealed to them; for it was not possible for any man of ben, Ephraim before Benjamin, Moses before Aaron, and David before his brethren. May it not likewise be worthy of our notice, that Jacob, who deprived his brother of his father's blessing by stratagem, should be influenced by the divine Being to give the younger son of Joseph the superior blessing by choice?

Guiding his hands wittingly, &c.] The word "wittingly" signifies knowingly, and is derived from the Saxon, To know. The Hebrew signifies, He made his hands to know, though Manasseh was the firstborn. The Vulgate, Septuagint, and Chaldee render it, Changing or crossing his hands; and the Arabic, Perverting his hands. If we translate the Hebrew particle chi, "though" or "because," which it generally signifies, instead of for, the sense will be more easy than it is at present.

16 The angel which redeemed me from all evil] The word in the Hebrew, which we render "angel," signifies a messenger. Most commentators understand by this the Messiah, who is called "the messenger of the covenant," Mal. iii. 1.

Grow into a multitude, &c.] In Hebrew, Let my name increase like those creatures which are the most prolific.

20 In thee shall Israel bless, &c.] That is, these two tribes shall be so eminent and prosperous, that it shall become a proverbial form among my posterity, in wishing happiness to others, God make you as happy as Ephraim and Manasseh. And this form is preserved to this day.

21 Bring you again unto the land of your fathers.] The land of Canaan, God having given it to the seed of Abraham.

22 One portion above thy brethren, &c.] This appears from Josh. xvii. 1. and xx. 7. to have been Sychem, and it is mentioned by the name of Sychar, as the parcel of ground which Jacob gave to his son Joseph; but it is much disputed how he got it, and of whom he had conquered or obtained it. It could not be had from Hamor, because his father was a Shechemite, and we find no war-like exploit recorded of the patriarch throughout his history. The best solution of this difficulty is as follows: when his sons had possessed this country by the massacre of the inhabitants, Jacob was forced to maintain himself in the possession by force of arms, till he removed to Beth-el, and afterwards to recover it from the Amorites, who, living intermixed with the Hivites, had taken possession of it during his absence. And this assigns a reason why he should say, that he got or recovered it from the Amorites, and not from the Hivites.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON Chap. XLIX.

1 In the last days, &c.] That is, hereafter, or in future time. Jacob speaks to his sons as the heads of a people, and not as single persons; so that what he says relates to them and their posterity collectively, and not to them personally.

3 Reuben, thou art my firstborn—the excellency of dignity—and power.] All the epithets used here refer to the prerogatives of the firstborn, which consisted in the honour of the priesthood, which was himself to speak with so much confidence of things long before they happened, which depended upon so many causes and circumstances to bring them to pass, and which indeed, we may find by the account of the children of Israel's getting possession of the land, the greatest difficulties lay in the way of, and every thing seemed against. From hence we may learn, that whatever obstacles are in the way of any of God's promises, how little prospect soever these may seem of their being accomplished, yet we may expect them with full assurance.

CHAP. XLIX.

1 Jacob calleth his sons to bless them. 3 The blessing of Reuben; 5 Simeon and Levi; 8 Judah; 13 Zebulun; 14 Issachar; 16 Dan; 19 Gad; 20 Asher; 21 Naphtali; 22 Joseph; 27 and Benjamin. 29 He chargeth them about his burial, and diet.

AND Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days.

2 Gather yourselves together, and hear, ye sons of Jacob; and hearken unto Israel your father.

3 ¶ Reuben, thou art my firstborn, my might, and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power:

4 Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel; because thou wentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it: he went up to my couch.

5 ¶ Simeon and Levi are brethren; instruments of cruelty are in their habitations.

6 O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honour, be not thou united: for in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will they digged down a wall.

7 Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

¶ 8 Judah

conferred on Levi; the rule of government, on Judah; and a double portion of the inheritance, on Joseph; these Reuben forfeited by his crime in defiling his father's bed.

4 Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel] In Hebrew, Do not thou excel; which words some connect with the former thus, The excellency of dignity is poured out like water, i. e. is like water spilt upon the ground. But according to our translation the sense is, As water is prone to flow, and still tend downward to an inferior situation, so shalt thou fall from thy pre-eminence, and sink into a level with the rest of thy brethren. It is observed, nothing great is recorded of this tribe.

He went up to my couch] Jacob, warmed with indignation against the crime, turns from Reuben, and addresses this apostrophe to his sons. This is one of the many beauties in writing, with which this chapter abounds.

5 Simeon and Levi are brethren, &c.] They were similar in their dispositions, being both alike turned to cruelty; they were brethren in iniquity, associates in contriving the destruction of the Shechemites: "their swords are instruments of cruelty."

6 Secret] The Hebrew word is sometimes rendered counsel, as in Psal. xlv. 2. whence we may collect, that Jacob was far from consenting to their crime, either explicitly or implicitly; and his apostrophizing his soul in this manner shews that he regarded their massacre with the highest indignation and abhorrence. The Chaldee renders it, My soul was not in their secrets; and the Arabic, My soul did not enter into their conspiracy.

For in their anger they slew a man, and in their self-will, &c.] This passage has been variously rendered by commentators; but the true sense of it seems to be, In their anger they slew a nation (the Shechemites): and in their self-will, or headstrong passion, they slew a prince (Hamor or Shechem); for the word translated, Man, is read in the plural by the antient versions; and the word, which in our translation is rendered a wall, may also be interpreted, a prince.

7 Cursed be their anger] Some versions connect these words with the foregoing sentences, and the third Cambridge MS. countenances this opinion, therefore the sense is, In their anger they slew the men; and in their fury they destroyed the princes: cursed be their anger for it was fierce, and their fury for it was inflexible.

I will divide them in Jacob, &c.] Was not this eminently fulfilled in the tribe of Levi, who had no portion or inheritance of their own, but were dispersed among the other tribes? Neither had the tribe of Simeon any inheritance properly of their own, but only a portion in the midst of the tribe of Judah, from whence several of them afterwards went in quest of new habitations, and so were divided from the rest, Josh. xix. 1—9. 1 Chron. iv. 39. A constant tradition too has prevailed among the Jews, which is also confirmed by the Jerusalem Targum, that the tribe of Simeon were so straitened in their situation and circumstances, that great numbers of them were necessitated to seek subsistence among the other tribes, by teaching and instructing their children.

13 ¶ Zebulun,

¶ Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise] The allusion made to Judah's name in this passage will be more evident from the Hebrew, wherein it is said, jehudah jodukah, "shall praise." See chap. xxix. 35. The Chaldee inserts a sentence which is not in the Hebrew, or the other translations; and reads, Judah, I will praise thee, and thou art not confounded; thy brethren shall praise thee. Some say the word joduka may be rendered, "shall confess thee;" and imagine that the prophecy was fulfilled in the nation being named Jews, and the whole country Judea, from Judah, Esther iii. 6. Matt. xxvii. 37.

Thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies] The Septuagint translate, In the back of thy enemies; the Chaldee, Thy hand shall prevail against thine enemies, thy enemies shall be dispersed, they shall be turned backwards in thy fight.

Thy father's children shall bow down, &c.] This part of the prophecy was remarkably fulfilled in God's choosing David out of this tribe, and settling the succession in his descendants, Psalms lxxviii. 68—71. but more remarkably in the Messiah's being born of this tribe, to whom every knee shall bow.

9 Judah is a lion's whelp] The continual gradation in the expression of Judah's bravery is beautifully magnificent. He is first compared to a lion's whelp, which fills the mind of the reader with an idea full of terror; but the patriarch, thinking he had not done justice to his valour, adds, He is like a grown lion, as the Hebrew signifies. Thus having added the idea of strength to that of fierceness, one would imagine nothing could be added to the character; but the patriarch is still dissatisfied, and finishes the portrait, by subjoining, He is like a lioness, as the Hebrew word labi signifies; which is by naturalists esteemed fiercer than a lion. What an idea of terror must this convey to the mind! But this prediction is not less sublime than true; for this tribe was distinguished by its valour, and led the van in the army of the twelve tribes, and was the first that possessed the land of Canaan.

From the prey, my son] This alludes to the custom of the lions, who return to the mountains, after they are satiated with the prey they have gotten in the plains.

An old lion, &c.] The Hebrew word labi signifies "lioness," and it is so rendered by the Vulgate, Chaldee, Samaritan, and Arabic.

10 The scepter shall not depart] This famous prophecy intimates, that the theocracy should continue over the Jews until Christ came to take possession of his Father's kingdom; for there was never any lawgiver in Judah but God, by the ministry of Moses, until the coming of his Son. But this interpretation of the prophecy is different from the common, which understands it to foretel that the Jewish nation should not be bereft of sovereign power, by falling under a foreign yoke, till the advent of the Messiah. The common notion of the scepter of Judah is explained in these three different ways: first, some suppose it to signify the sovereignty of the Jewish nation at large; secondly, others suppose it to signify the sovereignty of the tribe of Judah; and a third sort contend, that it signifies not a sovereign or regal, but a tribal scepter only. In the sense of a sovereignty in the Jewish people at large, which is the most general opinion of the three, the prophecy was not only never fulfilled, but has been overthrown; because long before the coming of Shiloh, or of Christ, the sceptre or sovereignty of the Jewish people was departed. During the Babylonish captivity, and while they continued in a tributary dependance on the Greeks, they could in no reasonable sense be said to have retained their scepter, their sovereignty, and independent rule. Though it should be allowed that by departure, a final, not a temporary departure was meant, yet we must confess, that the Romans, who under Pompey reduced Judea to a dependent province, effectually overthrew the prophecy. Pompey took Jerusalem, and left to Hyrcanus, the last of the Asmonean family, only the office of high-priest. From this time to the birth of Christ, it was ever in dependance to the Romans, who disposed of all things at their pleasure. The senate gave the government to Antipater, and then to Herod his son, under the title of king; and Archelaus did not dare to take possession till he had obtained leave of Augustus, who afterwards banished him. Now the precarious rule of a dependent monarch could no more be called a scepter, which, in the figurative mode of all languages, signifies sovereignty, than the condition of the Jews could be said to be sovereign, when this Archelaus was deposed, and Coponius, a Roman knight, made procurator of Judea at this time, which the supporters of this interpretation fix for the departure of the scepter. The second opinion is, that by scepter is signified a civil sovereignty in the tribe of Judah. This has less stability than the other; it supposes that the scepter, or supreme rule of the Jewish people, remained in persons of that tribe from the time of David. But Petavius hath shewn, that from the giving of the prophecy to the time of David (a space of about six hundred years) all the rulers of the Jewish people were of other tribes; the Asmonean princes, particularly, being all of the tribe of Levi. These two senses being found to be intenable, men cast about for a third; and a happy one it was thought to be, which contrived, that scepter should signify domestic, not civil rule; a tribal, not a sovereign scepter, of which they say Judah, at the giving of the prophecy, was already possessed. The subject is a scepter, which could in no sense, not even in the sense of a tribal scepter, be in possession of Judah before he became a tribe. The tribal scepter sprung up from the ashes of Jacob, and flourished in the wilderness, as may fairly be presumed from the occasion the Israelites had of a tribal scepter, namely, to fit them for the warfare they were about to undertake, may be clearly proved from the first chapter of the book of Numbers. The scepter, whatever was its nature, was something in reversion. Jacob's own words, ver. 1. of this chapter, declare the subject of his prophecy to be of things future. Having told his sons, that he would inform them of what would befall them in the last days, when he comes to Judah, he says, "Thy father's children shall bow down before thee." This, if it was any thing, was the promise of a future scepter, and consequently it was a grant. For if Jacob made a declaration concerning some future prerogative, as the words, "thy father's children, &c." shew he did; and that this was the first time that Judah heard of it, as the words, "I will tell you, &c." shew it was; what can this prophecy be, but the grant of a scepter? Of Judah's scepter it is said, "Thy father's children shall bow down before thee." Who were the children but the eleven tribes? So that here a civil and sovereign scepter is expressly marked out for Judah. Benjamin's, and the remnants of the other tribes adhered to Judah as their head. Now such an adherence can be no other than an acknowledgment of a civil scepter in Judah. From what has been said it appears, that of all the three branches, into which the common interpretation spreads, though they be equally weak, the last betrays its weakness most, and is least suitable to the dignity of the prophecy; the whole body of which has a perpetual reference to one or other of the dispensations of divine grace. What remains for us to conclude, but that the true and real meaning of the scepter of Judah is that theocratic government which God, by the vicegerency of judges, kings, and rulers, exercised over the Jewish nation?

Nor a lawgiver from between his feet] The sense of the word "lawgiver" will follow the sense of the word "scepter." It has been proved that the former was a sovereign scepter; the lawgiver, therefore, must be sovereign too. The Hebrew word implies both a legislator, and an interpreter or teacher of the law; but the first is its original and proper signification. And thus, Isaiah xxxiii. 22. "The Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will save us;" where the word is used in its proper signification of lawgiver; the other sense of dispenser or interpreter of the law being contained in the titles of judge and king. Now there never was any lawgiver in Judah, but God, by the ministry of Moses, till the coming of his Son; the prophecy therefore in this sense was accomplished in the coming of Christ, as the theocracy of the Jews remained till his abolition of it, and his substituting a spiritual kingdom instead of the temporal theocracy of God his Father.

Until Shiloh come] Though the word "Shiloh" is variously rendered, yet the most ancient doctors amongst the Jews have unanimously appropriated the term to the Messiah. The Chaldee, Targum, and Talmudic writers all concur in this opinion, Shiloh is Christ. Now Christ is not the successor of those vicegerents of the Jewish states, but of God himself, the king of the Jews. The scepter, therefore, which descends to him, through the hands of those vicegerents, is not merely a civil, but a theocratic scepter. This, at the same time, explains the evangelic, or gospel doctrine of Christ's kingdom arising out of the theocracy or kingdom of God. Hence the distinction of Christ's kingdom not being of this world: the theocracy which was administered unto the Jews only, and in a carnal manner, was a kingdom of this world; but when transferred to Shiloh, and extended over all mankind, and administered in a spiritual manner, it became a kingdom not of this world.

And unto him shall the gathering of the people be.] The Hebrew word, rendered, Gathering together, signifies, Expectation, and obedience likewise. The Vulgate translates it, The desire, or expectation of nations; in which it is followed by the Septuagint and Syriac. The Chaldee reads, The people shall obey him; the Jerusalem Targum, The kingdoms of the earth shall obey him; or, The people of the age shall bring gifts to the Messiah, the son of David. The present state of christianity shews this prophecy to be accomplished in part; but to restrain it to the tribe of Judah, and their situation in the land of promise, seems to contradict the whole tenor of the prophecy, and to be contrary to the words in the first verse, "the last days," which are granted to respect the days of the Messiah; and to that dignity which the prediction receives by being considered as an intimation that the kingdom of God, confined to the Jews, should be superseded by the kingdom of Christ, which would extend to all the sons of Adam.

11, 12 Binding his foal unto the vine, &c.] Not to mention the valley of Eschol, and other fruitful places, by the accounts of the best travellers, the mountains about Jerusalem were particularly fitted for the cultivation of the vine, and for the feeding of cattle. The mountains of the country abound with shrubs, and a delicate short grass, both which the cattle are more fond of than of such plants as are common to fallow grounds and meadows. The milk of cattle fed in this manner is far more rich and delicious, as their flesh is more sweet and nourishing. It may be presumed likewise, that the vine was not neglected in a soil so proper for it to thrive in. The many tokens which are to be met with of ancient vineyards about Jerusalem and Hebron, and the great quantities of grapes and raisins which were from thence brought daily to the markets of Jerusalem, and sent early to Egypt, verify all that the scriptures have delivered concerning it.

13 Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea, &c.] And accordingly the tribe of Zebulun extended from the sea of Galilee to the Mediterranean, where they had commodious havens for shipping, Josb. xix. 10, &c. And how could Jacob have foretold the situation of any tribe, which was determined two hundred years afterwards by casting of lots, unless he had been directed by that divine power who disposeth of all events? It is remarkable, that Zebulun is mentioned before Issachar, though the latter was the eldest. Might not the patriarch prophetically allude to Zebulun's lot being famous for the chief residence of the Messiah, who was himself denominated a Nazarene, from the city of Nazareth, which was his constant abode, and in the tribe of Zebulun?

14 Issachar is a strong ass, &c.] The Septuagint translate this sentence, Issachar has desired that which is good; reading thamad, "he desired," for bbamad, "an ass." The Chaldee renders it, Issachar is rich in substance; the Syriac, Issachar is a giant; and the Arabic, Issachar is a body disjointed. The prediction undoubtedly foretels both the natural disposition and the situation of this tribe. It strongly points out its indolent submission to hostile attacks, at the same time that it assigns the cause of that effeminacy, a luxurious life amidst an unbounded plenty. The land of this tribe was the most fertile spot in all the land of Canaan; it was fruitful to admiration, abounding with pastures and nurseries of all kinds, so that it would make any one in love with husbandry. But this fertility raised them enemies; and their country was often infested and attacked by foreign enemies, especially in the time of the judges.

16 Dan shall judge his people as one of the tribes, &c.] Alluding to the name Dan, which signifies Judging. The patriarch's meaning is, that Dan, notwithstanding his being the son of a concubine, should not be inferior to his brethren, but that his posterity should be a separate tribe, and be governed by one of their own line, in the same manner as the tribes which descended from his wives.

17 Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse-heels, &c.] The Chaldee apply this to Sampson. "There shall be a man who shall be chosen, and shall arise out of the tribe of Dan, the fear of whom shall fall upon the people, and he shall smite the Philistines bravely like a snake; like an asp he shall lie in wait about the path, and he shall slay the strongest of the Philistines, both horse and foot; he shall hough the horses, and break in pieces the chariots, and cast down their riders backwards." The word nachash signifies any serpent; but the word biphiphin, translated adder, may be rendered the cerastes, which hides its body in the sand, and by that artifice springs on its prey by surprise. It also intimates, that the Danites should be more remarkable for stratagems in war, than for conquering by open force; and Moses gives them the same character, Deut. xxxiii. 22. Instances of this subtlety, may be found in Judges xviii. 27. and xv. and xvi.

18 I have waited for thy salvation, &c.] Most commentators think, that this exclamation has a respect to the salvation of mankind by Christ. It doth so in the spiritual sense, nay, in a literal: But yet it should be observed, that the terms of the salvation of God, or the Lord, are perpetually employed throughout the whole bible, to signify God's temporal mercies to the patriarchs and their posterity.

19 Gad, a troop shall overcome him, &c.] The word "troop," alludes to the name of Gad, as will appear from the Hebrew word Gadgedud; i. e. Gad, a troop. This prophecy has been doubly accomplished; for residing in a frontier country, they were exposed to the incursions of the neighbouring people, who sometimes possessed part of their lot, and exercised great cruelties against the inhabitants. These enemies were subdued by Jephtha; and some considerable time afterwards, by the assistance of Reuben and Manasseh, this tribe gained a complete victory over their enemies the Hagarenes and the Arabs, Judges x. 8. and xi. 33. Jer. xlix. 1. Amos i. 13. and 1 Chron. v. 18-26.

20 Out of Asher his bread shall be fat, &c.] The lot of this tribe was remarkable for its plenty, and the produce of the most delicate fruits, Isa. xxxv. 2. and Deut. xxxiii. 24. From these words of Moses, some chuse to apply this prophecy to the delicious oil for which this land was famous, though as it was equally eminent for producing the best corn in Palestine, it would be most reasonable to make the prophecy include both these products.

21 Naphtali—giveth goodly words.] Some imagine that the first part of this verse describes the promptitude of this tribe in military engagements; and that the latter part implies their reluctance to embark in wars, till they had tried all other methods in vain, Judg. iv. and v. 18. and Deut. xxxiii. 23. But others, rejecting the inconsistency of a hind's giving goodly words, observe, that the word ailah, translated "a hind," signifies, A great tree; and that the words "goodly words," or words of beauty, may be rendered, Its branches. According to this interpretation, the verse will signify, "Naphtali is a spreading tree, which produces beautiful branches." A tree producing branches, is a usual symbol for a numerous issue; and the wonderful increase of this tribe, verifies the sense of the prophecy. Naphtali had but four sons when he came into Egypt, yet, in less than two hundred and twenty years, when they departed from thence, this tribe amounted to upwards of fifty-three thousand, able to bear arms.

22 Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well.] The Hebrew MS. signifies, Son of the fruitful [vine] "Whose branches," in the Hebrew, Daughters, "run over the wall." Joseph is compared to a fruitful stock of a vine, shooting forth her branches, which should multiply and spread themselves exceedingly.

23 The archers have sorely grieved him, &c.] In the Hebrew, They have embittered him; they have shot their arrows at him, and hated him. From the Septuagint it appears, that the archers meant are those, That shoot out their arrows, even bitter words, and groundless calumnies; in which sense, the verse particularly points to the slander of Joseph's mistress. Some extend the sense so as to include the perfidy of his brethren, his imprisonment in Egypt, and the ingratitude of Pharaoh's butler.

24 But his bow abode in strength.] For as his enemies were archers, and had bows and arrows, so had he, and repelled force by force; but then his bow and arrows were of a different sort; the virtues and graces that he was possessed of, which remained unmoved, and in their full exercise, notwithstanding the powerful attacks made upon them.

And the arms of his hands were made strong, by—the mighty God of Jacob.] So that he held his bow, and drew it with great strength against his enemies, as an archer being used to the bow, his nerves become strong, and he is not weakened by drawing it, nor weary of using it; but Joseph had not his strength of himself, but from the Lord, the mighty one, that had strengthened his father Jacob, and supported him under all his trouble.

From thence is the shepherd the stone, &c.] The word "stone," is used for an assured ground of confidence, in the same manner as the word "rock" is used, Psal. xviii. 2. Our blessed Lord is called a stone, Isa. xxviii. 16. The sense of this sentence is, that Joseph, by the blessing of providence, nourished the Israelites, as a shepherd does his flock, and was their confidence and support, in the same manner as a stone supports any building.

25 Even by the God, &c.] The Hebrew may be rendered, From the God, &c. Some refer this verse to the 22d, reading the 24th and 25th verses in a parenthesis; but others connect it with the 24th, intimating that the blessings of heaven, &c. proceeded from the same divine Providence, as the delivery of Joseph did. The blessings of heaven are seasonable, or rather fertilizing rains. The blessings of the deep are springs and rivers, and the blessings of the breasts, are great quantities of cattle, and a numerous posterity.

26 The blessings of thy father, &c.] This will appear to be literally true, if we consider that they were greater than those which Abraham or Isaac conferred on their sons; for Jacob blessed Joseph's two sons, whereas Abraham suffered Ishmael, one of his sons, to be banished; and Isaac again bestowed the blessing on Jacob, at the same time rejecting Esau; whereas all the sons of Jacob, which were many,

Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.

27 ¶ Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

28 All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

29 ¶ And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite,

30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite for a possession of a buryingplace.

31 There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.

32 The purchase of the field and of the cave that is therein was from the children of Heth.

33 And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XLIX.

This chapter calls for our strictest attention, for it contains a number of predictions or prophecies, which were to be fulfilled, at distant periods, through a long succession of years; things depending upon so many various circumstances, upon such remote causes, so hid from all human view, so contrary to all appearances at the time they were spoken of, that it was impossible for any human foresight or conjecture to imagine them. And yet all were exactly and fully accomplished, many of them in distant ages, long after both the prophet and the recorder of the prophecies were dead. Nothing can give us an higher idea of the scriptures, than to see things spoken of in them with the most certain assurance, ages before they happened; and this must wonderfully confirm our faith in them, as it is a sure and convincing proof that they are divine; for it is the prerogative of God alone, or those that are commissioned by him, certainly to foretel future events.

many, were all partakers of the inheritance in the land of promise, either in themselves, or their descendants, without any exclusion.

Unto the utmost bound of the—hills.] The words translated “bounds” may signify, Desire, and the sense is then illustrated by Deut. xxxiii. 15. and confirmed by the Vulgate. Yet it must be confessed, that “the height of hills” is sometimes used as a metaphor to convey the idea of duration, as in Isa. liv. 10. and in that sense the durability of the blessings is the object of the prophecy.

On the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.] The word nazir, rendered Separate, signifies either separated by a vow, or by dignity; and hence Joseph is called the Nazarite of his brethren, because of the eminent dignity to which he was advanced above them. But the words may be likewise rendered, Upon the head, even upon thy crowned head, &c. alluding to his advancement in Egypt.

27 Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf.] As Judah had been compared to a lion, Issachar to a strong ass, Dan to a serpent, Naphtali to a hind let loose, Joseph to a fruitful bough, or tree; so Benjamin, is fitly compared to a ravenous wolf, for his courage and success in war. And was not that a fierce and warlike tribe, as appears in several instances, and particularly in the case of the Levite's wife, when they alone waged war against the other tribes, and overcame them in two battles?

In the morning, &c.] The morning and night, in this place, can mean nothing else but the morning and night of the Jewish state; for this state is the subject of all Jacob's prophecy, from one end to the other; and consequently, it is here foretold of Benjamin that he should continue to the very last times of the Jewish state. This interpretation is confirmed by Moses's prophecy, Deut. xxxiii. 12. wherein are used the words, “all the day long.” What is this “all the day long?” The same, certainly, as the morning and night. Does not this import a promise of a longer continuance to Benjamin, than to the other tribes? And was it not most exactly fulfilled?

33 He gathered up his feet into the bed, &c.] While he pronounced these benedictions, he sat up on the bed-side with his feet hanging down to the ground; but having ended them, he drew his feet into the bed, and reclining his head on his pillow, calmly yielded up his breath into the hands of his beneficent Creator.

peculiar physician, who confined himself to that alone, so that all places were crowded with physicians. A body of these domestics would now appear an extravagant piece of state, even in a first minister. But then it could not be otherwise, where each distemper had its proper physician; so that every great family, as well as city, must needs swarm with the faculty. This was a circumstance for which Egypt was peculiarly distinguished, and is represented by the prophet Jeremiah, chap. xli. 11. as the characteristic of this nation.

The physicians embalmed Israel.] The art of embalming being allotted to the physicians, it was one of the best, if not the only expedient of improving medicaments to an art: for, as it was natural that each of the physicians should, in embalming, inspect that part of the corpse to which his practice was confined, he thereby obtained a knowledge of the occult diseases to which it was subject.

3 Forty days were fulfilled—mourned threescore and ten days.] The time of mourning was while the body remained with the embalmers, which was seventy days; this explains why the Egyptians mourned for Jacob threescore and ten days. During this time the body lay in nitre, the use of which was, to dry up the superfluous moisture; and when in the compass of thirty days this was reasonably well effected, the remaining forty were employed in anointing it with gums to preserve it, which was the proper embalming. Previous to this, they first drew out the brain with a hooked iron through the nostrils, filling the vacancy with spices; then an incision was made on the left side of the belly, and all the intestines taken out, except the heart and the kidneys; they were then cleansed and washed with palm-wine, and perfumed with aromatic odours. The cavity of the belly being filled with pounded myrrh, cassia, and other aromatics, and the incision sewn up, the process was completed as above described.

4 Joseph spake unto the house of Pharaoh, &c.] It was customary, among the inhabitants of the east, for all mourners not to enter the royal presence, and for this reason Joseph made application to the great officers of the court, and not to Pharaoh himself.

Which I have digged for me, &c.] The common interpretation followed by most of the translations, especially the Chaldee, is, that Jacob had prepared a peculiar spot for his sepulchre in the cave of Machpelah, which might be, by digging or hollowing out a niche in the cave. Jacob, and other worthies of old, prepared themselves a sepulchre in their health: O let us be equally prepared for death, lest it come upon us as a thief in the night.

7 All the servants, &c.] “All” is put for a great number, as in Matt. iii. 5. The pomp of this woful procession must be very affecting, if we consider that it was conducted for near three hundred miles.

10 And they came to the threshing floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father seven days.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called Abel-mizraim, which is beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him according as he commanded them:

13 For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham bought with the field for a possession of a buryingplace of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead, they said, Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying, 17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

18 And his brethren also went and fell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we be thy servants.

19 And Joseph said unto them, Fear not: for am I in the place of God?

20 But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but

10 And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad] The word Atad signifies Brambles, as appears from Judges ix. 14. Psalm lviii. 9. and hence the Arabic translates the passage, The threshing-floor of brambles; perhaps the threshing-floor was encompassed with brambles. Others think Atad was the name of a person eminent in the country for husbandry. The place is supposed to be situated about two leagues from Jericho, on the other side Jordan, and fifty miles distant from Hebron.

Beyond Jordan, &c.] Atad and Abel-mizraim lay on the west of Jordan; but were on the other side of that river, with respect to the place where Moses was when he wrote this history, which was in the wilderness of Arabia, on the east of Jordan. Others translate the word Heber, Passage; and then the sense will be, At the passage of Jordan; which is confirmed by the Samaritan and Arabic.

11 Abel-mizraim, &c.] In Hebrew, The mourning of the Egyptians.

16 Thy father did command, &c.] The wrongs they had done their brother filled their minds with such gloomy apprehensions, that they fancied Joseph had only smothered his resentment out of respect to his father, and would now take ample vengeance on them for their perfidious behaviour, and perhaps what they urge as their father's dying command was a mere fiction.

17 And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.] His tears discovered the compassion and generosity of his soul, and afforded an evident proof of his sincerity, and how unjustly they suspected him capable of such permanent and deep resentment.

19 For am I in the place of God?] See note on chap. xxx. 2. The Vulgate renders, Fear not; can we resist the will of God?

God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years.

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation: the children also of Machir the son of Manasseh were brought up upon Joseph's knees.

24 ¶ And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die: and God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

25 And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

26 ¶ So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. L.

In the foregoing chapter we find Jacob, though then a dependent in a foreign country, without hope or means to execute any thing, so strong in faith, that he allots to each of his sons a particular portion in the land of Canaan, as if he had been already in the possession of it.

In this chapter we observe the exemplary conduct of Joseph respecting the mourning for his pious father. In the following books, we are going to see the full accomplishment of the promise given to Abraham, and afterwards removed to Isaac and Jacob: by their seed being put into possession of the promised land, about four hundred years after the promise had been first given.

Thus have we gone through the first book of Moses; we hope, through the grace of God, with some advantage to the reader. May he, with whom alone is wisdom and understanding, enable us to proceed aright in the further prosecution of our arduous undertaking!

The Septuagint, Fear not, for I am God's, &c. The Chaldee, Fear not, for I fear God; which is confirmed by the Arabic; but the Syriac renders, I am under God.

20 Ye thought evil, &c.] This is a generous and noble apology for their perfidious treatment; and, at the same time as it palliates their crime, teaches us, that the eyes of the Lord are over all his works; that he disappoints the malice of wicked men, counteracts their mischievous intentions, and perpetually educes good out of evil.

21 Spake kindly, &c.] In Hebrew, Spake unto their heart.

23 Ephraim's children, of the third generation] Joseph had the pleasure of seeing his father's prophetic blessing upon his sons in part fulfilled; which could not fail of giving him the most confident assurance that the rest would be accomplished at its proper time.

Were brought up, &c.] In Hebrew, Were born; which is literally preserved by the Vulgate, Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic; the Chaldee renders it, The sons of Machir were born, whom Joseph educated; the Arabic translates the latter words, In his bosom; which intimates the affectionate tenderness with which Joseph watched over their infancy.

25 Carry up my bones from hence, &c.] He was so confident that God would give them the land of Canaan, that he desires his remains might be kept unburied till the God of their fathers thought proper to visit them.

26 In a coffin, &c.] This was undoubtedly one of those chests in which the embalmed bodies of the dead were deposited; they were made in the shape of a man, and deposited in cells, raised on an end against the wall.

THE ARGUMENT.

The title of this book is derived from the Greek ex out, and odos, a way; which it received according to the custom of the Greeks, from the principal subject of the book, viz. the departure of the Israelites from Egypt. In Hebrew, it is called, according to the custom of the Jews, Veelleh Shemoth; these names are taken from the two first words. This book comprehends a great variety of incidents, all of which are of the greatest importance. The ways of providence are here described in the most striking light, and displayed in such a manner, as amply vindicates the ways of God to man. In this book we have the history of Moses's birth, education, flight, and the oppression of the Israelites in Egypt; we are informed of his return to Midian, his mission to Pharaoh, the wonders he wrought in Egypt, the departure of the Jews, their passage through the Red-sea and the wilderness. It describes the manner of giving the law, the celebration of the sacred passover, and contains the transactions of about one hundred and forty-five years, from the death of Joseph to the building of the tabernacle.

CHAP. I.

1 The children of Israel after Joseph's death multiply greatly. They are oppressed by a new king, but multiply so much the more. 15 The piety of the midwives in saving the men children alive is rewarded by God. 22 Pharaoh commandeth the male children to be cast into the river.

NOW these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

- 2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,
- 3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,
- 4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls: for Joseph was in Egypt already.

6 And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

7 And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

8 ¶ Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

9 And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we. Before CHRIST 1635.

10 Come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

11 Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses.

12 But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Israel.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour:

14 And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour.

15 ¶ And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives, of which the name of the one was Shiprah, and the name of the other Puah:

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him: but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

17 But

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. I.

1 Now these are—the children, &c.] This account of the number of persons who came into Egypt, demonstrates that God had fulfilled his promise to Abraham, in multiplying his seed, Gen. xv. 5.

6 And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.] If we consider that Levi and Amram lived one hundred and thirty-seven years, chap. vi. 16, 20. we shall easily perceive that a pretty long space of time must here be understood.

¶ Which knew not Joseph.] In scripture, to know signifies to approve, or esteem, as in Matt. xxv. 12. It may in this place imply, that this king was averse to Joseph's system of policy, and endeavour to bury his memory in oblivion. In this sense the word is frequently used, as Judges ii. 10. "And there arose another generation, which knew not the Lord, &c." Here "knew not" can only signify, Despised, set at nought, &c.

9 More and mightier than we.] By the whole turn of this relation it appears, that "more and mightier" signify only, More fruitful and healthy; and that was in truth the case. The Egyptians were at this time very luxurious, while the manners of the Israelites concurred with their condition to render them hardy and fruitful, by an abstemious and laborious course of life. On this account the king expressed his fear. But of what? Certainly not that they should subdue their masters, but that they should escape out of bondage, which, even to the very moment of their egression, was the sole object of the Egyptians' fear; "Lest they multiply, and so get them up out of the land." This was a reasonable apprehension; for Egypt was in every age subject to the incursions of that fierce and barbarous people the Arabians, on that very side which the Israelites inhabited: who possessing their own district, unmixed with the Egyptians, had the keys of the country in their hands, to admit or exclude an invader, at pleasure. To prevent, then, so probable a danger, their taskmasters are ordered to increase their oppressions; and they groan under them without power to resist, till set free by the all powerful hand of God.

10 Lest—they join also under our enemies, &c.] The Israelites never considered themselves as settled in Egypt, but as sojourners only; and therefore it is natural to suppose that they had often mentioned their intention of leaving the country, which doubtless contributed to raise this jealousy in the king of Egypt.

11 Built for Pharaoh treasure cities, &c.] The word rendered "treasure-cities," occurs 2 Chron. xvi. 4. and is there translated "store-cities." Its proper signification is, Magazines for preserving stores of corn, as well as treasures of money. The Septuagint render it, Fortified cities. The Syriac and Arabic, Storehouses for corn.

15 The name of one was Shiprah, and the name of the other Puah.] These seem to have been the chief of the midwives; and perhaps all the rest acted under their directions. The Egyptian midwives were employed to superintend the delivery of the Hebrew women.

16 If it be a son, then ye shall kill him, &c.] Josephus asserts, that this cruel order was occasioned by a pretended prediction, that a child should be born of the Hebrews, who would be a scourge to the Egyptians. We find no intimations of this in the sacred history; only that Pharaoh dreading the power of the Israelites, was desirous of destroying all the males, it being from them alone any danger was to be apprehended.

Before CHRIST 1635. 17 But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them.

18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men children alive?

19 And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

20 Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he made them houses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. I.

How quickly one generation passeth away, and another cometh! How necessary that such as wax great or numerous, remember their original meanness! How remarkable is the birth of God's promise, when its full time cometh! In two hundred and fifteen years, Abraham's promised seed had increased to seventy persons; in as many more, they are increased to about three millions. How quickly the services done to men are forgotten; while those done to God are had in everlasting remembrance! How often God's kindness sharpens man's cruelty! And to what horrid and savage barbarity their selfish designs often push them! But how vain for devils or men to contend with the Lord! Their best-laid attempts against his designs will but promote their accomplishment. God's church often thrives best in the fiery furnace of troubles, one after another! Let us therefore always depend on God; always obey God rather than man.

CHAP. II.

1 Moses is born, and laid in an ark among the flags: 5 He is found, and brought up by Pharaoh's daughter: 11 He slayeth an Egyptian; reproveth an Hebrew; and is obliged to flee into Midian. 16 The priest of Midian entertaineth him, and giveth him his daughter Zipporah, of whom is born Gershom. 23 God respecteth the cry of the Israelites.

AND there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

17 The midwives feared God, &c.] Had they complied with the king's orders, they would not only have been guilty of murder, but perjury too, by destroying those innocent children they had undertaken to save.

19 They are lively, &c.] In Hebrew, For they are midwives themselves. If we consider that the Hebrew women, on account of their being inured to toil and labour, must be of a more robust and vigorous constitution than the Egyptians, the midwives will appear not to have told a lie, though possibly they might have concealed some part of the truth.

21 Because the midwives feared God—he made them houses.] The obvious sense of these words is, that God, in return for their kindness to the Israelites, blest their children, and rendered them prosperous. But we may observe, that "them," in the original, is of the masculine gender, and therefore cannot refer to the midwives. Some, therefore, apply it to the Israelites; and then the sense is, that providence, by means of the piety of the midwives, continued to increase the children of Israel. Some apply this to the increase of the families of the Hebrew midwives. But others refer it to Pharaoh and his servants, who built houses for the midwives, whither the Hebrew women were obliged to repair, in order to be delivered before commissioners appointed for that purpose, that the king's order might not be any longer eluded.

22 And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, &c.] Pharaoh finding himself disappointed by the midwives, now issues orders for his own servants to execute his inhuman decree.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. II.

1 A man.] His name was Amram. See Exod. vi. 20. Numb. xxvi. 59. A daughter of Levi.] Her name was Jochebed, and she was Amram's father's sister. See Exod. vi. 20.

2 Bare a son.] Moses was not the first-born, his brother Aaron being three years older. See chap. vii. 7.

And when she saw him that he was a goodly child, &c.] He was remarkable for his size and beauty. Heb. xi. 23. Acts. vii. 20.

3 And when she could not longer bide him.] That is, when the child grew too big to be concealed any longer; for fear of being informed against by some of her Egyptian neighbours, with whom the Israelites lived intermixed. Thus the person who was afterwards the deliverer of Israel was exposed to the greatest dangers, and had almost fallen himself a sacrifice to an inhuman tyrant! Doubtless the providence of God directed things in this manner, that Moses might conceive an higher detestation of the Egyptians, and labour

And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months.

3 And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

4 And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

5 And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side; and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrew's children.

7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.

10 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

11 ¶ And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

12 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

13 And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrew strove together: and he said to with a greater zeal to deliver his brethren from the hands of such bloody men.

Of bulrushes.] Rather of papyrus, a kind of flaggy shrub or reed, which grew particularly on the banks of the Nile.

And she laid it in the flags, &c.] Pliny and other authors tell us, that the Egyptians made boats of the papyrus; and probably the ark in which Moses was placed was made in the form of a boat, that if by any accident it should be carried away by the stream, it might swim in the river.

4 His sister, &c.] Her name was Miriam, as appears from Numb. xxvi. 59. Moses's parents were induced to expose him from a strong confidence that divine providence would preserve him; as Amram had been informed by a dream antecedent to his birth.

5 Daughter of Pharaoh, &c.] Her name was Thermuthis.

6 Behold, the babe wept, &c.] The princess was irresistibly moved with the sight of so much innocence and beauty in distress.

9 Take this child away, and nurse it for me, &c.] Had the child been found by any other person, the king himself excepted, they must have thrown him into the river; but Pharaoh's daughter is conducted by an invisible hand to the place where the forlorn infant was exposed, and by her put to nurse to his own mother.

10 And he became her son.] That is, she adopted him for her own son, and she gave him a princely education. As Moses grew up, he was remarkable for the tallness of his stature, and elegance of his form, shewed a pregnancy of understanding that far surpassed his years, and sufficiently indicated what in time might be expected from him.

She called his name Moses, &c.] Some derive the word Moses from the Egyptian mo, "water," and yses, or yfes, "preserved;" consequently the word implies, Saved from the waters, or preserved from drowning. But Moses, finding the Hebrew word masa, "to draw out," bear some resemblance in sound and sense to his own name, writes it Mosheh, and introduces Pharaoh's daughter giving this reason why she imposed it, because mesibitihu, "I drew him out of the waters."

11 He went out unto his brethren, &c.] He abandoned the pleasures of the Egyptian court, and joined himself to the Hebrews, who were all his brethren, being all descended from their common father Abraham, choosing rather (says the apostle to the Hebrews) to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Heb. xi. 24.

12 He slew the Egyptian, &c.] This Egyptian was one of the taskmasters, who fell unmercifully upon the Hebrew, because he did not work so fast as he desired, and almost beat him to death. But the wrongs suffered by the Israelites so animated Moses with an abhorrence to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well.

16 ¶ Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters: and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

18 And when they came to Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to day.

19 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may eat bread.

21 And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses Zipporah his daughter.

22 And she bare him a son, and he called his name Gershom: for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶ And it came to pass in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

horrence against such flagrant oppression, and with such ardent love for his brethren, that he could not suffer this outrage to escape unpunished. But it has been questioned whether, granting the Israelite to have suffered wrong, this action of Moses was justifiable? and whether he should not have appealed to the civil magistrate, in whose hands the society had lodged the power of redressing private wrongs? In reply, it should be remembered, that as the Egyptian kings authorized the oppressing the Israelites, it would have been in vain to apply for redress of their grievances; and, consequently, the society being degenerated into a confederacy in oppression and injustice, it was as lawful to use private force and resistance as against a band of robbers and banditti. It is highly probable that Moses did this action by a divine impulse.

14 And Moses feared, &c.] Some have suspected that there is a contradiction between this account and that of the apostle, Heb. xi. 26. "By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king." But these words of the apostle may refer to Moses's courage, in conducting the Israelites out of Egypt, in which action he was so fortified by faith in the divine protection, that he feared not Pharaoh and all his host.

15 And dwelt in the land of Midian, &c.] This country is supposed to be part of Arabia Petraea, which bordered on Goshen. In this desert he acquired virtues which rendered him more capable of undertaking the deliverance of his brethren.

16 Priest of Midian, &c.] He was a priest of the true God, and in great esteem in those parts. The Chaldee translates it, The prince of Midian.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away, &c.] That is, the shepherds drove the flocks from the well; for the word "them" is in the masculine gender, and therefore cannot refer to the daughters. Nor will this action of the shepherds appear surprising, if it be considered, that in these countries there is a great scarcity of water; and that every shepherd would endeavour to get the first possession of the wells, lest others, coming thither before them, should not leave water enough for their cattle.

18 When they came to Reuel their father, &c.] This person is perhaps called Hobab, the son of Raguel, Numb. x. 29. Ceni, in Judges i. 16. and Jethro, in Exod. iii. 1. so that one and the same person is thought to have been called by four names, Raguel or Reuel, Hobab, Ceni, and Jethro.

21 And he gave Moses Zipporah his daughter.] Though the scripture has not mentioned any transaction between the arrival of Moses at Reuel's house, and his marriage of Zipporah; yet, it is highly probable, that Reuel did not give him his daughter till he had been some time in the country, and given sufficient proofs of his virtuous qualifications.

22 Called his name Gershom, &c.] That is, A stranger, or an alien. Or as in the Hebrew, I have been a stranger, &c.

23 The king of Egypt died.] His name was Rameses; according to bishop Usher, who places his death in the year of the world 2494; his successor was Amenophis, who was drowned in the Red-sea.

Their cry, &c.] The Samaritan renders it, Their groan; the Arabic, Their prayer or supplication; which is confirmed by the Syriac rendering the words, They cried, they prayed.

24, 25 And God, &c.] In these two verses, four different words,

24 And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. Before CHRIST 1531.

25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God had respect unto them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. II.

The hardships which Moses endured in the desert land of Midian, and the virtues he learned in this school of adversity, at a distance from the pleasures of a court, where he had been educated, served not a little to qualify himself for the part he was afterwards to act, as the deliverer of God's people.

namely, "heard, remembered, looked upon them, had respect unto them," are made use of, the more emphatically to express God's tenderness towards them.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. III.

1 The backside of the desert.] The Septuagint and Samaritan omit the word rendered "the back-side." The Arabic reads, The extremities; the Vulgate, The inner parts; and the Chaldee, The best pastures of the desert.

Mountain of God.] The Septuagint omit these words. The Chaldee renders them, He came to Horeb, where the glory of the Lord was revealed; according to this version, it received the title of the mountains of God by anticipation. Yet it must be owned, that in various places of scripture "the mountain of God" signifies only a very lofty one. Josephus pretends that the shepherds were afraid to ascend this mountain, on account of an antient tradition that some god kept his residence upon it.

Even to Horeb.] St. Stephen, Acts vii. 30. calls it Sinai, because Horeb and Sinai were two summits of the same mountain. He also informs us that this happened after Moses had dwelt forty years in the land of Midian.

¶ And the angel of the Lord appeared.] Many are of opinion, that by the angel of the Lord is meant the Messiah, the "messenger of the covenant," that all-glorious person, who, to make an atonement for sinful man, spilt his most precious blood. We are of opinion, that it was the appearance of the Shechinah, or Jehovah himself, accompanied with a glorious retinue of angels as his ministers. And the Vulgate, which renders it, The Lord appeared, partly confirms this sense.

In a flame of fire.] The element of fire was frequently made use of by God to notify his presence. Thus when he determined to ratify his covenant with Abraham, "a smoking furnace and a lamp of fire passed between the pieces of the victims." When the people were to be satisfied of the divine mission of Moses, the Lord descended in fire from mount Sinai. When our Saviour was initiated in his ministry, the divine glory, or fire, settled upon his head; and when the disciples were filled with the Holy Ghost, fiery cloven tongues manifested his presence, and convinced the spectators of the reality of their inspiration.

Out of the midst of a bush.] The word feneb, which we render a "bush," properly signifies a bramble bush; thence the wilderness and adjacent mountains were called Sinai from their being full of brambles.

And the bush was not consumed.] Philo the Jew has informed us of the doctrine couched under this extraordinary appearance. The burning bush was a symbol, says he, of the oppressed, and the flaming fire of the oppressor. The bush burning with life, and not consumed, portended, that they who were oppressed by violence should not be destroyed; the design of their enemies should be frustrated: and the present troubles with which they were afflicted should, in the event, prove to their advantage.

5 Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, &c.] We cannot approach the great Creator of the universe with too much reverence. And how great is the condescension of the almighty Being, who fills immensity with his glory, that he designs to reveal himself to sinful mortals!

Before CHRIST 1491. shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

6 Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

7 ¶ And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows;

8 And I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

9 Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

12 And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

13 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

15 ¶ And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The LORD mortals! Though the divinity be present every where; though the whole world be his august temple, yet we should be remarkably cautious when we approach the place where his honour dwelleth, the house set apart for his worship; for we see that even Moses himself was commanded, when he approached the divine majesty, to put off his shoes from his feet, for the place on which he stood was holy ground.

6 And Moses hid his face.] In token of profound humility and veneration. The angels themselves are said to cover theirs in the presence of God. Isaiah vi. 2.

Upon God.] In the Hebrew, To look back towards God. The Chaldee renders it, To look towards the glory of God.

7 Their cry, by reason of their taskmasters, &c.] It will appear from the sequel of their history, that their cry was not for such a deliverance as was promised to their forefathers, i. e. to be brought up out of Egypt; but for such a one as might enable them to live at ease among their flesh-pots in it.

8 Unto a land flowing with milk and honey, &c.] The sacred writings are full of encomiums on the fertility of the land of Canaan; and the expression, "flowing with milk and honey," was a common proverb, denoting plenty.

11 And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, &c.] He modestly declines the service, from an apprehension that it was unlikely that a person so long absent from Egypt should be able to prevail with the people to follow him, or with the prince to release them from his dominions.

12 I will be with thee.] I will support and defend thee in all dangers and difficulties. The Chaldee renders it, My word shall be thy aid.

And this shall be a token unto thee, &c.] That is, the vision which thou hast now seen of the bush burning, but not consumed.

14 I AM THAT I AM, &c.] A name was so peculiar and distinct to a local tutelary deity, that the one supreme God had no name, or title of distinction. Out of indulgence, therefore, to the weakness of Moses, God was pleased to give himself a name, "I AM THAT I AM, &c." where we may observe (according to the constant method of divine wisdom, when it condescends to the prejudices of men) how in the very instance of indulgence to their superstition, he gives a corrective of it. The religion of names arose from an idolatrous polytheism; and the name here given implying eternity and self-existence, directly opposeth that superstition.

18 Hath met with us, &c.] The Vulgate render, It hath called us; the Septuagint, Hath called upon us; the Arabic, Hath commanded us; the Syriac, Hath appeared to us; and the Chaldee, Hath been invoked by us. The Hebrew word, nikrah, which signifies "met,"

God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.

16 Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

17 And I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

18 And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews has met with us: and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

19 ¶ And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, no, not by a mighty hand.

20 And I will stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go.

21 And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

22 But every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. III.

Here we observe the reverence that is due to God, whenever we approach him in prayer, when we come into his temple, or when we even do but speak of him; and indeed when we consider what a great and glorious Being he is, the profoundest reverence, the lowest abasement, the most awful veneration, will appear too little, when we come before him.

C H A P.

is in the Samaritan written nikra, which signifies, "to call:" and as several Hebrew MSS. confirm the latter the genuine reading, we may safely adopt it.

19 No, not by a mighty hand.] The Vulgate renders it, Unless by a mighty hand; the Septuagint, Unless with a mighty hand; the Chaldee, Nor indeed, because his power is great. The Samaritan agrees with the Septuagint.

20 And I will stretch out my hand.] The two most populous regions at this time in the world were Canaan and Egypt; the first distinguished from all others by its violence and unnatural crimes; the latter by its superstitions and idolatries. It concerned God's moral government that a speedy stop should be put to both; the inhabitants of these two being now ripe for divine vengeance. And as the instruments he employed to punish their present enormities were designed for the barrier against future, the Israelites went out of Egypt with a high hand, which desolated their haughty tyrants, and were led into the possession of the land of Canaan, whose inhabitants they were utterly to exterminate. Vice and idolatry had now filled up their measure. Egypt, the capital of false religion, being likewise the nursery of arts and sciences, was preserved from total destruction, for the sake of civil and polished manners, which was to derive their source from thence; but the Canaanites were to be utterly exterminated, to vindicate the honour of humanity, and to put a stop to a spreading contagion which changed the reasonable nature into brutal.

Smite Egypt with all my wonders, &c.] This kingdom was chosen by God to be the scene of all his wonders in support of his elect people; for this very reason, that through the celebrity of so famed an empire the powers of the true God might be spread abroad, and strike the observation of the whole habitable world, Rom. ix. 7.

22 Every woman shall borrow.] The word shaal, which we render "borrow," signifies to ask, appears from Gen. xxxii. 17. Job. xix. 50. Judges viii. 24. It likewise signifies, To return any thing obtained by great difficulty and importunity, as in 1 Sam. i. 28. And therefore the true sense of the passage will be, Every woman shall ask of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold and raiment, as some compensation for the injuries the Israelites have received. Consequently the Egyptians, in compliance with their request, shewed they were willing to pay the tax desired as a ransom for their lives, and a compensation for the injuries they had done the Israelites.

And ye shall spoil, &c.] The Chaldee renders it, Ye shall leave the Egyptians empty; and the Arabic, Ye shall extirpate the Egyptians.

COMMENTARY

CHAP. IV.

Moses' rod is turned into a serpent: 6 His hand is leprous: 10 He is loth to be sent; Aaron is appointed to assist him. 18 Moses departeth from Jethro. 21 God's message to Pharaoh. 24 Zipporah circumciseth her son. 27 Aaron is sent to meet Moses. 29 They go to the Israelites, and the people believe them.

AND Moses answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee.

2 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, A rod.

3 And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent; and Moses fled from before it.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

5 That they may believe that the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 ¶ And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous as snow.

7 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again; and plucked it out of his bosom, and, behold, it was turned again as his other flesh.

8 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

9 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and the water which thou takest out of the river shall become blood upon the dry land.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VI.

1 Behold, they will not believe me, &c.] The reluctance which Moses discovers to accept this commission, may seem unaccountably strange, if we consider that from the former part of his history, chap. ii. ver. 12. he was neither wanting in forwardness or zeal to promote the welfare of his brethren. Whence then could his backwardness proceed? Whence! From his thinking that the recovery of the Israelites from the Egyptian superstitions was altogether desperate. And, humanly speaking, he did not judge amiss, ■ will appear from their behaviour during the whole time God was working this amazing deliverance.

3 And it became a serpent, &c.] The word translated "serpent" is rendered by the Vulgate, A snake, and by others, A prodigious large dragon.

5 That they may believe, &c.] That is, thou shalt do this before them, in order to convince them, if they doubt whether I have sent thee.

6, 7 His hand was leprous as snow—and it was turned again as his other flesh.] The leprosy, especially the white leprosy, is esteemed almost incurable; and the inflicting this disease, and the curing it again instantly, shews the greatness of the miracle.

■ And it shall come to pass.] Here God condescended to give the reason why he is pleased to add another sign to the former; namely, that he might overcome the incredulity which he foresaw would be found in many of the Israelites.

They will believe the voice of the latter sign.] They who cannot be prevailed upon by the first sign, shall be convinced by the second; and if any should be so obstinate ■ to stand out against the second, they should be convinced by a third: We may observe a great propriety and energy in this expression, "the voice of the sign," since those miracles, in effect, spoke in the ear of reason, and said, Believe in him whom God hath sent.

10 Slow of speech, &c.] The words chebah peh, rendered "slow of speech," signify, in Ezek. iii. 5. a strange language understood with difficulty; in which sense Moses not only insinuates that he was no orator, but likewise that he had almost lost the true pronunciation of the Egyptian language, in the absence of forty years,

11 And the Lord said ■ him, Who hath made man's mouth? &c.] This is a ■ strong, and ought to have been taken as a satisfactory answer to his objection.

13 Send, I pray thee, by the hand, &c.] Because the word rendered, "whom thou wilt send," is in Hebrew shilabb, whence the word schilo, mentioned Gen. xlix. 10. is derived; some have ima-

10 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, O my Lord, I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant: but I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue. Before CHRIST 1491.

11 And the LORD said unto him, Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

12 Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

13 And he said, O my Lord, send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt send.

14 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

15 And thou shalt speak unto him, and put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do.

16 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God.

17 And thou shalt take this rod in thine hand, where-with thou shalt do signs.

18 ¶ And Moses went and returned to Jethro his father in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace.

19 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which fought thy life.

20 And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt: and Moses took the rod of God in his hand.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put in thine hand: but I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go.

22 And gined, that Moses here alludes to the Messiah. The Septuagint render, Send by some other person who is able; the Chaldee, Send by the hand of him who is worthy to be sent. Grotius observes, that the Hebrew word jad, A hand, signifies fitness in general; and that Moses's reluctance is an argument of his modesty: but it seems rather more probable, that his backwardness proceeded from his knowledge of the strong attachment which the Hebrews had to the Egyptian superstitions.

17 Thou shalt take this rod, &c.] Moses was ordered to take the rod, that he might have a perpetual memorial of the divine omnipotence; and to persuade him, that ■ God had already converted it into a different form, he was equally able to change it into any other, and endue it with a power which in its natural state it was not endued with.

19 For all the men are dead, &c.] Josephus confines this merely to the demise of the Egyptian king, from whom he had fled into Midian; and represents the information of his death as the effect of rumour, not of divine inspiration, as it is affirmed to be in the text. But this circumstance bears a strong resemblance of that in Matt. ii. 20.

20 And his sons.] Though the scripture mentions only Gershom, till chap. xviii. 4. of this book, we ■ in that place informed, that he had another named Eliezer, who was so called in allusion to Moses's being aided by God in his flight from Egypt.

Upon an ass, &c.] Though in the Hebrew the singular number is used, yet, from the circumstances of the story, it is evident more than one is implied. May we not therefore assert, that he placed each of them upon ■ ass? The Septuagint give us room to think he did, translating the expression, Beasts of burden, in the plural; and the Arabic uses the same number.

21 I will harden his heart, &c.] This expression should be understood so ■ not to contradict that in chap. ix. 34. where Pharaoh is said to harden it himself; and this may be easily done, if we consider it as signifying, God would suffer him to harden it himself; and that in scripture every thing is ascribed to the immediate agency of the divine Being, though it might be accounted for from natural causes: and God might be said to harden Pharaoh's heart, by giving him up to the perverseness of his own disposition, and the natural effects of his ■ prejudices. The accidental effect of a thing is very often looked upon, and very often represented, as the efficient cause: thus Christ says, he came to send fire and divisions on earth, Luke xii. 49. No one will assert that the gospel naturally produced, or Christ originally intended these calamities. No, they are the accidental, not the natural effects of his doctrine. So the miracles of Moses, which occasioned the obduracy of Pharaoh, should not be considered as the efficient, but the accidental causes of it.

Before CHRIST 1491. 22 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, Israel is my son, even my firstborn:

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go; that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, I will slay thy son, even thy firstborn.

24 ¶ And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD met him, and sought to kill him.

25 Then Zipporah took a sharp stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

26 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the circumcision.

27 ¶ And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mount of God, and kissed him.

28 And Moses told Aaron all the words of the LORD who had sent him, and all the signs which he had commanded him.

29 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel:

30 And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

31 And the people believed: and when they heard that the LORD had visited the children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshipped.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. IV.

From the circumstance of Moses being threatened by a divine vision, on account of his not having circumcised his son, we may learn, that the commands of God, even those which relate only to things external, and indifferent in their own nature, ought to be inviolably observed.

CHAP. V.

1 Pharaoh chideth Moses and Aaron for their message: 6 He increaseth the task of the Israelites. 10 The people have no straw allowed them. 15 Pharaoh checketh their complaints. 20 They cry out upon Moses and Aaron. 22 Moses complaineth to God.

22 Israel is my son, &c.] The Arabic adds, that this was said in order to convey honour to the Israelites, and at the same time to express the kindness of God towards them. The Egyptians, and all the surrounding nations, looked upon their hero-gods, as local, tutelary, and particularly engaged in the protection and prosperity of the nation from which they sprung: God, in allusion to this prejudice, orders Moses to address Pharaoh in the words of this verse; and as he was convinced of the consequences of the doctrine of a tutelary deity, he could not be applied to in a stronger or a more proper manner.

24 The Lord met him, &c.] Most of the translations, and particularly the Syriac, mention Moses as the person whom the Lord met, and sought to kill; but the Arabic says expressly, That the angel of the Lord fell or rushed upon his son, and sought to kill him. Yet the original signifies no more than that the angel appeared in an attitude which threatened the child's life, in order to try the affection of his father, and to compel him to the observance of a rite which was the token of the covenant between God and the posterity of Abraham.

25 Took a sharp stone] The Egyptians used a flint stone to make the incision in the bodies that were to be embalmed. Justin Martyr styles these instruments swords, or knives of stone; in the first ages of the world they were in universal use; and modern discoveries convince us, that in the ruder ages all countries had no other instruments.

Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.] The word chatan, rendered "husband," signifies a son-in-law, or one espoused to God, and was the name given a child on the day of circumcision; and that the words are applied to the son, not to Moses, who is called a bloody son, on account of the circumcision. According to some, the sense of this passage will run thus: She cast the foreskin at the child's feet, and said, by this blood of the circumcision thou art a member of the church; and the Chaldee is so remarkable, that we have reserved the translation of the whole verse to this place, Zipporah took a stone, and circumcised the foreskin of her son, and offered it before him, and said, Because of the blood of this circumcision, let my husband be given unto us.

26 So he let him go, &c.] This signifies that the angel suffered Moses to proceed on his journey.

30 And did the signs, &c.] It seems as if Aaron performed the miracles; and agreeable to this, we find, chap. vii. 10. that Aaron did in fact perform the miracle; and as he acted by the command of Moses, and was, as the scripture styles him, his prophet; Moses might be looked upon as the agent, agreeable to the words in chap. iv. 7. and Aaron as his instrument.

AND afterward Moses and Aaron went in, and told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Let my people go; that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness.

2 And Pharaoh said, Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go.

3 And they said, The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get ye unto your burdens.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 ¶ And Pharaoh commanded the same day the taskmasters of the people, and their officers, saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words.

10 ¶ And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get ye straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the taskmasters hastened them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks, as when there was straw.

14 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on CHAP. V.

1 And afterward, &c.] After they had convinced the elders of Israel of their divine mission.

Thus saith the Lord God of Israel.] In Hebrew, Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel.

My people.] The separation of this people has been arraigned as inconsistent with the divine attributes. It must, however, be owned, that it became the goodness of God to preserve the doctrine of the unity amidst an idolatrous world. Nor could such a separation be made otherwise, than by bringing that part of mankind under God's peculiar protection. Now as some people must needs be selected for this purpose, it seems most agreeable to our ideas of divine wisdom, to make the blessings attendant on such a selection, the reward of some exalted virtue in the progenitors of the chosen people. The separation was made for the sake of mankind in general, though one people became the honoured instruments to testify God's faithfulness to his promise made to their fathers.

Hold a feast, &c.] The Septuagint, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, concur in the sense of our translation. The Vulgate and Chaldee, agree in rendering it, That they may sacrifice. The original, jachagu, primarily signifies, To dance; and as some sacred rites were accompanied with this mark of festivity, the word came at last to be used for sacrificing, or celebrating some solemn or religious festival.

Who is the Lord? &c.] In the original, Who is Jehovah? 3 Lest he fall upon us with pestilence, &c.] The Septuagint render it, Lest death or slaughter befall us.

5 Behold, the people of the land now are many, &c.] Pharaoh denies this request, and insinuates, that they were the ringleaders of sedition, and disturbers of the peace.

6 The taskmasters of the people, and their officers, &c.] The former were Egyptians, and the officers were Israelites, deputed by them to see that they performed what was exacted of them. The Septuagint and Samaritan render the latter word, Scribes, a term usually applied to the elders of the Israelites.

9 Let there be more work.] In Hebrew, Let the work be made heavy upon the men. The Vulgate renders it, Let them be oppressed with works, and let them fulfil them; the Septuagint, Let their works be made more heavy, and let them be rendered solicitous by them.

Let them not regard vain words.] In Hebrew, In the words of a lie. The Chaldee renders, In idle words; the Arabic, In vain things; the Vulgate, In lying words; but the Septuagint, Samaritan, and Syriac, agree with our translation.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

17 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

18 Go therefore now, and work; for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not minish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

21 And they said unto them, The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made our favour to be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.

22 ¶ And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, LORD, wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast thou delivered thy people at all.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. V.

In this chapter we see a true picture of our nature in general. By whatsoever name, or in whatsoever manner, God is pleased to reveal himself to us; how many instances soever of his providences we are struck with, how much and often soever we are obliged by the force of evidence to say, "Surely the Lord is in all!" and to acknowledge that it is his hand that saves and delivers us, and blesteth us in all things; yet no sooner does his wisdom act in any other manner than our weak wisdom thinks it should, but we immediately fall into fears and distrust, as if God's power was at an end, as if he could forget his promises, and as if his hand was shortened that he could not save.

21 The Lord look upon you, and judge.] In the Chaldee, May the Lord appear upon you, and take vengeance. The Samaritan renders the last word, Let him interpret; and the Arabic, Judge against you.

Savour to be abhorred.] In Hebrew, To stink. The Septuagint render, To be execrable; the Arabic, Ye have corrupted our state with Pharaoh; and the Syriac, Ye have done evil to our spirit.

To put a sword, &c.] The Syriac renders, Delivering unto the sword in their hands.

22 Moses returned, &c.] The antient translations concur in representing it, That he addressed the Lord; and the original will bear this sense, as appears from Psalms lxxiii. 10. xciv. 15. and Isa. xxix. 17.

23 Since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people, &c.] Thus Moses, forgetting that God hath foretold him of Pharaoh's obstinacy, chap. iii. 19. and iv. 21. with some indecent warmth, expostulates with God upon the present ill success of his embassy, and complains that God had done nothing towards fulfilling his promise of delivering his people.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VI.

1 Then the Lord said unto Moses, &c.] Here God graciously condescends to satisfy the complaints which Moses had made in the end of the foregoing chapter; telling him, that if he would but be patient awhile, he should see in how wonderful and terrible a manner he would force the obstinate king to dismiss his people, and make him even glad to get rid of them.

2 And said unto him, I am the Lord.] Rather, I am Jehovah: for the emphasis lies upon the significance of his name, the reader will judge by the context.

3 By the name of God Almighty, &c.] That is, as the God of Abraham, I before condescended to have a name of distinction, but now, in compliance to another prejudice, I condescend to have a name of honour. This seems to be the true interpretation of this very difficult text; for the word Jehovah, whose name is here said to be unknown to the patriarchs, frequently occurring in the book of Genesis, had furnished unbelievers with a pretext that the same person could not be the author of the two books of Genesis and Exodus. But the assertion is, that the word Jehovah was not used in the times of the patriarchs; but that the name Jehovah, as a title of honour,

Before CHRIST 1491.

1 God reneweth his promise by his name JEHOVAH: 10 He sendeth Moses to Pharaoh. 14 The genealogy of Reuben, 15 of Simeon, 16 and of Levi, of whom came Moses and Aaron. 28 Moses in answer to God's charge pleadeth his defect of speech.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh: for with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand shall he drive them out of his land.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the LORD:

3 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

4 And I have also established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

5 And I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered my covenant.

6 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, I am the LORD, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem you with a stretched out arm, and with great judgments:

7 And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

8 And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning the which I did swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it to you for an heritage: I am the LORD.

9 And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel: but they hearkened not unto Moses for anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Go in, speak unto Pharaoh king Egypt, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land.

12 And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have not hearkened unto me; how (whereby a new idea was affixed to an old word,) was unknown to them.

6 With a stretched out arm, &c.] The Septuagint, Vulgate, Chaldee, and Syriac, render, With a lifted-up arm; but both the expressions convey the idea of a strong effort.

7 I will take you to me for a people.] They who ask a reason why God should prefer so perverse and foolish a people to all others, may recollect, that one reason has been given already; that it was for the sake of their forefathers; and to fulfill the promise made to the patriarchs. Another may be, that the extraordinary providence, by which they were protected, might become the more visible and illustrious; for had they been endued with the shining qualities of the more polished nations, the effects of that providence might have been ascribed to their own wisdom. And their impotence and inability, when left unto themselves, is finely represented in the prophet Ezekiel, by the similitude of the vine tree, chap. xv. 3.

And I will be to you a God, &c.] This was in condescension to the Egyptian system of religion, whose idolatries the Israelites had eagerly imbibed, whence the doctrine of a tutelary deity was universally acknowledged.

I am the Lord, &c.] The old translation connects this with the preceding sentence, Even in the Lord. In the Hebrew it is only, I Jehovah; and if read in that manner, without the word "am," which is inserted in our translation, it strengthens the sense; "I will bring you, I did swear, I will give it, I Jehovah."

9 For anguish of spirit, &c.] Grotius interprets it, Anxiety of mind; the Septuagint, Pusillanimity, or despondency; and the Syriac, Anguish of Spirit. The Samaritan adds, And they said to Moses, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians; because it is better for us to serve the Egyptians, than to die in the desert. This passage seems to be transcribed from chap. xiv. 12. and is properly introduced in that place, but bears all the marks of an interpolation in this.

12 Who am of uncircumcised lips.] The word "uncircumcised" among the Jews, is a term of contempt; and it is usual in scripture to call those parts which were unfit to perform their natural functions, uncircumcised. Hence "uncircumcised ears," Jer. vi. 10. are those which either cannot hear, or will not listen. "The uncircumcised in heart," Jer. ix. 26. are those who would not, or could not understand. "Uncircumcised lips," therefore, imply such as are unfit for articulating sounds, or convey the idea of a bad and contemptible utterance.

Before CHRIST 1491. how then shall Pharaoh hear me, who am of uncircumcised lips?

13 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, and gave them a charge unto the children of Israel, and unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

14 ¶ These be the heads of their fathers' houses: The sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel; Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi: these be the families of Reuben.

15 ¶ And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman: these are the families of Simeon.

16 ¶ And these are the names of the sons of Levi according to their generations; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari; and the years of the life of Levi were an hundred thirty and seven years.

17 The sons of Gershon; Libni, and Shimi, according to their families.

18 And the sons of Kohath; Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel: and the years of the life of Kohath were an hundred thirty and three years.

19 And the sons of Merari; Mahali and Musshi: these are the families of Levi according to their generations.

20 And Amram took him Jochebed his father's sister to wife; and she bare him Aaron and Moses: and the years of the life of Amram were an hundred and thirty and seven years.

21 And the sons of Izhar; Korah, and Nepheg, and Zithri.

22 And the sons of Uzziel; Misael, and Elzaphan, and Zithri.

23 And Aaron took him Elisheba, daughter of Aminadab, sister of Naashon, to wife; and she bare him Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

24 And the sons of Korah; Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph: these are the families of the Korhites.

25 And Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife; and she bare him Phinehas; these are the heads of the fathers of the Levites according to their families.

26 These are that Aaron and Moses, to whom the LORD said, Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their armies.

27 These are they which spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt: these are that Moses and Aaron.

28 ¶ And it came to pass on the day when the LORD spake unto Moses in the land of Egypt, 29 That the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, I am the LORD: speak thou unto Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say unto thee.

30 And Moses said before the LORD, Behold, I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me?

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. VI.

How often in our greatest extremity, God interposeth for our relief! How easily is the hardest work effected when he puts his hand to it! if his mighty arm of mercy or judgement be stretched out, when he begins he will make an end. How certain is that deliverance for which the character, the covenant, the pity, the purpose, and the power of God, are all engaged! And yet how often the objects thereof, through anguish of spirit, put his strong consolations from them! How often the frowardness of hearers make ministers despair of success with others, and to repeat the excuses which God hath already answered, and so make him charge them, on their perils, to obey his appointments! O the perverseness of human hearts! When he calls not, what numbers run unsent! When he calls to his service, what averfeness to comply! Whatever our pedigree be, whether honourable or ignominious, let us reckon it our chief honour to be God's favourite, and to be made useful in doing good. Let us, without gainsaying, obey his voice, and provoke him not. If our work be difficult or dangerous, our days are, so shall our strength be.

C H A P. VII.

1 Moses is encouraged to go to Pharaoh. His and Aaron's age. 8 Aaron casteth down his rod, which becometh a serpent. The magicians do the like; their rods are swallowed up by Aaron's: Pharaoh's heart is hardened. 14 Another message from God to Pharaoh. 19 The river is turned into blood.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, See, I have made thee a God to Pharaoh: and Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet.

2 Thou shalt speak all that I command thee: And Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land.

3 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt.

4 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, that I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine armies, and my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments.

5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

6 And Moses and Aaron did as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

7 And Moses was fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

9 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

10 And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

11 Then Pharaoh also called the wise men and the forcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments.

12 For

20 And she bare him Aaron and Moses, &c.] This verifies the promise of God, Gen. xv. 16. of delivering the Israelites out of Egypt in the fourth generation; for Moses was the son of Amram, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, the son of Jacob.

24 And the sons of Korah, &c.] He himself perished in the rebellion against Moses, who was his cousin-german; but his family remained, and were famous in the days of David, being often mentioned in the book of Psalms.

25 Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel] This Putiel, or Phetiel, seems to have been an Egyptian, one of whose daughters Eleazar married in Egypt. For the name Putiel seems derived from Phut, the brother of Mizraim, Gen. x. 6. with the addition of El, the name of God.

These are the heads of the fathers of the Levites, &c.] He says nothing of the other tribes, it being his intention in this place only to derive his own pedigree and his brother Aaron's from Israel.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

1 A god to Pharaoh.] In the old translation, it is rendered, I have made thee Pharaoh's god. This expression is explained already, in Chap. iv. 16. but we add, the mysteries which had their origin in Egypt, taught that the popular deities were deified heroes, or dead men, deified on account of some noble exertion of power, or eminent intellectual abilities. Pharaoh, who had been initiated, must have been taught this secret; and as he thus learnt that the popular deities were but men, so when he saw Moses performing such wondrous exertions of power, he might justly conclude that he deserved to be reckoned a deity, as much as those heroes who were esteemed the objects of popular adoration.

And Aaron—shall be thy prophet.] The Chaldee and Arabic render, Thy interpreter.

5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, &c.] The intention of the miracles wrought by Moses in Egypt, was, not only to procure the deliverance of the Israelites, but likewise to explode their superstition, and to punish the crimes by which they supported it. What could be better calculated for this purpose, than to prove, even to the people, (for their priests and chief magistrates knew it before) that every one of their pretended deities were invested with no power, either to punish or to save them? All the miracles wrought in Egypt, were wrought in opposition to some deity, worshipped by the natives; and, considered in this light, were admirably well fitted to confirm the Israelites in the doctrine of the unity, and appear at the same time a regular chain of facts, proper to reclaim the Egyptians, and to convince the world, that "The heavens and the earth are the Lord's."

10 Rod—became a serpent.] Pharaoh had before asked who Jehovah was? And he shew that he was really God, and that they were sent by him, Aaron throws down his rod, and it becomes a serpent: A serpent, in the Egyptian hieroglyphics, denoted a deity.

12 But

12 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: But Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

13 And he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

15 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come; and the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

16 And thou shalt say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness: and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

17 Thus saith the LORD, In this thou shalt know that I am the LORD: behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and they shall be turned to blood.

18 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians shall lothe to drink of the water of the river.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their pools of water, that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

21 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink of the water of the river; and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

22 And the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; as the LORD had said.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither did he set his heart to this also.

24 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

12 But Aaron's rod swallowed up all.] Thus far both parties appear equal; but the superiority soon became manifest, when Aaron's rod swallowed those of the magicians; an evident prognostic of the event of the ensuing contest, wherein Jehovah vanquished and destroyed all the gods of Egypt in reality, as he did here in symbols.

And he hardened, &c.] It here appears that Pharaoh's obduracy was owing to himself, and that he was inclinable to give credit to Moses, till he saw his own priests perform an equal miracle. Yet he overlooked the manifest advantage which appeared on the side of Moses, that of Aaron's rod swallowing up those of the magicians.

14 Heart is hardened, &c.] In Hebrew, Is heavy. 15 Goeth out unto the water, &c.] Either to pay his devotion to the river, or to bathe, in order to purify himself to offer up his adoration to the sun, or some other deity. Moses is directed to take this opportunity to meet with Pharaoh, because he might not have had so easy access to him at court.

20 All the waters—were turned to blood.] The Egyptians looked upon waters as objects of adoration, but especially the river Nile. Therefore God's depriving them of all its utility, was no unlikely means to reclaim them from this species of idolatry. And since they were so barbarously superstitious in their devotions to this river, as to stain its current with human sacrifices; his turning their water into blood, was but a just and suitable punishment for such bloody cruelties.

21 And the fish, &c.] The fish became immediately unfit for use, the nutritive property being instantly changed, into another of a most pestiferous nature. The water was not only of the colour of blood, but it brought great pains and bitter torments upon those who ventured to drink of it. However, Josephus says, that the waters were reduced to this state of putrefaction, only to the Egyptians; and that to the Israelites they continued sweet, potable, and in their natural state.

22 And the magicians—did so, &c.] They were the persons named Jannes and Jambres, mentioned Tim. iii. 1. Pliny calls them Jananes and Jotapha, and mentions them as the founders of the sect of magicians. In the Talmud, they are celebrated under the names No. 8.

25 And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

Before CHRIST 1491.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VII.

Here we may observe, that whatever men have inconsiderately thought, yet sedate, attentive, and unprejudiced reason, will, the longer, and more accurately it weighs the subject, be more and more determined, that no power whatsoever but God can create or change the powers of nature, so that inanimate motion should become animate, and a stick become a serpent. The allowing of this, is in effect allowing a plurality of Gods. It leaves no characteristic to distinguish God by, or on which he may found his claim to a worship exclusive of all others, which is the great point the scriptures labour to establish, and which is the foundation of true religion. What is God's claim to our sole worship, but that he is the father of beings, the creator of all things, the maker of heaven and earth, the sea, and all that is therein? But if we allow other beings can create things, or bring other beings into existence, we overthrow the foundation of this claim, and take away God's characteristic, or that which makes him God. They therefore most grievously err, who think that the wise men of Egypt actually changed their rods into serpents, by the assistance of evil demons or spirits. If their rods were actually changed into serpents, we may conclude for certainty without having the least doubt about it, that it was done by the power of God alone, who might see fit reasons for doing some things the same by their hands, as he did by Aaron's; but with this distinction that Aaron, who was his messenger, had the superiority preserved to him. Thus his rod swallowed up all the rods of the magicians; and it seems probable that he turned a much greater quantity of water into blood than they did.

CHAP. VIII.

The plague of frogs is threatened: 5 They are sent. 8 Pharaoh saith to Moses, who by prayer removeth them. 16 The dust is turned into lice, which the magicians could not do. 20 The plague of flies. 25 Pharaoh inclineth to let the people go, but is hardened.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

2 And if thou refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with frogs:

3 And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into thy bedchamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading troughs:

4 And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

of Jochani and Marari. The difference between the power which accompanied Moses in this miracle, and that which the magicians were invested with, appears with great advantage in favour of the former; for though the magicians imitated the Jewish legislator in working the miracle, they were not able to remove the calamities which it exposed them to.

23 Neither did he set his heart to this also.] To acquire an adequate idea of the greatness of this calamity, we should recollect that the land of Egypt was not refreshed by gentle showers, or rendered fruitful by the early or the latter rain; but that all their water in these parts was supplied by the river Nile; and that river was turned into blood! The magicians, who could imitate the miracle by turning water into blood, were unable to restore the waters of the Nile to their natural state; but Pharaoh did not hearken or attend to this circumstance, and instead of learning wisdom from his misfortunes, grew vain of the power of his magicians.

25 And seven days were fulfilled, &c.] This verse does not determine how long the plague continued; but only how long a space intervened between the turning of the waters into blood, and the miracles of the frogs. It should be observed, the Bible originally formed one continued narrative, the division into chapters being a modern invention; and if we join this verse with the first of the next chapter, it will run thus. And seven days after the turning of the waters into blood, God spake unto Moses.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON Chap. VIII.

1 And the Lord spake unto Moses, Go unto Pharaoh, &c.] What renders Pharaoh utterly inexcusable, is, that he has still warning given him, before God sends his plagues upon him, that so, by timely repentance, he might have prevented them.

2 With frogs.] The original word is Egyptian, and signifies toads, which were peculiar to this country.

3 Shall bring forth, &c.] In the Vulgate and Samaritan, Shall boil out; the Septuagint, Shall belch out; in the Arabic, Shall swarm out; and in the old English translation, Shall scral with frogges.

Before
1491

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

7 And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Intreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, Glory over me: when shall I intreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

10 And he said, To-morrow. And he said, Be it according to thy word: that thou mayest know that there is none like unto the LORD our God.

11 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses cried unto the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

13 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land stank.

15 But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

17 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and it became lice in man, and in beast; all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

18 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they could not: so there were lice upon man and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the finger of God: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh; lo, he cometh forth to the water; and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

22 And I will sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.

23 And I will put a division between my people and thy people: to morrow shall this sign be.

24 And the LORD did so; and there came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: the land was corrupted by reason of the swarm of flies.

25 ¶ And

6 And the frogs came up, &c.] As the banks of the Nile was the grand scene of their magical operations, in which blood and frogs made the principal part of the apparatus, so, by commanding the river to produce such an infinite multitude of these creatures to annoy them, he adapted their chastisement to the nature of their crimes; adapted it indeed with wonderful propriety; for frogs were not only the instruments of their abominations, but likewise the emblems of those impure demons whom they invoked by their incantations.

7 Brought up frogs, &c.] We have already pointed out an advantage which the miracles of Moses had over those of the magicians, in the note on ver. 22. of the preceding chapter. It will not be amiss to attend to an objection made against this miracle by infidels. It is known, say they, that the Nile, after its inundations, generally leaves a slime, which teems with an infinite multitude of frogs and other vermin: to assert, therefore, that the producing of frogs from a river which abounded with them, is so far from being miraculous, that it should be esteemed a natural and common event. In reply, we beg leave to observe, that miracles are of two sorts; those where the laws of nature are suspended or reversed; and those which only give a new direction to its laws. As it would be impious to bring in natural causes to explain the first sort, so totally to exclude those causes in the latter would be superstitious. Miracles not being an ostentation, but a necessary instrument of God's moral government, we need not suppose he would create the frogs on this occasion, but make use of those which already lay stored up against the day of visitation. By this means his wisdom appears as conspicuous in his power, when it is seen that the animals which had been of no detriment to the Egyptians before were turned into scourges, when their king became tyrannically cruel and impiously rebellious to his demands.

8 Intreat the Lord, that he may take away, &c.] The multitude of frogs was so great, that they wasted all that part of Egypt; the river swarmed with them to so great a degree, that all the water was polluted with them, they died and rotted in such numbers. This inconvenience spread all over the land, and every domestic office was stopped by them; they were in their victuals and in their drink, and made their way in many places into their beds. Well might Pharaoh beg Moses to intreat the Lord to take them away. Pharaoh called for Moses, because he saw that the magicians had only added to the plague, and could not lessen it.

9 Glory over me, &c.] In Hebrew, Have this honour over me. This circumstance is not only calculated to raise our admiration, but likewise to obviate every objection which the prejudices of the Egyptians might suggest; they were permitted to assign their own time when they would have the plague removed; whence they might plainly see, that Jehovah alone was the author both of their sufferings and deliverances; and that no planetary aspect was so favourable or malign, but that he could afflict or relieve them at what time he pleased.

12 Concerning the word of the frogs. The Vulgate renders it, For the promise of the frogs; the Chaldee, For the afflict of the frogs; the Samaritan, Arabic, and Syriac, support our translation.

15 He hardened his heart, &c.] This illustrates what has been offered on the subject of his obduracy, chap. iv. 21. and vii. 13. and vindicates the attributes of God.

17 Smote the dust of the earth, and it became lice, &c.] The Vulgate, Septuagint, Chaldee, and Samaritan, translate, Gnats. Our translation is supported by Josephus; and if we consider how remarkably nice and cleanly the Egyptians are reported to have been, nothing could have shocked them more, nothing could have been more grievous than this plague. The earth was, under the name of Isis, an object of their adoration. To convince them, therefore, that it does not afford its life-sustaining productions, by an independent virtue of its own, but only in consequence of a divine establishment, God reversed the nature of his productions. Before they were nourished by what the earth produced, now they were devoured by it.

18 And the magicians did so, &c.] The ancient translations render this so as to imply that they used the same visible action to produce life; i. e. they struck the dust with the rod, or endeavoured likewise, but were unable to produce the miracle.

19 The finger of God, &c.] Some apply this expression to the miracle, and then it signifies, that it was undoubtedly the operation of some deity, and consequently above the powers of humanity or magic to imitate. Others apply it to the inability of the magicians to perform this miracle; and in that case it signifies, that they were restrained by some superior power from being imitated.

21 Swarms of flies, &c.] The Hebrew word beorah, signifies A mixture; the Vulgate and Septuagint support our translation; the Septuagint translate it, The dog-flies; the Syriac renders it, Gnats, which seems more consistent with the context; and as this insect, among others, was introduced by the Egyptian hieroglyphics into the muster-roll of their religious symbols, this miracle shewed the natives that the gods worshipped under those symbols were not able to save, though they might be forced to afflict them.

22 I will sever in that day] The Hebrew signifies, I will make a glorious distinction or separation, &c. The Vulgate renders, I will make the land of Goshen wonderful.

I am the Lord in the midst of the earth.] This truth subverted the whole system of the pagans, by laying open the secrets of their mysteries, exploding the doctrine of local tutelary deities, and asserting that there was but one God, who was no respecter of persons; who was confirmed in his essence by place, unlimited in the exercise of his power by distance, and being every where present, was every where the only object of adoration.

23 Put a division, &c.] In Hebrew, A redemption; which is supported by the Samaritan and Chaldee. The Arabic renders, I will procure liberty to my people from what shall happen unto thy people, &c.

24 And the Lord did so] The Samaritan represents Moses and Aaron going to Pharaoh, and repeating before him the speech which God had made to them in the preceding verses, which this translation inserts at length; and it must be confessed, that the initial words of this verse, "And the Lord did so," must naturally follow the visitation of God's speech by Moses before Pharaoh, than the speech of God to Moses, as in the Hebrew text.

The land was corrupted, &c.] In Hebrew, Was destroyed; the Septuagint may be rendered, Was laid waste.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

27 We will go three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as he shall command us.

28 And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: intreat for me.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: but let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD.

31 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one.

32 And Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VIII.

The great point that was intended by all these plagues that were brought upon Egypt, was, not only that Pharaoh, but that all the earth, might know that the God of Israel, the creator and possessor of heaven and earth, could do every thing; that all things were in his hand; that all the powers of nature, in whatever shape or being, were no more than laws of his establishing, which he could suspend or alter in whatsoever manner he pleased. And this is the God we profess to serve! What confidence and trust ought we then to have in him! and what high conceptions ought we to entertain of him!

CHAP. IX.

1 The murrain of beasts. 2 The plague of boils and blains. 13 The plague of hail is threatened, 22 and sent. 27 Pharaoh sueth to Moses, but is still hardened.

¶ THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

26 We shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians, &c.] The Egyptians esteemed it a profanation to sacrifice any kind of cattle, except swine, bulls, clean calves, and geese; and heifers, rams, and goats, were held sacred either in one province or another. According to this, the Israelites could not have avoided sacrificing the abomination of the Egyptians, and with hatred and revenge they pursued such imaginary impieties, is notorious to all that are acquainted with their history.

29 And Moses said, Behold, I go out—and I will intreat the Lord.] These plagues were sent for his reformation, not for his destruction; therefore he is not more ready to desire, than Moses is to intreat, and the Lord to grant, the total removal thereof.

To-morrow, &c.] He is suffered to be a while under the smart of the rod, that he might be truly humbled.

There remained not one.] The frogs remained in heaps and stank, ver. 14. But these flies were all swept away, perhaps by a mighty wind, either into the sea, or into the deserts of Lybia.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IX.

3 The head of the Lord is upon, &c.] This threat is expressed in the present tense in the original, to shew the certainty and suddenness of this calamity.

4 There shall nothing die—that is the children of Israel's.] To convince the Egyptians, that the God who wrought these miracles among them was the God of Israel, he made a visible distinction between the two nations. From whence they might easily draw this conclusion, that the Lord was as gracious to the faithful and obedient, as he was terrible to the rebellious and ungodly.

5 Between this and the sixth verse, the Samaritan introduces Moses as having access to Pharaoh, and repeating the charges and speech which God commands him to deliver in the preceding verses.

To-morrow the Lord shall do this, &c.] These miraculous judgments came upon them by progressive advances; and proper intervals of respite were allowed them to consider and reflect upon what had been done; that, seeing, by their punishment, wherein they had

2 For if thou refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still, Before CHRIST 1491.

3 Behold, the hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.

4 And the LORD shall sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed a set time, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast.

11 And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils; for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

12 And the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with the pestilence: and thou shalt be cut off from the earth.

offended, they might return from their wickedness, and believe in the Lord.

6 All the cattle, &c.] All those that were in the field, as appears from ver. 19. The deities of the Egyptians were, during the most early ages described by hieroglyphics, in which beasts, birds, plants, reptiles, and every species of the animal or vegetable creation, were used as symbols, or characters of their deities. The living animals, expressed in hieroglyphic characters, were in process of time deemed sacred on account of this circumstance, though not worshipped till after the time of Moses; the subjecting therefore the living animals to this pestilence (whose pictures, in symbolic hieroglyphics, denoted the peculiar deities of the Egyptians) was, in effect, opposing and warring against the deities themselves.

9 Shall be a boil breaking forth, &c.] Vulcan, or the element of fire, was a peculiar deity of the Egyptians, which was borrowed from the Greeks; and this plague which proceeded from the hot ashes, or ashes of the furnace, was wrought in opposition to this deity, and to convince the Egyptians of the vanity of confiding either in his aid or protection.

11 Could not stand before Moses, &c.] They had been able to contend with him hitherto; but his superiority over them was now so manifest, by their being afflicted with the boil, as well as the rest of the Egyptians, that they were not only obliged to acknowledge his pre-eminence, but were ashamed to appear in his sight, or come into Pharaoh's presence, though they waited on his person.

15 I will—smite thee and thy people, &c.] The Hebrew signifies, Now I have, or had stretched out my hand, and thou hadst been cut off. And in this sense some interpreters have rendered the words, to evade what they think a contradiction, which is, that Pharaoh and his people were not destroyed with the pestilence. According to them, this verse should be connected with the following, thus: I had stretched out my hand to destroy thee and thy people by the (late) pestilence, and thou shouldst have been cut off from the earth; but, indeed, for this very cause I have preserved thee, to shew in thee, my power, &c.

Before
1491.

16 And in very deed for this cause have I raised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, to morrow about this time I will cause it to rain ■ very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 Send therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field; for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout all the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

26 Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 Intreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how that the earth is the LORD's.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

16 For this cause have I raised thee up. &c.] In Hebrew, I have made thee to stand. The word bagnamad signifies not to raise into being, but to preserve, establish, or restore, ■ ■ Kings xv. 4. Prov. xxix. 4.

18 I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, &c.] The air was one of their chief divinities. And to convince them that the salubrity of their climate, the healthiness of their constitutions, the exuberance, growth, and maturity of their vegetable productions, did not, as they imagined, proceed immediately, independently, and solely from this element; the Lord strengthened the air to reprove their error, and caused it to produce such dreadful storms of hail, thunder, and lightning, as had never been known since the foundation of Egypt; whereby the greatest part of the herbage and fruit was blasted and destroyed.

20 He that feared, &c.] Which conduct of Pharaoh's servants must have been in consequence of the delivery of the preceding message, though that delivery is not recorded in the Hebrew, as it is in the Samaritan. Hence we may infer, that if these speeches were originally expressed twice, as seems probable from the irregularity of the Hebrew, we must conclude, that the repetitions, now regularly obtaining in the Samaritan, were designedly omitted in the Hebrew for brevity; and they were omitted very early, as they are expressed only once in the Septuagint, and other translations.

32 The wheat.] The Egyptians were averse to eating wheat; this word should therefore be translated reap, or "spelt," which was then in frequent use; and, as modern travellers inform us, in use at present.

Not grown up.] In Hebrew, Hidden, or dark. Though some commentators interpret it in the same sense as our translators, yet Rochart judiciously observes, that it signifies, they were not yet ased.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolled.

32 But the wheat and the rye were not smitten: for they were not grown up.

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken by Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. IX.

In this chapter it should be noticed, that God, and Moses (who acts under his authority) appoint a set or particular time both for bringing on the plagues and removing them, and this too at so short a distance ■ the nature of an appointment would admit; and once we find it left to Pharaoh himself to fix it; which was done, that the Egyptians, who were possessed with highly superstitious notions of the influences of the heavenly bodies at particular times, should not think that Moses took advantage of his knowledge of these times to work all the wonders that he did.

CHAP. X.

1 God threateneth to send locusts. 7 Pharaoh at the instance of his servants is inclined to let the Israelites go, but at length refuseth. 12 The plague of locusts. 16 Pharaoh again sueth to Moses, getteth them removed, and is hardened. 21 The plague of darkness. 24 Pharaoh sueth again to Moses, 27 but still is hardened.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, that I might shew these my signs before him:

2 And that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me? let my people go, that they may serve me.

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to morrow will I bring the locusts into thy coasts.

5 And they shall cover the face of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field:

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

1 For I have hardened, &c.] The Hebrew particle chi, rendered "for," may be translated, Though, and the sense will then be, Though all my judgments have hitherto had no other effect upon him, than to render him more resolute, more obdurate, and more pertinacious.

2 That thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, &c.] Though the immediate object of the miracles wrought in Egypt, was, the deliverance of the Israelites, yet they had no other collateral and future ones; they were intended to give the neighbouring nations ■ conspicuous, and the Egyptians an ocular demonstration, that the doctrine of local, tutelary deities, was inconsistent with the divine majesty, and that the supposed tutelar god of the Hebrews was likewise the God of all the earth; they were intended ■ ■ barrier to idolatry for the future, and were ordered to be transmitted by the Israelites to their latest posterity, ■ the best expedient to counteract the strong attachment they had to incorporate the idolatrous rites of other nations with those of the worship of the true God, and to prevent their adopting the superstitious of Egypt, which were the more dangerous, ■ they were the most venerable, and the foundation of all others.

3 And Moses and Aaron came—and said, &c.] The Samaritan copy continues the message of God till the sixth verse, without any interruption; and, instead of the first words of this verse, reads, And ye shall say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the Lord God of the Hebrews, &c.

4, ■ I will bring the locusts—and they shall cover, &c.] The possibility of such an event is strongly asserted; for in Scythia they ■ brought thither by the north-east wind in such numbers, that they form ■ vast cloud, sometimes fifteen or eighteen miles long and about ten or twelve broad; which obscures the light of the sun, and produces a sudden darkness amidst the brightest day.

6 And they shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; which neither thy fathers, nor thy father's fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

7 ¶ And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be a snare unto us? let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go; for we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go and your little ones: look to it; for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

14 And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 For they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

16 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and intreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this death only.

18 And he went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the Red sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt. Before CHRIST 1491.

20 But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt.

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days.

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

24 ¶ And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices and burnt offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

26 Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither.

27 ¶ But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, Get thee from me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more; for in that day thou shalt see my face thou shalt die.

29 And Moses said, Thou hast spoken well, I will see thy face again no more.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. X.

Let us with holy care observe, that God intends the judgments which he executeth standing memorials of his supreme power and authority over all creatures, and of his victorious power over the kingdom of Satan, in restraining the malice and chastising the insolence of his and his people's enemies: that there is nothing, for which God more readily quarrels with men, than for their pride: that whole nations are often ruined, through the pride and obstinacy of their governors: that when Satan hath got sinners to the brink of ruin, he exerts all his might in pushing them down headlong: that the early engagement of children in the service of God is exceedingly contrary to the inclination and interests of the devil and his agents: that proud contemners of God's messengers will be obliged to stoop to them at last: that professions of repentance, extorted by punishment, are but hypocritical, and quickly issue in more obstinate relapses into wickedness: that such baffle manifold convictions, may expect to be given up to such hardness of heart, that nothing, however alarming, will impress their conscience: that the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much: it often, for a time, diverts the just vengeance of God from his insolent enemies: that the wicked need not hasten the godly from among them; for if once a full separation be made, the former will be inexpressibly miserable.

CHAP.

6 Between the words, "unto this day, and he turned himself," the Samaritan represents Moses as going to Pharaoh, and delivering the speech included in the 3d, 4th, and 5th verses of this chapter.

¶ Who are they that shall go? In Hebrew, Who and who are going? which the Septuagint, Chaldee, Samaritan, Syriac, and Arabic, have preserved in their translations.

9 And Moses said, We will go with our young, and with our old, &c. The reason why all were to go, was, because they were to hold a feast unto the LORD; and in these solemnities the whole body of the nation, men, women, and children, assisted.

10 Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go. Though some imagine this to be an ironical expression, yet it seems rather to be a strong denial, expressed in the form of an imprecation.

Look to it, for evil, &c.] This sentence may imply, that Pharaoh perceived the injury they intended him in withdrawing from his kingdom, or that he threatened them with some punishment in case they quitted it.

13 The east wind brought the locusts.] The word kedim is rendered, the "south-wind," by the Septuagint; but it should be observed, that the Greeks divided the heavens into two parts, the north and the south; the former of which included the north and west, and the latter the south and east; according to this rule, it was the south-wind, properly so called, which brought the locusts into Egypt, from Ethiopia, where they abound more than in any country. The winds were worshipped by the Egyptians; and the making use of them as instruments of their punishment, shewed at once the vanity of their superstition, and the wisdom of the God of the universe.

15 The face of the whole earth, &c.] Some Jewish commentators imagine, that the swarm of locusts intercepted the light of the sun; which agrees with the next sentence, "so that the land was darkened."

16 Called for Moses, &c.] In Hebrew, Pharaoh hastened to call; which is preserved in all the oriental translations, and conveys the idea of his impatience and calamity.

17 Take away from me this death, &c.] This is a strong expression; it is preserved in all the antient translations; and the locusts ranged the fields, killed the vegetables, and destroyed the necessary support of life, it will be found to have been no less true than it is strong.

19 A mighty strong west wind.] In the Hebrew, A wind of the sea. And cast them into the Red sea, &c.] This sentence in the Hebrew conveys the idea of such removal of them, that it should not be in their power to return.

22 And there was a thick darkness, &c.] The sun, moon, and stars, were the supreme objects of their adorations; the first religious adoration paid by the creature was the worship of the heavenly bodies. They were the only deities that were worshipped by the first inhabitants of the earth, and this species of idolatry was the first every where also, as well as in Egypt. But that it was so there, we have good internal evidence, from a circumstance in their hieroglyphics, the most antient method of recording knowledge, where a star denoted or expressed the idea of the deity. Jehovah, to demonstrate his superiority over these exalted parts of nature, suspended their lights and emanations, and covered all the land of Egypt with thick darkness for three days.

23 Neither rose any from his place, &c.] The Septuagint render, Neither arose any from his bed.

25 Thou must give us also sacrifices, &c.] In Hebrew, and thou shalt give in our hands sacrifices, &c. They were not only to sacrifice, but likewise to hold a feast, at which both sacrifices and burnt-offerings were requisite.

29 I will see thy face again no more.] Though the next chapter represents Moses making the denunciation of the death of the first-born

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: when he shall let you go, he shall surely thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover the man Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.

4 ¶ And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

5 And all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maid-servant that is behind the mill; and all the firstborn of beasts.

6 And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee: and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in a great anger.

born after this promise; yet it may be reconciled with truth, if we allow that the legislator intended to take his leave in the manner he expressed: but God immediately inspiring him with the speech related in the next chapter, he delivered it to Pharaoh before he quitted his palace.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XI.

1 And the Lord said unto Moses] Or, had said unto Moses. The attentive reader will observe, that the fourth verse of this chapter immediately connects with the end of the preceding, and is a continuation of Moses's conference with Pharaoh; for he himself tells us, chap. x. 29. that he would see Pharaoh's face no more; and true it is said, ver. 8. "he went out from Pharaoh in a great anger," therefore the connection will be plain, if we include the three first verses of this chapter in a parenthesis, and make the words "the Lord said" refer to some time past, "the Lord had said," chap. iii. 20, 21, 22, and iv. 22.

He shall surely thrust, &c.] In Hebrew, Thrusting out, i. e. he shall urge you earnestly and hastily to be gone, chap. xii. 31, 33.

2 Let every man borrow of his neighbour] The Hebrew word saal, as we have observed before, signifies not to borrow, but to ask, to beg, or to pray for, as appears from Psalms xxi. 4. cxxii. 6. and Prov. xx. 4.

Jewels of silver, &c.] In Hebrew, Vessels of silver. The original word cheli signifies "vessels;" and the rendering it so far better than jewels, since a silver jewel, or a golden jewel, is not so intelligible as a silver and golden vessel or thing in general. It is probable that the chargers, bowls, or spoons of silver and gold, mentioned Numb. vii. were the very vessels given by the Egyptians.

3 And the Lord gave the people, &c.] This verse in the Hebrew text containing no part of any speech, and being purely the narration of the historian, we totally lose sight of Pharaoh. The interview is intirely at an end, and we wonder to read in the verse following, "And Moses said, Thus saith," &c. when it is not obvious to whom he can be addressing himself. Besides this, a great impropriety and anachronism is introduced; for the time when God actually gave the people this favour, was not before Moses had declared to Pharaoh the destruction of the firstborn, but after that this judgment had been executed; and therefore we find the history of this matter regularly given in chap. xii. 36. The Samaritan, which reads this verse, And I will give this people favour, in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they shall give them what they ask; represents the verse as a continuation of God's speech to Moses, gives consistency to the chapter, and preserves the unity of the interview.

4 The Samaritan continues the speech till ver. 7. in the person of God, thus: "About midnight I will go forth into the midst of the land of Egypt, &c." And after premising the character of Moses, and insinuating that he was held in great esteem and 9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you; that my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: and the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XI.

Here are two remarks to be made for our instruction: 1st, That God having commanded the Israelites to carry away with them the gold and silver of the Egyptians, they did it justly, because they did it by the order of God, who is the absolute master of all things in the world, and bestows them upon whom he pleases. 2dly, It is of importance to observe, that the hardness of Pharaoh ought to be attributed to nothing but his own desperate wickedness; and though it be often said in this history, that God hardened Pharaoh's heart, it must not be understood as if God was the author of his obstinacy. God permits, indeed, sinners to harden themselves, and to have opportunities of establishing themselves in their wickedness; yet their destruction proceeds only from themselves, and not from God; who, far from being the cause of it, does all that is necessary to keep them from falling into it.

2 This month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.

3 ¶ Speak

ration both by Pharaoh and his great officers, as well as by the inferior class of Egyptians; the Samaritan opens Moses's speech in the fourth, in the following manner, And Moses said unto Pharaoh; Thus saith the Lord, Israel is my son, my firstborn; and I said unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: but thou hast refused to let him go: behold, therefore, Jehovah slayeth thy son, thy firstborn. After which, it proceeds in repeating the general message contained in the following verses: Thus, saith the Lord, &c. If we look back to chap. iv. 21, 22, 23. we shall find, that as Moses was in the way to Egypt, to demand the dismissal of his brethren, God commanded him, that when he had done all the wonders before Pharaoh, and to no purpose, then he should say unto Pharaoh, "Israel is my son," &c. This then being expressly in the original commission of Moses, we find it not in the speech of Moses in this chapter.

I will go out, &c.] In the Chaldee, I will appear; in the Arabic, I will make my angel walk through the land of Egypt.

5 All the firstborn, &c.] The death of every firstborn of the Egyptians carried so lively a resemblance, and bore so natural a relation to their sin in destroying every male of the Israelites, that they must needs perceive it was inflicted as a punishment for that very cruelty; and consequently must conclude; that the God of Israel took particular cognizance of human transactions, and sooner or later, rewarded every man according to his works.

8 All the people that follow thee] In Hebrew, All the people that is at thy feet; in the Vulgate, All the people that is subject unto thee; in the Septuagint, All the people, whom thou leadest away; in the Chaldee, All the people that is with thee; in the Samaritan, All the people that is behind thy feet. The Syriac and Arabic confirm the Chaldee.

He went out from Pharaoh in a great anger.] In Hebrew, In anger of fury; in the Samaritan text, With ardour, or burning of anger; but in the Samaritan version, With vehemence of anger; which is confirmed by the Arabic. Some contend, that it should be rendered, He went out from Pharaoh, who was in great anger.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

1 And the Lord spake unto Moses, &c.] This passage may be in the preter tense, And the Lord spoke; for it appears from ver. 3, and 6. that Moses had this revelation before the tenth day, on which most interpreters think the three days darkness began; and the subject of this chapter was postponed, to prevent the breaking the series of wonders wrought by Moses.

2 This month shall be unto you the beginning of months, &c.] Their year commenced about the autumnal equinox; but to commemorate their happy deliverance from Egypt, was to commence from this month, which they called Abib, "an ear of corn," because the corn was then eared in that country, and it answers nearly to our March. It should likewise be observed, that this month is the first

3 ¶ Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house :

4 And if the household be too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it according to the number of the souls ; every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb.

5 Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year : ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats :

6 And ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month : and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening.

7 And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts, and on the upper door post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread ; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

9 Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but roast with fire ; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof.

10 And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning ; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.

11 ¶ And thus shall ye eat it ; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand ; and ye shall eat it in haste : it is the LORD's passover.

12 For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast ; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment : I am the LORD.

13 And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are : and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt.

14 And this day shall be unto you for a memorial ; and ye shall keep it a feast to the LORD throughout your generations ; ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever.

15 ¶ Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread ; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses : for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

16 And in the first day there shall be an holy convocation, and in the seventh day there shall be an holy convocation to you ; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you.

of the sacred, not of the civil year. It was at this time that our Lord suffered for our redemption : and there is a tradition among the Jews, that as they were redeemed from Egypt on the fifteenth day of Nisan, so they should on the same day be redeemed by the Messiah.

3 In the tenth day of this month] This interval was allowed them to procure themselves as many lambs as were necessary : but in future ages they did not begin their preparation till the thirteenth, or the day before the passover. Though this circumstance be peculiar to the passover in Egypt, yet it justly represents our Saviour's triumphant entry into Jerusalem, on the 10th day of this month, John xii. 1, 12.

They shall take to every man a lamb] The Hebrew signifies likewise a kid.

A lamb for an house] The Hebrew word beth, rendered "a house," signifies a whole people, the house of Israel ; and sometimes a tribe, as the house of Levi. But in this place it denotes those who lived under one master, or head of a family.

4 If the household be too little, &c.] The rabbinical authors inform us, that there were no less than ten, nor more than twenty persons to one lamb.

5 Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year, &c.] The lamb was to be without blemish, or perfect, as the Hebrew signifies, to represent that moral purity without which an act of worship can be acceptable to God.

7 They shall take of the blood, and strike it, &c.] They were not to stain the threshold with blood, because it was always considered as profane to tread on the blood.

8 Unleavened bread] Pure, unmixed, incorrupted, leaven being a kind of corruption. The use of unleavened bread might be enjoined to remind them of sincerity ; though others think it was or-

17 And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread ; for in this selfsame day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt : therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance for ever.

18 In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at even, ye shall eat unleavened bread, until the one and twentieth day of the month at even.

19 Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses : for whosoever eateth that which is leavened, even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he be a stranger, or born in the land.

20 Ye shall eat nothing leavened ; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out and take you a lamb according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the basin ; and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

23 For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians ; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26 And it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service ?

27 That ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, that at midnight the LORD smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the dungeon ; and all the firstborn of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians ; and there was a great cry in Egypt ; for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

31 ¶ And he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and dered to commemorate their hasty deliverance, which did not allow them time to leaven it.

With bitter herbs, &c.] To remind them of their Egyptian bondage, which made their lives bitter to them.

9 Eat not of it raw, &c.] Let any of the blood remain in it ; but thoroughly roasted, that so it might be wholly eaten up.

11 Shall ye eat it, with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet] You shall eat in a travelling posture, that you may be ready to set out on your journey at a moment's warning.

It is the LORD's passover.] A sacrifice in remembrance of Jehovah's passing over, or sparing the Israelites, when he smote the Egyptians.

12 Against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment, &c.] The idol gods, which the Egyptians worshipped ; which seem to be alluded to, Isaiah xix. 1. and Jer. xliii. 13.

16 An holy convocation, &c.] A solemn festival, when the people were assembled by the sound of trumpets, to offer sacrifices, and perform other duties of religion.

18 At even, &c.] The Jewish feasts begin at even.

19 Whether he be a stranger, &c.] That is, a person of another nation who had embraced the Jewish religion ; for no other strangers were admitted to this feast.

21 Kill the passover] That is, kill the paschal lamb.

23 When he seeth the blood, &c.] The whole sacrifice was a type of the Messiah, who took the human nature upon him, and shed his precious blood to wash away the sins of the world.

29 All the firstborn of cattle.] That is, the best, the prime of their cattle. The Egyptians lived promiscuously with their cattle, so that the angel smote at the same time both them and those animals they considered as sacred.

Before CHRIST 1491. and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both thee and the children of Israel; and go, serve the Lord, as ye have said.

32 Also take your flocks and your herds, ~~as~~ ye have said, and be gone; and bless me also.

33 And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, We be all dead men.

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their kneading troughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and they borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment:

36 And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required. And they spoiled the Egyptians.

37 ¶ And the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand on foot that were men, beside children.

38 And a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because they were thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

40 ¶ Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years.

41 And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

42 It is a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover: There shall no stranger eat thereof:

44 But every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.

45 A foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.

46 In one house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house; neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

47 All the congregation of Israel shall keep it.

48 And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be ~~as~~ one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

49 One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.

50 Thus did all the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

51 And it came to pass the selfsame day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XII.

We may learn from this history, how God subdued the fierceness of Pharaoh, and constrained him to let the children of Israel go; and how that people went out of Egypt in full liberty, and with great riches. This memorable event proves clearly the love of God to his people, and the faithful performance of his promises; we see likewise his pleasure, that the memory of so wonderful a deliverance should be preserved by means of the passover; and thereby we ought to learn to remember God's favours towards us, and all his wonderful works; but especially what Jesus Christ has done to save us; and to return him for ever those thanks which are due to him.

C H A P. XIII.

1 The firstborn are sanctified to God. 3 The memorial of the deliverance from Egyptian bondage commanded to be observed yearly. 11 The firstlings of man and beast are set apart to God. 17 The Israelites carry Joseph's bones with them out of Egypt. 20 They come to Etham, God guided them by a pillar of a cloud, and of fire.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Sanctify unto me all the firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and of beast: it is mine.

3 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for by strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place: there shall no leavened bread be eaten.

4 This day came ye out in the month Abib.

5 And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, that thou shalt keep this service in this month.

6 Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

8 And thou shalt shew thy son in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt.

9 And it shall be for a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the LORD's law may be in thy mouth: for with a strong hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt.

10 Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season from year to year.

11 ¶ And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, as he sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee, 12 That thou shalt set apart unto the LORD all that opened the matrix, and every firstling that cometh of a beast which thou hast; the male shall be the LORD's.

13 And every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb; and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all the firstborn of man among thy children shalt thou redeem.

14 And

32 Bless me also.] That is, to pray to Jehovah, that I and my people may be delivered from this terrible pestilence.

37 Succoth.] Booths, from the tents they erected for their cattle. There was another place of the same name in the land of Canaan, Gen. xxxiii. 17, &c.

Six hundred thousand ~~on~~ foot, &c.] i. e. Persons fit to bear arms; twenty years old and upwards. But this was not above one-third of the whole number of people that went up out of Egypt. A surprising increase in little more than two hundred years, from seventy persons only!

38 A mixed multitude went up also with them, &c.] Egyptians who had embraced the religion of the Hebrews.

41 The hosts of the Lord, &c.] They ~~are~~ termed "the hosts of the Lord," because he led them by a pillar of a cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night, during their whole route through the wilderness. From the word "hosts" we learn, that they went ~~in~~ of Egypt in good order, like troops marching to meet the enemy.

46 Neither shall ye break a bone thereof.] This type was particularly fulfilled in Christ the great Redeemer of mankind.

48 No uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.] Many Israelites who had neglected this rite in Egypt, were now circumcised, that they might keep the passover.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on CHAP. XIII.

¶ Sanctify unto me all the firstborn] Let them be accounted sacred, to put them in mind of the tender mercy of the Almighty in sparing their firstborn, when those of the Egyptians ~~were~~ destroyed.

Both of man and of beast: it is mine.] This was afterwards revoked, the Levites being chosen to officiate in their stead.

8 Thou shalt shew thy son in that day, &c.] Moses commands the Israelites to inform their children, when they were settled in Canaan, of the true intent of the passover, that they might offer thanksgivings to God, who had so miraculously delivered the people from the slavish bondage of the Egyptians.

13 Thou shalt break his neck, &c.] Or cut off his neck; it was to die ~~in~~ way or other, and not to be employed in common use.

14 And it shall be when thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, What is this? that thou shalt say unto him, By strength of hand the LORD brought us out from Egypt, from the house of bondage:

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly let us go, that the LORD slew all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both the firstborn of man, and the firstborn of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the firstborn of my children I redeem.

16 And it shall be for a token upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt:

18 But God led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea: and the children of Israel went up harnessed out of the land of Egypt.

19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you.

20 ¶ And they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.

21 And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night:

22 He took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XIII.

God's command to the people of Israel, to celebrate the passover every year, and to consecrate to him the firstborn, should teach us to remember the favour that he bestows upon us; and to testify our acknowledgments, by devoting to him our persons, and all that we have most valuable. This history teaches us in particular, that the remembrance of the deliverance wrought for us by Jesus Christ our Lord, ought never to slip out of our minds; but should be perpetually celebrated in the church by the mum of the holy supper, which was instituted with that design by Jesus Christ himself. The wonderful manner in which God led the Israelites into the desert, after their departure from Egypt, in pillars of cloud and fire, makes us see his power, wisdom, and goodness; and affords likewise an instance of the care he has of his children, and the protection wherewith he shields them.

C H A P. XIV.

1 God instructeth the Israelites in their journey. 5 Pharaoh pursuing after them. 10 The Israelites murmur. 13 Moses comforteth them. 15 God instructeth Moses. 19 The cloud removeth behind the camp. 21 The Israelites pass through the Red sea. 23 The Egyptians go in after them, 26 and are drowned.

17 God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near, &c.] The distance from Egypt to Canaan, through the land of the Philistines, was a journey only of a few days. But the Israelites were no strangers to the fierce temper of the Philistines; and the slavery they had endured in Egypt must have broken their spirits, and rendered them unfit for war, therefore God was pleased to lead them a very different way through the desert.

18 God let the people about, &c.] The pillar of fire went before them, and conducted them in the way through the wilderness, which was not the direct way to Canaan.

20 Encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness.] Etham lay on the border of the wilderness of Shur, next to Egypt.

21 The Lord went before] i. e. The Shechinah, or divine presence, &c.

In a pillar] The original word signifies more generally strength and stability, or a fixed posture; so that in this sense the word pillar will not so much denote the form and dimensions of the cloud, as the stationary attendance of it to lead them in the way. It is called a pillar, because it extended from the earth to the clouds, and assumed the appearance of a stately column. Its principal use was, to direct the Israelites in the way; but it also defended them from the piercing rays of the sun, which in these hot countries are very troublesome.

By night in a pillar of fire, &c.] That they might travel by night as well as by day. These appearances continued till the death of Moses, when the Israelites passed over Jordan, and were directed in their march by the ark of the covenant.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIV.

¶ Speak unto the children of Israel, that they turn] Their intention at first was, to have entered the wilderness from Etham, but

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.

3 For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, that he shall follow after them; and I will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; that the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him:

7 And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out with an high hand.

9 But the Egyptians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army, and overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were fore afraid: and the children of Israel cried out unto the LORD.

11 And they said unto Moses, Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?

12 Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to day: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward.

6 But they are now directed to turn to the right, and keep along the west side of the Red sea.

Before Pi-hahiroth] This seems to have been the name of a narrow passage, between the mountains on the west side of the Red sea; the word pi, in the Hebrew, signifying A month: it lay about sixteen miles from Etham.

Between Migdol and the sea, &c.] The word Migdol signifies A castle, and was probably a fortress raised on one of the mountains of Pi-hahiroth. This place was situated on the western shore of the Red sea.

3 Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, they are entangled in the land] He will be persuaded that you are hemmed in by rocks on one side, and by the sea on the other.

The wilderness hath shut them in.] By the word "wilderness" must be understood wild rugged mountains; for the children of Israel were now near the shore of the Red sea, among mountains almost impassable, especially to a numerous army.

4 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, &c.] The situation of the Israelites, now inclosed between impassable rocks and mountains on one side, and the sea on the other, will render Pharaoh so hardy and desperate as to attempt to follow, and, by force, bring them back to his Egyptian bondage.

9 All the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, &c.] The army of the Egyptians consisted solely of chariots and horsemen; for they were in haste to overtake them.

15 Wherefore criest thou unto me? &c.] This passage contains an excellent moral lesson, namely, that it is not by inactive invocations of God that we are to expect relief from heaven in our exigencies; but by joining with prayer to God our most active and prudent endeavours; to neglect to use the natural means that are in our power,

Before
1491.

16 But lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it: and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And I, behold, I will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶ And the angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

20 And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 ¶ And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

22 And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

23 ¶ And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

24 And it came to pass, that in the morning watch the LORD looked unto the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians.

25 And took off their chariot wheels, that they drove them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD fighteth for them against the Egyptians.

26 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may come again upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen.

27 And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it; and the LORD overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

28 And the waters returned, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them.

and trust intirely to vows and prayers, is only to tempt providence, and increase the evil.

17 I will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them] Of all the insatiation that ever possessed the Egyptians, this was the strongest, that they should venture to pursue the Israelites, when they saw, or might have seen, the sea opening her bosom to give them a passage; an evident proof that they were under the protection of the God of nature, whose voice that unruly element was thus miraculously made to obey.

I will get me honour, &c.] My power and my justice shall be magnified and rendered more conspicuous in the eyes of the world, by means of their miraculous destruction.

21 And the Lord caused the sea to go back, &c.] The Psalmist gives us a most beautiful description of this miracle, by representing the waters struck with amazement at the sight of God, and starting back in awe of his majesty: "The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee, they were afraid: the depths also were troubled," Psalm lxxvii. 16.

24 The Lord looked upon the host of the Egyptians] He looked upon them in anger, he viewed them with the marks of his displeasure, by confounding and baffling their measures.

Through the pillar of fire, and of the cloud] The cloudy part of the pillar had been towards the Egyptians; but it seems probable to imagine, that the other side was now turned towards them, and confounded them with its amazing brightness.

And troubled the host of the Egyptians] This was done either by the glorious splendor issuing from the pillar of the cloud flashing in their faces; or, by a dreadful tempest, with thunder and hail-stones shot from the cloud, which put them into the greatest disorder: compare Psalm lxxvii. 17. "The clouds poured out water; the skies sent out a sound; the voice of thy thunder was in the heaven; the lightnings lightened the world: the earth trembled and shook."

25 And took off their chariot wheels, &c.] Some of their wheels were broken by lightning and tempest.

29 But the children of Israel walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.

30 Thus the LORD saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore.

31 And Israel saw that great work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians; and the people feared the LORD, and believed the LORD, and his servant Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIV.

This chapter represents to us the blindness and stubbornness of the king of Egypt, who, after all the plagues wherewith God had smitten him, obstinately pursued the people of Israel; the wonderful deliverance that God wrought for that people, in making them pass on foot through the Red sea; and the total destruction of Pharaoh, who perished in the waters of the said sea. In this history we are to observe very attentively on one side what obstinate sinners are capable of; and with what blindness and fury they hasten to their ruin; on the other hand, the mighty power that God displays for the deliverance of his children, and the destruction of his enemies.

CHAP. XV.

1 Moses' song. 20 Miriam and the women join in it. 22 The people want water. 23 The waters at Marah are bitter; a tree sweeteneth them. 27 They remove to Elim.

THEN sang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto the LORD, and spake, saying, I will sing unto the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

2 The LORD is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation: he is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation; my father's God, and I will exalt him.

3 The LORD is a man of war: the LORD is his name.

4 Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea: his chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea.

5 The depths have covered them: they sank into the bottom as a stone.

6 Thy right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed to pieces the enemy.

7 And in the greatness of thine excellency thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, which consumed them as stubble.

8 And with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered

27 The sea returned to his strength, &c.] This enormous mass of waters, which had been suspended by the power of God, had now full scope given to its impetuous rage.

31 And the people feared the Lord, &c.] This great miracle for some time filled their minds with awful ideas of God; but these were immediately defaced by the first pressure of a difficulty; and this temporary act of religion turned into infidelity towards God, and impatient murmurings against their leader.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

1 Then sang Moses, &c.] This song is the most antient piece of poetry in the world: but in what kind of measure it is composed, is not easy to determine; nor is this of any great consequence, since every competent judge must own, that it contains something much more essential to poetry, elevation of sentiment, and loftiness of expression; and is an instance of the true use to which poetry ought to be applied, namely, to sing the praise of God, and his glorious works.

2 The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation] The Lord is my powerful protector, the object of my praise, the author of my safety, and glorious deliverance.

He is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation, &c.] This might be better rendered, He is my God, and I will honour him; my father's God, and I will exalt him. For the original word has two senses; to build one a comely dwelling, and, to honour; the latter of which is preferable here, as it answers to the other member of the sentence, "My father's God, and I will exalt him."

3 The Lord is a man of war, &c.] The Arabic has it, The Lord is mighty in war; which is much more elegant than our translation.

6 Thy right hand, O Lord, is become glorious, &c.] This, O God, was the work of thy divine power, which is magnified for the overthrow of such adversaries.

8 With the blast of thy nostrils] A poetical expression for the wind, which blew vehemently by order of the Almighty. It strongly marks gathered together, the floods stood upright ■ ■ ■ heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

The Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea, and the waters covered the Chariots, the Horsemen, & all the Host of Pharaoh.

9 The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them: I will draw my sword, my hand shall destroy them.

10 Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them: they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods? who is like thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?

12 Thou stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast led forth the people which thou hast redeemed: thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation.

14 Thy people shall hear, and be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 Then the dukes of Edom shall be amazed; the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them; all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.

16 Fear and dread shall fall upon them; by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still ■ ■ ■ stone; till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over, which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, in the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

18 The LORD shall reign for ever and ever.

19 For the horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 ¶ And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took ■ timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

21 And Miriam answered them, Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22 ¶ So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea, and they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 ¶ And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called Marah.

24 And the people murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?

25 And he cried unto the LORD; and the LORD marks the power of God, intimating, that merely by breathing on the sea, he had made that unruly element to fly back. The royal Psalmist uses nearly the same expression, when he tells us, "That all the hosts of heaven were made by the breath of his mouth," Psalms xxii. 6.

9 The enemy said, I will pursue, &c.] How did the enemy swell with revenge, and feast upon the hope of satiating their malice and fury upon us, when God, by one blast of his displeasure, put a period ■ once to their lives and expectations!

11 Who is like unto thee, &c.] O powerful Jehovah! what are all the imaginary deities of the heathen world, when compared to thy transcendent and infinite perfections!

12 The earth swallowed them.] It received them into its capacious bosom, wherein the ocean is contained.

13 Thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation.] The Almighty is here considered as ■ shepherd, leading his people in peaceful society, like ■ flock, to their promised rest in the land of Canaan.

14 Thy people shall hear, &c.] The fame of these wonders shall go before us, striking terror into all the people whose countries we are to possess, and into such ■ ■ ■ shall attempt to obstruct our passage thither.

17 The mountain of thine inheritance, &c.] This seems to refer to the mountains which stood within the walls of Jerusalem, on one of which the temple was built: "He brought them to the border of his sanctuary; even to the mountain which his right hand had purchased," Psalms lxxviii. 54.

20 Took a timbrel in her hand, &c.] It was ■ custom from the earliest ages, to use musical instruments in the service of their Maker, especially in celebrating the divine praises, which is the most spirited part of worship, and indeed the most ravishing and exalted employment of a rational being.

21 And Miriam answered them, &c.] The meaning seems to be, shewed him ■ tree, which when he had cast into the waters, the waters were made sweet; there he made for them ■ statute and an ordinance, and there he proved them.

26 And said, If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his sight, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of these diseases upon thee, which I have brought upon the Egyptians: for I am the LORD that healeth thee.

27 ¶ And they came to Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees: and they encamped there by the waters.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XV.

The song of the children of Israel should serve to stir ■ ■ ■ up to praise the Lord for his favours; but chiefly to be always celebrating the mercy and power which he has made appear in our redemption. We should next reflect upon the murmurings to which the children of Israel abandoned themselves after their deliverance, upon their wanting of water: in that we see the distrust and ingratitude of men, who can so soon forget the blessings of God, and so easily fall into impatience. We may also observe therein, the assistance of the Lord, who, notwithstanding those murmurings, spared them, and ceased not to make them sensible of the effects of his love.

CHAP. XVI.

1 The Israelites come to Sin, and murmur for want of bread.

4 God promiseth them bread and flesh from heaven. 13 Quails and manna are sent. 16 The ordering of the manna. 22 A double provision of it is made on the sixth day. 27 None to be found on the sabbath. 32 An omer of it is preserved.

AND they took their journey from Elim, and all the congregation of the children of Israel came unto the wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, on the fifteenth day of the second month after their departing out of the land of Egypt.

2 And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness:

3 And the children of Israel said unto them, Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full; for ye have brought us forth into this wilderness, to kill this whole assembly with hunger.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD unto Moses, Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no.

5 And

that after every verse sung by Moses and the men, Miriam and the women interposed, and repeated this verse, "Sing to the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously, &c." This way of singing alternately was used in after times, as appears from Exra iii. 11. and Psalms cxxxvi. and is represented as practised by the angels themselves, in their worship of the divine majesty, Isaiah vi. 3. "And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy! is the Lord of hosts! The whole earth is full of his glory." And surely nothing can be so truly becoming ■ dependant state, as to pay our homage of thanksgiving to the fountain of perfection, and magnify the supreme governor of the universe.

26 If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God, &c.] All now required of them was, to do justice, love mercy, and walk humbly with their God. They were not yet loaded with that yoke of ceremonies which God, because of the hardness of their hearts, thought proper afterwards to lay upon them.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

2 And the whole congregation of the children of Israel murmured, &c.] This murmuring seems to have been much more general than that mentioned in the preceding chapter: for there it is only said "the people murmured;" but here, "the whole congregation."

3 Would to God we had died, &c.] Happy would it have been for us had we perished with the first born of Egypt. Is this thy gratitude, O Israel, to thy God for all his benefits! "O Judah, thy goodness is like the morning cloud, and ■ the early dew it goeth away!" Hosea vi. 4. Surely they might, without any high degree of faith, have trusted in God, by whose command they had undertaken that dangerous expedition, that he would not suffer them to die in it by hunger or thirst.

4 The people shall—gather a certain rate every day, &c.] It came down in daily showers, that they might be kept in ■ perpetual and thankful dependence upon providence.

Before
1491.

5 And it shall come to pass, that on the sixth day they shall prepare that which they bring in; and it shall be twice as much ■ they gather daily.

6 And Moses and Aaron said unto all the children of Israel, At even, then ye shall know that the LORD hath brought you out from the land of Egypt :

7 And in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the LORD; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and what are we, that ye murmur against us?

8 And Moses said, This shall be, when the LORD shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full; for that the LORD heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him: and what are we? your murmurings are not against us, but against the LORD.

9 And Moses spake unto Aaron, Say unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, Come near before the LORD: for he hath heard your murmurings.

10 And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD appeared in the cloud.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel: speak unto them, saying, At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread; and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, that at even the quails came up, and covered the camp: and in the morning the dew lay round about the host.

14 And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar frost on the ground.

15 And when the children of Israel saw it, they said one to another, It is manna: for they wist not what it was. And Moses said unto them, This is the bread which the LORD hath given you to eat.

16 ¶ This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather of it every man according to his eating, an omer for every man, according to the number of your persons; take ye every man for them which are in his tents.

17 And the children of Israel did so, and gathered, some more, some less.

18 And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating.

19 And Moses said, Let no man leave of it till the morning.

20 Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank: and Moses was wroth with them.

21 And they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating: and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.

22 ¶ And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for one man: and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

23 And he said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath said, To morrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD: bake that which ye will bake to day, and feed that ye will feed; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning.

10 And, behold, the glory of the Lord, &c.] They were suddenly struck with an unwonted brightness from the pillar of the cloud.

13 Quails, &c.] Some think it should have been translated locusts, which they apprehend answers best to the circumstances of the narration both here and in Numb. xi. 31.

15 It is manna, &c.] They took it for common manna from its resembling it; though it was, in reality, ■ very different thing: the common manna is hardened by the heat of the sun, whereas this melted and flowed away in streams.

23 To morrow is the rest, &c.] It seems reasonable to conclude, from hence, that rest on the sabbath was now first appointed: that however 24 And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein.

25 And Moses said, Eat that to day; for to day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to day ye shall not find it in the field.

26 Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day, which is the sabbath, in it there shall be none.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none.

28 And the LORD said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?

29 See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days: abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day.

30 So the people rested on the seventh day.

31 And the house of Israel called the name thereof manna: and it was like coriander seed, white: and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

32 ¶ And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commandeth, Fill an omer of it to be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread where-with I have fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt.

33 And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a pot, and put an omer full of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.

34 As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the testimony, to be kept.

35 And the children of Israel did eat manna forty years, until they came to a land inhabited; they did eat manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan.

36 Now an omer is the tenth part of an ephah.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVI.

This chapter shews ■ the ingratitude of the children of Israel, who, after so many miracles that God had wrought for them, were always murmuring against Moses, and longing after Egypt, from whence they came. One may also observe the goodness of God for putting a stop to those murmurings, and providing food for them, by sending them manna; but what is most worthy of our consideration here, is, that which Jesus Christ tells us in the gospel, John vi. that the children of Israel did not eat the true bread from heaven; that the manna whereof they did eat in the wilderness, could not preserve them from death; whereas in Jesus Christ we have that true bread which came down from heaven, and gives us life everlasting. Let us beseech him to give us always that heavenly food, while we are in the wilderness of this world; and let us make a better use of it than the Jews did formerly of the manna that God gave them.

CHAP. XVII.

1 The people murmur for water at Rephidim, and are sent for it by God to the rock in Horeb. 8 Amalek is overcome by the holding up of Moses' hands. 14 God's vengeance against Amalek, in token of which Moses buildeth the altar JEHOVAH-nissi.

AND all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from the wilderness of Sin, after their journeys, according to the commandment of the LORD, and pitched in Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink.

■ Wherefore the people did chide with Moses, and said, Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?

3 And religiously they might have observed ■ day in seven before, in memory of the six days creation, yet they did not cease from all labour till now; for in that case the rulers of the people would have no need to be informed of it.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVII.

■ And pitched in Rephidim, &c.] A dry and sandy part of the desert, within a march or two of Sinai.

■ Wherefore do ye tempt the Lord?] Can you be so base ■ to distrust the power, the goodness, the faithfulness of God, who has so often and so miraculously provided for you?

■ And

3 And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore is this that thou hast brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst?

4 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone me.

5 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go on before the people, and take with thee of the elders of Israel; and thy rod, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thine hand, and go.

6 Behold, I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may drink. And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

7 And he called the name of the place Massah, and Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?

¶ Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim.

9 And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: to morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand.

10 So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill.

11 And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

12 But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

13 And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: for I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.

15 And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it JEHOVAH-nissi:

16 For he said, Because the LORD hath sworn that the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XVII.

The miracle wrought by Moses, in bringing water out of the rock, to allay the thirst, and stop the murmurings of the Israelites,

3 And the people thirsted there for water, &c.] The water they had brought from Elim was now spent, and they chid Moses for bringing them into such an inconvenient station.

5 Take with thee of the elders of Israel, &c.] That they may be witnesses that thou dost really bring water out of the rock.

6 I will stand before thee there upon the rock] That is, the glory of the Lord in the cloud shall appear in this place, to strengthen thy faith, and convince the people of Israel that the water is divinely given them.

And Moses did so, &c.] That is, he smote the rock, and brought water out in such plenty, that it ran down like rivers, Psal. lxxviii. 15, 16. It became a continual fountain or stream of water, which rendered this part of Arabia habitable in future ages. Travellers into these parts tell us, that at the foot of mount Horeb is a monastery well supplied with a cool limpid stream, that flows down from the mountain.

7 And he called the name—Massah, and Meribah] The former of these names signifies "temptation," and the latter "chiding."

Is the Lord among us, or not?] Are we under his special providence and protection, or not?

8 Then came Amalek, &c.] Though this battle with Amalek is recorded after the miracle at Horeb, yet it certainly happened before it; for it is here said that they came and fought with Israel in Rephidim: which circumstance is cleared up, by comparing this passage with Deut. xxv. 18. where we read, that "Amalek met, or fell upon them by the way, and smote the hindmost of them, even all that were feeble, when they were faint and weary;" that is, when they were fainting with thirst, in their march to Horeb.

14 I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.] God denounces this heavy doom upon them, to terrify others from the like malice. Accordingly they were partly destroyed by Saul, David, and the children of Simeon.

obliges us to reflect upon the incredulity of that people, who were before always distrustful the power of God, and rebelling against Moses. CHRIST We may also observe the great patience of the Lord, in working this new miracle for their sakes. As for their victory over the Amalekites, that is an instance of the just punishment of God inflicted on the enemies of his people; but we must particularly take notice, that God granted this victory to the prayers of Moses. It is an example whereby we may learn, that calling upon the name of God, and perseverance in prayer, is the most effectual way to obtain his assistance, and to triumph over all our enemies, both spiritual and temporal.

C H A P. XVIII.

1 Jethro bringeth to Moses his wife and two sons. 7 Moses entertaineth him. 9 Jethro bleisseth God for his goodness to Israel. 13 He counselleth Moses to provide fit persons, who may assist him in judging the people; his counsel is accepted. 27 Jethro departeth.

WHEN Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father in law, heard of all that God had done for Moses, and for Israel his people, and that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt;

2 Then Jethro, Moses' father in law, took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after he had sent her back,

3 And her two sons; of which the name of the one was Gershom; for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land:

4 And the name of the other was Eliezer; for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh:

5 And Jethro, Moses' father in law, came with his sons and his wife unto Moses into the wilderness, where he encamped at the mount of God:

6 And he said unto Moses, I thy father in law Jethro am come unto thee, and thy wife, and her two sons with her.

7 ¶ And Moses went out to meet his father in law, and did obeisance, and kissed him; and they asked each other of their welfare; and they came into the tent.

8 And Moses told his father in law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them.

9 ¶ And Jethro rejoiced for all the goodness which the LORD had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

10 And Jethro said, Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh, who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

11 Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods:

15 Called the name of it JEHOVAH-nissi.] That is, Jehovah my banner.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

1 Jethro, the priest of Midian, &c.] The word signifies both prince and priest. That he was the latter, appears from his offering sacrifice; and there is also great reason to think that he was the former. It was no uncommon thing for these two offices to be united in the same person. It is very probable, that Jethro arrived in the camp of Israel immediately after the battle with Amalek, though he did not give Moses the advice for the better administration of justice till some considerable time after, when God delivered the law from mount Sinai.

2 Took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after he had sent her back.] Moses sent his wife back from the inn, chap. iv. 26. where her child was circumcised; because, probably, he thought she and her children would live more comfortably at home with her father, than among such frightful spectacles of public disaster and terror in Egypt.

4 Eliezer, &c.] "My God is mine help;" to remind him of his obligations to God, for protecting him from Pharaoh.

6 And he said unto Moses, &c.] By messengers, appears from ver. 7.

8 And Moses told his father in law all that the Lord had done unto Pharaoh, &c.] From this passage it is highly probable, that Jethro's visit happened in order of time here related; for had it happened after the giving of the law, it can hardly be imagined that Moses would have omitted to mention God's glorious appearance on mount Sinai, and the law he had delivered to them.

11 Now I know that the Lord is greater than all gods.] I am fully persuaded that Jehovah, the God whom the Israelites adore, is greater than all the gods of Egypt, or of any other nation in the world.

Before CHRIST 1491. gods: for in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them.

12 And Jethro, Moses' father in law, took a burnt offering and sacrifices for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders of Israel, to eat bread with Moses' father in law before God.

13 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses sat to judge the people: and the people stood by Moses from the morning unto the evening.

14 And when Moses' father in law saw all that he did to the people, he said, What is this thing that thou doest to the people? why sittest thou thyself alone, and all the people stand by thee from morning unto even?

15 And Moses said unto his father in law, Because the people come unto me to enquire of God:

16 When they have a matter, they come unto me; and I judge between one and another, and I do make them know the statutes of God and his laws.

17 And Moses' father in law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good.

18 Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee; thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.

19 Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee counsel, and God shall be with thee: be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the causes unto God:

20 And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws, and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work that they must do.

21 Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness, and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens:

22 And let them judge the people at all seasons: and it shall be, that every great matter they shall bring unto thee, but every small matter they shall judge: so shall it be easier for thyself, and they shall bear the burden with thee.

23 If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee so, then thou shalt be able to endure, and all this people shall also go to their place in peace.

24 So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father in law, and did all that he had said.

25 And Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

26 And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves.

For in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them. Jehovah shewed himself superior to all gods, by confounding the Egyptians; even when, presuming on the assistance of their gods, they proudly threatened the ruin of his people.

To eat bread. To partake of the sacrifice that had been offered, for this comprehends the whole meal.

Before God. That is, before the divine presence appearing in the cloud. Or it may be understood in general, that they behaved in a religious manner under the impression of the divine presence, as it is said of Daniel, chap. vi. 10. that "he gave thanks in his house before God."

15 Come—to enquire of God. In particular cases, Moses consulted the oracle of God, and received an answer by an audible voice from heaven.

19 Be thou for the people to God-ward, that thou mayest bring the causes unto God. Do thou interpret the mind of God to the people, and bring the causes of the people to God. Jethro here desires Moses to confine himself to his proper offices, as a prophet: for the prophets had a double promise, to reveal the will of God to the people, and to represent their causes to God, and sometimes to ask counsel at his oracle.

21 Rulers of thousands, &c. These several courts of judicature seem to have been duly subordinate to each other; so that causes which could not be decided by the "decurio," or judge of ten, were brought before the judge of fifty, and so on, till they frequently came before Moses, whose business it was to lay them before God.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

¶ And Moses went up unto God, &c. He ascended the mountain, the symbol of the divine presence having rested on it.

27 ¶ And Moses let his father in law depart; and he went his way into his own land.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVIII.

We hear, in the first place, that Jethro, the father in law of Moses, came to see him, not only to bring him his wife and children, but chiefly to rejoice with him, and with all the people, upon God's delivering them from the bondage of Egypt. This example of piety and charity should excite us to share in the good that happens to our brethren, and especially to rejoice when the glory of God is promoted, and when he causes his power and justice to appear in the eyes of all the world. Secondly, That which is said in this chapter concerning the establishment of judges and magistrates, and the qualities they ought to have, is a lesson, first, to those who are in civil employments, to teach them to discharge them with diligence and integrity; to be persons fearing God, virtuous, just, and, above all, disinterested, and far from filthy lucre. In the next place, we ought all to acknowledge of how great consequence it is that there should be magistrates, for the producing of order in societies; that their establishment comes from God; and that every body ought to submit to them and their authority.

¶ The people come to Sinai. 3 God's message unto the people out of the mount. 7 Moses delivereth it, and returneth the people's answer. 10 The people are ordered to be prepared against the third day; the mountain is not to be touched. 14 The people are sanctified. 16 The fearful presence of God upon the mount.

IN the third month, when the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai.

2 For they were departed from Rephidim, and were come to the desert of Sinai, and had pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before the mount.

3 ¶ And Moses went up unto God, and the LORD called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;

4 Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself.

5 Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine:

6 And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.

7 ¶ And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before their faces all these words which the LORD commanded him.

8 And all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD hath spoken we will do. And Moses returned the words of the people unto the LORD.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak

4 How I bare you on eagles' wings, &c. The eagle is remarkable for soaring high, even above the clouds, where neither rains nor snows fall, nor thunders break, but the air is always calm and serene. The meaning therefore is, that they had passed the sea, and escaped the greatest dangers from their enemies, as if they had been borne aloft on eagles' wings.

5 If ye will obey my voice. Hence we say, that national virtue, and a pious obedience to the will of God, was the unalterable condition on which the divine protection, and all the other national blessings, were promised to the Israelites.

A peculiar treasure unto me, &c. You shall be the objects of my peculiar care, as jewels and valuable treasure are of kings. I will establish my kingdom among you, with such laws as shall not only distinguish you from all other nations, but make you to excel them.

6 And ye shall be to me a kingdom of priests. As sacred, and therefore as dear to God, as if they were all priests, not in name only, but such as live suitably to their profession.

An holy nation, &c. A nation that shall exhibit shining examples of piety and goodness to a degenerate world.

7 All that the Lord hath spoken we will do, &c. They consent to have God for their king, and promise to be obedient to his laws. And then they became the subjects of the divine government in a peculiar sense; the theocracy, therefore, so famous in the Jewish history, had now its beginning.

9 In a thick cloud, &c. The divine voice was delivered out of the midst of the fire, which burnt the mountain: in allusion to which, God is often, in scripture, called "a consuming fire." But with respect to the people, clouds and darkness were round about him.

peak with thee, and believe thee for ever. And Moses told the words of the people unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go unto the people, and sanctify them to day and to morrow, and let them wash their clothes, 11 And be ready against the third day: for the third day the LORD will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai.

12 And thou shalt set bounds unto the people round about, saying, Take heed to yourselves, that ye go not up into the mount, or touch the border of it: whosoever toucheth the mount shall be surely put to death:

13 There shall not an hand touch it, but he shall surely be stoned, or shot through; whether it be beast or man, it shall not live: when the trumpet foundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.

14 ¶ And Moses went down from the mount unto the people, and sanctified the people; and they washed their clothes.

15 And he said unto the people, Be ready against the third day: come not at your wives.

16 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day in the morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud; so that all the people that was in the camp trembled.

17 And Moses brought forth the people out of the camp to meet with God; and they stood at the nether part of the mount.

18 And mount Sinai was altogether in a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly.

19 And when the voice of the trumpet sounded long, and waxed louder and louder, Moses spake, and God answered him by a voice.

20 And the LORD came down upon mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the LORD called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up.

21 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go down, charge the people, lest they break through unto the LORD to gaze, and many of them perish.

22 And let the priests also, which come near to the LORD, sanctify themselves, lest the LORD break forth upon them. Before CHRIST 1491¹⁸

23 And Moses said unto the LORD, The people cannot come up to mount Sinai: for thou chargedst us, saying, Set bounds about the mount, and sanctify it.

24 And the LORD said unto him, Away, get thee down, and thou shalt come up, thou, and Aaron with thee: but let not the priests and the people break through to come up unto the LORD, lest he break forth upon them.

25 So Moses went down unto the people, and spake unto them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XIX.

What is chiefly to be observed in this chapter, is, that the first thing God did, after delivering his people out of Egypt, was, to engage them to fear him, and to make laws for them; to which purpose, he directed them to sanctify themselves, that they might hear the publication of the ten commandments, when he came down upon mount Sinai, in a dreadful appearance. The instruction that we ought to draw from thence, is, that God has not redeemed and chosen us for his people, but to the end that we should serve him, and reverence his holy laws; and that those that break them, shall not escape his vengeance.

4 Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

5 Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;

6 And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

7 Thou

10 Go unto the people, and sanctify them to day and to morrow, &c.] They were to purify themselves from all uncleanness; to abstract their minds from the world, by a cessation from their ordinary employments, by prayer and fasting, and by abstinence from even lawful pleasures.

13 There shall not an hand touch it, &c.] This severe order was given to impress the minds of a stiff-necked people with a profound veneration for the author of their laws. The words should have been rendered, Let not a hand touch him; referring to the person who should dare to venture within the consecrated bounds, a crime which they should look upon with such detestation, that they should stone or shoot the offender on the spot.

18 Because the Lord descended upon it in fire] The divine majesty descended in a cloud with a glorious retinue of angels, who appeared like flames of fire, as Moses himself seems to expound it, "He came with ten thousands of his saints; from his right hand went a fiery law for them," Deut. xxxiii. 2.

And the whole mount quaked greatly.] To this the Psalmist alludes, "The earth shook, the heavens also dropped at the presence of God, even Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel," Psalm lxxviii. 8. "He looketh upon the earth, and it trembleth; he toucheth the hills, and they smoke," Psalm civ. 32.

20 And the Lord called Moses up, &c.] He was called up to the very place where the Shechinah or divine glory was, and entered into the midst of the cloud, where God is said to have spoken to him face to face, "a man speaketh to his friend, chap. xxxiii. 11. so bishop Patrick understands it: but it appears, from chap. xx. 21. compared with Deut. v. 4, 5. that even Moses himself was not permitted to enter within the cloud of glory, but only drew near the thick darkness with which it was encompassed, and so stood between Jehovah or the divine presence, and the people.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XX.

¶ And God spake all these words, &c.] That is, the ten commandments. These laws were proclaimed from Mount Sinai, with such circumstances of pomp and terror, as natural to extort a political obedience, more than to raise and improve religious and moral temper.

¶ I am the Lord thy God which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, &c.] The first words of this sentence, I am the Lord, "I am Jehovah," contain the reasons for man's obedience to the divine laws, and extend to all rational beings throughout the universe.

3 Thou shalt have no other gods before me.] That is in my sight or presence; and as God is present in all places, it becomes an absolute prohibition of having any other god. But the precept forbids the worship of any other god, so it also commands the worship of that being to whom we owe our creation, whom we must believe and acknowledge the parent of the universe, and should therefore hearken to his voice, and obey the dictates of his will.

4 Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image] The sin of idolatry is of two kinds; the worship of a false god forbidden in the first commandment, and the worship of the true God under a false representation, forbidden more particularly in this second commandment.

Or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above] Thou shalt not worship the host of heaven, the sun, moon, and stars, or any imaginary invisible powers in them; neither represent God under the similitude of these things; for the whole heavens are the work of his hands.

Or that is in the earth beneath] Thou shalt not represent the almighty under the similitude of man or beast, or pay divine honours to any creature.

Or that is in the water, &c.] The Egyptians worshipped the crocodile; and therefore this prohibition was added here, to prevent the Israelites from committing that kind of idolatry. The particular design of the law was, to bring them back to the pure, primitive, and spiritual worship of God.

5 For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God] The Israelites were bound by special ties to worship God with such unalienable affection, as a chaste spouse bears to her husband. And, in pursuance of the same metaphor, God is called a jealous God; that is, his unalienable right to our services will not suffer him to bear a rival or competitor in his worship.

Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, &c.] By the word "visiting" is to be understood punishing with signal judgments. And the true sense of it is, that God will punish the transgressors of his laws, especially the transgressors of this commandment, with signal judgments, in such a manner, that the woful effects thereof shall reach even to their posterity, and that for several generations.

10 But the seventh day is the sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

11 For in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

12 ¶ Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

13 Thou shalt not kill.

14 Thou shalt not commit adultery.

19 And they said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

20 And Moses said unto the people, Fear not: for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

21 And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Thus thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, Ye have seen that I have talked with you from heaven.

23 Ye shall not make with me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold.

24 ¶ An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in all places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee.

25 And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it.

26 Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXI.

We have heard the ten commandments which God formerly published from his own mouth. We are to consider, first, That these commandments concern us as well as the Jews, for our Saviour, as he says himself, Matt. v. "came not to abolish but to fulfil the law." Secondly, That this law does not only forbid actual sins, nor regulate our actions alone, but even our thoughts and desires, and that God will judge us all by this law, as it is explained in the gospel. Thirdly, The dread that came upon the Israelites when God published his law, should put us in mind of the warning of St. Paul, Heb. xii. 18—28 which see.

1 Laws concerning the release of menservants, and concerning the servant whose ear is bored; 7 concerning womenservants; 12 murder and manslaughter; 15 smiters of parents; 16 stealers of men; 17 cursers of parents; 18 smiting without loss of life; 20 smiting of servants to death; 22 a hurt by chance to a woman with child; 26 the loss of a servant's eye or tooth; 28 an ox that goreth a man or woman; 33 harm occasioned by leaving a pit uncovered; 35 or by one man's ox hurting the ox of another man.

NOW these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them.

2 If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.

3 If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.

4 If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

5 And if the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free:

6 Then his master shall bring him unto the judges; he shall

7 Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, &c.] This is a general prohibition against false or vain swearing, especially against the horrid crime of perjury; and in the latter sense our blessed Saviour himself cites this law, Matt. v. 33. "Ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself; so that the principal thing here forbidden is perjury, or making use of the name of God, by way of appeal to him as omniscient, and to whom belongs the final decision of all cases of equity, in attestation and support of falsehood; a crime repugnant to all our ideas of God, and utterly subversive of public order.

8 Remember the sabbath-day, &c.] Remember the day of rest, which God hath appointed thee to observe; for the word "sabbath" properly signifies rest. That we should with grateful sense reflect upon the glorious works of God, especially that grand and fundamental one, wherein his goodness, wisdom, and power, are so illustriously displayed, the creation of the world; that we should not be unmindful of the special favours of God, nor spend all our time in taking care of our bodies and the business of this life, but should assign a competent portion of time for the relaxation of our mind, and for attending to the concerns of our immortal souls.

10 The seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God, &c.] That is, the seventh day is sacred to Jehovah thy God, being that on which he rested from his works of creation; we are to perform no works on that sacred day but those of necessity and mercy.

11 Rested the seventh day, &c.] The word "rested" is not to be understood literally, as if creating the world was any labour to God, but the expression is accommodated to our ideas, and means ceased.

12 Honour thy father and thy mother, &c.] Our duty to our earthly parents is next to that we owe to God. When we reflect that they are, under God, the authors of our being; that they have preserved and supported us, when it was impossible for us to support ourselves; we shall be convinced, that we justly owe them the filial duty required by this commandment.

13 Thou shalt not kill.] The words are better rendered, in an old translation used in the communion service of the established church,

"Thou shalt do no murder;" for the life of a man may be taken away without committing murder, or being guilty of breaking this commandment, "Who so sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." Gen. ix. 6.

14 Thou shalt not commit adultery.] This is a crime of the deepest dye; it is a violation of the most sacred bond of all society, upon which the happiness of mankind more immediately and expressly depends: it sows the seeds of implacable dissension between families, and dissolves the friendship of the most intimate acquaintance.

15 Thou shalt not steal.] Justice is the great bond of human society; take away this, and mankind will no longer be distinguished from the wild beasts of the forests, where the strongest devour the weakest.

16 Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.] Next to the life and property of our neighbour, there is nothing, generally, dearer to men than their reputation or good name: nay, in some cases, it has been accounted more valuable than life itself.

17 Thou shalt not covet, &c.] The precept is intended to prohibit all unjust desires or appetites, and consequently strikes at the root of all evil dispositions.

24 An altar of earth shalt thou make unto me.] An altar of plain turfs, which could easily be had in the wilderness, and therefore most proper for the Israelites in their wandering state.

25 If thou wilt make me an altar, &c.] If thou wilt erect an altar of stone, the whole structure must be plain and simple as possible; to convince gross people it was not the costliness of the materials, nor the external modes and forms of worship that God regarded, but the devotion of the mind with which it was accompanied.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXI.

1 Now these are the judgments, &c.] The chief heads of moral law being thus solemnly given, Moses was commanded to prescribe several other particular laws concerning the judicial and civil government, of the civil state, the rights between man and man, and those relating to the ceremonial parts of worship under the Jewish dispensation.

shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an aul; and he shall serve him for ever.

7 ¶ And if a man sell his daughter to be a maid-servant, she shall not go out as the men-servants do.

8 If she please not her master, who hath betrothed her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange nation he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her.

9 And if he hath betrothed her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters.

10 If he take him another wife; her food, her raiment, and her duty of marriage, shall he not diminish.

11 And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out free without money.

12 ¶ He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

13 And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand; then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee.

14 But if a man come presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from mine altar that he may die.

15 And he that smiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

16 ¶ And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall be surely put to death.

17 ¶ And he that curseth his father, or his mother, shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶ And if men strive together, and one smite another with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keepeth his bed:

19 If he rise again, and walk abroad upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.

20 ¶ And if a man smite his servant or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall be surely punished.

21 Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for he is his money.

22 ¶ If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine.

23 And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life.

24 Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

25 Burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26 ¶ And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his maid, that it perish; he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

8 Bore his ear] Denoting his obligation to hearken, and obey his master's orders.

Shall serve him for ever.] i. e. Till the year of Jubilee sets him free of course, or till his master's death.

7 She shall not go out as the men-servants do.] The true meaning of this passage seems to be this: that if a father, through extreme poverty, is obliged to sell his daughter for a maid-servant, she shall be treated in a different manner from those who have been sold by the judges, and obtain her freedom on much easier terms.

9 After the manner of daughters.] i. e. He shall portion her as one of his daughters.

10 If he take him another wife, her food, her raiment, and her duty of marriage, &c.] If after the son had married her, he took another wife besides, he was still to perform to this all the duties of marriage, viz. give her food and raiment, and, at certain times (which were determined by law) to cohabit with her as her husband.

14 Thou shalt take him from mine altar that he may die.] To make the altar a place of refuge for voluntary crimes, would be to make piety a screen for wickedness, and God a patron for iniquity; hence we see how directly contrary to the divine law the papists act, who make their churches asylums for murderers and other pests of society.

20 If a man smite his servant, &c.] That is, whoever beats a servant.

No. 9.

27 And if he smite out his man-servant's tooth, he shall let him go free for his tooth's sake.

28 ¶ And if an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die: then the ox shall be surely stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit.

29 But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man, or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death.

30 If there be laid on him a sum of money, then he shall give for the ransom of his life whatsoever is laid upon him.

31 Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him.

32 If the ox shall push a man-servant or a maid-servant; he shall give unto their master thirty shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned.

33 ¶ And if a man shall open a pit, or if a man shall dig a pit, and not cover it, and an ox or an ass fall therein;

34 The owner of the pit shall make it good, and give money unto the owner of them; and the dead beast shall be his.

35 ¶ And if one man's ox hurt another's, that he die; then shall they sell the live ox, and divide the money of it; and the dead ox also shall they divide.

36 Or if it be known that the ox hath used to push in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox; and the dead shall be his own.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXI.

We may gather from this chapter that those who strike or wound their neighbours ought not to go unpunished. Secondly, That those who occasion any evil or mischief to another, whether willingly or accidentally, should bear the penalty, and make reparation for it. Thirdly, That although slavery obtained among the Jews, God did not intend thereby that they should treat their slaves cruelly, as most other people did; from whence it appears, that Christians should use yet more more gentleness towards their servants.

IF a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep.

If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed

23 If any mischief follow, &c.] If the child was formed and alive, then life shall be given for life.

27 If he smite out his man-servant's tooth, &c.] To check the cruelty of tyrannical masters, the legislature mercifully ordains, that a master shall loose the service of his slave, not only for depriving him of an eye but even of a tooth.

33 If a man shall open a pit, &c.] It was a common practice in those hot countries to dig for springs, and make large pits or cisterns as receptacles for rain water, which if left uncovered, cattle might easily fall into them.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXII.

¶ If a thief be found, &c.] Notwithstanding this permission of killing the person who attempts our houses in the night-time, when the world is buried in sleep and darkness, yet we ought to be careful in making use of it; for our consciences will never acquit us for taking away the life of a fellow-creature, unless we have very good reason to believe that he had a design upon our own.

3 If the sun be risen, &c.] Because it was then easy to pursue him, and call the neighbours to our assistance. Besides, his coming at that time indicated that he had no design upon our lives.

16 If a man entice, &c.] It is devoutly to be wished that this law was revived in this christian country.

18 Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live.] This precept is given, because all witches, whether real or pretended, were open professors, and practisers of idolatry, and consequently enemies to the Jewish state and polity.

21 Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him, &c.] Hospitality was enjoined to the Jews, as a duty they were strictly to observe; for this reason, because Abraham, and the other patriarchs, their forefathers, had been strangers and pilgrims, wandering and unsettled, and depending, under Providence, on the hospitality of other nations.

25 Thou shalt not be to him an usurer, &c.] An exacting creditor, rigid and urgent.

26 By that the sun goeth down.] The Hebrew canons say, that when one takes a pledge of his neighbour, if he be a poor man, and his pledge be a thing that he hath need of, it is commanded that he restore the pledge, when he needeth; he is to restore him his bedding at night, that he may sleep on it; and his working-tools by day,

24 And my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless.

25 ¶ If thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as an usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury.

26 ¶ If thou at all take thy neighbour's raiment to pledge, thou shalt deliver it unto him by that the sun goeth down:

27 For that is his covering only, it is his raiment for his skin: wherein shall he sleep? and it shall come to pass, when he crieth unto me, that I will hear, for I am gracious.

28 ¶ Thou shalt not revile the gods, nor curse the ruler of thy people.

29 ¶ Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the first-born of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.

30 Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: seven days it shall be with his dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me.

31 ¶ And ye shall be holy men unto me: neither shall ye eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field: ye shall cast it to the dogs.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXII.

In this chapter we have several instructions. The first (which is repeated several times) is, that he who has wronged another, either by theft, cheating, even unwittingly, is obliged to make restitution; that things that have been pledged or deposited with any one, should be faithfully returned. That oaths should be revered: uncleanness and idolatry abominated. God also declares herein, how great a crime it is to oppress widows and strangers, and rigorously to exact our due from the poor; that these are sins that cry to God, and provoke him to wrath. Here likewise we learn to speak of magistrates with respect; and the command laid upon the Jews to offer their first-fruits to God, shews that religion and holiness lay us under an obligation of devoting some part of those goods that God hath given us, to divine service, and to works of charity.

C H A P. XXIII.

1 Laws concerning slander, false witness, and partial favouring of the poor; 4 charitableness; 6 justice in judgment; 8 taking bribes; 9 oppressing a stranger; 10 the year of rest; 12 the sabbath. 13 A caution against idolatry. 14 Laws concerning the three set feasts; 18 the blood and fat of the sacrifice; and the first fruits. 20 An angel is promised for a guide, with a blessing, in case they obey him.

THOU shalt not raise a false report: put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.

2 Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil: neither shalt thou speak in a cause to decline after many to wrest judgment:

3 Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

4 ¶ If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

5 If

that he may not neglect his business; if he does not restore the instrument of the day, by day, and the instrument of the night, at night, he transgresseth the law.

28 Thou shalt not revile the gods, &c.] By this, the people were taught due reverence to magistrates, as God's vicegerents; for the Hebrew word elohim, signifies here, princes, judges or magistrates.

29 Ripe fruits] Wheat, barley, grapes, figs, dates, pomegranates, and olives.

Liquors, &c.] That is, wine and oil.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIII.

1 Put thine hand not with the wicked, &c.] That is, join not with a wicked man to promote a bad cause, by being a false witness.

2, 3 Thou shalt not follow a multitude, &c.] Though the ancient translations support ours, yet the word rabbini, translated "a multitude," is by some supposed to signify, rich and powerful persons; and then the contrast of these two verses will appear with great elegance; for in the former, the judge is forbid to be biased in favour of the great; so in the latter, he is prohibited to be moved by distress, so as to pervert judgment.

4 If thou meet thine enemy's ox, &c.] Though private injuries are sufficient reasons to justify our not treating a man as a friend, or familiar companion, yet they can never justify our denying him the common

5 If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.

6 ¶ Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

7 Keep thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay thou not: for I will not justify the wicked.

8 ¶ And thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.

9 ¶ Also thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof:

11 But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beast of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy oliveyard.

12 ¶ Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed.

13 ¶ And in all things that I have said unto you be circumspect: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.

14 ¶ Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year.

15 Thou shalt keep the feast of unleavened bread: (thou shalt eat unleavened bread seven days, as I commanded thee, in the time appointed of the month Abib; for in it thou camest out from Egypt: and none shall appear before me empty:)

16 And the feast of harvest, the firstfruits of thy labours, which thou hast sown in thy field: and the feast of ingathering, which is in the end of the year, when thou hast gathered in thy labours out of the field.

17 Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the LORD God.

18 ¶ Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

19 The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seeth a kid in his mother's milk.

20 ¶ Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

21 Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him.

22 ¶ But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries.

23 For mine Angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites: and I will cut them off. Before CHRIST 1491.

24 Thou shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do after their works: but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and quite break down their images.

25 And ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.

26 There shall nothing cast their young, nor be barren in thy land: the number of thy days I will fulfil.

27 I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee.

28 And I will send hornets before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee.

29 I will not drive them out from before thee in one year; lest the land become desolate, and the beasts of the field multiply against thee.

30 By little and little I will drive them out from before thee, until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

31 And I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river: for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hands: and thou shalt drive them out before thee.

32 Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods.

33 They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare unto thee.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIII.

In this chapter we find the five following principal instructions; 1st, to avoid slander and evil reports. 2dly, That judges ought to do justice uprightly, without having respect to persons, and especially without taking any bribes. 3dly, That the Jews should observe the sabbath day, and moreover let the land rest the seventh year; which taught them to trust in God's providence, and to be charitable to the poor, which is our duty, as well as it was that of the Jews. 4thly, That the three solemn feasts of the Israelites were appointed for preserving among them the remembrance of those favours which God had done their nations, which duty of gratitude is also to be practised by us. Lastly, The promise which God made of sending his Angels to bring the Jews into the land of Canaan, and the command he gave them to hearken to the voice of that Angel, and not to provoke him, should be a warning to us, not to provoke the Lord by our disobedience, who is present, and in the midst of us, after a more particular manner than he was amongst the Jews.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Moses is called up into the mountain. 3 The people promise obedience. 4 Moses buildeth an altar and twelve pillars; and sprinkleth the blood of the covenant. 9 The glory of God appeareth to Moses, Aaron, and the elders of Israel. 12 Moses being called up into the mount leaveth Aaron and Hur in charge of the people. 15 Moses goeth into the mount, and continueth there forty days and forty nights. AND orders, who, though superior to mankind, are created, or whether it was Christ, commentators have not ventured to determine; some indeed take the word to be an appellative, and to signify only a messenger, and in that sense apply it particularly to Joshua.

21 My name is in him.] The word "name" often signifies authority.

25 Thy bread and thy water, &c.] This denotes provision in general.

26 The number of thy days I will fulfil.] The number of days here spoken of, is the common period of human life, to that time, which was seventy or eighty years, See Psalm xc. 10.

27 I will send my fear, &c.] Will strike a terror and panic into the inhabitants of Canaan.

28 And I will send hornets before thee, &c.] These words are generally understood as metaphorical, though Joshua tells us they were literally performed. Joshua xxiv. 12.

31 From the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines] From the Red sea on the south-east, to the Mediterranean sea on the north-west. From the desert unto the river, &c.] From the desert of Arabia to the river Euphrates.

32 With them, nor with their gods.] Have no correspondence with them in matters either politic or religious.

33 It will surely be a snare unto thee.] That is, it will be a means of seducing you into idolatry, and will involve you in the punishment due to it.

common offices of humanity, for this would be a breach of the law of nations. Though we remember a man is not our friend, yet we ought not to forget that he is a man.

11 Let it rest and lie still, &c.] This was an order to beget in them a pious trust to God, and an humble dependance on his providence. It was likewise a curb to avarice, and taught them to exercise humanity towards their slaves and beasts, and to shew mercy and liberality to the poor.

14 Three times thou shalt keep a feast, &c.] The feast of the passover, pentecost, and tabernacles, at which three solemn seasons the whole body of the nation assembled.

16 The feast of harvest] That is also called the feast of weeks because it was seven weeks after the passover; and pentecost, which in Greek signifies the fiftieth, because it fell on the fiftieth day after the passover.

The feast of ingathering, &c.] Called the feast of tabernacles, Lev. xxiii. 34.

19 Thou shalt not seeth a kid in his mother's milk.] It was a custom among the ancient idolaters, at the time when they had gathered in all the fruits of the earth, to seeth a kid in his mother's milk, and to sprinkle the trees, fields and gardens with the broth, after a magical manner, to render them the more fruitful the next year. The reason of the prohibition therefore is evident, viz. that they should not practise superstition.

20 I send an Angel, &c.] Whether this was one of the heavenly

AND he said unto Moses, Come up unto the LORD, thou, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel; and worship ye afar off.

2 And Moses alone shall come near the LORD: but they shall not come nigh; neither shall the people go up with him.

3 And Moses came and told the people all the words of the LORD, and all the judgements: and all the people answered with one voice, and said, All the words which the LORD hath said will we do.

4 ¶ And Moses wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.

5 And he sent young men of the children of Israel, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD.

6 And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar.

7 And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.

8 And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

9 ¶ Then went up Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel:

10 And they saw the God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness.

11 And upon the nobles of the children of Israel he laid not his hand: also they saw God, and did eat and drink.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them.

13 And Moses rose up, and his minister Joshua: and Moses went up into the mount of God.

14 And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses went up into the mount, and a cloud covered the mount.

16 And the glory of the LORD abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud.

17 And the sight of the glory of the LORD was like devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel.

18 And Moses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXIV.

The promises that Moses obliged the people to make, that they would keep the law of God, and the great solemnity whereby those promises, and the covenant between God and the people were confirmed, should induce us to consider, that God having chosen us to be his people, and having made known his will to us, we are indispensibly obliged to keep his laws; that we also solemnly promised him to do it; and that this covenant has been confirmed, as St. Paul says, not with the blood of calves or goats, but by the blood of Jesus Christ, who offered himself up to God a sacrifice without spot or blemish, that he might purify our consciences from dead works to serve the living God. From whence we may conclude, that they who shall break this commandment, must expect terrible punishments.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring me an offering: of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering.

3 And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brasse,

4 And blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair,

5 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim wood,

6 Oil for the light, spices for anointing oil, and for sweet incense,

7 Onyx stones, and stones to be set in the ephod, and in the breast-plate.

9 According to all that I shew thee, after the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the instruments thereof, even so shall ye make it.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIV.

1 Nadab, and Abihu, &c.] Aaron's eldest sons.

4 All the words] That is, the ten commandments, which are called "the ten words," chap. xxxviii. 28.

An altar—and twelve pillars, &c.] The altar was, to represent God, the one and chief party in the covenant; and the twelve pillars, the twelve tribes, the other party in the said covenant.

5 Young men.] These were the eldest sons of the principal families, appointed to the priesthood.

Burnt offerings, and—peace offerings, &c.] Burnt offerings sometimes signify sacrifices in general, but properly only such as were wholly consumed by fire. Peace offerings were made in gratitude for favours received.

8 On the people] Or this may be understood of the twelve pillars which represented the people. It is to be observed, that one way of making covenants antiently was, by sprinkling the blood of the sacrifices on both parties.

The blood of the covenant, &c.] The relation between God and the Israelites as their king, their civil magistrate, and their tutelar God, arose from their free consent, and is therefore, with great propriety, termed both here, and in other places, a covenant.

10 They saw the God of Israel] Both the Jewish and Christian religion teach, that God is of a spiritual nature, and invisible; we are not therefore to imagine that they saw any visible shape, but only the symbol of the divine majesty, or signs of his glory. Accordingly, the Chaldee expounds it, They saw the glory of the God of Israel.

Under his feet] At the lower part of the divine appearance, or glory.

A paved work of a sapphire stone, and as—the body of heaven in his clearness.] That is, the pure azure sky.

11 He laid not his hand, &c.] This may allude to their being exempted from the danger threatened, chap. xix, for too near an approach to the mountain.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXV.

2 An offering, &c.] The Hebrew word terumah signifies, An heave-offering: it is likewise used for something separated and given to God.

4 Scarlet] In Hebrew, The worm of scarlet; because insects were made use of in dying that colour.

Goats' hair.] This hair was in vast esteem in the oriental countries, and preferred very much before either the wool of sheep or lambs.

5 Badgers' skins] Some imagine, that as a badger is pronounced by the law to be an unclean beast, this cannot be the meaning of the word tichassem; some therefore render it, Rams' skins, of a red, and of a purple colour; and this is supported by the Vulgate, Septuagint, and the Samaritan. The Arabic reads, Black skins.

Shittim wood.] It is generally thought to be the wood of the cedar-tree; though some think it rather the wood of a certain tree which grows common in some parts of the wilderness, and resembles the acacia of Egypt.

10 An ark] It was a chest or coffer, overlaid with gold. It was called, "the ark of the covenant," being a symbol of the covenant which God made with his people, and contained the two tables, the pot of manna, and Aaron's miraculous rod.

Two cubits and a half, &c.] That is, about four feet five inches long, and two feet six inches high or broad.

11 A crown of gold round about.] A cornice, or rich moulding of massy gold, was to go round the top of it, 12 And thou shalt cast four rings of gold for it, and put them in the four corners thereof; and two rings shall be in the one side of it, and two rings in the other side of it.

13 And thou shalt make staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold.

14 And thou shalt put the staves into the rings by the sides of the ark, that the ark may be borne with them.

15 The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it.

16 And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee.

17 ¶ And thou shalt make a mercy seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof.

18 And thou shalt make two cherubims of gold, of beaten work shalt thou make them, in the two ends of the mercy seat.

19 And make one cherub on the one end, and the other cherub on the other end: even of the mercy seat shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof.

20 And the cherubims shall stretch forth their wings on high, covering the mercy seat with their wings, and their faces shall look one to another; toward the mercy seat shall the faces of the cherubims be.

21 And thou shalt put the mercy seat above upon the ark; and in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee.

22 And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubims which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I shall give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel.

23 ¶ Thou shalt also make a table of shittim wood: two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof.

24 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, and make thereto a crown of gold round about.

25 And thou shalt make unto it a border of an hand breadth round about, and thou shalt make a golden crown to the border thereof round about.

26 And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof.

27 Over against the border shall the rings be for places of the staves to bear the table.

28 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold, that the table may be borne with them.

29 And thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof, to cover withal: of pure gold shalt thou make them.

30 And thou shalt set upon the table shewbread before me alway.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make a candlestick of pure gold: Before CHRIST 1491. of beaten work shall the candlestick be made: his shaft, and his branches, his bowls, his knops, and his flowers, shall be of the same.

32 And six branches shall come out of the sides of it; three branches of the candlestick out of the one side, and three branches of the candlestick out of the other side;

33 Three bowls made like unto almonds, with a knop and a flower on one branch; and three bowls made like almonds in the other branch, with a knop and a flower: so in the six branches that come out of the candlestick.

34 And in the candlestick shall be four bowls made like unto almonds, with their knops and their flowers.

35 And there shall be a knop under two branches of the same, and a knop under two branches of the same, according to the six branches that proceed out of the candlestick.

36 Their knops and their branches shall be of the same: all of it shall be one beaten work of pure gold.

37 And thou shalt make the seven lamps thereof: and they shall light the lamps thereof, that they may give light over against it.

38 And the tongs thereof, and the snuffdishes thereof, shall be of pure gold.

39 Of a talent of pure gold shall he make it, with all these vessels.

40 And look that thou make them after their pattern which was shewed thee in the mount.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXV.

From God's being so particular in prescribing a form of worship for the Israelites, we are to understand, that at all times we must be decent and orderly in our approaches to him. As the ceremonial law had a splendid appearance, we must learn, that our works of obedience must, on all occasions, shine with the most conspicuous lustre. As God commanded that a tabernacle or tent should be built for the regular performance of divine service, we must observe that it is our duty to build places for his worship, according to the rules prescribed in the gospel. And as those things were calculated only for the use of the people while they sojourned in the wilderness; let us learn that we have no fixed abode here, being seeking after that everlasting haven of rest which God has promised to all who love him.

C H A P. XXVI.

1 The ten curtains of the tabernacle. 7 The eleven curtains of goat's hair. 14 The covering of ram's skins. 15 The boards of the tabernacle with their sockets and bars. 31 The vail for the ark. 36 The hanging for the door.

MOREOVER thou shalt make the tabernacle with ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims of cunning work shalt thou make them.

2 The length of one curtain shall be eight and twenty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and every one of the curtains shall have one measure.

3 The ways done, prevented it from being mischievous. Agreeable to this notion, he is represented as choosing a particular nation for his residence, and having a dwelling wherein he manifested his real presence.

30 Shewbread, &c.] Or, the bread of presence, being set before God's presence continually.

31 A candlestick of pure gold, &c.] The branches of this candlestick were placed at equal distances, adorned with six flowers like lilies, as many knops resembling apples, and also little bowls, like half almond shells; these were placed alternate and equidistant; upon each of the branches there was a golden lamp, which was lighted every evening, and extinguished every morning.

37 They shall light the lamps, &c.] The lighting of lamps in religious worship was also an Egyptian custom.

39 A talent of pure gold, &c.] A talent contained three thousand shekels, or five thousand four hundred and sixty-four pounds sterling.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVI.

1 Moreover thou shalt make the tabernacle] The Hebrew word abal, signifies A tent; this sacred place was therefore to be constructed in such a manner, as to be easily set up, and taken down; which was necessary, on account of their frequent marches.

2 The length of one curtain, &c.] That is, about sixteen yards twelve inches long, and two yards twelve inches broad. With these the roof of the tabernacle was covered, and the sides also, almost to the ground.

16 Testimony, &c.] The tables of the law.

17 A mercy seat, &c.] Here it was the shekinah generally became visible; it was of beaten gold, and fixed, with the cherubims that overshadowed it, in a frame, or as Moses describes it, a crown of an oblong square form, which inclosed the upper part of the ark in the nature of a rim.

18 Two cherubims of gold, &c.] From this general description of Moses, it appears, these cherubims were human figures, with wings stretched out, covering the mercy-seat, and, as it may be reasonably concluded, in a bowing posture. These represented the angels which stand before the celestial glory; the sanctuary did heaven, and the mercy-seat the throne of God.

22 There I will meet with, &c.] From this part of the sanctuary the oracles were sometimes delivered to Moses in an audible voice, Numb. vi. 39. Hitherto the description is limited to the holy of holies; what follows relates to the principal furniture of the holy place, or outward part.

23 Thou shalt also make a table, &c.] The Israelites being sunk into the grossest idolatry in Egypt, it was necessary the idea of God and his attributes should be impressed upon them in the most sensible manner: but this could not be commodiously done under his character of God of the universe; under his character of king and tutelary God, it well might. Hence he is represented with affections analogous to human passions; his civil relation qualified such a representation; the greatness of their conceptions rendered such a representation necessary, and the guarded manner in which it was al-

5 Fifty loops shalt thou make in the one curtain, and fifty loops shalt thou make in the edge of the curtain that is in the coupling of the second; that the loops may take hold one of another.

6 And thou shalt make fifty taches of gold, and couple the curtains together with the taches: and it shall be one tabernacle.

7 ¶ And thou shalt make curtains of goats' hair to be a covering upon the tabernacle: eleven curtains shalt thou make.

8 The length of one curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: and the eleven curtains shall be all of one measure.

9 And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tabernacle.

10 And thou shalt make fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the coupling, and fifty loops in the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.

11 And thou shalt make fifty taches of brass, and put the taches into the loops, and couple the tent together, that it may be one.

12 And the remnant that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the backside of the tabernacle.

13 And a cubit on the one side, and a cubit on the other side of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, it shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it.

14 ¶ And thou shalt make a covering for the tent of rams' skins died red, and a covering above of badgers' skins.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make boards for the tabernacle of shittim wood standing up.

16 Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half shall be the breadth of one board.

17 Two tenons shall there be in one board, set in order one against another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle.

18 And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards on the south side southward.

19 And thou shalt make forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.

20 And for the second side of the tabernacle on the north side there shall be twenty boards:

21 And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

22 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards.

23 And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.

24 And they shall be coupled together beneath, and they shall be coupled together above the head of it unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both: they shall be for the two corners.

25 And they shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.

26 And thou shalt make bars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle,

27 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the two sides westward.

28 And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall reach from end to end.

29 And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold.

30 And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which was shewed thee in the mount.

31 And thou shalt make a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen of cunning work: with cherubims shall it be made:

32 And thou shalt hang it upon four pillars of shittim wood overlaid with gold: their hooks shall be of gold, upon the four sockets of silver.

33 And thou shalt hang up the vail under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the vail the ark of the testimony: and the vail shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy.

34 And thou shalt put the mercy seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place.

35 And thou shalt set the table without the vail, and the candlestick over against the table on the side of the tabernacle toward the south: and thou shalt put the table on the north side.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make an hanging for the door of the tent, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework.

37 And thou shalt make for the hanging five pillars of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold, and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXVI.

Let us observe, that as the tabernacle was often removed from one place to another, so will the church of Christ; for God will remove the gospel from those people who make an improper use of it. Let us learn, that as the service of the tabernacle was to last no longer than the death of Christ; so when the end and design of his coming is answered, he will appear a second time unto salvation. Hence let us reflect, that we should worship God in spirit and in truth.

C H A P. XXVII.

1 The altar of burnt offering with the vessels thereof. 9 The court of the tabernacle inclosed with hangings and pillars. 18 The measure of the court, and the furniture of brass. 20 The oil for the lamp.

AND thou shalt make an altar of shittim wood, five cubits long, and five cubits broad; the altar shall be foursquare: and the height thereof shall be three cubits.

2 And

14 A covering, &c.] The tabernacle had three different sorts of coverings; one on the outside, made of fine linen, curiously embroidered in various colours of crimson, scarlet, purple, and hyacinth; another of goat's hair, neatly woven; and a third of badger's skins, some dyed red, and some an azure blue; these were to preserve the rich curtains from wet, and the tabernacle itself from the injuries of the weather.

18 Twenty boards, &c.] Each board being about thirty-two inches broad, the whole length of the tabernacle must have been about seven yards and a half. The Septuagint render the word we have translated "boards," Pillars, which seems to be the true reading, by St. Paul's allusion, 1 Tim. iii. 5.

31 Thou shalt make a vail, &c.] This vail divided the tabernacle into two parts, and separated the holy from the most holy place; it was adorned with cherubims, festoons, and other ornaments, curiously embroidered upon it.

33 The most holy.] This place is, in the New Testament, made a figure of heaven, into which Christ our high-priest is entered, our fore-runner.

34 Thou shalt put the mercy seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place.] The tabernacle was a type of our Redeemer dwelling in our nature: the mercy-seat, placed upon the ark of the testimony, was an emblem of him from whose mouth we received a law founded upon better promises, by whose intercession we have access, with boldness, to the throne of grace; and whose satisfaction is our true propitiatory, or mercy-seat.

36 The door of the tent, &c.] The ark and mercy-seat were placed at the west end of the tabernacle, so that the door fronted the east; and the Israelites, in worshipping the great Jehovah, turned their faces towards the west, and from the sun, the idol of the neighbouring nations.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVII.

1 And thou shalt make an altar of shittim wood.] Should it be asked, how it was possible to prevent the burning of the altar, by reason of the continual fire; it may be answered, that the top, with its crown or frame, was fixed so as to be some small distance above the wood of the altar.

Five

2 And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof: his horns shall be of the same; and thou shalt overlay it with bras.

3 And thou shalt make his pans to receive his ashes, and his shovels, and his basons, and his flesh-hooks, and his firepans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of bras.

4 And thou shalt make for it a grate of network of bras; and upon the net shalt thou make four brasen rings in the four corners thereof.

5 And thou shalt put it under the compass of the altar beneath, that the net may be even to the midst of the altar.

6 And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with bras.

7 And the staves shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, to bear it.

8 Hollow with boards shalt thou make it: as it was shewed thee in the mount, so shall they make it.

9 ¶ And thou shalt make the court of the tabernacle: for the south side southward there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen of an hundred cubits long for one side:

10 And the twenty pillars thereof and their twenty sockets shall be of bras; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver.

11 And likewise for the north side in length there shall be hangings of an hundred cubits long, and his twenty pillars and their twenty sockets of bras; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

12 And for the breadth of the court on the west side shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten.

13 And the breadth of the court on the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And on the other side shall be hangings fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.

16 And for the gate of the court shall be an hanging of twenty cubits, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework: and their pillars shall be four, and their sockets four.

17 All the pillars round about the court shall be filleted with silver; their hooks shall be of silver, and their sockets of bras.

18 ¶ The length of the court shall be an hundred cubits, and the breadth fifty every where, and the height five cubits of fine twined linen, and their sockets of bras.

19 All the vessels of the tabernacle in all the service thereof, and all the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court shall be of bras.

20 ¶ And thou shalt command the children of Israel, that they bring thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamp to burn always.

21 In the tabernacle of the congregation without the vail, which is before the testimony, Aaron and his sons shall order it from evening to morning before the LORD: it shall be a statute for ever unto their generations on the behalf of the children of Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXVII.

First, By the fire being continually burning on the altar, we may learn, that the fear and love of God should be continually kept alive in our hearts. Secondly, By the lamp being kept burning in the night, is meant, that even in the darkest and most barbarous ages God will always have some persons who will perpetuate the memory of his name. And further, that God would have us in all afflictions, and in the whole of our conduct, to be as lamps burning in a dark day. Let ministers of the gospel, in a more immediate manner, attend to this; because whatever darkness may be in the world, they are, by their precept and example, to give light.

C H A P. XXVIII.

1 Aaron and his sons are set apart for the priest's office.

2 Holy garments are appointed. 6 The ephod. 15 The breastplate with twelve precious stones. 30 The Urim and Thummim. 31 The robe of the ephod, with pomegranates and bells. 36 The plate of the mitre. 39 The embroidered coat. 40 The garments for Aaron's sons.

AND take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office, even Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar, Aaron's sons.

2 ¶ And thou shalt make holy garments for Aaron thy brother for glory and for beauty.

3 And thou shalt speak unto all that are wise hearted, whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, that they may make Aaron's garments to consecrate him, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

4 And these are the garments which they shall make; a breastplate, and an ephod, and a robe, and a broi-dered coat, a mitre, and a girdle: and they shall make holy garments for Aaron thy brother, and his sons, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

5 And

Five cubits long, &c.] That is, near three yards square at the top, and above five feet in height. As the height was at least five feet, it might either have been let into the earth, or must have been surrounded with a bank of earth, to enable the priest to reach the grate in sacrificing.

2 And thou shalt make the horns of it, &c.] By "horns," we are to understand little pyramids, or spires, made out of the same wood with the altar, and placed one at each corner; their use was, both to tie the sacrifice to, and also to keep the wood from falling off. It was customary for those who fled to the altar for refuge, to lay hold on these horns.

3 Basons] These were to receive the blood of the sacrifice.

Flesh hooks] Or forks, for taking up the pieces of sacrifice, in order to lay them right on the fire.

9 Court of the tabernacle] This was an area or court-yard without any covering, inclosed with hangings, and supported by pillars overlaid with silver; towards the upper end stood the tabernacle, between which and the entrance, was placed the altar of burnt-offerings, in the open air, that so the smoke might not soil the inside of the tabernacle. Thus the habitation of God was divided into three parts; the outward court, which was in the open light and view of all; the holy place, which received light from the seven lamps of the golden candlestick; and the holy of holies, which had no external light, but the presence of God rested on the mercy-seat between the cherubims.

An hundred cubits long, &c.] About fifty-eight yards.

18 And the height five cubits, &c.] That is, near five yards; so that the tabernacle, which was almost as high again as the inclosure, might easily be seen by the people.

20 Pure oil olive] That is, such as runs freely from the olives and being bruised.

To burn always] Three of the lamps were kept burning by day, and the remainder were lighted in the evening. This was not only necessary on account of the darkness of the holy place, but was likewise typical of the constant vigilance and preparation necessary in this life of probation and uncertainty. This is beautifully alluded to in the parable of the wise and foolish virgins.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVIII.

2 Holy garments, &c.] Permitted to be worn by none but the priests; and by them only at such times as they ministered before God.

3 Wise-hearted, whom I have filled with the spirit of wisdom, &c.] This was the usual term to express skilful artists, not only in the Hebrew, but in other dead languages. God dispenses divers gifts and endowments to different people; and mechanical ingenuity is to be ascribed to God as the author, who forms the mind with all its powers; for from him cometh every good and perfect gift.

4 A breast-plate] Where the ephod crossed the high-priest's breast, there was a square ornament called the breast-plate or pectoral; it was set with twelve precious stones in gold, in four rows, three in each row, with the names of the twelve tribes engraven, on each stone one. The whole was fastened to the ephod at four corners; the top, by a golden hook or ring, at the end of a wreathed chain to each shoulder-piece; the bottom, to the girdle of the ephod, by two blue strings or ribbons, having likewise two rings or hooks.

An ephod] This was a kind of square cloak, about two feet in length, hanging down from the shoulders, curiously wrought with gold, and other variegated embroidery; on the top, on each side, were two shoulder-pieces, to which were fastened two precious stones, set in gold, upon which were engraven the names of the twelve tribes, six on each stone.

A robe] This was a long garment made of blue cloth, hanging down to the heels; it was fashioned like a surplice, the skirts wrought with blue, purple, and scarlet yarn, in the shape of pomegranates, between each of which hung a bell of gold.

Before
CHRIST
1491.

5 And they shall take gold, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen.

6 ¶ And they shall make the ephod of gold, of blue, and of purple, of scarlet, and fine twined linen, with cunning work.

7 It shall have the two shoulder pieces thereof joined at the two edges thereof; and so it shall be joined together.

8 And the curious girdle of the ephod, which is upon it, shall be of the same, according to the work thereof; even of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

9 And thou shalt take two onyx stones, and grave on them the names of the children of Israel:

10 Six of their names on one stone, and the other six names of the rest on the other stone, according to their birth.

11 With the work of an engraver in stone, like the engravings of a signet, shalt thou engrave the two stones with the names of the children of Israel: thou shalt make them to be set in ouches of gold.

12 And thou shalt put the two stones upon the shoulders of the ephod for stones of memorial unto the children of Israel: and Aaron shall bear the names before the LORD upon his two shoulders for a memorial.

13 And thou shalt make ouches of gold;

14 And two chains of pure gold at the ends; of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

15 ¶ And thou shalt make the breastplate of judgment with cunning work; after the work of the ephod thou shalt make it; of gold, of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine twined linen shalt thou make it.

16 Four-square it shall be being doubled; a span shall be the length thereof, and a span shall be the breadth thereof.

17 And thou shalt set in it settings of stones, even four rows of stones: the first row shall be a sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this shall be the first row.

18 And the second row shall be an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

19 And the third row a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

20 And the fourth row a beryl, and an onyx, and a jasper: they shall be set in gold in their inclosings.

21 And the stones shall be with the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names like the engravings of a signet; every one with his name shall they be according to the twelve tribes.

22 And thou shalt make upon the breastplate chains at the ends of wreathen work of pure gold.

23 And thou shalt make upon the breastplate two rings of gold, and shalt put the two rings on the two ends of the breastplate.

24 And thou shalt put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings which are on the ends of the breastplate.

25 And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains thou shalt fasten in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulder pieces of the ephod before it.

26 And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate in the border thereof, which is in the side of the ephod inward.

27 And two other rings of gold thou shalt make, and shalt put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart thereof, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

28 And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod.

29 And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD continually.

30 ¶ And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgment the Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD; and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually.

31 ¶ And thou shalt make the robe of the ephod all of blue.

32 And there shall be an hole in the top of it, in the midst thereof: it shall have a binding of woven work round about the hole of it, as it were the hole of an habergeon, that it be not rent.

33 And beneath upon the hem of it thou shalt make pomegranates of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, round about the hem thereof; and bells of gold between them round about:

34 A golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and

A brodered coat] In Hebrew, A coat with eyes; whence some imagine that it had eyes or spangles, varied with little holes. This was the undermost garment, not much unlike a shirt; it was made of fine linen, embroidered, stuck pretty close to the body, and likewise reached to the heels.

A mitre] The mitre was made of fine linen, it covered the head, and upon the forehead there was a plate of gold, whereon were engraven these words, "Holiness to the Lord;" and this was tied behind the head with two ribbons, fastened to its two ends.

A girdle, &c.] This was made of gold thread, and others of different colours; it was brought from behind the neck, and over the two shoulders, then put cross upon the stomach, carried round the waist, and brought back again about the body, where it girded the tunic like a sash, and so fell down before, hanging as low as the feet.

11 Like the engraving of a signet] That is, "en creux," or hollow like the impression of a seal. As the engraving in stone is an affair of some difficulty, and was one of the later inventions of luxury, we may from hence guess at the high antiquity of the polite arts in Egypt, from whom the Jews, or the artificers at this time employed by them, had certainly borrowed them.

Set in ouches, &c.] The word "ouch" was originally used to express a spangle, or glittering ornament, made of small plates of gold and silver, and of sparks, when applied to jewels.

17 A sardius] A precious stone of a red flaming colour, semi-pellucid, or half-transparent, and sometimes with a yellow cast in it. Our modern jewellers call it a cornelian.

A topaz] A transparent stone, and of a beautiful yellow or gold colour.

A carbuncle, &c.] Is a species of ruby, of a glowing red colour, and is surnamed from "carbo," a hot coal.

18 An emerald] This gem is of a most lively green, transparent, and free from the least mixture of any other colour.

A sapphire] Is of a fine blue colour.

A diamond] This gem is esteemed above all others, on account of its superior hardness and lustre.

19 A ligure] This is generally thought to be a kind of jacinth, nearly of the colour of amber.

An agate] Is partly transparent, and partly opaque, for the most part variegated with veins, and disposed in a very elegant manner.

An Amethyst] Is a precious stone of a violet colour, bordering on purple, or nearly the colour of red wine.

20 A beryl] A gem of a pale green, generally known by the name of aqua marina; from its resemblance to sea water in colour.

An onyx] The ground of this gem resembles a human nail in colour, from whence it derives its name; it is variegated in a very regular manner with zones of brown colour.

A jasper, &c.] Is generally of a green colour, speckled with yellow, brown, white, and blue.

21 The stones shall be with the names of the children of Israel, &c.] Upon the sardius was engraven the name of Reuben; the topaz, Simeon; the carbuncle, Levi; the emerald, Judah; the sapphire, Issachar; the diamond, Zebulon; the ligure, Dan; the agate, Naphtali; the amethyst, Gad; the beryl, Asher; the onyx, Joseph; and the jasper, Benjamin.

30 The Urim and the Thummim] There have been various opinions concerning the true meaning of these words; but the most probable appears to be this, That when Moses was commanded to put into the breast-plate the Urim and Thummim, i. e. lights and perfections, it implied, that he should choose the most precious set of stones, and cause them to be polished in the most elegant manner, in order to increase their natural lustre. What we read, ver. 30, confirms this conjecture, where, after God had given particular directions for making the breast-plate, he adds, "And thou shalt put in the breast-plate of judgment the Urim and Thummim," which, when literally translated, runs thus: And thou shalt give to the breast-plate of judgment those lights and perfections, viz. of the twelve stones.

They shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the Lord] In what manner God was consulted by Urim and Thummim, hath been variously conjectured: it seems to have been in the following manner: the high-priest presented himself with his breast-plate on, over all his other robes, and stood opposite the mercy-seat, where the shekinah, or visible glory resided, and then God gave him answers from thence with an audible voice, as he did to Moses.

The judgment, &c.] The breast-plate of judgment, and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about.

35 And it shall be upon Aaron to minister: and his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.

36 ¶ And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

37 And thou shalt put it on a blue lace, that it may be upon the mitre; upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be.

38 And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the LORD.

39 ¶ And thou shalt embroider the coat of fine linen, and thou shalt make the mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make the girdle of needlework.

40 ¶ And for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty.

41 And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

42 And thou shalt make them linen breeches to cover their nakedness; from the loins even unto the thighs they shall reach.

43 And they shall be upon Aaron, and upon his sons, when they come in unto the tabernacle of the congregation, or when they come near unto the altar to minister into the holy place; that they bear not iniquity, and die: it shall be a statute for ever unto him and his seed after him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXVIII.

From the particular care that was taken of the sacrifices, we may learn first, That God would have us, in all places of worship, to have the ordinances so conducted, as to make a lasting impression on our mind. Secondly, From the grand appearance that the robes of the high-priest made, let us learn, that in our whole conduct in life our light should so shine before men, that others seeing our good works, may glorify our Father who is in heaven. Lastly, by holiness to the Lord being inscribed on the breast-plate, let us learn that we should carry along with us, not only holiness of heart through life, but we should keep a holy jealousy over all our actions, and on every occasion take care not to offend, lest we bring upon ourselves the displeasure of God.

C H A P. XXIX.

■ The sacrifice and ceremonies of consecrating the priests.

38 The continual burnt offering. 43 God's promise to sanctify and dwell among the children of Israel.

35 His sound shall be heard when he goeth in, &c.] What the number of bells are, we are not told, only their use. When the high-priest was going into the sanctuary, he wore these little bells on the hem of his robe, well to give notice to the people to prepare and fix their attention, as out of respect to the divine presence, residing in the sanctum sanctorum, or holy of holies; first desiring, as it were, permission to enter, and that he might not be punished with death for an unmannerly intrusion.

36 HOLINESS TO THE LORD.] This motto could not fail to remind the priest, that he was consecrated to Jehovah, the great God of all things.

38 That Aaron might bear the iniquity of the holy things, &c.] That he may obtain pardon for the omissions and deficiencies of the people, in their performance of religious duties.

40 Bonnets, &c.] In this particular we have an instance wherein the Jewish habit was ordained in opposition to that of the Egyptians; for the Egyptian priests ministered always bareheaded, but the Jewish had their heads covered.

42 Linen breeches, &c.] This was in opposition to the unchaste ritual of the neighbouring nations, who, in their adoration of Baalpeor, were guilty of the grossest obscenities.

43 A statute for ever, &c.] That is, as long as the Jewish state shall continue, or there shall be any priesthood of the order of Aaron, they shall appear before God in these garments.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIX.

1 And this is the thing, &c.] This chapter contains a succinct account of the manner of consecrating the Jewish priests, the ceremonies of which were doubtless in order to give them and the people

AND this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister unto me in the priest's office: take one young bullock, and two rams without blemish,

2 And unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened tempered with oil, and wafers unleavened anointed with oil: of wheaten flour shalt thou make them.

3 And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams.

4 And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt wash them with water.

5 And thou shalt take the garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with the curious girdle of the ephod:

6 And thou shalt put the mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre.

7 Then shalt thou take the anointing oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him.

8 And thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them.

9 And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his sons, and put the bonnets on them: and the priest's office shall be their's for a perpetual statute: and thou shalt consecrate Aaron and his sons.

10 And thou shalt cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock.

11 And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

12 And thou shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.

13 And thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar.

14 But the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering.

15 Thou shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

16 And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.

17 And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and unto his head.

18 And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar:

a deep sense of the sacredness of their office. The high priest was a manifest type of Christ Jesus, our great high-priest, who is gone into the heavens, there to appear before God, and make intercession for us, as is fully and sublimely explained in the epistle to the Hebrews.

4 And shalt wash them with water.] Ablution was an ancient ceremony, and observed in acts of worship as an emblem of inward purity.

5 Thou shalt take the garments, &c.] This typically represented, that after the priests had by spiritual washing purified themselves from sin, they were to be clothed with the garments of righteousness, of which the holy vestments were types or symbols. Psalm cxxxii. 9. 16.

6 The holy crown] The golden plate, upon which was engraved, Holiness to the Lord.

10 Shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock] By this denoting, that they disburdened themselves of their sins, and laid them upon the head of the sacrifice to be killed. This prefigured Christ the great sacrifice, upon whom was laid the iniquity of us all.

Tabernacle of the congregation, &c.] In Hebrew, Tabernacle of the meeting; so called, because the people met or assembled there to perform their religious duties.

13 All the fat, &c.] This was the omentum, or caul; it might typically represent the necessity of mortifying all those vices which stupify and deaden the soul, or teach the necessity of giving God the best of our substance.

14 Without the camp, &c.] Intimating that the guilt of sin was carried out far from the people. So Christ suffered without the gate.

15 Thou shalt take one ram, &c.] Rams, heifers, and goats, were esteemed sacred animals, because in symbolic hieroglyphics they were

Before altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

CHRIST

19 And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.

20 Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

21 And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

22 Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration:

23 And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:

24 And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD.

25 And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.

27 And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave offering, and the shoulder of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons.

28 And it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever from the children of Israel: for it is an heave offering: and it shall be an heave offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace offerings, even their heave offering unto the LORD.

29 And the holy garments of Aaron shall be his son's after him, to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.

30 And that son that is priest in his stead shall put them on seven days, when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place.

31 And thou shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.

32 And Aaron and his sons shall eat the flesh of the ram, and the bread that is in the basket, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

33 And they shall eat those things wherewith the atonement was made, to consecrate and to sanctify them: but a stranger shall not eat thereof, because they are holy.

34 And if ought of the flesh of the consecrations, or of the bread, remain unto the morning, then thou shalt burn the remainder with fire: it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.

35 And thus shalt thou do unto Aaron, and to his sons, according to all things which I have commanded thee: seven days shalt thou consecrate them.

36 And thou shalt offer every day a bullock for a sin offering for atonement: and thou shalt cleanse the altar, when thou hast made an atonement for it, and thou shalt anoint it, to sanctify it.

37 Seven days thou shalt make an atonement for the altar, and sanctify it; and it shall be an altar most holy: whatsoever toucheth the altar shall be holy.

38 ¶ Now this is that which thou shalt offer upon the altar; two lambs of the first year day by day continually.

39 The one lamb thou shalt offer in the morning; and the other lamb thou shalt offer at even:

40 And with the one lamb a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil; and the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink offering.

41 And the other lamb thou shalt offer at even, and shalt do thereto according to the meat offering of the morning, and according to the drink offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

42 This shall be a continual burnt offering throughout your generations at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD: where I will meet you, to speak there unto thee.

43 ¶ And there I will meet with the children of Israel, and the tabernacle shall be sanctified by my glory.

44 And I will sanctify the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar: I will sanctify also both Aaron and his sons, to minister to me in the priest's office.

45 And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God.

46 And they shall know that I am the LORD their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, that I may dwell among them: I am the LORD their God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIX.

First, The solemn rites made use of at the consecration of Aaron and his sons, should teach us, that some sort of solemnity should be offered at the ordination of ministers. Secondly, The law concerning morning and evening sacrifices should also teach us, that nothing can excuse us from beginning the day, and ending it, in begging the divine blessing upon our labour and sleep, and giving thanks to God for his mercies. Lastly, As God promised that he would dwell among the children of Israel, as long as the memory of his name was kept up; so Christians may be assured of his favour, in attending to their duty, and on all occasions shewing mercy and kindness to each other.

C H A P. XXX.

1 The altar of incense. 11 The ransom of souls. 17 The brasen laver. 22 The holy anointing oil. 34 The composition of the perfume.

AND thou shalt make an altar to burn incense upon: of shittim wood shalt thou make it.

2 A cubit shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof; foursquare shall it be: and two cubits shall be the height thereof: the horns thereof shall be of the same.

3 And used to represent some deity; the picture of the ram at first, and the living animal in process of time, were peculiarly worshipped at Thebes; and in opposition to this species of idolatry, this command was probably given.

20 Put it upon the tip of the right ear, &c.] The ear is used, in scripture, as the symbol of obedience, the hand of action, and the foot as the symbol of the path or conduct of life; the priests were therefore taught by this ceremony to apply their minds diligently to the study of the law, to employ their hands with the like diligence in the work of the sacred ministry, and to direct their feet to walk in the way of God's commandments.

27 The wave offering, and—the heave offering, &c.] The words "wave" and "heave" are used to denote any offering whatever; however, the rabbins made a distinction, and tell us, that the first was waved up and down, east, west, north, and south; to signify that God was the Lord of the earth as well as the heavens; the last was only lifted up towards heaven, in token of its being devoted to God.

30 Shall put them on seven days, &c.] That is, the seven days of consecration, before he entered upon his office, during which time the priests were not to stir from the door of the tabernacle by night or by day. It is worthy of remark, that the number "seven" is much regarded in sacred matters. The blood of the atonement was sprinkled before the mercy-seat seven times; the consecrating oil was sprinkled on the altar seven times; the leper was sprinkled seven times; the days appointed for his cleansing were seven; the time for the consecration of priests was seven days, also for purifying the unclean: Naaman was commanded to wash in Jordan seven times; Jericho was seven days besieged; every seventh day was a sabbath; every seventh year a year of rest; and every seven times seven the year of jubilee.

37 Whatsoever toucheth the altar, &c.] Our blessed Saviour alludes to this, Matt. xxiii. 19.

40 A tenth deal.] A tenth part of the ephah, sometimes called an omer, equivalent to about half a peck English measure.

An hin, &c.] That is, about our gallon.

COMMENTAR

3 And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, the top thereof, and the sides thereof round about, and the horns thereof; and thou shalt make unto it a crown of gold round about.

4 And two golden rings shalt thou make to it under the crown of it, by the two corners thereof, upon the two sides of it shalt thou make it; and they shall be for places for the staves to bear it withal.

5 And thou shalt make the staves of shittim wood, and overlay them with gold.

6 And thou shalt put it before the vail that is by the ark of the testimony, before the mercy seat that is over the testimony, where I will meet with thee.

7 And Aaron shall burn thereon sweet incense every morning: when he dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it.

8 And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at even, he shall burn incense upon it, a perpetual incense before the LORD throughout your generations.

9 Ye shall offer no strange incense thereon, nor burnt sacrifice, nor meat offering; neither shall ye pour drink offering thereon.

10 And Aaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonements: once in the year shall he make atonement upon it throughout your generations: it is most holy unto the LORD.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 When thou takest the sum of the children of Israel after their number, then shall they give every man a ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou numberest them; that there be no plague among them, when thou numberest them.

13 This they shall give, every one that passeth among them that are numbered, half a shekel after the shekel of the sanctuary: (a shekel is twenty gerahs:) an half shekel shall be the offering of the LORD.

14 Every one that passeth among them that are numbered, from twenty years old and above, shall give an offering unto the LORD.

15 The rich shall not give more, and the poor shall not give less than half a shekel, when they give an offering unto the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

16 And thou shalt take the atonement money of the children of Israel, and shalt appoint it for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; that it may be a memorial unto the children of Israel before the LORD, to make an atonement for your souls.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Thou shalt also make a laver of brass, and his foot also of brass, to wash withal: and thou shalt put it between the tabernacle of the congregation and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein. Before CHRIST 1491.

19 For Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their feet thereat:

20 When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the LORD:

21 So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and it shall be a statute for ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations.

22 ¶ Moreover the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Take thou also unto thee principal spices, of pure myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels,

24 And of cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil olive one hin:

25 And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary: it shall be an holy anointing oil.

26 And thou shalt anoint the tabernacle of the congregation therewith, and the ark of the testimony.

27 And the table and all his vessels, and the candlestick and his vessels, and the altar of incense, 28 And the altar of burnt offering with all his vessels, and the laver and his foot.

29 And thou shalt sanctify them that they may be most holy: whatsoever toucheth them shall be holy.

30 And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office.

31 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, This shall be an holy anointing oil unto me throughout your generations.

32 Upon man's flesh shall it not be poured, neither shall ye make any other like it, after the composition of it: it is holy, and it shall be holy unto you.

33 Whosoever compoundeth any like it, or whosoever putteth any of it upon a stranger, shall even be cut off from his people.

34 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Take unto thee sweet spices, stacte, and onycha, and galbanum; these sweet spices with pure frankincense: of each shall there be a like weight:

35 And thou shalt make it a perfume, a confection after the art of the apothecary, tempered together, pure and holy:

36 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXX.

6 I will meet, &c.] See chap. xxv. 22.

7 Sweet incense, &c.] This incense was compounded of many fragrant and odoriferous spices. See ver. 34.

9 Strange incense, &c.] That is, either such as is used by idolatrous nations, or such as is not expressly prescribed by God himself.

12 Then shall they give every man a ransom for his soul, &c.] This tax was as a pious acknowledgment to God, for having redeemed them from the bondage of Egypt, and delivered them from so many dangers and difficulties with his own right hand.

13 Half a shekel] About fourteen pence of our money.

After the shekel of the sanctuary] Some have supposed that there was an ordinary and an holy shekel, and that the latter was twice as much as the former; but it is most probable there was but one kind of shekel, which is here called, "of the sanctuary," because there was one kept there as a proof, a standard, by which all these coins were maintained in their just value, goodness, and weight.

Twenty gerahs, &c.] This gerah was something more than a penny.

15 The rich shall not give more, and the poor shall not give less, &c.] All souls are equal, alike in the esteem of God, who made them all.

18 A laver of brass, &c.] This, on account of its extraordinary size, was called the brazen sea. It was placed in the court of the tabernacle, not far from the altar of burnt offerings.

23 Of pure myrrh] The word mor, in the original, is generally supposed to mean "myrrh," though some are of opinion that it signifies ambergris; and others frankincense.

Five hundred shekels] Something more than twenty pounds weight.

Sweet cinnamon] The cinnamon of the ancients has been thought to differ from ours, for this reason, because it is not known at present to be produced in any other part of the east, except in Ceylon, an island of the Indian sea; but is not impossible that the same spice might be found in some of the forests of Arabia; and that it does grow in other parts of the world besides Ceylon, is evident, as it is found in one of the forests of America.

Sweet calamus, &c.] This is a spicy root belonging to a particular flag or iris, called "calamus aromaticus," or sweet cane.

24 Cassia, &c.] As the drug now known by the name of cassia is not aromatic, it is imagined that the antient costus is here meant, which was sometimes burnt on the heathen altars, the best sort of which grew in Arabia. There are said to be various kinds of it; but that in use with us is brought from the East Indies, and has a fragrant smell, not unlike that of violets.

34 Stacte] The best sort of myrrh, or that which flows spontaneously from the tree. Some think it was liquid storax, which is the produce of a particular tree growing near Suez, in Arabia, and in great esteem among the eastern people.

Onycha] There are various opinions concerning this onycha. Some take it for the shell of a fish which fed upon spikenard, found in certain pools and lakes, the best of which Diderides affirms, was brought from the Red sea. The Arabic translation has it, Laudanum, an aromatic gum, made use of by the Arabians in the composition of their perfumes. Others think it was bdellium.

Galbanum] This was the gum of liquor of a plant resembling fennel, which was common in Syria. Some translations distinguish the galbanum here rendered, by calling it galbanum of sweet odour, to distinguish it from the common sort, which is of a disagreeable scent. There was a particular species, the product of mount Amaria, in Syria, of a very pleasing odour.

Frankincense, &c.] This is a dry resinous substance, of an agreeable smell, common in some parts of Arabia, particularly in that called Sabæa.

Before CHRIST 1491. 36 And thou shalt beat some of it very small, and put of it before the testimony in the tabernacle of the congregation, where I will meet with thee: it shall be unto you most holy.

37 And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof: it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD.

38 Whosoever shall make like unto that, to smell thereto, shall even be cut off from his people.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXX.

By the altar of incense being placed before the vail, we are to learn, first, That till Christ came, there would be a state of darkness that would resemble the shade made by a vail. Secondly, As the money paid by way of ransom for the people was to support the tabernacle; so it is our duty to contribute towards supporting such places as are set apart for the service of the divine being. Thirdly, The priests were commanded to wash themselves, before they performed any services; and this should teach us, that in all our approaches to God we should be divested of every impurity. Lastly, The strict charge given to them not to employ the oil to any purpose but that which had been prescribed, implies, that great respect should be shewn to every thing set apart for a religious use.

C H A P. XXXI.

1 Bezaleel and Aboliab are called, and qualified for the work of the tabernacle. 12 The observance of the sabbath is again commanded. 18 Moses receiveth the two tables.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 See, I have called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah:

3 And I have filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship,

4 To devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brassy,

5 And in cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

6 And I, behold, I have given with him Aboliab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan: and in the hearts of all that are wise hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee;

7 The tabernacle of the congregation, and the ark of the testimony, and the mercy seat that is thereupon, and all the furniture of the tabernacle,

8 And the table and his furniture, and the pure candlestick with all his furniture, and the altar of incense,

9 And the altar of burnt offering with all his furniture, and the laver and his foot,

10 And the cloths of service, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office, 11 And the anointing oil, and sweet incense for the holy place: according to all that I have commanded thee shall they do.

36 Put of it before the testimony, &c.] Upon the altar of incense, placed before the ark, but without the vail.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXI.

2 See, I have called by name] That is, I have chosen him, or appointed.

Bezaleel, the son of Uri, &c.] This genealogy is described 1 Chron. ii. 18—20.

8 The pure candlestick, &c.] This was so denominated, either from its being consecrated, or because it was made of pure gold; though most probably on the latter account.

10 The cloths of service, &c.] That is, the vail, curtains, and coverings of the tabernacle, the hangings of the court, and all the coverings which served to wrap up the holy things in, in their removals.

13 Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep] As the Hebrew particle ach is used as an exceptive particle, the words may be rendered, Nevertheless my sabbath ye shall keep. Notwithstanding I have been thus particular in my directions concerning the number, form, and materials of all these things, yet do not imagine that all I require consists merely in such externals, which will not acquit you of your neglect of other duties, and, in particular, the observation of my sabbath.

It is a sign between me and you, &c.] By which you signify, that you are the worshippers of the one supreme being, who in the space of six days created all things, and on the seventh rested or ceased from his works.

12 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 13 Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD that doth sanctify you.

14 Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you: every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

15 Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy to the LORD: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death.

16 Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant.

17 It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed.

18 ¶ And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXXI.

We here find, that God did not leave it to the people to make choice of proper persons for the service; and from hence we may learn, first, That we have no right to nominate any other officers for his service than are mentioned in his word. Secondly, That although the Israelites had been long oppressed in Egypt, yet they had many ingenious persons among them; which points out to us, that God can give many things to the oppressed which have been denied by their cruel taskmasters. Thirdly, From the frequent mention here made of the sabbath, we may observe, that as God knows of how much value divine worship is to us, so he would have it carefully attended to. Lastly, Let the care that God took to enjoin the whole law, remind us to make that part which is moral the unalterable rule of our conduct.

C H A P. XXXII.

1 The people in the absence of Moses cause Aaron to make a calf. 7 God is angered thereby. 11 At the intreaty of Moses he is appeased. 15 Moses cometh down with the tables: 19 He breaketh them: 20 He destroyeth the calf. 21 Aaron's excuse for himself. 25 Moses causeth the idolaters to be slain. 30 He prayeth for the people. 33 God's answer.

AND when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

2 And

14 Every one that defileth it, &c.] The sabbath being peculiarly given to the Jews, as a sign of the covenant between them and God, the violation of this day, omitting the moral events it produced, was in effect an infringement of the covenant, consequently an act of rebellion, and justly punished with immature death, as the words "cut off" implies.

15 The sabbath of rest, &c.] In the Hebrew it is, The rest of rests; and signifies, that of all others, this day ought most religiously to be observed, and kept with great punctuality.

18 Tables of stone, written with the finger of God.] Many consider this as a metaphorical expression, implying, that the words of the decalogue were written by the hand of Moses, by the particular direction of God; though the phrase seems rather to signify, that God employed neither Moses, nor any other instrument in writing them, but that he did it by his own powerful operation.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXII.

1 Up, make us gods] It should have been rendered in the singular, Up, make us a god. From hence it is evident, that the Israelites had imbibed the idolatrous notions of the Egyptians, who worshipped the golden calf. They had waited above a month for Moses's return from the mount, but now despairing of it, they thought it necessary to have a god of some kind, to direct them in their way through the wilderness. Some are of opinion that the Israelites evidently intended the worship of the true God under this similitude; accordingly we find, ver. 5. their feast was proclaimed to the Lord, or Jehovah. However, not only to worship a false deity, but also the

2 And Aaron said unto them, Break off the golden earrings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and of your daughters, and bring them unto me.

3 And all the people brake off the golden earrings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron.

4 And he received them at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, after he had made it a molten calf: and they said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

5 And when Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, To morrow is a feast to the LORD.

6 And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves:

8 They have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

9 And the LORD said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people:

10 Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation.

11 ¶ And Moses besought the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?

12 Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people.

13 Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever.

14 And the LORD repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people.

15 ¶ And Moses turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written.

the true by an external image, was equally forbidden by the second commandment.

Which shall go before us, &c.] Their intention was, to return into Egypt; and they flattered themselves, that by carrying before them the god so highly adored in that country, the Egyptians would forgive their defection, and receive them again into their land.

4 And fashioned it with a graving tool.] The verb tzur, signifies "to bind, or tie up," and cheret denotes "a bag," as well as a graving tool; this passage therefore may be rendered, And he received them, (viz. the golden ear-rings) at their hand, and tied them in a bag, and caused them to be cast into a molten calf.

A molten calf, &c.] In imitation of the Egyptian god Apis or Serapis, which was a living ox, as well as an image made in the likeness of that creature.

5 Aaron made proclamation, &c.] Some have endeavoured to excuse the conduct of Aaron upon this occasion, but certainly it will admit of no palliation: such examples of human frailty and weakness ought to teach us to be constantly on our guard, and carefully to avoid every sinful temptation.

6 To play.] The Hebrew signifies, To laugh. It was the custom of the Egyptians when they had found out their god Apis, to bring him with great pomp and solemnity to Memphis, the royal city, the children going before in procession, and the company singing a song of praise to the deity. This rejoicing of the Israelites might therefore be in imitation of the Egyptian practice.

7 Thy people, &c.] A term of disdain, by which God disavowed them from being his people, who had so grievously corrupted themselves.

9 A stiffnecked people.] Or, refractory. It is a metaphorical expression, taken from oxen, that will not yield their necks to the yoke.

14 The Lord repented, &c.] A figurative expression, adapted to the sentiments and affections of human nature.

19 Brake them beneath the mount.] Purposely, by which he gave them to understand, they had broken their solemn covenant with God, through their idolatry.

No. 10.

16 And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables.

17 And when Joshua heard the noise of the people they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in the camp.

18 And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome: but the noise of them that sing do I hear.

19 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf, and the dancing: and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount.

20 ¶ And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strawed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it.

21 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?

22 And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot; thou knowest the people, that they are set on mischief.

23 For they said unto me, Make us gods, which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

24 And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off. So they gave it me: then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf.

25 ¶ And when Moses saw that the people were naked; (for Aaron had made them naked unto their shame among their enemies:)

26 Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Who is on the LORD's side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

27 And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.

28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

29 For Moses had said, Consecrate yourselves to day to the LORD, even every man upon his son, and upon his brother; that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day.

30 ¶ And

20 He took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire.] That is, he calcined it, and reduced it to dust.

Made the children of Israel drink of it.] That is, he cast the powder into the brook that descended out of the mount of Horeb (Deut. ix. 21.) which being the only water in the thirsty desert, the Israelites were obliged to drink of it. This was to render them the more sensible of their folly, in worshipping that for a god which was to pass through their bodies.

22 They are set on mischief.] That is, they are prone to the sin of idolatry.

24 I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf.] Here Aaron dissembles, and endeavours to extenuate his crime, by pretending that the calf was made rather by chance than design.

25 Were naked, &c.] Some understand by this, that they were divested of their virtue and piety; but (though this was true) the most natural signification seems to be, that they wanted arms, and for that reason were not able to resist the Levites, a few of whom slew 3000 of the people.

26 All the sons of Levi gathered themselves together, &c.] Hence we learn, that not only all the other tribes had joined in the idolatrous feast, but even some of the Levites, because Moses commands them to slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, in case he should come in his way.

28 The children of Levi did according to the word of Moses, &c.] This zeal of the tribe of Levi was amply rewarded; for it not only helped to wipe off that stain their ancestors had entailed upon them, by the cruel and shocking murder of the Shechemites; but, in a short time, procured them the Levitical priesthood; which, though inferior to the Aaronical, entitled them to the tythe, or tenth part; to the lower ministry of the tabernacle, and afterwards of the temple; to a place in the tribunal of each city and town; to the property of thirty-five cities of refuge, and other privileges.

29 Consecrate yourselves to day, &c.] This passage may be rendered, Consecrate yourselves to-day to the Lord, because every man hath been against his son, and against his brother, &c.

30 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin.

31 And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold.

32 Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written.

33 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book.

34 Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless in the day when I visit I will visit their sin upon them.

35 And the LORD plagued the people, because they made the calf, which Aaron made.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXII.

Here we are to consider, first, The great sin of the Israelites, who, notwithstanding so many warnings that God had given them to shun idolatry, and the solemn promises lately made by them, fell into that sin. Secondly, That although they pretended to worship the true God, under the figure of a golden calf, yet they were guilty of real idolatry; which shews, that it is absolutely forbidden to worship any image; and that those things which God had forbid, cannot be rendered lawful by the intention. Thirdly, We may likewise observe the weakness of Aaron, who, instead of opposing the idolatry, consented to it; and learn pretences to resist all evil with courage. Fourthly, The great charity of Moses, who interceded with so much zeal for the children of Israel, should serve us for an example, and a motive too, to intercede and pray for sinners. The punishment which the Levites executed upon the idolatrous people must be acknowledged to be very just, though it was very severe, God having expressly ordered to put to death those that were guilty of idolatry. Lastly, This chapter should bring to our mind what St. Paul says, 1 Cor. x. that these things are our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, as did the Israelites; and that we should not imitate them in their idolatry, their wanderings, and disobedience.

C H A P. XXXIII.

1 The Lord refuseth to go with the people. 4 The people mourn thereat. 7 The tabernacle is removed out of the camp. 9 The Lord talketh familiarly with Moses out of the cloudy pillar. 12 Moses prayeth for the continuance of God's presence, 18 and desireth to see the glory of God.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Depart, and go up hence, thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt, unto the land which I swore unto Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, saying, Unto thy seed will I give it:

2 And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite:

3 Unto a land flowing with milk and honey: for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a stiff-necked people: lest I consume thee in the way.

32 If not, blot me, I pray thee] An expression of great affection towards his countrymen; since he preferred even death to being the beholder of so horrid and terrible a spectacle.

Out of thy book which thou hast written.] This expression alludes to the custom of numbering the people, by inserting their names in a scroll, or register.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIII.

2 I will send an angel before thee, &c.] This was a being of an order inferior to that which went before them in the cloud, as appears from ver. 3. See Exod. xxiii. 20. Deut. vii. 22. Josh. xxiv. 11.

5 I will come up into the midst of thee, &c.] This may with greater propriety be rendered, Should I come up into the midst of thee, I would consume thee in a moment.

6 By the mount, &c.] In Hebrew, mehor, "from the mount," i. e. at some distance from it.

7 The tabernacle, &c.] This must have been either the tent of Moses, or some other; for the sacred tabernacle was not yet erected.

9 Cloudy pillar, &c.] This appearance shewed that Moses had not moved the tabernacle without the express orders or approbation of God.

11 The Lord spake unto Moses face to face] That is, God revealed his will to him in an audible voice, and in a familiar conde-

4 ¶ And when the people heard these evil tidings, they mourned: and no man did put on him his ornaments.

5 For the LORD had said unto Moses, Say unto the children of Israel, Ye are a stiff-necked people: I will come up into the midst of thee in a moment, and consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments from thee, that I may know what to do unto thee.

6 And the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments by the mount Horeb.

7 ¶ And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp, and called it the Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.

8 And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto the tabernacle, that all the people rose up, and stood every man at his tent door, and looked after Moses, until he was gone into the tabernacle.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the LORD talked with Moses.

10 And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle door: and all the people rose up and worshipped, every man in his tent door.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend. And he turned again into the camp: but his servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

12 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

13 Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, shew me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight: and consider that this nation is thy people.

14 And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

15 And he said unto him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

16 For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

17 And the LORD said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken: for thou hast found grace in my sight, and I know thee by name.

18 ¶ And he said, I beseech thee, shew me thy glory.

19 And he said, I will make all my goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.

scending manner; not in dreams and visions, nor in awful and tremendous circumstances.

Young man, &c.] Joshua must have been upwards of fifty. The Hebrew word naar, signifies "a minister or servant," as appears from Gen. xiv. 24. and if we translate it so here, the inconsistency of the text will be removed, it will run thus: His servant Joshua who ministered unto him, departed, &c.

12 I know thee by name, &c.] To "know," is in scripture, often used for to approve of, or favour; and the words "by name" signify, in an especial manner.

13 Shew me now thy way, &c.] This request may either signify, that Moses was desirous of knowing the manner in which God designed to behave towards the Israelites, after their defection; or that he besought him to discover his mercy towards them for the future.

19 I will make all my goodness pass before thee] This means, that God would display his glory before him in such a manner, as should not harm, but rather gratify and delight him; or it may signify his gracious intentions concerning the Israelites.

I will proclaim] The meaning is, either that God would give him notice by a voice of his glorious presence; or else that he would give him assurance of the truth of his promises.

Will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, &c.] As I know the hearts of all men, I am the only true judge who the proper objects of my grace and mercy.

- 20 And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live.
- 21 And the LORD said, Behold there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock:
- 22 And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by:
- 23 And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts: but my face shall not be seen.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIII.

The example of the Israelites, who stript themselves of their ornaments, after they had been punished for their idolatry, teaches us to humble ourselves, and to shew marks of our contrition when God is angry with us. Secondly, The manner in which God spake, and communicated himself to Moses, shews that he was very weak prophet, and that his laws and his doctrine came from God, and consequently that they ought to be considered by us with great respect. Thirdly, It is also to be observed, in the prayers that Moses continued to pour forth for the Israelites, the extreme tenderness he had for them, and his great zeal for the glory of God. Fourthly, God's answer to Moses, when that prophet besought him to let him see his glory, shews us, that God dwells in inaccessible light. St. Paul says, 1 Tim. vi. and that no man can see him in this life. This ought to convince us that Jesus Christ our Lord is infinitely above Moses; since he has seen God, and was with him from the beginning, John i. Lastly, We ought to believe, that though we cannot see God in this life, we shall see him as he is in the life to come; and this hope should engage us to purify ourselves as he is pure, 1 John iii.

C H A P. XXXIV.

- Moses is commanded to prepare new tables, and to go up again to the top of the mount. 4 The name of the Lord is there proclaimed before him. 8 Moses intreateth God to go with the people. 10 God maketh a covenant with them, in which he restraineth idolatry; and 18, 21, 22, 23, 25 repeateth certain duties before prescribed. 27 Moses continueth in the mount forty days, and by God's command writeth upon the tables the ten commandments. 29 On his return his face shineth, and he covereth it with a veil.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest.

- 2 And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me in the top of the mount.
- 3 And no man shall come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount; neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount.
- 4 ¶ And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Moses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the LORD had commanded him, and took in his hand the two tables of stone.
- 5 And the LORD descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD.
- 6 And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, long suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth,
- 7 Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation. Before CHRIST 1491.

8 ¶ And Moses made haste, and bowed his head toward the earth, and worshipped.

9 And he said, if now I have found grace in thy sight, O LORD, let my Lord, I pray thee, go among us; for it is a stiffnecked people; and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance.

10 ¶ And he said, Behold, I make a covenant: before all thy people I will do marvels, such as have not been done in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD: for it is a terrible thing that I will do with thee.

11 Observe thou that which I command thee this day: behold, I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite.

12 Take heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee:

13 But ye shall destroy their altars, break their images, and cut down their groves:

14 For thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is jealous, is a jealous God:

15 Lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee, and thou eat of his sacrifice:

16 And thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.

17 Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.

18 ¶ The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abid: for in the month Abid thou camest out from Egypt.

19 All that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle whether ox or sheep, that is male.

20 But the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me empty.

21 ¶ Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in earing time and in harvest thou shalt rest.

22 ¶ And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the year's end.

23 ¶ Thrice in the year shall all your menchildren appear before the LORD God, the God of Israel.

24 For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year.

25 ¶ Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leaven; neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover be left unto the morning.

26 The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring

20. There shall no man see me, and live.] Because of the weakness and infirmities of human nature, on the one hand, which cannot bear the refulgence of the divine presence; and of sin in the other, because God is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity.

23. Thou shalt see my back parts: but my face shall not be seen.] Moses here speaks of God in terms borrowed from gross sense: for though God is a pure Spirit, without either body or parts, yet as we can understand nothing but by the mediation of our senses, it was absolutely necessary for him to use such terms. By his back-parts, we may understand the brightness of his majesty, though not in its full splendor; by his face, his full glory, and his brightness unveiled; and by his hand, with which he covered Moses, may be denoted a cloud which he cast about him; that he might not receive hurt by the refulgence of the divine rays.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIII.

1. Hew the two tables of stone, &c.] This command indicates how greatly God had been offended; for the first tables were the work of God; and written with his finger; but these were the work of men.

6. Merciful and gracious, long suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth.] Daily experience must necessarily convince us all how truly these epithets belong to God.

7. And that will by no means clear the guilty, &c.] Though the word "guilty" is not in the original, the sense requires it to be added.

9. For it is a stiffnecked people, &c.] The particle "for," may be better rendered "though," and then the sense will be, Pardon our iniquity and our sin, though we are a stiff-necked people.

10. It is a terrible thing that I will do with thee.] That is, I will work such awful miracles as shall make the inhabitants of Canaan tremble.

15. Go a whoring.] Adultery and whoredoms are the terms generally used to imply their idolatries.

And thou eat of his sacrifice.] Sacrifices were religious feasts, consequently, to partake of idolatrous sacrifices, was, to countenance and make a profession of idolatry.

27 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.

28 And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses came down from mount Sinai with the two tables of testimony in Moses' hand, when he came down from the mount, that Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone while he talked with him.

30 And when Aaron and all the children of Israel saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone; and they were afraid to come nigh him.

31 And Moses called unto them; and Aaron and all the rulers of the congregation returned unto him: and Moses talked with them.

32 And afterwards all the children of Israel came nigh: and he gave them in commandment all that the LORD had spoken with him in mount Sinai.

33 And till Moses had done speaking with them, he put a vail on his face.

34 But when Moses went in before the LORD to speak with him, he took the vail off, until he came out. And he came out, and spake unto the children of Israel that which he was commanded.

35 And the children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone: and Moses put the vail upon his face again, until he went in to speak with him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXXIV.

Here we are to observe three things: First, That the laws about the first-born, first-fruits, sabbath, and feasts, were established by the great wisdom of God, to the end that the Israelites might remember the favours that God had shewed them; and to prevent them from imitating the customs and superstitions of the idolatrous nations. Secondly, That when the Israelites celebrated their solemn festivals, God hindered their enemies from coming into their country; which was a very particular mark of the divine protection over this people, and should be a lesson to us, that God blesses those who serve him, and defends them from the dangers to which they might be exposed by their obedience. Thirdly, The shining of Moses's face, when he came down from the mount, was an assurance to the people of Israel, that he spake to them from God; and it gives us an idea of the glory that will encompass the blessed, when they shall see God, and enjoy his presence in heaven.

CHAP. XXXV.

2 The sabbath. 4 The free gifts for the tabernacle. 20 The readiness of the people to offer. 30 Bezaleel and Aboliab are called to the work.

AND Moses gathered all the congregation of the children of Israel together, and said unto them, These are the words which the LORD hath commanded, that ye should do them.

2 ¶ Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be to you an holy day, a sabbath of rest to the LORD: whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death.

3 Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath day.

29 The skin of his face shone, &c.] The word, in the Hebrew, signifies, Was horned, being permitted so near an approach to the divine glory, he carried off (though unknown to himself) such a beamy lustre, as played about his head and face for a considerable time. The heathens (perhaps from hence) used to represent their gods with a beamy glory around their heads. The Roman emperors, who were honoured as sort of deities, were likewise thus represented. Pliny in his panegyric, makes the shining head of Domitian the subject of some banter. Homer in like manner makes Minerva irradiate the head and armour of Diomedes.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXV.

¶ And Moses gathered, &c.] The historian here resumes his account of the priests, which had been interrupted by his relation of the molten calf, and proceeds to the execution of the divine commands.

4 ¶ And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD commanded, saying,

5 Take ye from among you an offering unto the LORD: whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it, an offering of the LORD; gold and silver, and brass,

6 And blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair,

7 And rams' skins dyed red, and badgers' skins, and shittim wood,

¶ And oil for the light, and spices for anointing oil, and for the sweet incense,

9 And onyx stones, and stones to be set for the ephod, and for the breastplate.

10 And every wise hearted among you shall come, and make all that the LORD hath commanded;

11 The tabernacle, his tent, and his covering, his taches, and his boards, his bars, his pillars, and his sockets,

12 The ark, and the staves thereof, with the mercy seat, and the vail of the covering,

13 The table and his staves, and all his vessels, and the shewbread,

14 The candlestick also for the light, and his furniture, and his lamps, with the oil for the light,

15 And the incense altar, and his staves, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense, and the hanging for the door at the entering in of the tabernacle,

16 The altar of burnt offering, with his brazen grate, his staves, and all his vessels, the laver and his foot,

17 The hangings of the court, his pillars, and their sockets, and the hanging for the door of the court,

18 The pins of the tabernacle, and the pins of the court, and their cords,

19 The cloths of service, to do service in the holy place, the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office.

20 ¶ And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.

21 And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the LORD's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments.

22 And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing hearted, and brought bracelets, and earrings, and rings, and tablets, all jewels of gold: and every man that offered offered an offering unto the LORD.

23 And every man, with whom was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and red skins of rams, and badgers' skins, brought them.

24 Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering: and every man, with whom was found shittim wood for any work of the service, brought it.

25 And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, both of blue, and of purple, and of scarlet, and of fine linen.

26 And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun goats' hair.

27 And

¶ Six days shall work be done, &c.] The frequent repetition shews the great importance of this precept. It is repeated here, to prevent the people from violating the sabbath by too great an assiduity in erecting the tabernacle.

3 Ye shall kindle no fire, &c.] They might not kindle a fire even to dress their meat, nor for any servile work, only to warm themselves in cold weather.

22 Tablets, &c.] Some think these were golden buckles worn at the girdle; but we imagine it was a kind of ribbon or girdle, worn by the women round their breasts.

23 With whom was found blue, &c.] Yarn, or wool of this colour was woven into garments and hangings for the use of the tabernacle.

25 Brought that which they had spun, &c.] These were the offering of the lower sort of people. See chap. xxv. 4.

27 And the rulers brought onyx stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate;
28 And spice, and oil for the light, and for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense.
29 The children of Israel brought a willing offering unto the LORD, every man and woman, whose heart, made them willing to bring for all manner of work, which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.
30 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, the LORD hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah;
31 And he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship;
32 And to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass,
33 And in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work.
34 And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan.
35 Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work, of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise cunning work.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXV.
The cheerfulness and the liberality shewn by the people of Israel, in giving what was necessary to the tabernacle, should stir us up to contribute freely to the service of God, and with pleasure to devote our goods to pious and charitable uses. We may also learn from this chapter, that every one, according to his condition, should contribute to the edification of the church, and that there are none but ought to do it, as far as God gives them strength and means.

CHAP. XXXVI.
1 The offerings are delivered to the workmen. 4 The liberality of the people is restrained. 8 The curtains with cherubims. 14 The curtains of goats' hair. 19 The covering of skins. 20 The boards with their sockets. 31 The bars. 35 The vail. 37 The hanging for the door.
THEN wrought Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise hearted man, in whom the LORD put wisdom and understanding to know how to work all manner of work for the service of the sanctuary, according to all that the LORD had commanded.
¶ And Moses called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom, even every one whose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it:
3 And they received of Moses all the offering, which the children of Israel had brought for the work of the service of the sanctuary, to make it withal. And they brought yet unto him free offering every morning.
4 ¶ And all the wise men, that wrought all the work of the sanctuary, came every man from his work which they made;
5 And they spake unto Moses, saying, The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the LORD commanded to make.
6 And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing. Before CHRIST 1491

7 For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.
8 ¶ And every wise hearted man among them that wrought the work of the tabernacle made ten curtains of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet: with cherubims of cunning work made he them.
9 The length of one curtain was twenty and eight cubits, and the breadth of one curtain four cubits: the curtains were all of one size.
10 And he coupled the five curtains one unto another: and the other five curtains he coupled one unto another.
11 And he made loops of blue on the edge of one curtain from the selvedge in the coupling: likewise he made in the uttermost side of another curtain, in the coupling of the second.
12 Fifty loops made he in one curtain, and fifty loops made he in the edge of the curtain which was in the coupling of the second: the loops held one curtain to another.
13 And he made fifty taches of gold, and coupled the curtains one unto another with the taches: so it became one tabernacle.
14 ¶ And he made curtains of goats' hair for the tent over the tabernacle: eleven curtains he made them.
15 The length of one curtain was thirty cubits, and four cubits was the breadth of one curtain: the eleven curtains were of one size.
16 And he coupled five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves.
17 And he made fifty loops upon the uttermost edge of the curtain in the coupling, and fifty loops made he upon the edge of the curtain which coupleth the second.
18 And he made fifty taches of brass to couple the tent together, that it might be one.
19 ¶ And he made a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of badgers' skins above that.
20 ¶ And he made boards for the tabernacle of shittim wood, standing up.
21 The length of a board was ten cubits, and the breadth of a board one cubit and a half.
22 One board had two tenons, equally distant one from another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle.
23 And he made boards for the tabernacle; twenty boards for the south side southward:
24 And forty sockets of silver he made under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for his two tenons, and two sockets under another board for his two tenons.
25 And for the other side of the tabernacle, which is toward the north corner, he made twenty boards,
26 And their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board.
27 And for the sides of the tabernacle westward he made six boards.
28 And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides.
29 And they were coupled beneath, and coupled together at the head thereof, to one ring: thus he did to both of them in both the corners.
30 And there were eight boards: and their sockets were sixteen sockets of silver, under every board two sockets.
31 ¶ And

27 The rulers brought onyx stones, &c.] Such precious stones the lower class of people could not furnish, together with gold, silver, spices, and oil, were the valuable offerings of the wealthy.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXVI.
1 Then wrought Bezaleel, &c.] The particle "then" is not in the Hebrew: Junius therefore connects this passage with the last verse of the preceding chapter, and reads the whole sentence in the future tense: thus, Bezaleel therefore shall do the work, and Aholiab, and every wise hearted man, &c. As the division of the scriptures into chapters was a modern invention, this variation in Junius's translation may be considered as an expedient which frees the sacred text from great inconveniency, which it is in our translation exposed to; in as much as it represents Bezaleel and Aholiab setting about the work, before they were required by Moses to do it.
3 And they brought yet unto him free offerings every morning.] Out of an earnest desire to shew their zeal for God's service, as they had lately done for erecting the molten calf.

31 ¶ And he made bars of shittim wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle,

32 And five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the tabernacles for the sides westward.

33 And he made the middle bar to shoot through the boards from the one end to the other.

34 And he overlaid the boards with gold, and made their rings of gold to be places for the bars, and overlaid the bars with gold.

35 ¶ And he made a vail of blue, and purple, and scarlet; and fine twined linen: with cherubims made he it of cunning work.

36 And he made thereunto four pillars of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold: their hooks were of gold; and he cast for them four sockets of silver.

37 ¶ And he made an hanging for the tabernacle door of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, of needlework.

38 And the five pillars of it with their hooks: and he overlaid their chapiters and their fillets with gold: but their five sockets were of brass.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXVI.

In the first place, the particular directions here given concerning the building of the tabernacle are sufficient to convince us of the great care God took of his external worship; hence we may learn, that decent external rites are at all times necessary in divine worship. Secondly, By the artists being inspired to execute the different pieces of workmanship, we are taught, that whenever God has any thing to accomplish, either for his own glory or the good of his church, he will be sure to furnish the means. Lastly, From the whole, let us be careful to make a proper use of the gospel, that does not come to us burdened with rites and ceremonies, but suited to our nature, and calculated to promote our truest interests.

27 And he made two rings of gold for it under the crown thereof, by the two corners of it, upon the two sides thereof, to be places for the staves to bear it withal.

28 And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with gold.

29 ¶ And he made the holy anointing oil, and the pure incense of sweet spices, according to the work of the apothecary.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXVII.

The care that God took to keep the children of Israel from falling into idolatry, should shew us, that God, a most tender and benevolent father, provides at all times for the happiness of his creatures, that they may trust in him for the future, and act consistent with his will. Secondly, The alacrity with which the artists performed their work, should prompt us to diligence in the discharge of every duty. Lastly, Though it is not possible to assign a reason why so many articles were made for the use of the tabernacle, yet we ought to rest satisfied that it was by the appointment of God, and consequently for the best purposes.

AND he made the altar of burnt offering of shittim wood: five cubits was the length thereof, and five cubits the breadth thereof; it was four square; and three cubits the height thereof.

2 And he made the horns thereof on the four corners of it; the horns thereof were of the same: and he overlaid it with bras.

3 And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basons, and the fleshhooks, and the firepans: all the vessels thereof made he of bras.

4 And he made for the altar a brasen grate of network under the compass thereof beneath unto the midst of it.

5 And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grate of bras, to be places for the staves.

6 And he made the staves of shittim wood, and overlaid them with bras.

7 And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal; he made the altar hollow with boards.

8 ¶ And he made the laver of bras, and the foot of it of bras, of the looking glasses of the women assembling, which assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

9 ¶ And he made the court: on the south side southward the hangings of the court were of fine twined linen, an hundred cubits:

10 Their pillars were twenty, and their brasen sockets twenty; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets were of silver.

11 And for the north side of the hangings were an hundred cubits, their pillars were twenty, and their sockets of bras twenty; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

12 And for the west side were hangings of fifty cubits, their pillars ten, and their sockets ten; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.

13 And for the east side eastward fifty cubits.

14 The hangings of the one side of the gate were fifteen cubits; their pillars three, and their sockets three.

15 And for the other side of the court gate, on this hand and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits; their pillows three, and their sockets three.

16 All the hangings of the court round about were of fine twined linen.

17 And the sockets for the pillars were of bras; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver; and the overlaying of their chapters of silver; and all the pillars of the court were filleted with silver.

18 And the hanging for the gate of the court was needlework, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: and twenty cubits was the length, and the height in the breadth was five cubits, answerable to the hangings of the court.

19 And their pillars were four, and their sockets of bras four; their hooks of silver, and the overlaying of their chapters and their fillets of silver.

20 And all the pins of the tabernacle, and of the court round about, were of bras.

21 ¶ This is the sum of the tabernacle, even of the tabernacle of testimony, as it was counted, according to the commandment of Moses, for the service of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, son to Aaron the priest.

22 And Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded Moses.

23 And with him was Aholiab, son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet and fine linen.

24 All the gold that was occupied for the work in all the work of the holy place, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

25 And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

26 A bekah for every man, that is, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for every one that went to be numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty men.

27 And of the hundred talents of silver were cast the sockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the vail; an hundred sockets of the hundred talents, a talent for a socket.

28 And of the thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapters, and filleted them.

29 And the bras of the offering was seventy talents, and two thousand and four hundred shekels.

30 And therewith he made the sockets to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the brasen altar, and the brasen grate for it, and all the vessels of the altar.

31 And the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the court gate, and all the pins of the tabernacle, and all the pins of the court round about.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXXVIII.

First, Observe, that the people spared no cost in adorning the sanctuary of God. Let this teach us who ought to be the living temples of our God, that we should be fruitful in every good work. Secondly, Let us learn from their cheerfulness, that good works alone, are the most certain marks of genuine repentance, without which, we can never enjoy the divine favour. Lastly, No sorts of riches can be better employed, than such as are used to promote the interests of true religion and virtue.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXVIII.

1 And he made the altar, &c.] The Septuagint begin this chapter with a description of the making of the ark. But the variations from the Hebrew copy being too numerous, and too prolix to be inserted here, the reader will excuse the omission of them.

8 Looking-glasses] These were of polished bras; and it was a custom for the Egyptian women to carry these mirrors with them to places of public worship.

Of the women assembling, &c.] The word translated "assembling" is tzaba, which signifies, A troop, or army. The Vulgate renders it, Which watched; the Chaldee, Who came to pray, &c. and the Arabic, Who assembled in troops. The propriety of applying this military term to this assembly of women, will appear, if we consider that not only the Levites, but likewise the rest of the Israelites, assembled in companies, at the temple, or tabernacle, and alternately relieved each other; whence they are styled in the Psalms, the sacred watch. Sam. ii. 22. Psalm xcii. 2. and cxix. 147.

18 The height in the breadth, &c.] The propriety of this Hebrew idiom will be proved, if we consider that it refers to two different states of the hanging, both as it lay down on the ground, and as it hung up; for what was its breadth when it lay along, was its height when hung up.

21 This is the sum] From the context it appears, that by the word "sum," is meant the full amount of the expences and value of the tabernacle. We imagine that it signifies only the whole sum of the particulars belonging to the tabernacle; and it must be confessed, the Septuagint, Vulgate, Chaldee, and Arabic, support this interpretation.

According to the commandment of Moses, &c.] In the Hebrew, Because the service of the Levites was visited, or prescribed by the mouth of Moses, in the hand of Ithamar, &c. In the Vulgate, Which are enumerated, according to the command of Moses, in the ceremonies of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, &c. In the Chaldee, These are which are enumerated according to the precept of Moses; the ministry of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, &c. And the Arabic, The bearing or ministration of which, pertains to the Levites, by the hand of, &c. Some moderns render it, By the service or ministry of the Levites, under the conduct of Ithamar.

24 Twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, &c.] This sum amounts to upwards of an hundred and fifty pounds sterling.

25 And the silver of them that were numbered, &c.] As six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty men, offered half a shekel each, they amount to three hundred and one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five shekels; which, at two shillings and fourpence each, amount to thirty-five thousand two hundred and seven pounds sterling.

AND of the blue, and purple, and scarlet, they made cloths of service, to do service in the holy place, and made the holy garments for Aaron; as the LORD commanded Moses.

¶ And he made the ephod of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

3 And they did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in the fine linen, with cunning work.

4 They made shoulderpieces for it, to couple it together: by the two edges was it coupled together.

5 And the curious girdle of his ephod, that was upon it, was of the same, according to the work thereof; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; as the LORD commanded Moses.

6 And they wrought onyx stones inclosed in ouches of gold, graven, as signets are graven, with the names of the children of Israel.

7 And he put them on the shoulders of the ephod, that they should be stones for a memorial to the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

8 ¶ And he made the breastplate of cunning work, like the work of the ephod; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet and fine twined linen.

9 It was foursquare; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being doubled.

10 And they set it in four rows of stones: the first row was a sardius, a topaz, and a carbuncle: this was the first row.

11 And the second row, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond.

12 And the third row, a ligure, an agate, and an amethyst.

13 And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their inclosings.

14 And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names, like the engravings of a signet, every one with his name, according to the twelve tribes.

15 And they made upon the breastplate chains at the ends, of wreathen work of pure gold.

16 And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings, and put the two rings in the two ends of the breastplate.

17 And they put the two wreathen chains of gold in the two rings on the ends of the breastplate.

18 And the two ends of the two wreathen chains they fastened in the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod, before it.

19 And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two ends of the breastplate, upon the border of it, which was on the side of the ephod inward.

20 And they made two other golden rings, and put them on the two sides of the ephod underneath, toward the forepart of it, over against the other coupling thereof, above the curious girdle of the ephod.

21 And they did bind the breastplate by his rings unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be above the curious girdle of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And he made the robe of the ephod of woven work, all of blue.

23 And there was an hole in midst of the robe, as the hole of an habergeon, with a band round about the hole, that it should not rend.

24 And they made upon the hems of the robe pomegranates of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and twined linen.

25 And they made bells of pure gold, and put the bells between the pomegranates upon the hem of the robe, round about between the pomegranates;

26 A bell and a pomegranate, a bell and a pomegranate, round about the hem of the robe to minister in; as the LORD commanded Moses.

27 ¶ And they made coats of fine linen of woven work for Aaron, and for his sons,

28 And a mitre of fine linen, and goodly bonnets of fine linen, and linen breeches of fine twined linen,

29 And a girdle of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, of needlework; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 ¶ And they made the plate of the holy crown of pure gold, and wrote upon it a writing, like to the engravings of a signet, HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

31 And they tied unto it a lace of blue, to fasten it on high upon the mitre; as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 ¶ Thus was all the work of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation finished: and the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

33 And they brought the tabernacle unto Moses, the tent, and all his furniture, his taches, his boards, his bars, and his pillars, and his sockets,

34 And the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and the covering of badgers' skins, and the vail of the covering,

35 The ark of the testimony, and the staves thereof, and the mercy seat,

36 The table, and all the vessels thereof, and the shew bread,

37 The pure candlestick, with the lamps thereof, even with the lamps to be set in order, and all the vessels thereof, and the oil for light,

38 And the golden altar, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense, and the hanging for the tabernacle door.

39 The brazen altar, and his grate of brass, his staves, and all his vessels, the laver and his foot,

40 The hangings of the court, his pillars, and his sockets, and the hanging for the courtgate, his cords, and his pins, and all the vessels of the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of the congregation,

41 The cloths of service to do service in the holy place, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and his sons' garments, to minister in the priest's office.

42 According to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel made all the work.

43 And Moses did look upon all the work, and, behold, they had done it as the LORD had commanded, even so had they done it: and Moses blessed them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIX.

First, We have here, a remarkable instance of the great ingenuity of these men, in making the most curious structures that ever were seen; but as their knowledge was freely bestowed upon them, we must consider God as the giver of wisdom, and every thing we enjoy. Secondly, As these artists finished the tabernacle exactly according to the directions given, we may note, that the same God who passed by before Moses on the mount, and gave him the original directions, inspired the hearts of those artists to complete the work in a proper manner. Lastly, Let us here learn how necessary it is to seek the divine assistance in every thing we do; in which case, we need not doubt but we shall, in the end, obtain a blessing.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIX.

¶ He made the breast-plate, &c.] As Moses here, in giving an account of the making the breast-plate, and the several parts of it, makes no mention of the Urim and Thummim, it is looked upon as an argument, that they were not distinct things, but only related to the precious stones of the breast-plate. See the note on chap. xxviii. 30.

42 According to all that the Lord commanded Moses, &c.] This has respect to the charge before given, Moses has been very exact in repeating all the several particulars of the tabernacle, to shew the care which he and the workmen had to make all things, both for matter and form, according to the pattern and commandment given of God.

43 Moses blessed them.] Pronounced a blessing from the Lord upon the workmen.

C H A P. XL.

1 The tabernacle is commanded to be reared with all its furniture, 9 and anointed. 12 Aaron and his sons to be sanctified. 16, 17, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 33 Moses performeth all things accordingly. 34 A cloud covereth the tabernacle.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 On the first day of the first month shalt thou set up the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

3 And thou shalt put therein the ark of the testimony, and cover the ark with the vail.

4 And thou shalt bring in the table, and set in order the things that are to be set in order upon it; and thou shalt bring in the candlestick, and light the lamps thereof.

5 And thou shalt set the altar of gold for the incense before the ark of the testimony, and put the hanging of the door to the tabernacle.

6 And thou shalt set the altar of the burnt offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation.

7 And thou shalt set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and shalt put water therein.

8 And thou shalt set up the court round about, and hang up the hanging at the court gate.

9 ¶ And thou shalt take the anointing oil, and anoint the tabernacle, and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the vessels thereof: and it shall be holy.

10 And thou shalt anoint the altar of the burnt offering, and all his vessels, and sanctify the altar: and it shall be an altar most holy.

11 And thou shalt anoint the laver and his foot, and sanctify it.

12 ¶ And thou shalt bring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and wash them with water.

13 And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, and anoint him, and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office.

14 And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats:

15 And thou shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office: for their anointing shall surely be an everlasting priesthood throughout their generations.

16 ¶ Thus did Moses: according to all that the LORD commanded him, so did he.

17 ¶ And it came to pass in the first month in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up.

18 And Moses reared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up his pillars.

19 And he spread abroad the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

20 ¶ And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the mercy seat above upon the ark:

21 And he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and set up the vail of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony: as the LORD commanded Moses. Before CHRIST 1491.

22 ¶ And he put the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle northward; without the vail.

23 And he set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD had commanded Moses.

24 ¶ And he put the candlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward.

25 And he lighted the lamps before the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

26 ¶ And he put the golden altar in the tent of the congregation before the vail:

27 And he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the LORD commanded Moses.

28 ¶ And he set up the hanging at the door of the tabernacle.

29 And he put the altar of burnt offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and offered upon it the burnt offering and the meat offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 ¶ And he set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there, to wash withal.

31 And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat:

32 When they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; as the LORD commanded Moses.

33 ¶ And he reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the hanging of the court gate. So Moses finished the work.

34 ¶ Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

35 And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle.

36 And when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward in all their journeys:

37 But if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up.

38 For the cloud of the LORD was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XL.

First, As the Jewish tabernacle was made according to the order of God, let that teach us that no man has a right to set up a new religion, without a special call from God. Secondly, As God was pleased so to dispose every thing, as to suit the conveniencies of the people, it is the duty of princes, and even inferior magistrates, when they establish places for divine worship, to take care that the people may be as well accommodated as possible. Lastly, As all these things, both in this and the preceding chapters, were typical of Christ, let us bless God that we live under the gospel dispensation, where shadows and types are done away by the death of our Redeemer; who was the end of the law for salvation to all those who believe his word, and obey his precepts.

The

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XL.

¶ On the first day of the first month, &c.] That is, on the first day of the second year after their coming out of Egypt. On the fifteenth day of the first month the Israelites came out of Egypt; on the fiftieth day after, the law was given, with several intervening delays. Moses spent at least eighty days upon the mount: half of the year must therefore be expired, or perhaps more, before they began to work upon the tabernacle: and in half a year, or somewhat less, the whole was completed.

15 An everlasting priesthood, &c.] By this first unction, the inferior priests shall be consecrated once for all, and installed in their office; and the calling shall pass to their generations, from father to son, unto the end of the ceremonial worship, the anointing being no more required to be reiterated in their posterity; for they were the high-priests only, who were anointed in following times. Josephus informs us, that this ceremony was laid aside during the second temple, because of the failure of the holy oil, though the other rites of inauguration were retained.

No. 11.

34 A cloud covered the tent, &c.] The cloud, that testimony of the divine presence which had led them hither, and for some time had rested on the tent of Moses, now took possession of the tabernacle, where it continued in the form of a cloud by day, and a glorious light by night. The shekinah now made an awful and pompous entry into the tabernacle, through the outer part of which, it passed into the most holy place, as the presence chamber, and there seated itself between the cherubim. Thus the Lord testified his acceptance of their service, his entire reconciliation to them as his people, and his gracious residence amongst them. The cloud rested above the tabernacle; a more resplendent glory filled it, by reason of which Moses himself could not enter for a time: but probably it afterwards was confined to the holy of holies, above the mercy-seat.

36 When the cloud was taken up, &c.] This cloud was the guide to the camp of Israel through the wilderness: While it continued on the tabernacle, they rested; when it removed, they removed also, and followed it, being purely under a divine conduct.

The Third BOOK of MOSES, CALLED LEVITICUS.

THE ARGUMENT.

This book contains an account of the Jewish service and worship, and describes the office of the Levitical priesthood; for which reason it is termed, both by the Latin and Greek translations, Leviticus. It contains several interesting particulars, which serve to establish the divinity of Moses's legation. The historical parts are but few, though very instructive; taking up no more than about the space of one month.

CHAP. I.

Before
CHRIST
1490.

The burnt offerings, 3 of the herd, 10 of the flocks, 14 of the fowls.

AND the LORD called unto Moses, and spake unto him out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man of you bring an offering unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

3 ¶ If his offering be a burnt sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD.

4 And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt offering; and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him.

5 And he shall kill the bullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

6 And he shall flay the burnt offering, and cut it into his pieces.

7 And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and lay the wood in order upon the fire.

8 And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

9 But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

10 ¶ And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish.

11 And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.

12 And he shall cut it into his pieces with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar.

13 But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water: and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if the burnt sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of turtledoves, or of young pigeons.

15 And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and wring off his head, and burn it on the altar: and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar.

16 And he shall pluck away his crop with his feathers, and cast it beside the altar on the east part, by the place of the ashes.

17 And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but shall not divide it asunder: and the priest shall burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. I.

Besides the great sacrifices at stated times, there were others of a voluntary nature; hence we learn, that besides our attendance on public worship, we should set apart particular times for worshipping God in private. Nothing is more pleasing to him, than when with hearts free, open, and sincere, we approach God in a way of duty. Let us also admire the great goodness of God, who demanded nothing in sacrifice, but what suited the circumstances of the person to give. God requires truth and sincerity of heart, as more valuable than all the creation; and as he is so condescending to consider the poor, so it is our duty to sympathize with them, and relieve their wants.

AND

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. I.

2 If any man of you bring an offering, &c.] It is to be remarked, that the offering of sacrifices is here not a positive but rather a permissive injunction of Moses. The very light of nature directs man, some way or other, to do honour to his Maker, and to pay homage to his Lord: sacrifices, attended with a great variety of ceremonies, had been common in the world long before the mosaical institution; and the lawgiver takes it for granted, that the people would be inclined to bring their offerings to the Lord.

3 Of his own voluntary will, &c.] There was a stated number of burnt offerings for the whole congregation, continually offered up year by year: two were daily offered, called the morning and evening sacrifice, besides the additional ones on every sabbath, new moon and festival; those for private persons, and to be offered on particular occasions and emergencies, are specified in the law; but besides these, there were many offered voluntarily.

5 He shall kill, &c.] The Greek renders it, They shall kill; meaning the priests or Levites, whose charge it was.

7 Shall put fire upon the altar, &c.] Shall keep up, by adding fresh fuel, and preserve the fire, which fell from heaven, Lev. ix. 24. upon the altar: for the law says afterwards, "the fire upon the altar shall be burning in it, it shall not be put out," chap. vi. 12.

8 The fat, &c.] Or, the inwards and entrails.

9 The priest shall burn, &c.] Not the high priest, but one of the inferior priests.

14 If the burnt sacrifice—be of fowls, &c.] Those who could not afford a sheep or a goat, might offer a bird; a sufficient argument that it was not the gift, but only the disposition of the giver that was regarded by God; a turtledove being as acceptable to the supreme being, as the choicest offerings of the herd and the flock.

25 And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, &c.] The south-east horn of it; near which was the place of the ashes, into which the crop and its feathers were cast.

COMMENTARY

AND when any will offer a meat offering unto the LORD, his offering shall be of fine flour; and he shall pour oil upon it, and put frankincense thereon.

2 And he shall bring it to Aaron's sons the priests: and he shall take thereof his handful of the flour thereof, and of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof: and the priest shall burn the memorial of it upon the altar, to be an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD:

3 And the remnant of the meat offering shall be Aaron's and his sons'; it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

4 ¶ And if thou bring an oblation of a meat offering baken in the oven, it shall be unleavened cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, or unleavened wafers anointed with oil.

5 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat offering baken in a pan, it shall be of fine flour unleavened, mingled with oil.

6 Thou shalt part it in pieces, and pour oil thereon: it is a meat offering.

7 ¶ And if thy oblation be a meat offering baken in the fryingpan, it shall be made of fine flour with oil.

8 And thou shalt bring the meat offering that is made of these things unto the LORD: and when it is presented unto the priest, he shall bring it unto the altar.

9 And the priest shall take from the meat offering a memorial thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar: it is an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

10 And that which is left of the meat offering shall be Aaron's and his sons': it is a thing most holy of the offerings of the LORD made by fire.

11 No meat offering, which ye shall bring unto the LORD, shall be made with leaven: for ye shall burn no leaven, nor any honey, in any offering of the LORD made by fire.

12 ¶ As for the oblation of the first fruits, ye shall offer them unto the LORD: but they shall not be burnt on the altar for a sweet favour.

13 ¶ And every oblation of thy meat offering shalt thou season with salt: neither shalt thou suffer the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy meat offering: with all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt.

14 ¶ And if thou offer a meat offering of thy firstfruits unto the LORD, thou shalt offer for the meat offering of thy firstfruits green ears of corn dried by the fire, even corn beaten out of full ears.

15 And thou shalt put oil upon it, and lay frankincense thereon: it is a meat offering.

16 And the priest shall burn the memorial of it, part of the beaten corn thereof, and part of the oil thereof, with all the frankincense thereof: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. II.

With respect to the meat offerings, part of them were given to the priests; which should teach us, that faithful ministers are intitled to part of the fruits of our industry. The vast number of ceremonies shew the infinite goodness of God, in taking so much pains to preserve the people from falling into idolatry; and as all these rites and ceremonies were binding on the children of Israel, let us take heed that we neglect not to perform every duty of the gospel.

CHAP. III.

1 The peace offering of the herd: 6 of the flock; whether a lamb, 12 or a goat.

AND if his oblation be a sacrifice of peace offering, if he offer it of the herd; whether it be a male or female, he shall offer it without blemish before the LORD.

2 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons the priests shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

3 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

5 And Aaron's sons shall burn it on the altar upon the burnt sacrifice, which is upon the wood that is on the fire: it is an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

6 ¶ And if his offering for a sacrifice of peace offering unto the LORD be of the flock, male or female; he shall offer it without blemish.

7 If he offer a lamb for his offering, then shall he offer it before the LORD.

8 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his offering, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron's sons shall sprinkle the blood thereof round about upon the altar.

9 And he shall offer of the sacrifice of the peace offering an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat thereof, and the whole rump, it shall he take off hard by the backbone: and the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

10 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

11 And the priest shall burn it upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire unto the LORD.

12 ¶ And if his offering be a goat, then he shall offer it before the LORD.

13 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of it, and kill it before the tabernacle of the congregation; and the sons of Aaron shall sprinkle the blood thereof upon the altar round about.

14 And he shall offer thereof his offerings, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards, 15 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

16 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. II.

1 A meat offering, &c.] This for the most part being made of the flour of wheat, might with greater propriety be called a wheat offering.

11 A meat offering—shall be made with leaven, &c.] Partly to remind them of their great deliverance out of Egypt, when they were forced to carry away their dough before it was leavened; and partly in opposition to the custom of the heathens in such cases, who made their sacrificed bread of the lightest and sweetest kind possible.

12 They shall not be burnt, &c.] The firstfruits were not offered to God by fire, but after consecration, were for the priest's use. See Numb. xviii. 13.

16 Shall burn the memorial, &c.] From the meat offerings that were offered on the altar, the priest took an handful, and burnt for a memorial, the remainder being for the use of the priests.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. III.

1 A sacrifice of peace offering, &c.] A sacrifice of thanksgiving for any kind of blessing. The burnt offerings had regard to God, as he is, in himself, the best of Beings, most perfect, and most excellent; were purely expressive of adoration, and therefore were wholly burned; but the peace offering had regard to God, as he is the great benefactor to his creatures, and the giver of all good things; and therefore these were divided between the altar, the priest, and the owner. The priest, who was ordained for men in things pertaining to God, gave part of the peace offerings to God, burning it upon his altar; part he gave to the offerer, to be eaten by him with his family and friend; and part with his own portion. This participation, as it were of the offering, spoke harmony and agreement, was a symbol of friendship and fellowship between God and man, and a confirmation of the covenant of peace.

5 Upon the burnt sacrifice, &c.] We are to observe, that the offerings never begun with the sacrifices of peace offerings or thanksgiving, but with those of expiation or atonement; and the peace offering is enjoined upon, or after the burnt sacrifice, to shew that no work of service or homage can be acceptable to God, if the expiation or atonement for sin go not before.

9 The whole rump, &c.] The whole rump of the sheep was to be burned with the fat of the inwards upon the altar, because in those countries it was very fat and large.

16 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar: it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet favour: all the fat is the LORD's.

17 It shall be a perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither fat nor blood.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. III.

From the necessity the people were under to offer sacrifices to God, let us learn first, That we should deny ourselves many indulgences, in order to remove the burden from the poor. Secondly, From the victims being burnt, that God would have us subdue all our lusts, and that our devotions should ascend, as on a flame, up to his throne. Lastly, Seeing God took so much care of the Israelites, he will also take equal care of us, if we love and serve him.

C H A P. IV.

I The sin offering of ignorance for the priest, 13 for the congregation, 22 for a ruler, 27 for any of the people.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, I speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a soul shall sin through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and shall do against any of them:

3 If the priest that is anointed do sin according to the sin of the people; then let him bring for his sin, which he hath sinned, a young bullock without blemish unto the LORD for a sin offering.

4 And he shall bring the bullock unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD; and shall lay his hand upon the bullock's head, and kill the bullock before the LORD.

5 And the priest that is anointed shall take of the bullock's blood, and bring it to the tabernacle of the congregation.

6 And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood seven times before the LORD, before the vail of the sanctuary.

7 And the priest shall put some of the blood upon the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD, which is in the tabernacle of the congregation; and shall pour all the blood of the bullock at the bottom of the altar of the burnt offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And he shall take off from it all the fat of the bullock for the sin offering; the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards,

9 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away.

10 As it was taken off from the bullock of the sacrifice of peace offerings: and the priest shall burn them upon the altar of the burnt offering.

11 And the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head, and with his legs, and his inwards, and his dung,

12 Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth without the camp unto a clean place, where the ashes are poured out, and burn him on the wood with fire: where the ashes are poured out shall he be burnt.

13 ¶ And if the whole congregation of Israel sin through ignorance, and the thing be hid from the eyes of the assembly, and they have done somewhat against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which should not be done, and are guilty;

14 When the sin, which they have sinned against it, is known, then the congregation shall offer a young bullock for the sin, and bring him before the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And the elders of the congregation shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock before the LORD: and the bullock shall be killed before the LORD.

16 And the priest that is anointed shall bring of the bullock's blood to the tabernacle of the congregation.

17 And the priest shall dip his finger in some of the blood, and sprinkle it seven times before the LORD, even before the vail.

18 And he shall put some of the blood upon the horns of the altar which is before the LORD, that is in the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall pour out all the blood at the bottom of the altar of the burnt offering, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

19 And he shall take all his fat from him, and burn it upon the altar.

20 And he shall do with the bullock as he did with the bullock for a sin offering, so shall he do with this: and the priest shall make an atonement for them, and it shall be forgiven them.

21 And he shall carry forth the bullock without the camp, and burn him as he burned the first bullock: it is a sin offering for the congregation.

22 ¶ When a ruler hath sinned, and done somewhat through ignorance against any of the commandments of the LORD his God concerning things which should not be done, and is guilty;

23 Or if his sin, wherein he hath sinned, come to his knowledge; he shall bring his offering, a kid of the goats, a male without blemish:

24 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the goat, and kill it in the place where they kill the burnt offering before the LORD; it is a sin offering.

25 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out his blood at the bottom of the altar of burnt offering.

26 And he shall burn all his fat upon the altar, as the fat of the sacrifice of peace offerings; and the priest shall make an atonement for him as concerning his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

27 ¶ And if any one of the common people sin through ignorance, while he doeth somewhat against any of the commandments of the LORD concerning things which ought not to be done, and be guilty;

28 Or

17 Throughout all your dwellings, &c.] Not only in the public sacrifices, but also in private dwellings; where those kinds of fat not being offered to God, it is likely were thrown away, as the blood was, and not eaten.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

2 Shall sin through ignorance, &c.] As for those sins which were committed presumptuously, and with an avowed contempt of the law, that offender was to be cut off; but if the offender was either ignorant of the law, or in divers instances, we may suppose many were, so numerous and various were the injunctions and prohibitions; or if he was surprised into a transgression of the law unawares; in these cases relief was provided by the remedial law of the sin offering. The offender might expiate by sacrifice for crimes, if committed ignorantly; for which, if they had been done presumptuously, the criminal was to have been cut off.

3 If the priest, &c.] His office did not so far excuse his offences, that they should be forgiven without a sacrifice; nor yet on the other hand did it so far aggravate them, but that they should be forgiven him, if he brought his sacrifice.

12 Without the camp—where the ashes are poured out, &c.] This circumstance is expressively typical of Christ, who suffered without the gate, in the place of a scull, where the ashes of dead men, as those of the altar, were poured out. And of this the apostle takes notice, making the same application of this ceremony: "the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high-priest for sin, are burnt without the camp: wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate: let us go therefore unto him without the camp, &c." Heb. xiii. 11, 12, 13.

13 If the whole congregation of Israel sin, &c.] This is the law for expiating the sin of the whole community, and of the representatives only and the rulers of the people, as some commentators understand it.

23 Or if his sin, &c.] And if his sin, &c. or, as soon as his sin, &c.

26 The priest shall make an atonement for him, &c.] There is a remarkable difference between the sin offering for a ruler, and those for the high-priest or the whole congregation. For the sin of the high-priest or of the whole congregation, a bullock was required; for the sin of a ruler, a kid of the goats was sufficient: in the former case, the sacrifice was burned without the camp: in the latter, no such precept was enjoined. All which intimated, that the sin of the ruler, though worse than that of a common person, yet was not so heinous, nor of such pernicious consequence, as the sin of the high priest, or of the congregation; and that it is bad when great men give ill examples, but worse when all men follow them.

28 Or if his sin, which he hath sinned, come to his knowledge: then he shall bring his offering, a kid of the goats, a female without blemish, for his sin which he hath sinned.

29 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin offering, and slay the sin offering in the place of the burnt offering.

30 And the priest shall take of the blood thereof with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar.

31 And he shall take away all the fat thereof, the fat is taken away from off the sacrifice of peace offerings; and the priest shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour unto the LORD; and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

32 And if he bring a lamb for a sin offering, he shall bring it a female without blemish.

33 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of the sin offering, and slay it for a sin offering in the place where they kill the burnt offering.

34 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering, with his finger, and put it upon the horns of the altar of burnt offering, and shall pour out all the blood thereof at the bottom of the altar:

35 And he shall take away all the fat thereof, as the fat of the lamb is taken away from the sacrifice of the peace offering; and the priest shall burn them upon the altar, according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: and the priest shall make an atonement for his sin that he hath committed, and it shall be forgiven him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. IV.

First, Learn, that God would have us repent of every sin, seeing sacrifices were enjoined for sins of ignorance. Secondly, As the rulers or magistrates were obliged to offer sacrifice, we are taught, that no person is exempted from repentance, even for sins of ignorance. Thirdly, As the sinner laid his hand on the head of the victim, let us learn, if we would be saved, to lay hold of the gospel by faith. Lastly, That though these ceremonies had no virtue in themselves, yet God made them efficacious by his power.

C H A P. V.

1 The trespass offering of one that sinneth in concealing his knowledge, in touching an unclean thing, or in making an oath; from the flock, 7 or of fowls, 11 or of flour. 14 The trespass offering in cases of sacrilege, 17 and in sins of ignorance.

AND if a soul sin, and hear the voice of swearing, and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear his iniquity.

2 Or if a soul touch any unclean thing, whether it be a carcase of an unclean beast, or a carcase of unclean cattle, or the carcase of unclean creeping things, and if it be hidden from him; he also shall be unclean, and guilty.

28 A female, &c.] This is the only circumstance wherein the sin offering for one of the common people differs from that for a ruler. Here a female kid or lamb was to be offered, there a male kid was required.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. V.

1 Hear the voice of swearing, &c.] This is not meant of taking an oath, but of a general denunciation from a judge, or an adjuration, as was usual, in the name of God, to reveal some secret fact, about which the evidence was to bear witness, an instance of which kind of adjuration we have in Matt. xxvi. 63. "I adjure thee, says the high priest, by the living God, that thou tell us," &c. upon which adjuration Jesus immediately gave an answer, and confessed it; whereas before, he held his peace.

2 Shall be unclean] This is, unclean until the even, when washing was required. See Lev. xi. 24, 25.

And guilty.] Bound to expiate the accidental uncleanness, and be restored to corporeal purity required by the ceremonial law. Though his touching the unclean thing contracted only a ceremonial defilement, yet a neglect to wash himself according to the law, would be such an instance either of carelessness or contempt, as would contract a moral guilt.

No. 11.

3 Or if he touch the uncleanness of man, whatsoever uncleanness it be that a man shall be defiled withal, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty.

4 Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these.

5 And it shall be, when he shall be guilty in one of these things, that he shall confess that he hath sinned in that thing:

6 And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD for his sin which he hath sinned, a female from the flock, a lamb or a kid of the goats, for a sin offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his sin.

7 ¶ And if he be not able to bring a lamb, then he shall bring for his trespass, which he hath committed, two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, unto the LORD; one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering.

8 And he shall bring them unto the priest, who shall offer that which is for the sin offering first, and wring off his head from his neck, but shall not divide it asunder:

9 And he shall sprinkle of the blood of the sin offering upon the side of the altar; and the rest of the blood shall be wrung out at the bottom of the altar: it is a sin offering.

10 And he shall offer the second for a burnt offering, according to the manner: and the priest shall make an atonement for him for his sin which he hath sinned, and it shall be forgiven him.

11 ¶ But if he be not able to bring two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, then he that sinned shall bring for his offering the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a sin offering; he shall put no oil upon it, neither shall he put any frankincense thereon: for it is a sin offering.

12 Then shall he bring it to the priest, and the priest shall take his handful of it, even a memorial thereof, and burn it on the altar, according to the offerings made by fire unto the LORD: it is a sin-offering.

13 And the priest shall make an atonement for him as touching his sin that he hath sinned in one of these, and it shall be forgiven him; and the remnant shall be the priest's, as a meat offering.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

15 If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance, in the holy things of the LORD; then he shall bring for his trespass unto the LORD a ram without blemish out of the flocks, with thy estimation by shekels of silver, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for a trespass offering.

16 And he shall make amends for the harm that he hath done in the holy thing, and shall add the fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest: and the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering, and it shall be forgiven him.

17 ¶ And if a soul sin, and commit any of these things

4 If a soul swear, pronouncing with, &c.] By this is meant rash and inconsiderate swearing to do any thing; of which if the performance proves afterwards to be either unlawful or impracticable, so that he is discharged from the obligation, yet he is required to bring an offering to atone for his folly in swearing so unadvisedly and rashly.

7 If he be not able to bring a lamb, &c.] Provision is here made for the poor, and the pacifying their consciences under the sense of guilt. Those who were not able to bring a lamb, might bring for their sin offering a pair of turtledoves, or two young pigeons; nay, if any were so extremely poor, that they were not able to procure those so often as they might have occasion, they might bring a pottle of fine flour, and that should be accepted. Thus the expence of the sin offering was brought lower than that of any other offering, to teach that no man's poverty shall ever be a bar in the way of his pardon.

15 If a soul commit a trespass, and sin through ignorance, in the holy things of the Lord, &c.] If a man alienated, or converted to his own use, ignorantly or inadvertently, any thing that was dedicated to God, he was to offer a ram, before making amends to the priest.

things which are forbidden to be done by the commandments of the LORD; though he wist it not, yet is he guilty, and shall bear his iniquity.

18 And he shall bring a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest: and the priest shall make an atonement for him concerning his ignorance wherein he erred and wist it not, and it shall be forgiven him.

19 It is a trespass offering: he hath certainly trespassed against the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. V.

We are here taught, first, That it is a heinous crime not to declare the truth, when called upon. Secondly, When we have committed any sin through ignorance, and are conscious of it, we ought to confess it, in order to obtain forgiveness. Let us also learn, that as the offender among the Israelites was to add one-fifth to what he had unjustly taken away from any thing set apart for a sacred use; so we ought, when we have injured any of our fellow creatures, to make them an additional recompence for the injury.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, If a soul sin, and commit a trespass against the LORD, and lie unto his neighbour in that which was delivered him to keep, or in fellowship, or in a thing taken away by violence, or hath deceived his neighbour;

3 Or have found that which was lost, and lieth concerning it, and sweareth falsely; in any of all these that a man doeth, sinning therein:

4 Then it shall be, because he hath sinned, and is guilty, that he shall restore that which he took violently away, or the thing which he hath deceitfully gotten, or that which was delivered him to keep, or the lost thing which he found,

5 Or all that about which he hath sworn falsely; he shall even restore it in the principal, and shall add the fifth part more thereto, and give it unto him to whom it appertaineth, in the day of his trespass offering.

6 And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD, a ram without blemish out of the flock, with thy estimation, for a trespass offering, unto the priest:

7 And the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD: and it shall be forgiven him for any thing of all that he hath done in trespassing therein.

8 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses saying,

9 Command Aaron and his sons, saying, This is the law of the burnt offering: It is the burnt offering, because of the burning upon the altar all night unto the morning, and the fire of the altar shall be burning in it.

10 And the priest shall put on his linen garment, and his linen breeches shall he put upon his flesh, and take up the ashes which the fire hath consumed with the burnt offering on the altar, and he shall put them beside the altar.

11 And he shall put off his garments, and put on other garments, and carry forth the ashes without the camp unto a clean place.

12 And the fire upon the altar shall be burning in it; it shall not be put out: and the priest shall burn wood on it every morning, and lay the burnt offering in order upon it; and he shall burn thereon the fat of the peace offerings.

13 The fire shall ever be burning upon the altar; it shall never go out.

14 ¶ And this is the law of the meat offering: the sons of Aaron shall offer it before the LORD, before the altar.

15 And he shall take of it his handful, of the flour of the meat offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savour, even the memorial of it, unto the LORD.

16 And the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: with unleavened bread shall it be eaten in the holy place; in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it.

17 It shall not be baken with leaven. I have given it unto them for their portion of my offerings made by fire; it is most holy, as is the sin offering, and as the trespass offering.

18 All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat it. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the LORD made by fire: every one that toucheth them shall be holy.

19 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

20 This is the offering of Aaron and of his sons, which they shall offer unto the LORD in the day when he is anointed; the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a meat offering perpetual, half of it in the morning, and half thereof at night.

22 In a pan it shall be made with oil; and when it is baken, thou shalt bring it in: and the baken pieces of the meat offering shalt thou offer for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

22 And the priest of his sons that is anointed in his stead shall offer it: it is a statute for ever unto the LORD: it shall be wholly burnt.

23 For every meat offering for the priest shall be wholly burnt: it shall not be eaten.

24 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

25 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, saying, This is the law of the sin offering: In the place where the burnt offering is killed shall the sin offering be killed before the LORD: it is most holy.

26 The priest that offereth it for sin shall eat it: in the holy place shall it be eaten, in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation.

27 Whatsoever shall touch the flesh thereof shall be holy; and when there is sprinkled of the blood thereof upon any garment, thou shalt wash that whereon it was sprinkled in the holy place.

28 But the earthen vessel wherein it is sodden shall be broken: and if it be sodden in a brasen pot, it shall be both scoured and rinsed in water.

29 All the males among the priests shall eat thereof: it is most holy.

30 And no sin offering, whereof any of the blood is brought into the tabernacle of the congregation to reconcile withal in the holy place, shall be eaten: it shall be burnt in the fire.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VI.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VI.

¶ And lie unto his neighbour, &c.] This is a continuation of the law of the trespass offering; and the kinds of trespasses which are here instanced, are, denying a trust; defrauding a partner; disowning a wrong and robbery; deceiving in dealings; and detaining what is found. Though all these instances relate to our neighbour, yet they are called trespasses against the Lord, not only because of the affront which is hereby given to his master and our master, but because also the sins here mentioned are principally such as are committed in secret, and may therefore emphatically be said to be committed against the Lord, to whom alone the secrets of all hearts are open.

9 Command Aaron and his sons, &c.] Hitherto the instructions given to Moses were concerning the sacrifices that were to be offered, but here begin the instructions he was to give to the priests.

13 The fire shall ever be burning, &c.] By this law we are taught to keep up in our minds a constant disposition to all acts of piety and devotion, an habitual affection to divine things, so as to be always ready to every good word and work.

17 For their portion, &c.] The law of the burnt offerings was such as imposed upon the priests a great deal of care and work, and allowed them little profit; for the flesh was wholly burned, and the priests had nothing but the skin: but to make them amends, the greatest part of the meat offering was their own.

20 In the day, &c.] From, or after the day.

would serve them in victuals; so under the gospel dispensation, we are to provide ministers a proper subsistence. Lastly, With respect to the fire burning continually on the altar, we should reflect, that it is our duty and privilege to keep the fear and love of God always in every act we do.

CHAP. VII.

I The law of the trespass offering, 11 and of the peace offering, whether it be for a thanksgiving, a vow, or a freewill offering. 22 The fat and the blood are forbidden to be eaten. 28 The priests' portion in the peace offerings. 35 Recapitulation.

LIKewise this is the law of the trespass offering: it is most holy.

2 In the place where they kill the burnt offering shall they kill the trespass offering: and the blood thereof shall he sprinkle round about upon the altar.

3 And he shall offer of it all the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards,

4 And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it he shall take away.

5 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a trespass offering.

6 Every male among the priests shall eat thereof: it shall be eaten in the holy place: it is most holy.

7 As the sin offering is, so is the trespass offering: there is one law for them: the priest that maketh atonement therewith shall have it.

8 And the priest that offereth any man's burnt offering, even the priest shall have to himself the skin of the burnt offering which he hath offered.

9 And all the meat offering that is baken in the oven, and all that is dressed in the frying pan, and in the pan, shall be the priest's that offereth it.

10 And every meat offering, mingled with oil, and dry, shall all the sons of Aaron have, one as much as another.

11 ¶ And this is the law of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which he shall offer unto the LORD.

12 If he offer it for a thanksgiving, then he shall offer with the sacrifice of thanksgiving unleavened cakes mingled with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, and cakes mingled with oil, of fine flour, fried.

13 Besides the cakes, he shall offer for his offering leavened bread with the sacrifice of thanksgiving of his peace offerings.

14 And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an heave offering unto the LORD, and it shall be the priest's that sprinklet the blood of the peace offerings.

15 And the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace offerings for thanksgiving shall be eaten the same day that it is offered; he shall not leave any of it until the morning.

16 But if the sacrifice of his offering be a vow, or a voluntary offering; it shall be eaten the same day that he offereth his sacrifice: and on the morrow also the remainder of it shall be eaten:

17 But the remainder of the flesh of the sacrifice on the third day shall be burnt with fire.

18 And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace offerings be eaten at all on the third day, it shall not be accepted, neither shall it be imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an abomination, and the soul that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity.

19 And the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten: it shall be burnt with fire: and for the flesh, all that be clean shall eat thereof.

20 But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, that pertain unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

21 Moreover the soul that shall touch any unclean thing, as the uncleanness of man, or any unclean beast, or any abominable unclean thing, and eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which pertain unto the LORD, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Ye shall eat no manner of fat, of ox, or of sheep, or of goat.

24 And the fat of the beast that dieth of itself, and the fat of that which is torn with beasts, may be used in any other use: but ye shall in no wise eat of it.

25 For whosoever eateth the fat of the beast, of which men offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, even the soul that eateth it shall be cut off from his people.

26 Moreover ye shall eat no manner of blood, whether it be of fowl or of beast, in any of your dwellings:

27 Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

28 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

29 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, He that offereth the sacrifice of his peace offerings unto the LORD shall bring his oblation unto the LORD of the sacrifice of his peace offerings.

30 His own hands shall bring the offerings of the LORD made by fire, the fat with the breast, it shall he bring, that the breast may be waved for a wave offering before the LORD.

31 And the priest shall burn the fat upon the altar: but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons'.

32 And the right shoulder shall ye give unto the priest for an heave offering of the sacrifices of your peace offerings, 33 He among the sons of Aaron, that offereth the blood of the peace offerings, and the fat, shall have the right shoulder for his part.

34 For the wave breast and the heave shoulder have I taken of the children of Israel from off the sacrifices of their peace offerings, and have given them unto Aaron the priest and unto his sons by a statute for ever from among the children of Israel.

35 ¶ This is the portion of the anointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons, out of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, in the day when he presented them to minister unto the LORD in the priest's office;

36 Which the LORD commanded to be given them of the children of Israel, in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations.

37 This is the law of the burnt offering, of the meat offering, and of the sin offering, and of the trespass offering, and of the consecrations, and of the sacrifice of the peace offering;

38 Which the LORD commanded Moses in mount Sinai, in the day that he commanded the children of Israel to offer their oblations unto the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. VII.

The manner in which the trespass offering was offered up, points out what a necessary thing true repentance is; and as the sacrifice could not be offered up without action, so true repentance is an active thing; for unless there is a total change in the conversation, no real repentance has taken place. Lastly, From God's enjoining the Israelites to support the priests, we are taught to treat with reverence every thing set apart for divine service, especially the ministers of the word.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

7 Sin offering—trespass offering, &c.] Sin offering and trespass offering are sometimes put for the other; but strictly the former implies an offering for an offence committed directly against God; the latter, for an offence committed more immediately against man.

8 Shall have to himself the skin, &c.] This is meant only of the burnt offerings which were offered by particular persons; for the profit of the daily offerings for the congregation went to the repair of the sanctuary.

11 Peace offerings, &c.] Peace offerings were made either in thankfulness for some special mercy received; or in performance of some vow, which was made when he was in distress, or in supplication for some special mercy which was in pursuit and expectation of.

23 No manner of fat, &c.] Not the fat which is mixed with the meat, but only that which is upon the inwards, and upon the two kidneys.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Moses consecrateth Aaron and his sons. 14 Their sin offering. 18 Their burnt offering. 22 The ram of consecration. 31 The place and time of their consecration.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Take Aaron and his sons with him, and the garments, and the anointing oil, and a bullock for the sin offering, and two rams, and a basket of unleavened bread;

3 And gather thou all the congregation together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And Moses did as the LORD commanded him; and the assembly was gathered together unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

5 And Moses said unto the congregation, This is the thing which the LORD commanded to be done.

6 And Moses brought Aaron and his sons, and washed them with water.

7 And he put upon him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, and clothed him with the robe, and put the ephod upon him, and he girded him with the curious girdle of the ephod; and bound it unto him therewith.

8 And he put the breastplate upon him: also he put in the breastplate the Urim and Thummim.

9 And he put the mitre upon his head; also upon the mitre, even upon his forefront, did he put the golden plate, the holy crown; as the LORD commanded Moses.

10 And Moses took the anointing oil, and anointed the tabernacle and all that was therein, and sanctified them.

11 And he sprinkled thereof upon the altar seven times, and anointed the altar and all his vessels, both the laver and his foot, to sanctify them.

12 And he poured of the anointing oil upon Aaron's head, and anointed him, to sanctify him.

13 And Moses brought Aaron's sons, and put coats upon them, and girded them with girdles, and put bonnets upon them; as the LORD commanded Moses.

14 ¶ And he brought the bullock for the sin offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the bullock for the sin offering.

15 And he slew it; and Moses took the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about with his finger, and purified the altar, and poured the blood at the bottom of the altar, and sanctified it, to make reconciliation upon it.

16 And he took all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and Moses burnt it upon the altar.

17 But the bullock, and his hide, his flesh, and his dung, he burnt with fire without the camp; as the LORD commanded Moses.

18 ¶ And he brought the ram for the burnt offering: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

19 And he killed it; and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

20 And he cut the ram into pieces; and Moses burnt the head, and the pieces, and the fat.

21 And he washed the inwards and the legs in water; and Moses burnt the whole ram upon the altar: it was a burnt sacrifice for a sweet savour, and an offering made by fire unto the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22 ¶ And he brought the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aaron and his sons laid their hands upon the head of the ram.

23 And he slew it; and Moses took of the blood of it, and put it upon the tip of Aaron's right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

24 And he brought Aaron's sons, and Moses put of the blood upon the tip of their right ear, and upon the thumbs of their right hands, and upon the great toes of their right feet: and Moses sprinkled the blood upon the altar round about.

25 And he took the fat, and the rump, and all the fat that was upon the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and their fat, and the right shoulder:

26 And out of the basket of unleavened bread, that was before the LORD, he took one unleavened cake, and a cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, and put them on the fat, and upon the right shoulder:

27 And he put all upon Aaron's hands, and upon his sons' hands, and waved them for a wave offering before the LORD.

28 And Moses took them from off their hands, and burnt them on the altar upon the burnt offering: they were consecrations for a sweet savour: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

29 And Moses took the breast, and waved it for a wave offering before the LORD: for of the ram of consecration it was Moses' part; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30 And Moses took up the anointing oil, and of the blood which was upon the altar, and sprinkled it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon his sons' garments with him; and sanctified Aaron, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

31 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron and to his sons, Boil the flesh at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and there eat it with the bread that is in the basket of consecrations, as I commanded, saying, Aaron and his sons shall eat it.

32 And that which remaineth of the flesh and of the bread shall ye burn with fire.

33 And ye shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation in seven days, until the days of your consecration be at an end: for seven days shall he consecrate you.

34 As he hath done this day, so the LORD hath commanded to do, to make an atonement for you.

35 Therefore shall ye abide at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation day and night seven days, and keep the charge of the LORD, that ye die not: for so I am commanded.

36 So Aaron and his sons did all things which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. VIII.

The solemn consecration of the priests shews, that no person has a right to take upon him the work of the ministry, till he is ordained; and the holiness enjoined such, should excite them to be exemplary in their lives. Lastly, The readiness with which Moses obeyed the divine command, should teach us to be obedient in all things.

CHAP. IX.

1 The first offerings of Aaron for himself, and for the people. 8 Aaron offereth them, first for himself, 15 and afterwards for the people. 23 Moses and Aaron bless the people, and fire cometh from the Lord upon the altar.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VIII.

3 All the congregation, &c.] The elders and principal men of the congregation, who represented the body of the people.

22 The ram of consecration, &c.] This was a kind of peace offering.

33 Ye shall not go out of the door.] This should have been rendered, Ye shall not go from the door; for the consecration was not performed in, but at the door of the tabernacle; nor were they permitted to enter the sanctuary, till the ceremony was performed.

Until the days of your consecration be at an end, &c.] All the priests did not continue in one particular place during the whole time: only some or other of them kept watch there night and day.

2 And he said unto Aaron, Take thee a young calf for a sin offering, and a ram for a burnt offering, without blemish, and offer them before the LORD.

3 And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying, Take ye a kid of the goats for a sin offering; and a calf and a lamb, both of the first year, without blemish, for a burnt offering;

4 Also a bullock and a ram for peace offerings, to sacrifice before the LORD; and a meat offering mingled with oil: for to day the LORD will appear unto you.

5 And they brought that which Moses commanded before the tabernacle of the congregation: and all the congregation drew near and stood before the LORD.

6 And Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD commanded that ye should do: and the glory of the LORD shall appear unto you.

7 And Moses said unto Aaron, Go unto the altar, and offer thy sin offering, and thy burnt offering, and make an atonement for thyself, and for the people: and offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them: as the LORD commanded.

8 ¶ Aaron therefore went unto the altar, and slew the calf of the sin offering, which was for himself.

9 And the sons of Aaron brought the blood unto him; and he dipped his finger in the blood, and put it upon the horns of the altar, and poured out the blood at the bottom of the altar:

10 But the fat, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver of the sin offering, he burnt upon the altar; as the LORD commanded Moses.

11 And the flesh and the hide he burnt with fire without the camp.

12 And he slew the burnt offering; and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood which he sprinkled round about upon the altar.

13 And they presented the burnt offering unto him, with the pieces thereof, and the head: and he burnt them upon the altar.

14 And he did wash the inwards and the legs, and burnt them upon the burnt offering on the altar.

15 ¶ And he brought the people's offering, and took the goat, which was the sin offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first.

16 And he brought the burnt offering, and offered it according to the manner.

17 And he brought the meat offering, and took an handful thereof, and burnt it upon the altar, beside the burnt sacrifice of the morning.

18 He slew also the bullock and the ram for a sacrifice of peace offerings, which was for the people: and Aaron's sons presented unto him the blood, which he sprinkled upon the altar round about,

19 And the fat of the bullock and of the ram, the rump, and that which covereth the inwards, and the kidneys, and the caul above the liver:

20 And they put the fat upon the breasts, and he burnt the fat upon the altar.

21 And the breasts and the right shoulder Aaron waved for a wave-offering before the LORD; as Moses commanded. Before CHRIST 1499, 22 And Aaron lifted up his hand toward the people, and blessed them, and came down from offering of the sin offering, and the burnt offering, and peace offerings.

23 ¶ And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and came out and blessed the people: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people.

24 And there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat: which when all the people saw, they shouted, and fell on their faces.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. IX.

As Aaron offered up sacrifices first for himself; so ministers should practice the duties they teach. God's appearing visibly to the people encourages us to hope, that whenever we properly address God in prayer, he will send us his blessing; and the prostration of the Israelites teaches us, that in all our approaches to God, we should give him homage with our bodies, as well as with our hearts.

AND Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censer, and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered strange fire before the LORD, which he commanded them not.

2 And there went out fire from the LORD, and devoured them, and they died before the LORD.

3 Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the LORD spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified. And Aaron held his peace.

4 And Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said unto them, Come near, carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.

5 So they went near, and carried them in their coats out of the camp; as Moses had said.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, Uncover not your heads, neither rend your clothes; lest ye die, and lest wrath come upon all the people: but let your brethren, the whole house of Israel, bewail the burning which the LORD hath kindled.

7 And ye shall not go out from the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: for the anointing oil of the LORD is upon you. And they did according to the word of Moses.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IX.

8 And slew the calf of the sin offering, which was for himself.] These being the first offerings that ever were made by the levitical priesthood, according to the new enacted law of sacrifices, the historian is very particular in relating the manner of offering them, that it might appear how exactly they agreed with the institution. Some interpreters have been of opinion, that by the appointment of a calf for the sin offering of Aaron, is intimated the sin which Aaron had committed, when he made the golden calf.

23 Went into the tabernacle, &c.] We are not told what Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle to do: some of the Jewish writers say, they went in to pray for the appearance of the divine glory: most probably they went in, that Moses might instruct Aaron how to perform the service that was to be done there.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

1 Offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not.] The words, "which he commanded them not," certainly imply a prohibition of any other fire than what lately came out from before the Lord, and remained upon the altar, though the history makes no mention of it: and then the crime of Nadab and Abihu consisted in kindling the incense with fire different from what the Lord had ordered them to use. God as yet had given no law for the offering up of incense in censers; all that had been commanded about it, was, that Aaron should burn it upon the altar of incense every morning and every evening; but these men took upon them to introduce a service into religion, which was not appointed, and which, if it had been suffered, would have opened a door to great irregularities: and therefore God, by an exemplary judgment upon the first offenders, put an effectual stop to it.

3 Aaron held his peace.] He patiently submitted to the will of God in this sad providence: was dumb, and opened not his mouth, because it was the Lord's doing.

6 Uncover not your heads, &c.] Shew no signs of grief and lamentation. The original signifying both to make bare, and to uncover the head, which was customary in the times of mourning; whilst others understanding the word in the latter acceptation, refer it to their taking off their mitres, and stripping their heads of their ornaments.

7 For the anointing oil of the Lord is upon you, &c.] Seeing you are consecrated to God, you must dedicate your affections to him likewise; nor let worldly, inferior objects, possess your minds, and exercise your passions; but devote them all entirely to God, and be concerned only for his service.

9 Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations:

10 And that ye may put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean.

11 And that ye may teach the children of Israel all the statutes which the LORD hath spoken unto them by the hand of Moses.

12 ¶ And Moses spake unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar, his sons that were left, Take the meat offering that remaineth of the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and eat it without leaven beside the altar: for it is most holy:

13 And ye shall eat it in the holy place, because it is thy due, and thy sons' due of the sacrifices of the LORD made by fire: for so I am commanded.

14 And the wave breast and heave shoulder shall ye eat in a clean place; thou, and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee: for they be thy due, and thy sons' due, which are given out of the sacrifices of peace offerings of the children of Israel.

15 The heave shoulder and the wave breast shall they bring with the offerings made by fire of the fat, to wave it for a wave offering before the LORD; and it shall be thine, and thy sons' with thee, by a statute for ever: as the LORD hath commanded.

16 ¶ And Moses diligently sought the goat of the sin offering, and, behold, it was burnt: and he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron which were left alive, saying,

17 Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin offering in the holy place, seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the LORD?

18 Behold, the blood of it was not brought in within the holy place: ye should indeed have eaten it in the holy place, as I commanded.

19 And Aaron said unto Moses, Behold, this day have they offered their sin offering and their burnt offering before the LORD; and such things have befallen me: and if I had eaten the sin offering to day, should it have been accepted in the sight of the LORD?

20 And when Moses heard that, he was content.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. X.

By the dreadful end of Nadab and Abihu we learn what a dangerous thing it is to minister in divine ordinances without real knowledge, lively faith, and sincere repentance; and that we must worship God in spirit and in truth, with pure consciences, and not introduce human inventions. By Aaron's being forbidden to mourn for his sons, we are directed to lament only when God cuts off a notorious sinner, that he should have incurred such punishment by his wickedness and rebellion.

CHAP. XI.

1 What beasts may, and what may not be eaten: 9 What fishes: 13 What fowls: 29 The creeping things which are unclean.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying unto them,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, These are the beasts which ye shall eat among all the beasts that are on the earth.

3 Whatsoever parteth the hoof, and is clovenfooted,

19 If I had eaten the sin offering to day, should it have been accepted in the sight of the Lord? Would the great Judge of the whole earth have been pleased with me, had I, in such confusion and heaviness of heart, eaten the sacrifice? The voice both of nature and religion declares, that men ought to celebrate feasts with a cheerful heart; but was it possible for me, on this melancholy occasion, to dispose myself properly for such service?

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XI.

2 These are the beasts which ye shall eat, &c.] As for the beasts, allowed to be eaten, the rule laid down is general and plain, namely, those beasts, and those only, which did both part the hoof and chew the cud, were accounted clean.

and cheweth the cud, among the beasts, that shall ye eat.

4 Nevertheless these shall ye not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the hoof: as the camel, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

5 And the coney, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

6 And the hare, because he cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof; he is unclean unto you.

7 And the swine, though he divide the hoof, and be clovenfooted, yet he cheweth not the cud; he is unclean to you.

¶ Of their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcase shall ye not touch; they are unclean unto you.

9 ¶ These shall ye eat of all that are in the waters: whatsoever hath fins and scales in the waters, in the seas, and in the rivers, them shall ye eat.

10 And all that have not fins and scales in the seas, and in the rivers, of all that move in the waters and of any living thing which is in the waters, they shall be an abomination unto you:

11 They shall be even an abomination unto you; ye shall not eat of their flesh, but ye shall have their carcases in abomination.

12 Whatsoever hath no fins nor scales in the waters, that shall be an abomination unto you.

13 ¶ And these are they which ye shall have in abomination among the fowls; they shall not be eaten, they are an abomination: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospray,

14 And the vulture, and the kite after his kind;

15 Every raven after his kind;

16 And the owl, and the night hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind,

17 And the little owl, and the cormorant, and the great owl,

18 And the swan, and the pelican, and the gier eagle,

19 And the stork, the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

20 All fowls that creep, going upon all four, shall be an abomination unto you.

21 Yet these may ye eat of every flying creeping thing that goeth upon all four, which have legs above their feet, to leap withal upon the earth;

22 Even these of them ye may eat; the locust after his kind, and the bald locust after his kind, and the beetle after his kind, and the grasshopper after his kind.

23 But all other flying creeping things, which have four feet, shall be an abomination unto you.

24 And for these ye shall be unclean: whosoever toucheth the carcase of them shall be unclean until the even.

25 And whosoever beareth ought of the carcase of them shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

26 The carcases of every beast which divideth the hoof, and is not clovenfooted, nor cheweth the cud, are unclean unto you: every one that toucheth them shall be unclean.

27 And whatsoever goeth upon his paws, among all manner of beasts that go on all four, those are unclean unto you: whoso toucheth their carcase shall be unclean until the even.

28 And

4 These shall ye not eat, &c.] Many are the reasons assigned, why God was pleased to allow some kinds of beasts, and to prohibit others. By this he exercised the obedience of his people, not only in the solemnities of his altar, but in matters of daily occurrence at their own table, that they might at all times remember that they were under his authority. By this he would teach his people to distinguish themselves from other people, not only in their religious worship, but in the common actions of life, some assert, that the meat forbidden were unwholesome or hurtful, or held in veneration among the heathens.

18 The gier eagle] Or the vulture eagle; gier being an old fish word for vulture.

28 And he that beareth the carcase of them shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: they are unclean unto you.

29 ¶ These also shall be unclean unto you among the creeping things that creep upon the earth; the weasel, and the mouse, and the tortoise after his kind,

30 And the ferret, and the chameleon, and the lizard, and the snail, and the mole.

31 These are unclean to you among all that creep: whosoever doth touch them when they be dead, shall be unclean until the even.

32 And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack, whatsoever vessel it be, wherein any work is done, it must be put into water, and it shall be unclean until the even; so it shall be cleansed.

33 And every earthen vessel, whereinto any of them falleth, whatsoever is in it shall be unclean; and ye shall break it.

34 Of all meat which may be eaten, that on which such water cometh shall be unclean: and all drink that may be drunk in every such vessel shall be unclean.

35 And every thing whereupon any part of their carcase falleth shall be unclean; whether it be oven, or ranges for pots, they shall be broken down: for they are unclean, and shall be unclean unto you.

36 Nevertheless a fountain or pit, wherein there is plenty of water, shall be clean: but that which toucheth their carcase shall be unclean.

37 And if any part of their carcase fall upon any sowing seed which is to be sown, it shall be clean.

38 But if any water be put upon the seed, and any part of their carcase fall thereon, it shall be unclean unto you.

39 And if any beast, of which ye may eat, die; he that toucheth the carcase thereof shall be unclean until the even.

40 And he that eateth of the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: he also that beareth the carcase of it shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even.

41 And every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth shall be an abomination; it shall not be eaten.

42 Whatsoever goeth upon the belly, and whatsoever goeth upon all four, or whatsoever hath more feet among all creeping things that creep upon the earth, them ye shall not eat; for they are an abomination.

43 Ye shall not make yourselves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby.

44 For I am the LORD your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy: for I am holy: neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

45 For I am the LORD that bringeth you up out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: ye shall therefore be holy, for I am holy.

46 This is the law of the beasts, and of the fowl, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and of every creature that creepeth upon the earth:

47 To make a difference between the unclean and the clean, and between the beast that may be eaten and the beast that may not be eaten. Before CHRIST 1490.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XI.

From God's appointing what creatures were to be used for food, we learn, that he is the universal Lord of nature, and has a right to prescribe to his creatures; and we should admire his goodness, in prohibiting whatever is hurtful. When God is pleased to reveal the knowledge of himself to any people, he would have them keep up the perpetual remembrance of his name. We are also taught, that as the Israelites were so strictly enjoined to keep their bodies pure from infection by an improper use of meats and drinks, so it is necessary for us to keep our minds free from guilt, that we may be considered not merely as nominal Christians, but as the temples of the Holy Ghost.

C H A P. XII.

1 The purification of a woman after childbirth: 6 her offerings for her purifying.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a woman have conceived seed, and born a man child: then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

3 And in the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

4 And she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days; she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

5 But if she bear a maid child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.

6 ¶ And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtledove, for a sin offering unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest:

7 Who shall offer it before the LORD, and make an atonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath born a male or a female.

8 And if she be not able to bring a lamb, then she shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons; the one for the burnt offering, and the other for the sin offering: and the priest shall make an atonement for her, and she shall be clean.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XII.

As women were forbidden to attend divine worship for a certain time, let us learn to be modest, decent, and humane, in all our actions. God's compassion to the infirmities of women should teach us to use them with tenderness, as the weaker vessels. The poor condition of the mother of our Lord, who had only the smallest thing to offer for her purification, should induce us to esteem the riches of Christ above all things, and his cross our highest honour.

C H A P. XIII.

1, 9, 18, 24, 29, 38 The laws and tokens whereby the priest is to be guided in discerning the leprosy in man or woman; 47 and in a garment.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, saying,

¶ When

40 And be unclean until the even.] This law is often repeated, to possess them with a dread of every thing that was prohibited, though no particular reason for the prohibition did appear, but only the will of the law-maker. Not that these things were to be looked upon as defiling to the conscience, or that it was a sin against God to touch them, in order to remove them: but it was a ceremonial uncleanness they contracted, which continued indeed only until the even, to signify that all ceremonial pollutions were to cease by the death of Christ in the end, or the evening of the world.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

3 In the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.] One reason for deferring this rite was the mother's uncleanness for some days after her delivery, and the uncleanness which she communicated to the child itself during that period.

4 Three and thirty days; she shall touch no hallowed thing, &c.] This law not only served to represent that reverence and respect which is due to the public worship of God, but was also a political institution, and supported by natural reason, the weakness of women at this time requiring repose and little company.

5 She shall be unclean two weeks, &c.] The time of purification was doubted for the birth of a female; which law seemed to remind them of the fall of man, in which the woman was the first and principal in the transgression.

6 She shall bring a lamb of the first year, &c.] It is probable that this law, as well as several others, were intended only during the peregrination of the Jewish commonwealth.

7 She shall be cleansed, &c.] That is, she shall be restored to the liberty of attending the public worship, and of partaking of the holy things.

COMMENTARY

Before
CHRIST
1490.

2 When a man shall have in the skin of his flesh a rising, a scab, or bright spot, and it be in the skin of his flesh like the plague of leprosy; then he shall be brought unto Aaron the priest, or unto one of his sons the priests:

3 And the priest shall look on the plague in the skin of the flesh: and when the hair in the plague is turned white, and the plague in sight be deeper than the skin of his flesh, it is a plague of leprosy: and the priest shall look on him, and pronounce him unclean.

4 If the bright spot be white in the skin of his flesh, and in sight be not deeper than the skin, and the hair thereof be not turned white; then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague seven days:

5 And the priest shall look on him the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague in his sight be at a stay, and the plague spread not in the skin, then the priest shall shut him up seven days more:

6 And the priest shall look on him again the seventh day: and, behold, if the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean: it is but a scab: and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

7 But if the scab spread much abroad in the skin, after that he hath been seen of the priest for his cleansing, he shall be seen of the priest again:

8 And if the priest see that, behold, the scab spreadeth in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a leprosy.

9 ¶ When the plague of leprosy is in a man, then he shall be brought unto the priest;

10 And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the rising be white in the skin, and it have turned the hair white, and there be quick raw flesh in the rising;

11 It is an old leprosy in the skin of his flesh, and the priest shall pronounce him unclean, and shall not shut him up: for he is unclean:

12 And if a leprosy break out abroad in the skin, and the leprosy cover all the skin of him that hath the plague from his head even to his foot, whosoever the priest looketh;

13 Then the priest shall consider: and, behold, if the leprosy have covered all his flesh, he shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: it is all turned white: he is clean.

14 But when raw flesh appeareth in him, he shall be unclean.

15 And the priest shall see the raw flesh, and pronounce him to be unclean: for the raw flesh is unclean: it is a leprosy.

16 Or if the raw flesh turn again, and be changed unto white, he shall come unto the priest:

17 And the priest shall see him: and, behold, if the plague be turned into white; then the priest shall pronounce him clean that hath the plague: he is clean.

18 ¶ The flesh also, in which, even in the skin thereof, was a boil, and is healed,

19 And in the place of the boil there be a white rising, or a bright spot, white, and somewhat reddish, and it be shewed to the priest;

20 And if, when the priest seeth it, behold, it be in sight lower than the skin, and the hair thereof be turned white; the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague of leprosy broken out of the boil.

21 But if the priest look on it, and, behold, there be no white hairs therein, and if it be not lower than the skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days:

22 And if it spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a plague.

23 But if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not, it is a burning boil; and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

24 ¶ Or if there be any flesh in the skin whereof there is a hot burning, and the quick flesh that burneth have a white bright spot, somewhat reddish, or white;

25 Then the priest shall look upon it: and, behold, if the hair in the bright spot be turned white, and it be in sight deeper than the skin; it is a leprosy broken out of the burning: wherefore the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

26 But if the priest look on it, and behold, there be no white hair in the bright spot, and it be no lower than the other skin, but be somewhat dark; then the priest shall shut him up seven days:

27 And the priest shall look upon him the seventh day; and if it be spread much abroad in the skin, then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is the plague of leprosy.

28 And if the bright spot stay in his place, and spread not in the skin, but it be somewhat dark; it is a rising of the burning, and the priest shall pronounce him clean: for it is an inflammation of the burning.

29 ¶ If a man or woman have a plague upon the head or the beard;

30 Then the priest shall see the plague: and, behold, if it be in sight deeper than the skin; and there be in it a yellow thin hair: then the priest shall pronounce him unclean: it is a dry scall, even a leprosy upon the head or beard.

31 And if the priest look on the plague of the scall, and, behold, it be not in sight deeper than the skin; and that there is no black hair in it: then the priest shall shut up him that hath the plague of the scall seven days:

32 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the plague: and, behold, if the scall spread not, and there be in it no yellow hair, and the scall be not in sight deeper than the skin;

33 He shall be shaven, but the scall shall he not shave; and the priest shall shut up him that hath the scall seven days more:

34 And in the seventh day the priest shall look on the scall: and, behold, if the scall be not spread in the skin, nor be in sight deeper than the skin; then the priest shall pronounce him clean: and he shall wash his clothes, and be clean.

35 But if the scall spread much in the skin after his cleansing;

36 Then the priest shall look on him: and, behold, if the scall be spread in the skin, the priest shall not seek for yellow hair; he is unclean.

37 But if the scall be in his sight at a stay, and that there is black hair grown up therein; the scall is healed, he is clean: and the priest shall pronounce him clean.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. II.

¶ The plague of leprosy, &c.] The ancient leprosy appears to have been one of those diseases with which Providence occasionally afflicts mankind in certain ages and countries, and which continue but a short period. Calmet says, this distemper is owing to little worms or animalcula, which, though not discernable to the eye, may be easily discovered by microscopes; frequently happens in other cutaneous disorders. Galen says, it renders the part affected utterly insensible, which at length by falling off, anticipate the death of the patient.

10 Quick raw flesh, &c.] This means sound flesh.

13 It is all turned white: he is clean.] When the whole body is turned white, it was not a symptom of leprosy: but when some parts of the skin was remarkably white, and others retained the tural colour, that preternatural whiteness was to be deemed to arise from a leprosy, and so became unclean. The word leprosy is often used here to denote only the appearance of that disorder.

16 Turn again, &c.] That is, if those spots in the flesh, which had for some time appeared of a white ruddy colour, like that of flesh in its natural state, shall turn white again, so that the body shall again become of one colour, white all over, then the priest shall pronounce him clean.

29 A plague upon the head, &c.] This was called by the Latins, Mentagra, from its seat, which was generally in the chin. It began in the chin, spread all over the face, and from thence proceeded to the neck, breast, and hands. It was so intolerable, so filthy a disorder, that any death was reckoned preferable to it.

36 Shall not seek, &c.] The symptom of the spreading of the disease is sufficient of itself, without the addition of the changing of the colour of the hair.

38 ¶ If a man also or a woman have in the skin of their flesh bright spots, even white bright spots ;
 39 Then the priest shall look : and, behold, if the bright spots in the skin of their flesh be darkish white ; it is a freckled spot that groweth in the skin ; he is clean.
 40 And the man whose hair is fallen off his head, he is bald ; yet is he clean.
 41 And he that hath his hair fallen off from the part of his head toward his face, he is forehead bald : yet is he clean.
 42 And if there be in the bald head, or bald forehead, a white reddish sore ; it is a leprosy sprung up in his bald head, or his bald forehead.
 43 Then the priest shall look upon it : and, behold, if the rising of the sore be white reddish in his bald head, or in his bald forehead, as the leprosy appeareth in the skin of the flesh ;
 44 He is a leprous man, he is unclean : the priest shall pronounce him utterly unclean ; his plague is in his head.
 45 And the leper in whom the plague is, his clothes shall be rent, and his head bare, and he shall put a covering upon his upper lip, and shall cry, Unclean, unclean.
 46 All the days wherein the plague shall be in him he shall be defiled ; he is unclean : he shall dwell alone ; without the camp shall his habitation be.
 47 ¶ The garment also that the plague of leprosy is in, whether it be a woollen garment, or a linen garment ;
 48 Whether it be in the warp, or woof ; of linen, or of woollen ; whether in a skin, or in any thing made of skin ;
 49 And if the plague be greenish or reddish in the garment, or in the skin, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin ; it is a plague of leprosy, and shall be shewed unto the priest :
 50 And the priest shall look upon the plague, and shut up it that hath the plague seven days :
 51 And he shall look on the plague on the seventh day : if the plague be spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in a skin, or in any work that is made of skin ; the plague is a fretting leprosy ; it is unclean.
 52 He shall therefore burn that garment, whether warp or woof, in woollen or in linen, or any thing of skin, wherein the plague is : for it is a fretting leprosy ; it shall be burnt in the fire.
 53 And if the priest shall look, and, behold, the plague be not spread in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin ;
 54 Then the priest shall command that they wash the thing wherein the plague is, and he shall shut it up seven days more :
 55 And the priest shall look on the plague, after that it is washed : and, behold, if the plague have not changed his colour, and the plague be not spread ; it is unclean ; thou shalt burn it in the fire : it is fret inward, whether it be bare within or without.
 56 And if the priest look, and, behold, the plague be somewhat dark after the washing of it ; then he shall rend it out of the garment, or out of the skin, or out of the warp, or out of the woof : Before CHRIST 1490.

57 And if it appear still in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in any thing of skin ; it is a spreading plague : thou shalt burn that wherein the plague is with fire.

58 And the garment, either warp, or woof, or whatsoever thing of skin it be, which thou shalt wash, if the plague be departed from them, then it shall be washed the second time, and shall be clean.

59 This is the law of the plague of leprosy in a garment of woollen or linen, either in the warp, or woof, or any thing of skins, to pronounce it clean, or to pronounce it unclean.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XIII.

From the tenor of this chapter, we may remark the care which God took to preserve the health of his people : let this consideration excite us to love and obey him as our most generous benefactor and preserver. We are also herein taught, that it becomes us to be cleanly in our persons ; for God hates nastiness ; and cleanliness is next to godliness.

C H A P. XIV.

2 The rites and sacrifices in cleansing the leper. 33 The signs of leprosy in a house. 48 The cleansing of that house.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 ¶ This shall be the law of the leper in the day of his cleansing : He shall be brought unto the priest :

3 And the priest shall go forth out of the camp ; and the priest shall look, and, behold, if the plague of leprosy be healed in the leper ;

4 Then shall the priest command to take for him that is to be cleansed two birds alive and clean, and cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop :

5 And the priest shall command that one of the birds be killed in an earthen vessel over running water :

6 As for the living bird, he shall take it, and the cedar wood, and the scarlet, and the hyssop, and shall dip them and the living bird in the blood of the bird that was killed over the running water :

7 And he shall sprinkle upon him that is to be cleansed from the leprosy seven times, and shall pronounce him clean, and shall let the living bird loose into the open field.

8 And he that is to be cleansed shall wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, and wash himself in water, that he may be clean : and after that he shall come into the camp, and shall tarry abroad out of his tent seven days.

9 But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall shave all his hair off his head and his beard and his eyebrows, even all his hair he shall shave off : and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean.

10 And on the eighth day he shall take two he lambs without blemish, and one ewe lamb of the first year without blemish, and three tenth deals of fine flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and one log of oil.

11 And

45 His clothes shall be rent—his head bare] These were marks of sorrow ; and another was, covering the upper lip, which was performed either with the hand, or by throwing the skirt of their garments over their heads. These ceremonies seem intended not only to preserve passengers from legal impurity, but likewise from catching the disease by infection.

Shall cry, Unclean, unclean.] To warn every one not to touch, or come near him. See Lam. iv. 15.

47 The garment also, &c.] This leprosy in the garments, and in the houses, chap. xiv. 34. in no wise resembled the infection of the plague in clothes, utensils and houses, infected by exhalations of the air, excrements, and the like ; which lying upon the superficies, might be cleansed and purified ; but it was a corruption peculiar to those times and places, rotting and gnawing them, and spreading as in a living body. We find no mention of any such disease elsewhere.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIV.

Shall be brought, &c.] Without the camp, to a place appointed by the priest.

Nº. 12.

4 Cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop.] The hyssop bound with scarlet round a stick of cedar, served as an instrument to sprinkle the blood and water. The juice or resin of cedar, together with hyssop, were esteemed medicinal for cutaneous distempers ; the former was particularly used in curing the elephantiasis, a species of leprosy known only in Egypt ; and hyssop was of virtue to dissolve spots, and recover the colour of the skin. By scarlet, in this place, is meant scarlet-wood, which perhaps was likewise looked upon as fanative in such disorders.

7 And shall let the living bird loose into the open field.] This was done to shew that the leper being cleansed, was no longer under restraint and confinement, but was restored to a free conversation with his neighbours, as the bird was to the rest of its kind.

10 Two he lambs—and one ewe lamb] These were necessary, because he was to offer three sacrifices, viz. a trespass offering, a sin offering, and a burnt offering.

One log of oil] It contained upwards of half a pint of our measure.

12 And

Before
CHRIST
1490.

11 And the priest that maketh him clean shall present the man that is to be made clean, and those things, before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

12 And the priest shall take one he lamb, and offer him for a trespass offering, and the log of oil, and wave them for a wave offering before the LORD :

13 And he shall slay the lamb in the place where he shall kill the sin offering and the burnt offering, in the holy place : for as the sin offering is the priest's, so is the trespass offering : it is most holy :

14 And the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass offering, and the priest shall put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot.

15 And the priest shall take some of the log of oil, and pour it into the palm of his own left hand :

16 And the priest shall dip his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle of the oil with his finger seven times before the LORD :

17 And of the rest of the oil that is in his hand shall the priest put upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the blood of the trespass offering :

18 And the remnant of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall pour upon the head of him that is to be cleansed : and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD.

19 And the priest shall offer the sin offering, and make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed from his uncleanness ; and afterward he shall kill the burnt offering :

20 And the priest shall offer the burnt offering and the meat offering upon the altar : and the priest shall make an atonement for him, and he shall be clean.

21 And if he be poor, and cannot get so much ; then he shall take one lamb for a trespass offering to be waved, to make an atonement for him, and one tenth deal of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering, and a log of oil :

22 And two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, such as he is able to get ; and the one shall be a sin offering, and the other a burnt offering.

23 And he shall bring them on the eighth day for his cleansing unto the priest, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, before the LORD.

24 And the priest shall take the lamb of the trespass offering, and the log of oil, and the priest shall wave them for a wave offering before the LORD :

25 And he shall kill the lamb of the trespass offering, and the priest shall take some of the blood of the trespass offering, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot :

26 And the priest shall pour of the oil into the palm of his own left hand :

27 And the priest shall sprinkle with his right finger some of the oil that is in his left hand seven times before the LORD.

28 And the priest shall put of the oil that is in his hand upon the tip of the right ear of him that is to be cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot, upon the place of the blood of the trespass offering :

12 And offer him for a trespass offering, &c.] Not that there was any trespass in the disease itself, but that sin being the cause of diseases, that sacrifice was an act of humiliation for sin, from whence all the evils and miseries incident to our nature take their rise. The very pagans themselves acknowledged the moral to be the cause of natural evil.

18 And the remnant of the oil, &c.] The oil typified the healing, or recovery from the leprosy, as the blood did the remission of sins.

19 Afterward he shall kill the burnt offering.] This being of the nature of a present to God, in gratitude for having worked his cure, was not to be offered till by the previous offerings for trespass and sin, the man made public profession of his sincere repentance, 29 And the rest of the oil that is in the priest's hand he shall put upon the head of him that is to be cleansed, to make an atonement for him before the LORD.

30 And he shall offer the one of the turtledoves, or of the young pigeons, such as he can get ;

31 Even such as he is able to get, the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, with the meat offering : and the priest shall make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed before the LORD.

32 This is the law of him in whom is the plague of leprosy, whose hand is not able to get that which pertaineth to his cleansing.

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

34 When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession ;

35 And he that owneth the house shall come and tell the priest, saying, It seemeth to me that there is as it were a plague in the house :

36 Then the priest shall command that they empty the house, before the priest go into it to see the plague, that all that is in the house be not made unclean : and afterward the priest shall go in to see the house :

37 And he shall look on the plague, and, behold, if the plague be in the walls of the house with hollow strakes, greenish or reddish, which in sight are lower than the wall ;

38 Then the priest shall go out of the house to the door of the house, and shut up the house seven days :

39 And the priest shall come again the seventh day, and shall look : and, behold, if the plague be spread in the walls of the house ;

40 Then the priest shall command that they take away the stones in which the plague is, and they shall cast them into an unclean place without the city :

41 And he shall cause the house to be scraped within round about, and they shall pour out the dust that they scrape off without the city into an unclean place :

42 And they shall take other stones, and put them in the place of those stones ; and he shall take other mortar, and shall plaister the house.

43 And if the plague come again, and break out in the house, after that he hath taken away the stones, and after he hath scraped the house, and after it is plaistered ;

44 Then the priest shall come and look, and, behold, if the plague be spread in the house, it is a fretting leprosy in the house : it is unclean.

45 And he shall break down the house, the stones of it, and the timber thereof, and all the mortar of the house ; and he shall carry them forth out of the city into an unclean place.

46 Moreover he that goeth into the house all the while that it is shut up shall be unclean until the even.

47 And he that lieth in the house shall wash his clothes ; and he that eateth in the house shall wash his clothes.

48 ¶ And if the priest shall come in, and look upon it, and, behold, the plague hath not spread in the house, after the house was plaistered : then the priest shall pronounce the house clean, because the plague is healed.

49 And he shall take to cleanse the house two birds and cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop :

50 An without which he could not meet with acceptance from God.

21 If he be poor, and cannot get, &c.] It is remarkable, though two turtledoves or two young pigeons were to be substituted instead of two of the lambs, yet no person, whether rich or poor, could be cleansed without the sacrifice of one lamb : and is not a striking type of the lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world ? See chap. xiv. 7, 11.

34 And I put the plague of leprosy in a house, &c.] We can assign a natural cause of this strange plague, but must resolve it to the power of the God of nature ; for shall there be evil in a city, the Lord hath not done it ? Thus we read of the plague of Athens, the plague of Florence, Marseilles, and others.

50 And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water.

51 And he shall take the cedar wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times.

52 And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet:

53 But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and make an atonement for the house: and it shall be clean.

54 This is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and scall,

55 And for the leprosy of a garment, and of a house,

56 And for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot:

57 To teach when it is unclean, and when it is clean: this is the law of leprosy.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XIV.

An instructive lesson is afforded us by the ceremonies used by the priest respecting the cure of the leprosy; which is, that though it is our duty to make use of all proper means for the recovery of health, yet we are not to trust in them: and the malignant nature of the leprosy points out to us, how odious sin is in the sight of an infinitely holy God.

C H A P. XV.

1 The uncleanness of men in their issues, and their cleansing.

19 The uncleanness of women in their issues, and their cleansing.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them When any man hath a running issue out of his flesh, because of his issue he is unclean.

3 And this shall be his uncleanness in his issue: whether his flesh run with his issue, or his flesh be stopped from his issue, it is his uncleanness.

4 Every bed whereon he lieth that hath the issue, is unclean: and every thing, whereon he sitteth, shall be unclean.

5 And whosoever toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

6 And he that sitteth on any thing whereon he sat that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

7 And he that toucheth the flesh of him that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

8 And if he that hath the issue spit upon him that is clean; then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

9 And what saddle soever he rideth upon that hath the issue shall be unclean.

10 And whomsoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

11 And whomsoever he toucheth that hath the issue, and hath not rinsed his hands in water, he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

12 And the vessel of earth, that he toucheth which hath the issue, shall be broken: and every vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water.

13 And when he that hath an issue is cleansed of his issue; then he shall number to himself seven days for his cleansing, and wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in running water, and shall be clean.

14 And on the eighth day he shall take to him two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, and come before the LORD unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and give them unto the priest:

15 And the priest shall offer them, the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD for his issue.

16 And if any man's seed of copulation go out from him, then he shall wash all his flesh in water, and be unclean until the even.

17 And every garment, and every skin, whereon is the seed of copulation, shall be washed with water, and be unclean until the even.

18 The woman also with whom man shall lie with seed of copulation, they shall both bathe themselves in water, and be unclean until the even.

19 ¶ And if a woman have an issue, and her issue in her flesh be blood, she shall be put apart seven days: and whosoever toucheth her shall be unclean until the even.

20 And every thing that she lieth upon in her separation shall be unclean: every thing also that she sitteth upon shall be unclean.

21 And whosoever toucheth her bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

22 And whosoever toucheth any thing that she sat upon shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

23 And if it be on her bed, or on any thing whereon she sitteth, when he toucheth it, he shall be unclean until the even.

24 And if any man lie with her at all, and her flowers be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days; and all the bed whereon he lieth shall be unclean.

25 And if a woman have an issue of her blood many days out of the time of her separation, or if it run beyond the time of her separation; all the days of the issue of her uncleanness shall be as the days of her separation: she shall be unclean.

26 Every bed whereon she lieth all the days of her issue shall be unto her as the bed of her separation: and whatsoever she sitteth upon shall be unclean, as the uncleanness of her separation.

27 And whosoever toucheth those things shall be unclean, and shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

28 But if she be cleansed of her issue, then she shall number to herself seven days, and after that she shall be clean.

29 And on the eighth day she shall take unto her two turtles, or two young pigeons, and bring them unto the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

30 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, and the priest shall make an atonement for her before the LORD for the issue of her uncleanness.

31 Thus shall ye separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness; that they die not in their uncleanness, 57 This is the law of leprosy.] That is, the conclusion of the law of leprosy. There is no repetition of that law in Deuteronomy, only a general memorandum, "Take heed in the plague of leprosy," Deut. xxiv. 8.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

1 And the Lord spake unto Moses, &c.] Moses and Aaron are next instructed in the other cases of uncleanness in man or woman, which are intended not only to teach the necessity of moral purity, but also to put a restraint upon immoderate gratification of the passions.

2 A running issue out of his flesh, &c.] Or a gonorrhœa, which might proceed as well from additional causes, as from a lewd course of life. The lues venerea, it is generally supposed, was not known till about three centuries ago.

13 Shall be clean.] That is, he may converse with other men, and come near the tabernacle to perform religious duties.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XV.

As all impurities among the Israelites were to be purged away, and an atonement made for them by many ceremonies under the law, so Christians are not to expect pardon and forgiveness of their sins, unless they come to the throne of grace as sincere penitents. By the priest performing all these ceremonies, is pointed out to us Jesus Christ, our more excellent high-priest, who having offered up himself as a sacrifice for our sins, is now set down at the right hand of God, and become a most powerful advocate and intercessor for us.

CHAP. XVI.

1 How the high priest must enter into the holy place. 11 The sin offering for himself. 15 The sin offering for the people. 20 The scapegoat. 29 The yearly feast of the expiations.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses after the death of the two sons of Aaron, when they offered before the LORD, and died;

2 And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he come not at all times into the holy place within the vail before the mercy seat, which is upon the ark; that he die not: for I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy seat.

3 Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place: with a young bullock for a sin offering, and a ram for a burnt offering.

4 He shall put on the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; therefore shall he wash his flesh in water, and so put them on.

5 And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel two kids of the goats for a sin offering, and one ram for a burnt offering.

6 And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and make an atonement for himself, and for his house.

7 And he shall take the two goats, and present them before the LORD at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

31 When they defile my tabernacle, &c.] From hence it is plain, that these laws were instituted to impress the minds of that carnal people with a respect and veneration for the worship of God. If, then, such kind of natural and unavoidable pollutions as were their affliction, and not their sin, rendered them unfit for communion either with God or man; how thankful ought we to be for our privileges, under the Christian dispensation, that we are not subject to these carnal ordinances, and that nothing but sin can now defile us!

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

1 And the Lord spake unto Moses after the death of the two sons of Aaron, &c.] This chapter should have immediately succeeded the tenth, where the death of these two persons is related; but it is placed here, as it gave occasion to declare the preceding laws concerning those uncleannesses that rendered an Israelite incapable of approaching the sanctuary.

2 That he come not at all times.] None but the high-priest himself was permitted to enter in the holy place within the vail, generally called the most holy place, and even he only once a year, which was on the day of general expiation or atonement.

For I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy seat.] This is to be understood of the incense which the high-priest burnt, when he entered into the most holy place, the mercy seat being at that time covered with this cloud.

3 With a young bullock for a sin offering, &c.] Before the high-priest thus entered into the most holy place, he was to prepare himself, by offering his sacrifices for himself and family; a bullock for a sin offering, and a ram for a burnt offering.

4 He shall put on the holy linen coat, &c.] As this was a day of general repentance and humiliation for sin, the high-priest, in token thereof, was to wear those linen clothes only which he wore in communion with the inferior priests.

6 For his house.] That is, for all the priests.

8 The scapegoat.] The meaning of the Hebrew word lazzazil has much puzzled many commentators. The most probable opinion is,

8 And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the LORD, and the other lot for a scapegoat.

9 And Aaron shall bring the goat upon which the LORD's lot fell, and offer him for a sin offering.

10 But the goat on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat, shall be presented alive before the LORD, to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a scapegoat into the wilderness.

11 ¶ And Aaron shall bring the bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin offering which is for himself:

12 And he shall take a censer full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the vail:

13 And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the LORD, that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not:

14 And he shall take of the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy seat eastward; and before the mercy seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times.

15 ¶ Then shall he kill the goat of the sin offering, that is for the people, and bring his blood within the vail, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat:

16 And he shall make an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins: and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation, that remaineth among them in the midst of their uncleanness.

17 And there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel.

18 And he shall go out unto the altar that is before the LORD, and make an atonement for it; and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about.

19 And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

20 ¶ And that this goat was symbolically charged with the sins of the whole nation, and therefore being unworthy to be offered to the Lord, or to be admitted into the rest of the flock, was to be sent away to Hazazel, the foul spirit, dwelling in the wilderness; signifying, thereby the total oblivion or remission of their sins. Desarts and uninhabited places are represented in scripture as the peculiar residences of demons and impure spirits. See Matt. iv. 1. and xii. 43. Luke viii. 20.

9 The goat.] One reason why goats are peculiarly appropriated for this expiatory sacrifice, might be, to cure the Israelites of the superstitious veneration they had contracted in Egypt, where Pan was particularly worshipped under the symbol of this animal; and that the feat of his worship, and the name by which he was known among the Egyptians, was Mendes, that is, a goat.

Lot fell, &c.] In Hebrew, Ascended, or went up; alluding to the lots being taken out of the urn or vessel.

12 And bring it within the vail.] That is, within the holy of holies, which was separated by a vail from the holy place. This appears to have been the first time of Aaron's entering into it.

13 He shall put the incense upon the fire, &c.] He was ordered, at his entrance, to cast incense on the burning coals; by which the holy place was filled with a cloud of smoke, preventing him from seeing the ark, lest he should have been overpowered by the refugence issuing from thence.

14 And he shall take of the blood, &c.] For which he was obliged to come without the vail.

15 Then shall he kill, &c.] This was the third time of his entering the holy of holies upon this day.

16 He shall make an atonement for the holy place, &c.] By way of acknowledgement that this place was, through the sins of the past year, rendered an unworthy dwelling for the divine presence.

17 There shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation, &c.] In like manner our gospel high-priest Christ Jesus, "his own self bare our sins in his body on the tree;" he "trode the wine-press alone, and of the people there were none with him."

22 And the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

23 And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall put off the linen garments, which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there:

24 And he shall wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments, and come forth, and offer his burnt offering, and the burnt offering of the people, and make an atonement for himself, and for the people.

25 And the fat of the sin offering shall he burn upon the altar.

26 And he that let go the goat for the scapegoat shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp.

27 And the bullock for the sin offering, and the goat for the sin offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

28 And he that burneth them shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

29 ¶ And this shall be a statute for ever unto you: that in the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye shall afflict your souls, and do no work at all, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you:

30 For on that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the LORD.

31 It shall be a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.

32 And the priest, whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall consecrate to minister in the priests office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement; and shall put on the linen clothes, even the holy garments:

33 And he shall make an atonement for the holy sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar, and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation.

34 And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins once a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVI.

This chapter directs our eye to the following important truths: that Christ, by the sacrifice of himself, has made an atonement for the sins of all those who believe and obey his gospel. That the priests offered sacrifices for their own sins; but Christ, when offered up on the cross, was a lamb without spot: he knew no sin, though made sin for us: that the high-priest must once a year go into the holy place: but Christ, by his death, has opened heaven to all believers. And since the blood of these sacrifices could not take away sin, but were only shadows of good things to come, let us bless God for Jesus Christ, the great antitype; whose blood cleanseth from all sin.

CHAP. XVII.

1 The blood of all slain beasts must be offered to the Lord at the door of the tabernacle, and no sacrifices made to devils. 10 All eating of blood is forbidden, 13 and of that which dieth of itself, or is torn:

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them; This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, saying,

3 What man soever there be of the house of Israel, that killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it out of the camp,

4 And bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the LORD before the tabernacle of the LORD; blood shall be imputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man shall be cut off from among his people:

5 To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, which they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest, and offer them for peace offerings unto the LORD. 6 And 21 And confess over him] It does not appear that God prescribed any particular form of confession at this time; though in the latter ages the Jewish church had a mode of confession which is transmitted to us by tradition.

All the iniquities—transgressions—sins] By sins are signified offences committed through ignorance or mistake, and not deliberately; by iniquities, such as were committed deliberately, against the negative precepts; and by transgressions, those sins which were committed against the positive precepts.

Putting them upon the head of the goat, &c.] It was thus that the sins of the world were laid upon our Saviour, Isaiah, liii. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 24. The true sense of Christ's dying for us, is, that the punishment of our sins were transferred upon him, in the same manner as the punishment due to the sins of the Israelites were transferred to the goat.

22 Bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited, &c.] This was a symbolical representation, that by faith and repentance they might obtain pardon for all their sins.

24 He shall wash his flesh with water] As Christ's entering into the wilderness on the day of atonement was typified by the ceremony of the scapegoat; so his baptism on the same day was prefigured by the legal ceremony of Aaron's washing his body in the holy place.

Put on his garments, &c.] His ordinary cloaths, and not his pontificals, which he never wore but when he went into the sanctuary.

29 For ever] That is, so long as the Jewish dispensation shall last; and till the type shall be superseded by the antitype.

The seventh month, &c.] Called Tifri, answering to our September; as the sacred year commenced with the month Abib, which answered to our March.

30 That ye may be clean from all your sins, &c.] The sins which are meant in this passage could only be such sins as had sacrifices provided for them. Violations of the great duties of the moral law, such as murder, adultery, idolatry, &c. were punished with death.

32 And the priest whom he shall anoint, &c.] It would be better rendered, And the priest, who shall be anointed, and who shall be consecrated.

34 To make an atonement—once a year, &c.] The ceremonies used by the modern Jews on the day of expiation are said to be greatly different from those of the ancients. They prepare themselves for this day of humiliation by prayer; which done, they repair to their burial place, beg pardon for their sins, in consideration of the merit of the saints there interred; and then plunge themselves into the water, to complete the ablution. In the evening the solemnity begins, when they repair to the synagogue, singing and carrying a wax taper lighted; the women light up candles in their houses, and draw omens from them; if they burn clear, they suppose their sins are pardoned; if dull, they are tormented with scruples; and if the tallow or wax runs, they dread the divine vengeance. The next day they go to the synagogue again, and in a long prayer declare, that all the oaths and promises, not having been performed within the year, are void, since atonement has been made for sin. Thus the solemnity concludes, when the rabbi, with uplifted hands, gives a benediction to the people, who, in token of respect, put their hands before their eyes, and cover their faces. They then sound an horn in commemoration of the jubilee, and every one departs home, fully persuaded his sins are forgiven him. When they are come to their respective dwellings, they dress themselves in clean white cloaths, sit down at table, and break their fasts, having till then entirely abstained from eating and drinking.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVII.

3 What man soever there be of the house of Israel, that killeth an ox, or lamb, &c.] Though the ox or lamb was killed for food, well if it had been for sacrifice; for these animals, slain by an Israelite for family use, were first of all presented to God by way of peace offering; the blood was poured out at the bottom of the altar, and the fat burnt thereon; this law however, was restrained only to beasts that were sacrificed, after they came into the land of Canaan.

4 Blood shall be imputed unto that man, &c.] He was to suffer for such offence as a murderer who had spilt innocent blood: such was the rigour of the laws against idolatry.

7 And they shall no more offer their sacrifices unto devils, after whom they have gone a whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations.

■ And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, that offereth a burnt-offering or sacrifice,

9 And bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer it unto the LORD; even that man shall be cut off from among his people.

10 ¶ And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that eateth any manner of blood; I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, which hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowl that may be eaten; he shall even pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust.

14 For it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof: whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 ¶ And every soul that eateth that which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, he shall both wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even: then shall he be clean.

16 But if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh: then he shall bear his iniquity.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVII.

As the Jews were to worship none but the Lord Jehovah; neither are we to introduce any thing of a carnal nature into his worship or ordinances. We have abundant reason to bless God that we enjoy the gospel in its purity, without being burdened with so many ceremonies.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Israelites must not follow the practices of Egypt and Canaan, but the ordinances of God. 6 Unlawful marriages. 19 Unlawful lusts.

7 And they shall no more offer their sacrifices unto devils, &c.] The Hebrew properly signifies a goat, and denotes those idols which were worshipped under the symbol of a goat; a species of idolatry to which the Israelites were greatly addicted while in Egypt, and which some of them retained in the wilderness. The Zabians worshipped daemons under the figure of goats, imagining them to appear in that form, whence they called them segnirim, that is, "rough or rugged," like hairy goats. This custom being almost universal, gave occasion to the precept.

10 Or of the strangers that sojourn among you] By strangers, is meant proselytes or converts from paganism. The scripture mentions three sorts of strangers; professed idolaters, who were not permitted to dwell in the land of Israel; those who did not practise idolatry, but yielded to some of the chief grounds of true religion, and were permitted to dwell in the gates or cities of Israel; from whence they were called proselytes of the gate; and lastly, pagan converts, who were bound to observe all the laws equally with the Jews: these are the strangers mentioned in this chapter, who were usually denominated proselytes of righteousness.

I will even set my face against that soul, &c.] This expression is never made use of concerning any other sins but those of idolatry and eating of blood.

11 For the life of the flesh is in the blood, &c.] That is, the life of the beast consisting in the blood, I have ordained it to expiate your sin, that by its death in your stead, your life may be preserved.

13 He shall even pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust] Because it was sacred, being a ransom for the forfeited lives of sin-

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am the LORD your God.

3 After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do: neither shall ye walk in their ordinances.

4 Ye shall do my judgments, and keep my ordinances, to walk therein: I am the LORD your God.

5 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the LORD.

6 ¶ None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin to him, to uncover their nakedness: I am the LORD.

7 The nakedness of thy father, or the nakedness of thy mother, shalt thou not uncover: she is thy mother; thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

8 The nakedness of thy father's wife shalt thou not uncover: it is thy father's nakedness.

9 The nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover.

10 The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of thy daughter's daughter, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover: for their's is thine own nakedness.

11 The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, she is thy sister, thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

12 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister: she is thy father's near kinswoman.

13 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister: for she is thy mother's near kinswoman.

14 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's brother, thou shalt not approach to his wife: she is thine aunt.

15 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy daughter in law: she is thy son's wife: thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

16 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife: it is thy brother's nakedness.

17 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter, neither shalt thou take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to uncover her nakedness; for they are her near kinswomen: it is wickedness.

18 Neither shalt thou take a wife to her sister, to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, beside the other in her life time.

19 ¶ Also thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness, as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness.

20 Moreover thou shalt not lie carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her:

21 And

ners; it was therefore to be treated with reverence, and covered out of sight, lest any beast should lick it up, or lest idolatry (as was their custom) should render it subservient to superstitious purposes.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

5 Which if a man do, he shall live in them] The Chaldee and Arabic render it, He shall live by them to life eternal. But man, by original sin, is deprived of the power of attaining perfect obedience: this then must be understood of the disciplinary and external observance of the law, which hath moreover its temporary reward.

I am the Lord] In the Hebrew, I am Jehovah, who keep my covenant and fulfil my promises; therefore he who keeps my laws, shall surely live.

6 None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin, &c.] These laws relate to the seventh commandment; and as they are agreeable to nature and right reason, are without doubt obligations on us as under the gospel.

17 It is wickedness.] The Septuagint render it, Impiety; the Vulgate, Incest; and the other translations, It is abominable, obscene, or nefarious wickedness; a term applied by the institutes of civil law, to those marriages which are contrary to nature.

20 Thou shalt not lie, &c.] In the preceding verses Moses guards the Israelites from the incestuous customs of the Egyptians, and in those that follow from the barbarous and horrid rites of the Canaanites.

21 Thou

21 And thou shalt not let any of thy seed pass through the fire to Molech, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

22 Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it is abomination.

23 Neither shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith: neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto: it is confusion.

24 Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things: for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you:

25 And the land is defiled: therefore I do visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants.

26 Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you:

27 (For all these abominations have the men of the land done, which were before you, and the land is defiled;)

28 That the land spue not you out also, when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you.

29 For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people.

30 Therefore shall ye keep mine ordinance, that ye commit not any of these abominable customs, which were committed before you, and that ye defile not yourselves therein: I am the LORD your God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVIII.

We may observe, in this chapter, the horrid crimes of uncleanness into which the Canaanites had been drawn, and in order to prevent the Israelites from falling into the same, God gave them laws concerning marriages. Hence we should learn to shun uncleanness, and avoid what is contrary to the laws of Moses and of the gospel, which so expressly enjoin purity and chastity. Observe also, that God here most positively declares, that the crimes committed by the inhabitants of a country, defile that country, and bring down the curse of God upon it, when they become frequent, and no stop is put to the committing them.

C H A P. XIX.

A repetition of sundry laws.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, Ye shall be holy: for I the LORD your God am holy.

21 Thou shalt not let any of thy seed pass through the fire to Molech, &c.] Molech was the tutelary deity of the Ammonites, whose names signifies, A prince; and was peculiarly, or by way of eminence, applied to the sun, the prince of the heavenly bodies. The manner in which the pagans dedicated their children to this idol was twofold, either by making them pass through the fire, or by offering them to him in sacrifice. The ceremony of passing through the fire was a rite of initiation, whereby the parents consecrated their children to this deity; and the Hebrew word rendered "to pass through," which signifies, To go over to any party, shews that this is the meaning of this sentence. Whether this rite was performed by waving a child in the flames; whether they passed between two fires, which were kindled at a small distance from each other, agreeable to the rite of the ancient Druids, or danced through the fire; yet that the children were not, in this rite, sacrificed, is evident from 1 Kings xvi. 3. where Ahaz is asserted to have made his son pass through the fire; who was so far from being destroyed in this ceremony, that we find his son named Hezekiah not only surviving this rite, but likewise outliving his father, and succeeding him in the throne.

23 Neither shalt thou lie with any beast, &c.] This abominable crime was not only practised among the Egyptians, but likewise was deemed a sacred rite of their religion, as appears from Strabo and Herodotus.

25 The land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants.] This is a figurative speech, taken from an overcharged stomach, which loaths the food it cannot digest: it describes the heinousness of sin.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

3 Ye shall fear, &c.] That is, Ye shall reverence.

4 Idols, &c.] The Hebrew word elilim, translated "idols," carries with it the secondary idea of vain things, or things of no value.

9 Thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, &c.] This precept shews that the Jewish laws were founded on mercy and charity; and gives us a high idea of the benevolence of the mosaic dispensation.

3 Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father, Before CHRIST 1496. and keep my sabbaths: I am the LORD your God.

4 Turn ye not unto idols, nor make to yourselves molten gods; I am the LORD your God.

5 And if ye offer a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD, ye shall offer it at your own will.

6 It shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if ought remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

7 And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is abominable; it shall not be accepted.

8 Therefore every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD: and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

9 And when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

10 And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger; I am the LORD your God.

11 Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another.

12 And ye shall not swear by my name falsely, neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

13 Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbour, neither rob him: the wages of him that is hired shall not abide with thee all night until the morning.

14 Thou shalt not curse the deaf, nor put a stumbling block before the blind, but shalt fear thy God: I am the LORD.

15 Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.

16 Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people: neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbour: I am the LORD.

17 Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.

18 Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the LORD.

19 Ye

11, 12 Ye shall not steal, &c.] See Exod. xx. 15. By dealing falsely, is meant the denying any thing deposited; and by lying, not only all falsehood, but especially that species by which any one was deprived of his property.

13 The wages of him that is hired, shall not abide with thee all night, &c.] That is, they were by no means to refuse the wages of a labouring person, when he required them; for these were generally the sole means of his subsistence, the detaining them was the greatest cruelty and oppression. The excellence of the mosaic law is therefore manifested in this merciful provision for the poor.

14 Thou shalt not curse the deaf, &c.] To curse or calumniate any one, is unlawful and repugnant to the laws of humanity; but to curse the deaf, who was incapable of vindicating himself, carried with it the highest degree of barbarity, and indicated a base and fordid disposition.

26 Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer, &c.] This practice is uncharitable, and odious to God and man: it is also contrary to the precept of our blessed Saviour, which enjoins us first to take the beam out of our own eye, before we see, i. e. expose the mote in our brother's eye.

17 Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart.] Hatred and malice are diabolical. To be angry upon some occasions, however, is reasonable. That precept of the apostle is most just, "Be angry, and sin not." Our blessed Saviour has set this precept in a beautiful light, Matt. xviii. 15.

Rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.] It is the greatest kindness to reprove the offender, and to reclaim those who are fallen into error, by bringing them back into the right path.

18 Thou shalt not avenge.] Revenge is as odious and detestable a crime as a man can well commit, and was prohibited both by the law of Moses, and that of Jesus Christ.

But thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.] Do him as you would be done by.

I am the Lord.] The creator of all men, and who has commanded them to love one another, and to whom alone vengeance belongs, and who expects obedience to his laws.

19 Thou

Before
CHRIST

19 Ye shall keep my statutes. Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind: thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed: neither shall a garment mingled of linen and woollen come upon thee.

20 And whosoever lieth carnally with a woman, that is a bondmaid, betrothed to an husband, and not at all redeemed, nor freedom given her; she shall be scourged; they shall not be put to death, because she was not free.

21 And he shall bring his trespass offering unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, even a ram for a trespass offering.

22 And the priests shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering before the LORD for his sin which he hath done: and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

23 And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit as uncircumcised: three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you: it shall not be eaten of.

24 But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be holy to praise the LORD withal.

25 And in the fifth year shall ye eat of the fruit thereof, that it may yield unto you the increase thereof: I am the LORD your God.

26 Ye shall not eat any thing with the blood: neither shall ye use enchantment, nor observe times.

27 Ye shall not round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard.

28 Ye shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor print any marks upon you: I am the LORD.

29 Do not prostitute thy daughter, to cause her to be a whore; lest the land fall to whoredom, and the land become full of wickedness.

30 Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the LORD.

31 Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the LORD your God.

[19 Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind.] This prohibition was intended partly to preserve the different species of animals as they were at first created, and partly to restrain the vanity and curiosity of men from attempting to alter the form or nature of God's creatures, by endeavouring to make a greater diversity than he thought proper to create at first.

[Thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed.] Perhaps to set bounds to the husbandman's covetousness; and not only so, but the sowing ground with mixed seeds, is thought by some an effectual way to wear it out.

[A garment mingled of linen and woollen, &c.] This prohibition was intended to guard the Israelites from the idolatrous superstition of the Egyptians and Sabians; whose priests wore such mixtures from a persuasion that they were endued with some magical influence.

[23 Three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you: it shall not be eaten of.] God here requires the first fruits to be dedicated to his service, in like manner as he had before commanded that the first of all other things should be appropriated to his use; but as he certainly has an undoubted right to the very best of all, he would not accept of them till they were arrived to perfection, nor was man to be allowed to eat of them before he had the firstfruits.

[26 Use enchantment, nor observe times.] Place no confidence in diviners, and vain pretenders to prescience; be not superstitious in observing certain days indifferent in themselves; neither regard common accidents in a prognostic or judicial light; nor be so weak and timorous as to be alarmed at every trivial occurrence.

[27 Ye shall not round the corners of your heads.] It was the superstitious practice of the Arabians to cut the extremities of their hair round, in order to resemble their God Bacchus.

[Corners of thy beard.] This prohibition was intended to preserve the Israelites from the superstition of the Egyptians, who, in their mournings of Isis, used to shave their heads and beards, and at other times suffered the hair of their beards to grow only on their chin.

[28 Ye shall not make any cuttings in your flesh, &c.] The heathenish rite of cutting their flesh in honour of the deceased, is here prohibited; not any of the mere tokens of mourning and affection.

[29 Do not prostitute thy daughter, &c.] This species of uncleanness seems to have been practised by the heathens in their idolatrous worship.

[31 Regard not them that have familiar spirits.] Those who pretended to a familiarity with evil spirits, were mere cheats and impostors, and amused the credulous vulgar with dark and ambiguous predictions, such as were calculated to answer the event, let it happen which way it would.

32 Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God: I am the LORD.

33 And if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not vex him.

34 But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

35 Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure.

36 Just balances, just weights, a just ephah, and a just hin, shall ye have: I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt.

37 Therefore shall ye observe all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: I am the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XIX.

Most of these laws were given to the Jews, to keep them from following idolatrous customs; God forbade the mixture of kinds, that they might avoid superstition and idolatry. He forbade them to eat of the first fruits, to teach them, that whatever the earth produced, was owing to his bounty. The other laws teach us how great a wickedness it is to consult forcerers: forbid us to afflict ourselves immoderately for the dead; that impurity is a sin, which ought to be punished; to respect old age; to do justice to strangers; and keep true weights and measures.

CHAP. XX.

2 Of him that giveth of his seed to Molech. 4 Of him that favoureth such an one. 6 Of going to wizards. 7 Of sanctification. 9 Of him that curseth his parents. 10 Of adultery. 11, 14, 17, 19 Of incest. 13 Of sodomy. 15 Of bestiality. 18 Of uncleanness. 22 Obedience is required with holiness. 27 Wizards must be put to death.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 ¶ Again, thou shalt say to the children of Israel, Whosoever he be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his seed unto Molech; he shall surely be put to death: the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

3 And

[Neither seek after wizards, &c.] The Hebrew word tyreguonin, is derived from jadabu, "to know;" and answers to those persons whom we call fortune-tellers, or cunning-men.

[32 Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head, &c.] This injunction was judiciously adopted in the mosaical institutions, as paying reverence to the aged is one of the dictates of nature, and has been enjoined by all the wise legislators of antiquity. The prophet describes it as a mark of degeneracy, when the child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient, Isaiah iii. 5. Juvenal tells us, it was esteemed highly criminal, in the most virtuous age of the world, for a young man not to rise to an old man.

[35 In meteyard, &c.] The Hebrew for "meteyard" is middab, which signifies the measure of a continued quantity. In weight; by this means they paid and received money, and sold brags, iron, &c. In measure; the Hebrew word mesurah, denotes the measure of discreet quantity, such as corn, salt, &c. and of liquors, as of wine, oil, &c.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XX.

1 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying.] The principal laws in the two preceding chapters are here recapitulated, and enforced, with penalties; which have been already explained.

2 That giveth any of his seed unto Molech, &c.] We have observed on chap. xviii. 21. that the worship of Molech was two-fold; in one of which the priests suffered their children to pass through the fire to Molech, as a rite of initiation: besides which, they had another, wherein they sacrificed their children; which the word "give" seems to imply, because it is used in that sense, when we say, that "Christ gave himself for us." That it was different from the passing through the fire, mentioned in chap. xviii. seems evident from the different functions given to each, because in the first place no punishment is threatened, but in this the penalty of death is denounced. The manner in which children were sacrificed to Molech, is thus described: the image of Molech was of brags, having in the inside seven cells, the first of which was allotted for flour, the second for turtledoves, the third for an ewe, the fourth for a ram, the fifth for a calf, the sixth for an ox, and the seventh for a child: which being included in this image, the victims were in the wicker idols of the Druids, were, by the means of a fire, burnt to death; while the people danced about the idol, beating timbrels, in order to prevent the cries of the tormented infant from being heard.

3 And I will set my face against that man, and will cut him off from among his people; because he hath given of his seed unto Molech, to defile my sanctuary, and to profane my holy name.

4 ¶ And if the people of the land do any ways hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, and kill him not:

5 Then I will set my face against that man, and against his family, and will cut him off, and all that go a whoring after him, to commit whoredom with Molech, from among their people.

6 ¶ And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people.

7 ¶ Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the LORD your God.

8 And ye shall keep my statutes, and do them: I am the LORD which sanctify you.

9 ¶ For every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death; he hath cursed his father or his mother; his blood shall be upon him.

10 ¶ And the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11 ¶ And the man that lieth with his father's wife hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

12 And if a man lie with his daughter in law, both of them shall surely be put to death: they have wrought confusion; their blood shall be upon them.

13 ¶ If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

14 ¶ And if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be burnt with fire, both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you.

15 ¶ And if a man lie with a beast, he shall surely be put to death: and ye shall slay the beast.

16 And if a woman approach unto any beast, and lie down thereto, thou shalt kill the woman; and the beast: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

17 ¶ And if a man shall take his sister, his father's daughter, or his mother's daughter, and see her nakedness, and she see his nakedness; it is a wicked thing; and they shall be cut off in the sight of their people: he hath uncovered his sister's nakedness: he shall bear his iniquity.

18 ¶ And if a man shall lie with a woman having her sickness, and shall uncover her nakedness; he hath discovered her fountain, and she hath uncovered the fountain of her blood: and both of them shall be cut off from among their people.

19 ¶ And thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister, nor of thy father's sister: for he uncovereth his near kin: they shall bear his iniquity.

20 And if a man shall lie with his uncle's wife, he hath uncovered his uncle's nakedness: they shall bear their sin; they shall die childless.

4 If the people of the land do any ways hide their eyes, &c.] If his neighbours, commiserating his folly, instead of abominating his sin, should conceal him, and refuse to appear as witnesses against him, or if the magistrates connived at him, God would set his face against that man or magistrate, and against his family.

17 They shall be cut off in the sight of their people, &c.] That is, they shall be put to death publicly.

18 If a man shall lie with a woman having her sickness, &c.] The observation of this law was doubtless prescribed, lest the Jewish commonwealth should be overstocked with weak and sickly people. God fixed a stigma upon leprous persons, because they were supposed to have been conceived at this time.

27 A man also or woman that hath a familiar spirit—shall surely be put to death, &c.] This means those who pretended to a spirit of divination, or to practise forcery and conjuring.

No. 12.

21 And if a man shall take his brother's wife, it is an unclean thing: he hath uncovered his brother's nakedness; they shall be childless. Before CHRIST 1495.

22 ¶ Ye shall therefore keep all my statutes, and all my judgments, and do them: that the land, whither I bring you to dwell therein, spue you not out.

23 And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nation, which I cast out before you: for they committed all these things, and therefore I abhorred them.

24 But I have said unto you, Ye shall inherit their land, and I will give it unto you to possess it, a land that floweth with milk and honey: I am the LORD your God, which have separated you from other people.

25 Ye shall therefore put difference between clean beasts and unclean, and between unclean fowls and clean: and ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast, or by fowl, or by any manner of living thing that creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean.

26 And ye shall be holy unto me: for I the LORD am holy, and have severed you from other people, that ye should be mine.

27 ¶ A man also or woman that hath a familiar spirit; or that is a wizard, shall surely be put to death: they shall stone them with stones: their blood shall be upon them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XX.

The prohibition of burning children, and offering them to the idol Molech, shews us to what horrible cruelties idolatrous people abandon themselves, in the service of their false gods; and what men, who know not God, are capable of. God ordered those who applied themselves to forcerers, to be punished with death; as also adulterers, both men and women, and those that cursed father and mother. Observe the repeated exhortations of God to the Jews, that they should not imitate the Canaanites, but become a holy people to him. Thus Christians, being separated from the world, should not be conformed to it, but be holy in all manner of conversation.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXI.

¶ There shall none be defiled for the dead, &c.] If any one touched a dead body, looked at it, entered a house where a corpse lay, assisted at a funeral, or even touched a grave, he was unclean for seven days. The Hebrew canons say, that if a man came within six feet of the dead, he was unclean.

2 But for his kin that is near unto him, &c.] Here God indulges a natural affection, and dispenses with their attendance for the space of seven days, in case of the death of a parent, a child, or a brother: to have denied the payment of these last duties, would have favoured of cruelty and rigour, but God ever esteems mercy before sacrifice.

4 He shall not defile himself, being a chief man, &c.] The verse would be better translated, "He shall not defile himself for the chief man of the nation," &c.

9 ¶ And the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself by playing the whore, she profaneth her father: she shall be burnt with fire.

10 ¶ And he that is the high priest among his brethren, upon whose head the anointing oil was poured, and that is consecrated to put on the garments, shall not uncover his head, nor rend his clothes;

22 He shall eat the bread of his God, both of the most holy, and of the holy.

23 Only he shall not go in unto the vail, nor come nigh unto the altar, because he hath a blemish; that he profane not my sanctuaries: for I the LORD do sanctify them.

24 And Moses told it unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXI.

These laws were given in two principal views; First, to restrain both priests and people from idolatry, and the manners of the idolaters; and to prevent, in the persons or families of the priests, the same disorders that were to be seen among the priests of false religions. Secondly, That the holiness of the priests might render religion itself, more venerable; and their good example might teach the rest of the Israelites to be holy also. The reflection that we ought to make herefrom, which regard to the Christian church, is, that the pastors and ministers of religion, should be distinguished by a holy and exemplary life; and their families ought to be very regular.

7 They shall not take a wife, &c.] In order to preserve the dignity of the office, the priest is prohibited from marrying with such persons as would lessen him in the eyes of the public.

9 She profaneth her father, &c.] By disparaging the good example and education she received, she wounds her father's honour, as well as stains her own reputation.

10 Nor rend his clothes.] Notwithstanding this prohibition, we find that on some occasions it was customary with them to rend their clothes, in case of blasphemy; this prohibition, therefore, was doubtless restrained to the high priest's garments, and the times of mourning.

11 Nor defile himself for his father, &c.] The high-priest might not enter an house where a dead body lay, though it were even that of his father or mother.

12 Neither shall he go out of the sanctuary, &c.] He was by no means to neglect his administration, though news was brought him of the death of his nearest and dearest relative, such was the regard to be paid to God's service.

17 That hath any blemish, &c.] That is, defect or imperfection, whether natural or accidental.

CHAP. XXII.

¶ The priests in their uncleanness must abstain from the holy things. 10 Who of the priest's house may eat of them. 14 Of satisfaction to be made by him who eateth of them unwittingly. 17 The sacrifices must be without blemish. 26 The age of the sacrifice. 29 The law of eating the sacrifice of thanksgiving.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

¶ Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they separate themselves from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they profane not my holy name in those things which they hallow unto me: I am the LORD.

3 Say unto them, Whosoever he be of all your seed among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things, which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be cut off from my presence: I am the LORD.

4 What man soever of the seed of Aaron is a leper, or hath a running issue; he shall not eat of the holy things, until he be clean. And whoso toucheth any thing that is unclean by the dead, or a man whose seed goeth from him;

5 Or whosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath;

6 The soul which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he wash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down, he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of the holy things; because it is his food.

8 That which dieth of itself, or is torn with beasts, he shall not eat to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, lest they bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it: I the LORD do sanctify them.

10 ¶ There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

11 But if the priest buy any soul with his money, he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house: they shall eat of his meat.

12 If the priest's daughter also be married unto a stranger, she may not eat of an offering of the holy things.

13 But if the priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced, and have no child, and is returned unto her father's house, as in her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat: but there shall no stranger eat thereof.

14 ¶ And if a man eat of the holy thing unwittingly, then he shall put the fifth part thereof unto it, and shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing.

15 And they shall not profane the holy things of the children of Israel, which they offer unto the LORD;

16 Or suffer them to bear the iniquity of trespass, when they eat their holy things: for I the LORD do sanctify them.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXII.

2 That they separate themselves, &c.] In the Greek, Let them take heed of the holy things; that is, not to defile them; for they were not to presume to officiate in the sanctuary, being unclean, by reason of any ceremonial pollution.

3 Shall be cut off from my presence, &c.] That is, he shall for ever be deprived of the priesthood by the judge; or else shall be taken away by premature death, by the hand of God.

4 He shall not eat of the holy things until he be clean, &c.] He might eat of the tythes, but not of the wave-bread, or heave-shoulder.

10 There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing, &c.] The term "stranger," signifies any person, whether a gentile, proselyte, or a Jew, not being of the priest's family.

14 And shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing.] He was to pay the full value of the thing so eaten, and a fifth part more. This law relates to laymen, who, through ignorance or inadvertency, had appropriated to their own use the first fruits, or other things consecrated to God.

11 Stranger

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
18 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, Whatsoever be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his freewill offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt offering;

19 Ye shall offer at your own will a male without blemish, of the beeves, of the sheep, or of the goats.

20 But whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer: for it shall not be acceptable for you.

21 And whosoever offereth a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD to accomplish his vow, or a freewill offering in beeves or sheep, it shall be perfect to be accepted; there shall be no blemish therein.

22 Blind, or broken, or maimed, or having a wen, or scurvy, or scabbed, ye shall not offer these unto the LORD, nor make an offering by fire of them upon the altar unto the LORD.

23 Either a bullock or a lamb that hath any thing superfluous or lacking in his parts, that mayest thou offer for a freewill offering; but for a vow it shall not be accepted.

24 Ye shall not offer unto the LORD that which is bruised, or crushed, or broken, or cut; neither shall ye make any offering thereof in your land.

25 Neither from a stranger's hand shall ye offer the bread of your God of any of these; because their corruption is in them, and blemishes be in them: they shall not be accepted for you.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam; and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

28 And whether it be cow or ewe, ye shall not kill it and her young both in one day.

29 ¶ And when ye will offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the LORD, offer it at your own will.

30 On the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave none of it until the morrow: I am the LORD.

31 Therefore shall ye keep my commandments, and do them: I am the LORD.

32 Neither shall ye profane my holy name; but I will be hallowed among the children of Israel: I am the LORD which hallow you, 33 That brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXII.

From this chapter, we are taught to reverence the ordinances of God, who is greatly to be feared in the assembly of his saints; and that as the children of Israel were not to offer any thing that had a blemish on it, so it is our duty to present unto God our best services.

18 Strangers of Israel, &c.] That is, such as were not circumcised, but had renounced idolatry, and were denominated profelytes of the gates.

28 Cow or ewe, ye shall not kill it and her young both in one day.] The humanity and tenderness expressed in this precept, reflects no small honour upon the divine law-giver; for there is something cruel in the idea of butchering both parent and offspring at the same time, and to bring the dam to the altar, where it is still mourning the loss of its young, slain in its sight. The law here enjoined, is similar with that in Deut. xxii. 6. "If a bird is found sitting upon the young or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young."

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIII.

2 Concerning the feasts of the Lord, &c.] Under this general term, is comprehended the day of atonement, which was not a festival, but a fast, or a day of solemn humiliation; therefore the Hebrew word mogdale, should have been rendered "solemn assemblies, or seasons," which it properly signifies.

4 In their seasons.] God appointed the seasons for these solemnities, to be in March, May, and September, agreeable to our present computation, and not in the winter; because the shortness of the days, and the badness of the way, rendered travelling then very uncomfortable; and because in the height of the summer season, in those countries, they could but ill be spared from their employ, in gathering in the harvest and vintage.

10 When ye be come into the land—and shall reap the harvest]

1 The feasts of the Lord. 3 The sabbath. 4 The passover. 9 The sheaf of firstfruits. 15 The feast of Pentecost. 22 Gleanings to be left for the poor. 23 The feast of trumpets. 26 The day of atonement. 33 The feast of tabernacles.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, Concerning the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, even these are my feasts.

3 ¶ Six days shall work be done: but the seventh day is the sabbath of rest, an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the sabbath of the LORD in all your dwellings.

4 ¶ These are the feasts of the LORD, even holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their seasons.

5 In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the LORD's passover.

6 And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the LORD: seven days ye must eat unleavened bread.

7 In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

8 But ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD seven days: in the seventh day is an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a sheaf of the firstfruits of your harvest unto the priest:

11 And he shall wave the sheaf before the LORD, to be accepted for you: on the morrow after the sabbath the priest shall wave it.

12 And ye shall offer that day when ye wave the sheaf an he lamb without a blemish of the first year for a burnt offering unto the LORD.

13 And the meat offering thereof shall be two tenth deals of fine flour mingled with oil, an offering made by fire unto the LORD for a sweet savour: and the drink offering thereof shall be of wine, the fourth part of an hin.

14 And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, until the selfsame day that ye have brought an offering unto your God: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

15 ¶ And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven sabbaths shall be complete:

16 Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall

Or more properly, "are about to reap the harvest;" for the sheaf was to be brought before the rest of the harvest was cut.

The first fruits of your harvest unto the priest.] These first-fruits being presented to the priest, he waved them towards the four quarters of the world, in token of their being consecrated to the Lord of the universe, and by this all the sheaves of the field were made holy. As the sheaf was lifted up and waved, and the lamb was offered on that day, so Christ died, and offered himself up to God, for us, and for our salvation.

11 On the morrow after the sabbath, &c.] This ceremony was performed on the second day of the unleavened bread (and not the weekly sabbath) the first being termed "sabbath or rest," because it was a festival, in which they were to desist from all servile labour.

14 And ye shall eat neither bread, &c.] That is, ye shall eat nothing of this year's growth, till you have first made an offering to God.

15 From the morrow after the sabbath] See note on ver. 11.

Seven sabbaths, &c.] The word "sabbath," must here signify, A week, so that it should have been rendered, Seven weeks complete, from the sixteenth day of the second month, or the second of unleavened bread.

16 Unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath, shall ye number fifty days, and—offer a new meat offering, &c.] This first is called pentecost, or the feast of weeks, being observed fifty days, or seven weeks, after the passover. It is called likewise the feast of harvest, Exod. xxiii. 16.

Before CHRIST 1490. shall ye number fifty days; and ye shall offer a new meat offering unto the LORD.

17 Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baked with leaven; they are the firstfruits unto the LORD.

18 And ye shall offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams: they shall be for a burnt offering unto the LORD, with their meat offering, and their drink offerings, even an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

19 Then ye shall sacrifice one kid of the goats for a sin offering, and two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of peace offerings.

20 And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the firstfruits for a wave offering before the LORD, with the two lambs: they shall be holy to the LORD for the priest.

21 And ye shall proclaim on the selfsame day, that it may be an holy convocation unto you: ye shall do no servile work therein: it shall be a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

22 ¶ And when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not make clean riddance of the corners of thy field when thou reapest, neither shalt thou gather any gleanings of thy harvest: thou shalt leave them unto the poor, and to the stranger: I am the LORD your God.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In the seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation.

25 Ye shall do no servile work therein: but ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 Also on the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a day of atonement: it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls, and offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

28 And ye shall do no work in that same day: for it is a day of atonement, to make an atonement for you before the LORD your God.

29 For whatsoever soul it be that shall not be afflicted in that same day, he shall be cut off from among his people.

30 And whatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, the same soul will I destroy from among his people.

31 Ye shall do no manner of work: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

32 It shall be unto you a sabbath of rest, and ye shall afflict your souls: in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye celebrate your sabbath.

33 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles for seven days unto the LORD.

35 On the first day shall be an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

36 Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a solemn assembly; and ye shall do no servile work therein.

37 These are the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, and a meat offering, a sacrifice, and drink offerings, every thing upon his day:

38 Beside the sabbaths of the LORD, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your free-will offerings, which ye give unto the LORD.

39 Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: and on the first day shall be a sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a sabbath.

40 And ye shall take you on the first day the boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; and ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God seven days.

41 And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations: ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

42 Ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths:

43 That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

44 And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the feasts of the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXIII.

We here find, that God enjoined the Jews to celebrate every year a general fast; and that there should be made a solemn atonement for sin; therefore fasting and humiliation, are duties absolutely necessary; but since the atonement was repeated every year, it was a sign that sin was not then expiated, as it has been since, by the sacrifice of Christ. The feast of tabernacles, should remind us of the continual goodness of God: and we should particularly bless him, for redeeming us by his Son.

C H A P. XXIV.

1 The oil for the lamps. 5 The shewbread. 10 Shemoth's son blasphemeth; his sentence; and the law of blasphemy. 17 The law of murder; 18 of damage. 23 The blasphemer is stoned.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Command the children of Israel, that they bring unto thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamps to burn continually.

3 Without the vail of the testimony, in the tabernacle of the congregation, shall Aaron order it from the evening

17 They shall be baked with leaven, &c.] This is different from the established law relating to other meat-offerings of this kind; but it is to be considered, that part of the latter were burnt upon altars, whereas the former were only waved before the Lord, and given to the priest for his portion.

19 One kid of the goats for a sin offering, &c.] The offering for particular sins of the congregation was a bullock, but for the sins of the nation in general, a kid of the goats. The reason assigned by some for this difference, is the following: The more grievous the sin was, the viler was the sacrifice; there being no greater sin than idolatry, nor viler sacrifice than a she-goat; this was appointed for the expiation of that sin.

24 A memorial of blowing of trumpets, &c.] These words might be rendered more properly, A festival for commemorating and praising God, with the sound of the trumpets. They blew the trumpet every new moon; but in that of the seventh month, it was to be done with a more than ordinary solemnity, the trumpets sounding from sun-rise till sun-set.

34 The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles, &c.] This feast was instituted in memory of their having dwelt in tents in the wilderness for forty years, under the protection of the Almighty. The first day of this festival ushered in by a general procession, in which they carried branches of palm-trees in their hands, waving them about towards the four winds, and singing psalms and hymns suitable to the occasion, at the same time crying out, Hosannah; or save, we beseech thee: from this word, the last day of the feast, and the ceremony of carrying palm-branches round about the altar, was called, Hosannah rabbah, or "the day of the great Hosannah."

36 It is a solemn assembly, &c.] In the Hebrew, gnatsereth, "a restraint," or detention, was a term used for the last day of every great festival, because all work was prohibited, and the people were detained in the holy places.

39 On the eighth day shall be a sabbath, &c.] As the feast happened in the time of vintage, when the fruits of the earth were gathered, it is called in Exod. xxiii. 16. the feast of in-gatherings. This day was peculiarly appropriated to this end, as the seven days preceding were to the commemorating their dwelling in tents; because on the seven preceding days, the Jews did dwell in tents, but on this eighth day they returned to their houses.

40 Ye shall rejoice before the Lord, &c.] These seven days were spent in rejoicing, and returning thanks to God, who had brought them from the barren wilderness, to a fertile land.

evening unto the morning before the LORD continually: it shall be a statute for ever in your generations.

4 He shall order the lamps upon the pure candlestick before the LORD continually.

5 ¶ And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake twelve cakes thereof: two tenth deals shall be in one cake.

6 And thou shalt set them in two rows, six on a row, upon the pure table before the LORD.

7 And thou shalt put pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread for a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

8 Every sabbath he shall set it in order before the LORD continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant.

9 And it shall be Aaron's and his sons': and they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him of the offerings of the LORD made by fire by a perpetual statute.

10 ¶ And the son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel: and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp;

11 And the Israelitish woman's son blasphemed the name of the LORD, and cursed. And they brought him unto Moses: (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan:)

12 And they put him in ward, that the mind of the LORD might be shewed them.

13 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

14 Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him.

15 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death.

17 ¶ And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death.

18 ¶ And he that killeth a beast shall make it good; beast for beast.

19 And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as he hath done, so shall it be done to him;

20 Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

21 And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIV.

6 In two rows, &c.] They were placed one upon another, and set lengthwise over the breadth of the table. They were ten hands breadth long, five hands breadth broad, and seven fingers thick.

7 On the bread, &c.] The Hebrew may be rendered, "for the bread," that is offered unto God instead of the bread which was given unto the priest.

10 This son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together, &c.] The Jews tell us, that this person attempted to set up his tent among the Danites, in right of his mother, who belonged to their tribe; and that being opposed by the Israelites, and told, that as his father was an Egyptian, he had no right to do so, that he was thereupon so hurried away by rage, that he uttered blasphemies against God.

11 Blasphemed, &c.] It is imagined that his cause came before the judges, and that their determination was, he had no right to the privileges of a true Israelite, and that being aggrieved by the divine appointment, which made this distinction between the Israelites, and strangers, he audaciously reproached both the law and the law-maker, and set them both at defiance.

12 That the mind of the Lord might be shewed them.] This signifies, that Moses was to pronounce sentence, according as God should direct him.

13 Let all the congregation stone him.] Every person present cast his stone at the blasphemer, to signify that himself was wounded by the blow levelled by the impious person at the Almighty. The putting blasphemers to death has been looked upon as a moral law, as well among Christians as Jews, and therefore such were condemned by Justinian of old.

20 Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, &c.] Though Christians indeed

22 Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country: for I am the LORD your God. Before CHRIST 1490.

23 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and stone him with stones. And the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXIV.

The law about the oil for the lamps relates only to the external and ceremonial service of the Jews. The shew-bread, consisting of twelve loaves, which were always exposed in the sanctuary, was a solemn acknowledgment, made by all the Israelites, that they held all good things from God; which should teach Christians to be grateful for the blessings he bestows upon them. The law against blasphemers, and the example of him who was stoned, is very remarkable and awful, and should inspire us with extreme horror for blasphemy.

C H A P. XXV.

¶ The sabbath of the seventh year. 8 The jubile in the fiftieth year. 14 Oppression forbidden. 18 A blessing promised to obedience. 23 The redemption of land, 29 and of houses. 35 Compassion to be had of the poor; and usury restrained. 39 The usage of bondservants. 47 The redemption of servants.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in mount Sinai, saying, 1491.

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land which I give you, then shall the land keep a sabbath unto the LORD.

3 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof;

4 But in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the LORD: thou shalt neither sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard.

5 That which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

6 And the sabbath of the land shall be meat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee,

7 And for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land, shall all the increase thereof be meat.

8 ¶ And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

9 Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubile to live under a milder dispensation, and perhaps for that reason may think this to have been a very severe decree; yet the laws of other nations, as well as the Jewish, shew they did not think it unreasonable; for it obtained a place among the celebrated Roman laws of the twelve tribes.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXV.

2 The land keep a sabbath, &c.] The sanctification of the sabbath was the most antient of all divine institutions, calculated to preserve the knowledge and worship of God among men; Moses therefore not only revived the observance of the weekly sabbath, but likewise instituted a sabbatical year for the advancement of the honour due to it.

4 A sabbath of rest unto the land.] This year of rest was not appointed, that the tired land might acquire strength, which is the usual practice, but for an holy and religious rest, dedicated to God's service, and typical of the eternal rest in heaven.

¶ Thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years, &c.] Besides the sabbatical year, Moses instituted another, to be celebrated every fiftieth year; when slaves were released, all debts cancelled, possessions restored, &c. This law was a wise provision for fixing the Jews in the land of Canaan, and for preserving the distinction between tribes and families, by which that of the Messiah, when born, might certainly be known to be of the tribe of Judah, and lineage of David, as predicted by the prophets.

9 The trumpet of the jubile, &c.] In the Hebrew, jerughath, i. e. the trumpet of loud sound, because the trumpets were sounded loud at the beginning, in every quarter of the land, to signify that the whole year was to be celebrated with great joy, it being intended to remind them of their Egyptian bondage, and to prevent them

Before CHRIST 1491. to sound, on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

10 And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubile unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

11 A jubile shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

12 For it is the jubile; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

13 In the year of this jubile ye shall return every man unto his possession.

14 ¶ And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye shall not oppress one another:

15 According to the number of years after the jubile thou shalt buy of thy neighbour, and according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee:

16 According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it; for according to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee.

17 Ye shall not therefore oppress one another; but thou shalt fear thy God: for I am the LORD your God.

18 ¶ Wherefore ye shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

19 And the land shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

20 And if ye shall say, What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

21 Then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.

22 And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

23 ¶ The land shall not be sold for ever: for the land is mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with me.

24 And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant ■ redemption for the land.

25 If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

26 And if the man have none to redeem it, and himself be able to redeem it;

27 Then let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

28 But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it until the year of jubile: and in the jubile it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession.

29 ¶ And if a man sell a dwelling house in a walled city, then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold; within a full year may he redeem it.

30 And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house that is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubile.

31 But the houses of the villages which have no wall round about them shall be counted as the fields of the country: they may be redeemed, and they shall go out in the jubile.

32 Notwithstanding the cities of the Levites, and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time.

33 And if a man purchase of the Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, shall go out in the year of jubile: for the houses of the cities of the Levites are their possession among the children of Israel.

34 But the field of the suburbs of their cities may not be sold; for it is their perpetual possession.

35 ¶ And if thy brother be waxen poor, and fallen in decay with thee: then thou shalt relieve him: yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee.

36 Take thou no usury of him, or increase: but fear thy God; that thy brother may live with thee.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase.

38 I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Caanan, and to be your God.

39 ¶ And if thy brother that dwelleth by thee be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee; thou shalt not compell him to serve as a bondservant:

40 But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubile:

41 And then shall he depart from thee, both he and his children with him, and shall return unto his own family, and unto the possession of his fathers shall he return.

42 For they are my servants, which I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: they shall not be sold as bondmen.

43 Thou shalt not rule over him with rigour; but shalt fear thy God.

44 Both

from the like oppression of their own brethren. It is very remarkable, that the last year of our Saviour's life was ■ year of jubile, and the very last that ever was kept; which verifies the confession of the book of Zohar, wherein we are told, that "the divine glory should be freedom and redemption in a year of jubile."

15 According to the number of years, &c.] There was not the least injustice in this law, nor any reason to complain; since every purchaser of an estate was well apprised of the year of jubile; and in the sale of lands it was always considered, when they sold ■ higher or lower price, according as the jubile was nearer or more remote.

20 If ye shall say, what shall we eat, &c.] That they might not object against so wise and good ■ law, the Almighty graciously promised them, that their lands should bring forth so abundantly in the preceding year, as should be sufficient to supply all their wants.

23 The land is mine, &c.] In this expression God speaks to them in conformity to their idea of him as ■ local deity, who preferred the land of Judea to all other countries for his personal residence; a notion which was ■ established principle in the Gentile world.

29 If a man sell a dwelling house, &c.] Houses in the city, if not redeemed within ■ year, were never more to return to their first owner, not even at the jubile; but country houses, as being a part of their hereditary estates, were subject to the same law as their estates. This provision seems to have been made for the encouragement of strangers and proselytes to come and settle among them, who, though they could not purchase land to them and their heirs, yet might purchase houses within walled cities, as being most convenient for those who were supposed to live by trade.

34 But the field of the suburbs, &c.] The Hebrews inform us, that round the cities of the Levites, a thousand cubits (about ■ quarter of a mile) was measured for their suburbs; without which, all round, were measured two thousand more, to feed their cattle in, and for vineyards: this portion being undivided, and lying in common, no particular person had any power to bargain for it.

36 May live with thee.] That is, may live happily with thee.

39 Thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bondservant.] That is, he should not be treated as a slave whom they bought of other nations, or took in their wars, over whom they had an absolute dominion, and might sell them and their children at pleasure.

42 They are my servants, &c.] The meanest ■ well ■ the most opulent Israelite was the peculiar servant and worshipper of the true God, and therefore as serving one common master, they were secured from the slavery and oppression of their brethren.

43 Thou shalt not rule over him with rigour, &c.] The practice against which this precept is levelled, is but too frequent among men; and it is a melancholy consideration, that Christians should violate it, by their inhuman treatment of their negro-slaves in the American colonies; and notwithstanding the Jewish rabbins assert that a man may use his slave as he pleases, provided he does not maim him; yet this is contrary to religion and humanity.

COMMENTARY

44 Both thy bondmen, and thy bondmaids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you : of them shall ye buy bondmen and bondmaids.

45 Moreover of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land : and they shall be your possession.

46 And ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for possession; they shall be your bondmen for ever : but over your brethren the children of Israel, ye shall not rule one over another with rigour.

47 ¶ And if a sojourner or stranger wax rich by thee, and thy brother that dwelleth by him wax poor, and sell himself unto the stranger or sojourner by thee, or to the flock of the stranger's family :

48 After that he is sold he may be redeemed again ; one of his brethren may redeem him :

49 Either his uncle, or his uncle's son, may redeem him, or any that is nigh of kin unto him of his family may redeem him ; or if he be able, he may redeem himself.

50 And he shall reckon with him that bought him from the year that he was sold to him unto the year of jubile : and the price of his sale shall be according unto the number of years, according to the time of an hired servant shall it be with him.

51 If there be yet many years behind, according unto them he shall give again the price of his redemption out of the money that he was bought for.

52 And if there remain but few years unto the year of jubile, then he shall count with him, and according unto his years shall he give him again the price of his redemption.

53 And as a yearly hired servant shall he be with him : and the other shall not rule with rigour over him in thy fight.

54 And if he be not redeemed in these years, then he shall go out in the year of jubile, both he, and his children with him.

55 For unto me the children of Israel are servants ; they are my servants whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt : I am the LORD your God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXV.

We may draw from hence two instructions ; 1st, That it is a crying sin before God, to lend money to necessitous persons upon hard and unjust terms ; and that the poor and strangers are to be treated with equity and humanity. The second is, That God would not have the Jews subject those of their own nation to slavery, nor use too much rigour to strange slaves ; which should teach Christian masters not to be too rigorous towards their own servants ; and to remember that their servants, and they themselves too, have a master in heaven ; and that with him there is no respect of persons, Eph. vi. 9.

C H A P. XXVI.

1 Against idolatry. 3 A blessing is promised to them that keep the commandments. 14 A curse is denounced against those that break them. 40 God promiseth to remember those that repent.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVI.

1 A standing image] These seem to have been a kind of rude stones which the heathens erected to their gods, and to which they paid divine worship.

Any image of stone, &c.] In the original the words signify a picture stone, or stones painted with pictures, like those of the Egyptian hieroglyphics. The Septuagint render it, A stone consecrated to the gods in pictures, or the tutelar deities of the country.

4 I will give you rain in due season, &c.] In Canaan and Syria, it was unusual to have rain but in two seasons ; in the spring before harvest, and in the end of autumn at seed time ; called by the prophet, " the former and the latter rain," Jer. v. 24. When either of these failed, the year was quite barren ; hence these countries were subject to famine. This promise therefore of rain in due season was a most gracious one, and an invaluable blessing.

5 Your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, &c.] God promised that their fruits should be produced in such abundance, that they should scarce have time enough to receive and dispose of the blessing before another was showered upon them : before they had reaped their corn, their vintage would be ready ; and before the vintage

YE shall make you no idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a standing image, neither shall ye set up any image of stone in your land, to bow down unto it : for I am the LORD your God.

2 Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary : I am the LORD.

3 ¶ If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them ;

4 Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit.

5 And your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time : and ye shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land safely.

6 And I will give peace in the land, and ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid : and I will rid evil beasts out of the land, neither shall the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

¶ And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight : and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.

9 For I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you.

10 And ye shall eat old store, and bring forth the old because of the new.

11 And I will set my tabernacle among you : and my soul shall not abhor you.

12 And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people.

13 I am the LORD your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, that ye should not be their bondmen ; and I have broken the bands of your yoke, and made you go upright.

14 ¶ But if ye will not hearken unto me, and will not do all these commandments ;

15 And if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant :

16 I also will do this unto you ; I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart : and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it.

17 And I will set my face against you, and ye shall be slain before your enemies : they that hate you shall reign over you ; and ye shall flee when none pursueth you.

18 And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you seven times more for your sins.

19 And I will break the pride of your power ; and I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass :

20 And your strength shall be spent in vain : for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits.

21 And was finished, the sowing season would commence. — The plowman overtook the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that sowed seed." Amos ix. 13.

10 Bring forth the old because of the new.] Ye shall have so large a stock of the old corn remaining at harvest, that ye shall be obliged to remove the former, in order to make room for the latter.

13 Made you go upright.] A metaphor taken from a person lightened of his load ; it signifies, liberty, ease, and pleasure.

16 Terror, consumption, and the burning ague, &c.] By the Hebrew word, rendered " terror," is meant the disease called epilepsy, or falling sickness. " Consumption" is, in the interlineary translations, rendered the phthisick ; but in the Vulgate, Septuagint, and Chaldee, want or famine. The Hebrew word sachepeth is variously rendered. Some imagine it to be a hectic fever.

19 I will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass.] A figurative expression, conveying an awful idea of the anger of God ; the heavens were represented as impenetrable to rain, as iron ; and the earth as having its vegetation stores locked up beneath a surface of brass ; from whence a dreadful famine must be the consequence.

Before
CHRIST

21 And if ye walk contrary unto me, and will not hearken unto me; I will bring seven times more plagues upon you according to your sins.

22 I will also send wild beasts among you, which shall rob you of your children, and destroy your cattle, and make you few in number; and your high ways shall be desolate.

23 And if ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me;

24 Then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins.

25 And I will bring a sword upon you, that shall avenge the quarrel of my covenant: and when ye are gathered together within your cities, I will send the pestilence among you; and ye shall be delivered into the hand of the enemy.

26 And when I have broken the staff of your bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall deliver you your bread again by weight: and ye shall eat, and not be satisfied.

27 And if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me;

28 Then I will walk contrary unto you also in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.

29 And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat.

30 And I will destroy your high places, and cut down your images, and cast your carcases upon the carcases of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you.

31 And I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation, and I will not smell the favour of your sweet odours.

32 And I will bring the land into desolation: and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it.

33 And I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste.

34 Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths, as long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.

35 As long as it lieth desolate it shall rest; because it did not rest in your sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it.

36 And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth.

37 And they shall fall one upon another, as it were before a sword, when none pursueth; and ye shall have no power to stand before your enemies.

38 And ye shall perish among the heathen, and the land of your enemies shall eat you up.

39 And they that are left of you shall pine away in their iniquity in your enemies' lands; and also in the iniquities of their fathers shall they pine away with them.

40 ¶ If they shall confess their iniquity, and the iniquity of their fathers, with their trespasss which they trespassed against me, and that also they have walked contrary unto me;

41 And that I also have walked contrary unto them, and have brought them into the land of their enemies; if then their uncircumcised hearts be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity:

42 Then will I remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will remember the land.

43 The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity: because, even because they despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the LORD their God.

45 But I will for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the LORD.

46 These are the statutes and judgments and laws, which the LORD made between him and the children of Israel in Mount Sinai by the hand of Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXVI.

We ought to listen very attentively to the curses contained in this chapter; and which, we see clearly, were all to happen to the people of Israel, by reason of their sins. God visited them upon divers occasions, by famine, death, war, and other scourges; and at last delivered them up to their enemies, and drove them out of the land of Canaan, when they were carried away captive into Assyria and Babylon, and at last destroyed by the Romans. But we also see here the promises of the re-establishment of the Jews, which partly happened when they returned from their captivity; and which will be entirely accomplished in the latter times, when they shall be converted. These are noble and strong evidences of the divinity of the scripture; and this example of the Jews should make us dread the curses denounced in the gospel against impenitent sinners; especially since those curses are much more terrible than those we have now read.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 He that maketh a singular vow must be the Lord's.

3 The estimation of the person; 9 of a beast given by vow; 14 of a house; 16 of a field, and the redemption thereof. 26 No man may sanctify the Lord's firstlings. 28 No devoted thing may be redeemed. 30 The tithe is holy, and may not be changed.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When a man shall make a singular vow, the persons shall be for the LORD by thy estimation.

3 ¶ And

22 I will also send wild beasts, &c.] A metaphorical expression, signifying wicked and tyrannical rulers, who prey upon the lives and fortunes of their people.

26 Ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, &c.] The scarcity threatened was to be so great, that one oven should be sufficient to bake the bread for ten families.

28 Seven times for your sins.] That is, I will punish you with new and more grievous punishments: fulfilled in their captivity in the days of Manasseh, Jehoiakin, and Zedekiah. These latter calamities, both for extent and duration, were at least seven times greater than their sufferings by the Philistines, and neighbouring nations.

29 Ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, &c.] The forest calamity that can befall a people. It is described in Deut. xxviii. 53, &c. and happened to this rebellious people in the siege of Samaria, 2 Kings vi. 29. in the siege of Jerusalem, before the Babylonish captivity, Lam. iv. 10. and in the destruction of it by the Romans; the horrors of which were very great.

30 I will destroy your high places.] The places where you worship your idols.

Your images, &c.] This may be translated more properly, Your temples erected for the worship of the sun.

31 I will not smell the favour, &c.] I will neither hear your prayers, nor accept your sacrifices.

34 Then shall the land rest, and enjoy her sabbaths.] Which your covetousness would not suffer to rest in the sabbatical years. This expression intimates, that the very ground would be re-created, when rid of its sinful inhabitants, for whom it was wearied and fatigued in bringing forth food.

36 The sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them, &c.] I will fill them with such timidity, that they shall be afraid of their own shadow, and tremble at the shaking of a leaf.

38 The land of your enemies shall eat you up.] You shall be swallowed up or lost in the body of another nation, and shall never return more to the promised land. This sentence was executed in the captivity of the ten tribes, who did never return, nor is it known what became of them.

40—45 If they shall confess—I will for their sakes remember the covenant, &c.] This is one of the passages of scripture from whence the Jews derive their hopes of a temporal deliverance; but since the mosaic dispensation is at an end, they can lay no claim to such promises, unless they previously embrace Christianity; unless they confess their iniquity in crucifying the Lord of glory, the true Messiah; which when they do, God will for their sakes, that is, their ancestors who believed in Christ that was to come, remember the land.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVII.

¶ When a man shall make a singular vow.] That is, promise in a solemn manner to separate any common thing to a sacred use. This chapter concerning vows is added as an appendix, closing up the book of statutes.

3 ¶ And thy estimation shall be of the male from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be fifty shekels of silver, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

4 And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be thirty shekels.

5 And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

6 And if it be from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male five shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver.

7 And if it be from sixty years old and above; if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

8 But if he be poorer than thy estimation, then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

9 ¶ And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD shall be holy.

10 He shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

11 And if it be any unclean beast, of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest:

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: as thou valuest it, who art the priest, so shall it be.

13 But if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

14 ¶ And when a man shall sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

15 And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

16 ¶ And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: an homer of barley seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubile, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

18 But if he sanctify his field after the jubile, then the priest shall reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubile, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

19 And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more. Before CHRIST 1491.

21 But the field, when it goeth out in the jubile, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field devoted; the possession thereof shall be the priest's.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD, a field which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of his possession;

23 Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubile: and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

24 In the year of the jubile the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

25 And all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary; twenty gerahs shall be the shekel.

26 ¶ Only the firstling of the beasts, which should be the LORD's firstling, no man shall sanctify it; whether it be ox, or sheep: it is the LORD's.

27 And if it be of an unclean beast, then he shall redeem it according to thine estimation, and shall add a fifth part of it thereto: or if it be not redeemed, then it shall be sold according to thy estimation.

28 ¶ Notwithstanding no devoted thing, that a man shall devote unto the LORD of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD, 29 None devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.

30 ¶ And all the tythe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD.

31 And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof.

32 And concerning the title of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD.

33 He shall not search whether it be good or bad, neither shall he change it: and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.

34 These are the commandments which the LORD commanded Moses for the children of Israel in mount Sinai.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXVII.

This chapter affords us chiefly the following instruction: That vows ought to be religiously observed; and that when a thing has been devoted to God, and to holy uses, it cannot be applied to any other, without the guilt of sacrilege. We learn hence likewise, that we should not be guilty of any fraud in that which we set apart for divine service, or other religious uses; but act sincerely, and give with pleasure, even the best and most precious of our substance.

The

The persons shall be for the Lord by thy estimation.] If a man consecrated himself or his child to the service of the tabernacle, such as sweeping the floor, carrying out ashes, running on errands, or the like, the persons so consecrated shall be for the Lord: that is, God will accept the good will; but seeing there was an whole tribe devoted to this service, those who were vowed, were not wanted, but were to be redeemed; and the redemption-money was appropriated to defray the expence of repairing the tabernacle, and other uses.

10 He shall not alter, nor change, &c.] "Alter" signifies the substituting any other kind of beast or thing in its stead; but "change," the giving any other beast of the same species, instead of it.

16 An homer of barley seed shall be valued at fifty shekels, &c.] As much land as an homer of barley will sow, shall be rated at fifty shekels, which was equivalent to about five pounds seven shillings of our money. The homer, Exod. xvi. 16, 36, was the tenth part of an ephah; but the homer, or measure spoken of in this place, ten ephahs, that is about ten bushels.

16 He shall add the fifth part, &c.] If the owner was inclined to redeem himself, he might not purchase his redemption so cheap as another, but was to add a fifth part of the price; by this God would lead men into serious consideration before they vowed.

29 None devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.] This passage has been the occasion of much dispute among some commentators; but the true meaning seems to be this: every thing which is devoted of men shall not be redeemed, but shall surely die, i. e. he shall die in that devoted state. Our translation indeed has it, "he shall surely be put to death;" which is not to be understood of being sacrificed, or put to a violent death; but that he is to continue till death in a devoted state. See 1 Sam. i. 11.

32 Whatsoever passeth under the rod, &c.] The Jews pretend this alludes to the tything rod, coloured with oker, with which the person placed himself at the door of the fold, numbered the cattle as they came out, and marked every tenth with his rod. The manner of decimating cattle was this: they shut up all the lambs, kids, or calves, in a stable, having but one door, so narrow that two could not pass abreast, and then brought their dams to the door, that the young ones hearing their voice, might strive to get out by passing under the rod; as fast as they come out, those who stood by marked every tenth with red lead, and whether a male or female, with or without blemish, the owner said, This shall be consecrated to pay the tythes.

The Fourth BOOK of MOSES,

N U M B E R S.

THE ARGUMENT.

This book receives its title from the numbering the Israelites in the second year after they came out of Egypt. It is here worth observing, that though the names of the five books of Moses were borrowed from the Greek, yet this is the only book whose title is rendered into English, each of the other books retaining the Greek words, viz. Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, and Deuteronomy. This book recites several remarkable events of the historical kind, besides several additional laws, civil and religious, comprehending, in the whole, a space of about thirty-eight years and nine months.

CHAP. I.

1 God commandeth Moses to number the people. 5 The princes of the tribes. 17 The numbering of the people. 20, 22, &c. The number of each tribe. 44 The sum total. 47 The Levites are exempted for the service of the tabernacle.

Before
CHRIST
1490.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

3 From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies.

4 And with you there shall be a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 ¶ And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; Shemsiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; Naphon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elisama the son of Ammihud: of Manasse; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

14 Of Gad; Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 These were the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel.

17 ¶ And Moses and Aaron took these men which are expressed by their names:

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.

19 As the LORD commanded Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai.

20 ¶ And the children of Reuben, Israel's eldest son, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of their names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

21 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Reuben, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

22 ¶ Of the children of Simeon, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, those that were numbered of them, according to the number of the names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

23 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Simeon, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

24 ¶ Of the children of Gad, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. I.

1 The Lord spake unto Moses.] It was now about thirteen months since the Israelites had left Egypt, twelve of which they had resided at Mount Sinai, in which place they received all the preceding laws; but before they left this station, Moses and Aaron received an order from God to make a general muster, and take an exact poll of all the Hebrew men, from twenty years of age and upwards, the Levites excepted.

On the first day of the second month, &c.] This general muster of the people, seems to have been ordered for several reasons; for by it the accomplishment of the promise God made to Abraham, of multiplying his seed, was evidently seen to be fulfilled; by their increase from seventy-five persons, to upwards of six hundred thousand. By this means also, God's promises for ascertaining the genealogy of the Messiah, by a careful distinction of each particular tribe, family, and household. The word "all," is not to be understood absolutely, for the women were excepted; all the males under twenty years of age, the Levites, and those who were disabled through age or infirmity. The custom of numbering all that were capable of bearing arms and obliging them to go forth to battle, was common among other nations, as well as the Jews; and hence it is, we read of such mighty armies being sent into the field, appears scarcely credible in these days.

5 Of the tribe of Reuben, &c.] It is to be observed, that the tribes are not placed in the order of their birth, but of their mothers who bare them, the children of Leah first; then of Rachael; and lastly, the children of the two handmaids.

14 The sons of Deuel.] He is called Reuel. chap. ii. 14.

16 These were the renowned of the congregation, princes, &c.] That is, they were persons of rank and distinction in their respective tribes; this is evident, from their noble offerings at the dedication of the altar, chap. vii. 2. It is very probable they were judges and officers.

23 Of the tribe of Simeon, &c.] As he had six children at his descent into Egypt, and Reuben but four, the greater increase of this tribe may be accounted for upon natural reasons. This observation will also hold good of the increase of the tribe of Gad, when compared with this, though the exertion of an extraordinary providence, must be called in to account for the vast increase of the tribe of Judah, Issachar, and Dan.

5 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Gad, were forty and five thousand six hundred and fifty.

26 ¶ Of the children of Judah, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of their names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

27 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Judah, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

28 ¶ Of the children of Issachar, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

29 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Issachar, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

30 ¶ Of the children of Zebulun, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

31 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

32 ¶ Of the children of Joseph, namely, of the children of Ephraim, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

33 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

34 ¶ Of the children of Manasseh, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

35 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Manasseh, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

36 ¶ Of the children of Benjamin, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of their names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

37 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Benjamin, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

38 ¶ Of the children of Dan, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

39 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Dan, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

40 ¶ Of the children of Asher, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

41 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Asher, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

42 ¶ Of the children of Naphtali, throughout their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war;

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

44 ¶ These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men: each one was for the house of his fathers:

45 So were all those that were numbered of the children of Israel, by the house of their fathers, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war in Israel;

46 Even all they that were numbered were six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

47 ¶ But the Levites after the tribe of their fathers were not numbered among them.

48 For the LORD had spoken unto Moses, saying,

49 Only thou shalt not number the tribe of Levi, neither take the sum of them among the children of Israel:

50 But thou shalt appoint the Levites over the tabernacle of testimony, and over all the vessels thereof, and over all things that belong to it: they shall bear the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof; and they shall minister unto it, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

51 And when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down: and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

52 And the children of Israel shall pitch their tents, every man by his own camp, and every man by his own standard, throughout their hosts.

53 But the Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle of testimony, that there be no wrath upon the congregation of the children of Israel, and the Levites shall keep the charge of the tabernacle of testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. I.

This vast increase of the children of Israel, is an evidence of God's faithfulness in fulfilling his promises, for in about two hundred years, they were increased from seventy, to upwards of six hundred thousand. God's goodness is also manifest in supporting the Israelites in the desert; for when he pleases to bestow blessings upon his creatures, he can even change, or set aside the order of nature.

CHAP. II.

1 The order of the tribes in their tents and in their marches.

3 Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, on the east; the first division. 10 Reuben, Simeon, Gad, on the south; the second division. 17 The place of the tabernacle with the Levites in the midst. 18 Ephraim, Manasseh, Benjamin, on the west; the third division. 25 On the north, Dan, Asher, Naphtali; these bring up the rear. 32 Recapitulation.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house: far off about the tabernacle of the congregation shall they pitch.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. II.

2 Every man, &c.] The whole body of the people were divided into four large battalions, and the standard seems to have been in the common banner, under which every three tribes were united; besides which, it is supposed that each tribe had a separate ensign, in the nature of our colours, each of which was of the same colour with the 46 All they that were numbered, &c.] The sum total of this muster is six hundred and three thousand, five hundred and fifty men: the very same with that mentioned Exod. xxxviii. 26. It may be that a few odd numbers are omitted in both, since it cannot well be supposed that not a man of them had died since their last numbering, which was seven months before.

47 The Levites were not numbered, &c.] Because they were separated for the service of the tabernacle.

53 The Levites shall pitch round about the tabernacle, &c.] They were intended to be a constant guard, to prevent any of the people

33 But the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; as the Lord commanded Moses.

34 And the children of Israel did according to all that the Lord commanded Moses: so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. II.

The beautiful and regular order in which the Israelites march, may serve as a lesson to Christians, that their walk be uniformly upright and sincere. The tabernacle being in the midst of the camp, intimates to us, that the love of Christ should possess our inmost soul. By the constant attendance of the children of Israel on the tabernacle, we are directed to a diligent attendance on the duties of religion, and the worship of God.

the stone on Aaron's pectoral, on which the name of the tribe whereupon it belonged, was written. In this manner they pitched their tents about the tabernacle, agreeable to the following plan of their encampments.

17 So shall they set forward every man in his place by their standards.] The encampment of the Israelites was as follows: In the centre was the tabernacle, in the front of which, Moses and Aaron, with the priests, were encamped; and behind the tabernacle, on the right and left, the Levites of Kohath, Merari, and Gershon; in the front, eastward, were encamped the tribes of Judah, Issachar and Zebulun, 186,400 warriors; on the right southward, lay the tribes of Reuben, Simeon, and Gad, 151,450 warriors; to the left, northward, the tribes of Dan, Asher, and Naphtali, 157,600 warriors; and in the rear, westward, the tribes of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin, 108,100 warriors. The Jews tell us, that the camp of Israel made a square of twelve miles, or three miles on a side.

34 The children of Israel did according to all that the Lord commanded Moses.] Formed themselves into camps, so many tribes to a camp, and over each tribe or host appointed a captain, and erected a standard to each camp, by which they pitched as directed, which is next particularly observed.

And so they set forward, &c.] Whenever the Israelites were to decamp, which was always when the pillar of the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, the trumpet sounded, and upon the first alarm, the standard of Judah being raised, the three tribes belonging to it set forward, whereupon the tabernacle was immediately taken down, and the Gershonites and the Merarites attended the waggon, with the boards and staves of it. These being on their march, a second alarm was sounded, upon which the standard of Reuben's camp advanced, with the three tribes under it; after them followed the Kohathites, bearing the sanctuary, which, being more sacred, was not so cumbersome as the pillars and boards of the tabernacle, was not put into a waggon, but carried upon their shoulders; next follows the standard of Ephraim's camp, with his three tribes; and last of all the three tribes under the standard of Dan, brought up the rear.

COMMENTAR

C H A P. III.

1 The sons of Aaron, 5 The Levites are given to the priests for the service of the tabernacle, 11 instead of the firstborn. 14 The Levites are numbered by their families. 21 The families, number, and charge of the Gershonites, 27 of the Kohathites, 33 of the Merarites. 38 The place and charge of Moses and Aaron. 40 The firstborn are freed by the Levites. 44 The overplus are redeemed.

THESE also are the generations of Aaron and Moses in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in mount Sinai.

2 And these are the names of the sons of Aaron; Nadab the firstborn, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, the priests which were anointed, whom he consecrated to minister in the priest's office.

4 And Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Bring the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 And thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they shall wait on their priest's office: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the firstborn that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine;

13 Because all the firstborn are mine; for on the day that I smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the firstborn in Israel, both man and beast: mine shall they be: I am the LORD.

14 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying,

15 Number the children of Levi after the house of their fathers, by their families: every male from month old and upward shalt thou number them.

16 And Moses numbered them according to the word of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 And these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; Libni, and Shimei.

19 And the sons of Kohath by their families; Amram, and Izehar, Hebron, and Uzziel.

20 And the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli, and Mushi. These are the families of the Levites according to the house of their fathers.

21 ¶ Of Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliafaph the son of Lael.

25 And the charge of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation shall be the tabernacle, and the tent, the covering thereof, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And the hangings of the court, and the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and the cords of it for all the service thereof.

27 ¶ And of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izeharites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

31 And their charge shall be the ark, and the table, and the candlestick, and the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary wherewith they minister, and the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

33 ¶ Of Merari was the family of the Mahlites, and the

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. III.

These also are the generations, &c.] The proper signification of the word, "generations" is, Posterity and descendants; but Aaron's posterity being only mentioned, it is most natural to understand it in this place, as implying passages in their history, or a relation of what happened to them. In this sense the word is used, Gen. ii. 4.

4 And Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office, &c.] The reason why Aaron's sons were settled in the priesthood, while those of Moses were only Levites, was, probably, because the sons of Moses had an Egyptian to their mother, and were not descended from any of the tribes of Israel. Besides this, Aaron was the eldest brother, and the priesthood was generally considered as an appendage to the primogeniture, or the title of eldest born.

6 Present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.] That is, that they may receive their orders of Aaron, and assist him and the rest of the priests who were the immediate messengers of God. In the wilderness the Levites had a peculiar charge not only to guard the tabernacle, by keeping watch about it day and night, but likewise to take it down, to carry it in their removals, and set it up again when they rested: when settled in Canaan, they had less to do of this kind, though still the charge of the tabernacle lay upon them, and they ministered to the priests as before. The Levites killed the sacrifices; the priests only sprinkled the blood, and burned the fat: the Levites prepared the incense, the priests burned it. In David's time, some of the Levites were appointed singers, and players upon instruments, in the morning and evening service; others were porters at the several gates of the tabernacle, and afterwards of the temple, as guards of the sacred treasury, and of such things as were dedicated to God; and they were distributed into different classes, for the more regular discharge of their functions.

9 They are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.] That is, they are separated from the body of Israel, to serve under the priests, in the sacred ministry of the tabernacle; and as they attended on the public service, so they had a public maintenance allowed them.

12 I have taken the Levites—instead of all the firstborn, &c.] Every first-born was consecrated to the service of the Lord, in memory of their preservation in Egypt; but God was now pleased to release the Israelites from this obligation, by substituting the tribe of Levi to be the perpetual ministers of religion, instead of the first born males. The Levites obtained this favour for their religious zeal against the idolaters, Exod. xxxii. 28.

5 Every male from a month old, &c.] The other tribes were numbered from twenty years old and upwards, to know how many were fit to bear arms; but the Levites were numbered only to know how many they were in all, that so they might be exchanged for an equal number of the first-born; therefore it was requested all should be numbered, without distinction, even from month old, the age at which the first-born was appointed to be redeemed.

23 The families of the Gershonites shall pitch behind the tabernacle westward.] The camp of the priests and Levites was ordered to be of a square form, like that of the other Israelites. The sons of Gershon lay on the west side; the sons of Kohath, on the south; the sons of Merari, on the north; and the tents of Moses and Aaron were pitched before the entrance of the tabernacle on the east.

Before the family of the Mushites: these are the families of CHRIST Merari.

1490.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari was Zuriel the son of Abihail: these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle northward.

36 And under the custody and charge of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, 37 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords.

38 ¶ But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, keeping the charge of the sanctuary for the charge of the children of Israel; and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

39 All that were numbered of the Levities, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males from a month old and upward, were twenty and two thousand.

40 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Number all the firstborn of the males of the children of Israel from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names.

41 And thou shalt take the Levites for me (I am the LORD) instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel.

42 And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the firstborn among the children of Israel.

43 And all the firstborn males by the number of names, from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Take the Levites instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

46 And for those that are to be redeemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the firstborn the children of Israel, which are more than the Levites;

47 Thou shalt even take five shekels apiece by the poll, after the shekel of the sanctuary shalt thou take them: (the shekel in twenty gerahs:)

48 And thou shalt give the money, wherewith the odd number of them is to be redeemed, unto Aaron and to his sons.

49 And Moses took the redemption money of them that were over and above them that were redeemed by the Levites:

50 Of the firstborn of the children of Israel took he the money; a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

51 And Moses gave the money of them that were redeemed unto Aaron and to his sons, according to the word of the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. III.

The great care God took to divide the Levites, according to the proper duties assigned them, is worthy to be remembered, and afford a lesson to the church in future ages, to make a suitable provision for those who minister in holy things; and that the concerns of religion are, of all others, the most important.

CHAP. IV.

1 The age and time of service of the Kohathites. 4 They are appointed to bear the sanctuary and its vessels, after that the priests have taken down and covered them. 16 The charge of Eleazar. 17 The care of the priests required in covering the holy things. 21 The age, time of service, and burden, of the Gershonites: 29 and of the Merarites. 34 The number of the Kohathites, 38 of the Gershonites, 42 and of the Merarites.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Take the sum of the sons of Kohath from among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers.

3 From thirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, all that enter into the host, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 ¶ This shall be the service of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation, about the most holy things:

5 And when the camp setteth forward, Aaron shall come, and his sons, and they shall take down the covering vail, and cover the ark of testimony with it:

6 And shall put thereon the covering of badgers' skins, and shall spread over it a cloth wholly of blue, and shall put in the staves thereof.

7 And upon the table of shewbread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to cover withal: and the continual bread shall be thereon:

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof.

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the candlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuffdishes, and all the oil vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it:

10 And they shall put it and all the vessels thereof within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar.

11 And

38 The stranger, &c.] By "stranger," in this place, is to be understood any one, except Aaron and his sons; by this they were forbid to invade the priest's office, and the priests were charged to be the store-keepers of God's house, and not to suffer any to enter in, who were forbidden by the law. The Jews inform us, that in after-times, there was hung over the door of the temple a golden sword, (perhaps alluding to the flaming sword, at the entrance of the garden of Eden) on which was engraven, "The stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death."

39 Were twenty and two thousand.] The particular sums mentioned, ver. 22, 28, and 34, amount, in all, to twenty-two thousand three hundred; but the three hundred are here omitted, because it is supposed that number was the first-born of the Levites themselves; who, as such, did already belong to God; and for that reason could not be set down instead of the first-born of the people, as the other Levites were. Mr. Pennington supposes there is an error in the sum of the Gershonites, where the letter that denotes "two" hundred, might easily be mistaken for that which denotes "five" hundred.

43 And all the firstborn males—were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.] It is to be remembered, that those only were numbered, who had been born since the slaughter of the Egyptians, which was not much above a year ago, it being only from that time that the first-born were to be consecrated to God; else it might seem strange, that from more than six hundred thousand full-grown men, there should be no more first-born sons.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

1 From thirty years old.] Those who were numbered out of the other tribes to go forth to war, were from twenty years of age and upwards; but of the Levites, for the service of God, only from thirty to fifty. God requires the best of our strength, and the prime of our years.

To do the work in the tabernacle, &c.] It should have been translated "about the tabernacle," they not being permitted to enter into it. The work of the Levites was, the carrying the ark, and other sacred things on their shoulders, which was very laborious; but then such persons were selected out of the afore-mentioned families of the Levites, as were most strong and able for the purpose.

6 The covering of badgers' skins.] The first covering of the ark was with the vail; then there were two others, one of leather, and the other of blue stuff. The use of these coverings was not only to defend the sacred things from the weather, but likewise to conceal them from the curious eyes of the multitude. Some imagine that the Hebrew words which we translate "badgers' skins," are improperly rendered, the badger being esteemed unclean by the law of Moses.

Put in the staves thereof.] The Hebrew word veshamu, signifies "to put," not to put in; as the staves were never taken out, the impropriety of our translation will appear the more evidently. They were only to order them so, that they might fall into the two notches which were made in the staves, to prevent the ark from sliding.

11 And upon the golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof :

12 And they shall take all the instruments of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, and put them in a cloth of blue, and cover them with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put them on a bar :

13 And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon :

14 And they shall put upon it all the vessels thereof, wherewith they minister about it, even the censers, the fleshhooks, and the shovels, and the basons, all the vessels of the altar : and they shall spread upon it a covering of badgers' skins, and put to the staves of it.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of covering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward ; after that, the sons of Kohath shall come to bear it : but they shall not touch any holy thing, lest they die. These things are the burden of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation.

16 ¶ And to the office of Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest pertaineth the oil for the light, and the sweet incense, and the daily meat offering, and the anointing oil, and the oversight of all the tabernacle, and of all that therein is, in the sanctuary, and in the vessels thereof.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

18 Cut ye not off the tribe of the families of the Kohathites from among the Levites :

19 But thus do unto them, that they may live, and not die, when they approach unto the most holy things: Aaron and his sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service and to his burden :

20 But they shall not go in to see when the holy things are covered, lest they die.

21 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

22 Take also the sum of the sons of Gershon, throughout the houses of their fathers, by their families ;

23 From thirty years old and upward until fifty years old shalt thou number them ; all that enter in to perform the service, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

24 This is the service of the families of the Gershonites, to serve, and for burdens :

25 And they shall bear the curtains of the tabernacle, and the tabernacle of the congregation, his covering, and the covering of the badgers' skins that is above upon it, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation,

26 And the hangings of the court, and the hanging for the door of the gate of the court, which is by the tabernacle and by the altar round about, and their cords, and all the instruments of their service, and all that is made for them : so shall they serve.

27 At the appointment of Aaron and his sons shall be all the service of the sons of the Gershonites, in all their burdens and in all their service : and ye shall appoint unto them in charge all their burdens.

28 This is the service of the families of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation : and their charge shall be under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

14 Spread upon it a covering, &c.] Previous to a journey, the great altar was made clean, and packed up with all its vessels and appurtenances, in two of the fore-mentioned coverings, being carried by its own staves.

18 Cut ye not off, &c.] That is, do not occasion the death of so many persons, by neglecting to instruct them with what awe and reverence they are to treat such sacred things.

26 So shall they serve.] By bearing them, and carrying them.

28 Their charge shall be under the hand, &c.] That is, under the direction, &c.

32 By name ye shall reckon, &c.] The priests were to give them an inventory, expressing every pin by name, and the place where it belonged to, that they might not be lost, or wanted when the tabernacle was to be set up.

29 ¶ As for the sons of Merari, thou shalt number them after their families, by the house of their fathers ;

30 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old shalt thou number them, every one that entereth into the service, to do the work of the tabernacle of the congregation.

31 And this is the charge of their burden according to all their service in the tabernacle of the congregation ; the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof,

32 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords, with all their instruments, and with all their service : and by name ye shall reckon the instruments of the charge of their burden.

33 This is the service of the families of the sons of Merari, according to all their service, in the tabernacle of the congregation ; under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

34 ¶ And Moses and Aaron and the chief of the congregation numbered the sons of the Kohathites after their families, and after the house of their fathers,

35 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation :

36 And those that were numbered of them by their families were two thousand seven hundred and fifty.

37 These were they that were numbered of the families of the Kohathites, all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, which Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

38 ¶ And those that were numbered of the sons of Gershon, throughout their families, and by the house of their fathers,

39 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation,

40 Even those that were numbered of them, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers, were two thousand and six hundred and thirty.

41 These are they that were numbered of the families of the sons of Gershon, of all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, whom Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the LORD.

42 ¶ And those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers,

43 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation,

44 Even those that were numbered of them after their families, were three thousand and two hundred.

45 These be those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

46 All those that were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron and the chief of Israel numbered, after their families, and after the house of their fathers,

47 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that came to do the service of the ministry,

Before CHRIST 1490.

34 And Moses—numbered, &c.] The number of those who were able to serve the Lord, may be viewed thus :

	Able	Unfit	In all
Kohathites,	2,750	5,850	8,600
Gershonites,	2,630	4,879	7,500
Merarites,	3,200	3,000	6,200
	8,580	13,720	22,300

It is remarkable that the Merarites, though upon the whole, fewest in number, produced the largest number of effective men, which was a singular providence ; the heaviest burden, such as carrying the boards of the sanctuary, the pillars, and the sockets, &c. lying upon them.

ministry, and the service of the burden in the tabernacle of the congregation, 48 Even those that were numbered of them, were eight thousand and five hundred and fourscore.

49 According to the commandment of the LORD, they were numbered by the hand of Moses, every one according to his service, and according to his burden : thus were they numbered of him, as the LORD commanded Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. IV.

By the particular distinction which God made between the Levites, and those of other tribes, we are taught that those who are his ambassadors, commissioned by him to offer salvation to guilty sinners, should be treated with peculiar respect : we also learn from hence, the great importance of the work of the ministry, which should not be rashly entered upon, without suitable qualification ; but should be engaged in with great diffidence, and prayer to God for ability. The impression which the consideration of this important office made upon the mind of the pious Mr. Herbert was so deep, that it is said, in his life, he continued incessant in prayer all the night before he was ordained, without allowing himself a moment for sleep.

C H A P. XXVI.

1 The unclean to be removed out of the camp. 5 Restitution to be made in cases of trespass. 9 All offerings and hallowed things belong to the priest. 11 The trial of jealousy.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Command the children of Israel, that they put out of the camp every leper, and every one that hath an issue, and whosoever is defiled by the dead :

3 Both male and female shall ye put out, without the camp shall ye put them ; that they defile not their camps, in the midst whereof I dwell.

4 And the children of Israel did so, and put them out without the camp : as the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Speak unto the children of Israel, When a man or woman shall commit any sin that men commit, to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty :

7 Then they shall confess their sin which they have done : and he shall recompense his trespass with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth part thereof, and give it unto him against whom he hath trespassed.

8 But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, even to the priest ; beside the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.

9 ¶ And every offering of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. V.

2 That they put out of the camp every leper, &c. It is probable the camp of each tribe had a vacant space left, which was reckoned without the camp, and that they lodged the unclean there by themselves ; since to banish them quite beyond the bounds of the camp, at a great distance from their friends and relations, seems too severe. These legal pollutions were a figure of the pollutions of sin ; and the removing them out of the camp represented the exclusion of impure and impenitent sinners out of the kingdom of heaven.

6 That person be guilty. Or rather, be sensible of his guilt.

7 Then they shall confess, &c. Or, if they shall confess. Instead of " and he shall recompense," it should be rendered, Then he shall recompense.

13 No witness against her, &c. That is, no witness of her having committed the sin ; for if her crime could be proved upon evidence, the woman was not to be tried after the manner here prescribed, but was to be put to death.

14 And he be jealous of his wife, &c. It was necessary that there should appear some just cause for suspicion, before the husband could oblige his wife to submit to the trial of the bitter water. The rule prescribed was, If the husband had said unto his wife, be not thou in secret with such a man ; and notwithstanding the admonition, it should be afterwards proved that she was in secret with that man, he might then compel her to drink the bitter water.

17 Put it into the water. Or upon the water ; for the Jews say, he put the dust upon the top of the water, that it might be seen upon the surface ; and as dust was an emblem of sorrow and affliction, and this was the dust of the tabernacle, it taught her to fear judgment from the Lord.

10 And every man's hallowed things shall be his : whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be his.

11 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him,

13 And a man lie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and there be no witness against her, neither she be taken with the manner ;

14 And the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled : or if the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be not defiled :

15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring her offering for her, the tenth part of an ephah of barley meal ; he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon ; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, bringing iniquity to remembrance.

16 And the priest shall bring her near, and set her before the LORD :

17 And the priest shall take holy water in an earthen vessel ; and of the dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water :

18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and uncover the woman's head, and put the offering of memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy offering : and the priest shall have in his hand the bitter water that causeth the curse :

19 And the priest shall charge her by an oath and say unto the woman, If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness with another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse :

20 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband :

21 Then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing, and the priest shall say unto the woman, The LORD make thee a curse and an oath among thy people, when the LORD doth make thy thigh to rot, and thy belly to swell ;

22 And this water that causeth the curse shall go into thy bowels, to make thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot : and the woman shall say, Amen, amen.

23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book, and he shall blot them out with the bitter water.

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse : and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

25 Then

18 Uncover the woman's head By this the Jews understood the shaving the woman's head, cutting off her curls, or at least taking off her head-dress. They add, that they tore her cloaths down to her breast, and tied them with a packthread ; others say, that her cloaths were exchanged for a black suit, in token of mourning, and in this manner she was exposed to public view.

Bitter water, &c. An ancient writer fancies it was so named on account of its being mixed with wormwood ; but Nachman asserts, that nothing was mixed with it but dust, yet that it nevertheless tasted bitter. It is, however, not improbable that this is only a figurative expression, alluding to the terrible effects it had upon the guilty.

19 The priest shall charge her by an oath, &c. That is, he shall adjure her, in the name of God, to declare the truth, assuring her, if she was conscious of her innocence, she had nothing to fear ; but if she was guilty, she must expect to suffer every thing threatened in the law.

21 The Lord make thee a curse, &c. The Lord make thee so dreadful a monument of his vengeance, that it may become a common imprecation to say, If I swear falsely, may God punish me as he did such a woman !

23 He shall blot them out with the bitter water. Or, as it might have been better rendered, He shall blot them out into the bitter water ; for he was to scrape them into it, or else wash them with it, till they were quite obliterated, that the woman might, as it were, drink the words of the execration.

24 He shall cause the woman to drink, &c. That is, if she said, I am pure, they then proceeded to trial ; but in case she refused to make confession of her guilt, and to drink the bitter water ; they compelled her to do it : if she said, I am defiled, the priest then flung down the water, and cast her offering among the ashes ; and she was not put to death, but was divorced, and lost her dowry.

25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy offering out of the woman's hand, and shall wave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar :

26 And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward shall cause the woman to drink the water.

27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that, if she be defiled, and have done trespass against her husband, that the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot : and the woman shall be a curse among her people.

28 And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean ; then she shall be free, and shall conceive seed.

29 This is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another instead of her husband, and is defiled ;

30 Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law.

31 Then shall the man be guiltless from iniquity, and this woman shall bear her iniquity.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. V.

From this chapter we learn, that exact and complete restitution should be made for wrongs done to our neighbour, and if the person wronged cannot be found, what is restored should be devoted and given to God. The law concerning the waters of jealousy, sets forth the heinous nature of the sin of adultery ; which though it be not now punished in the same manner as among the Jews, yet God will, in the great day of account, inflict a more heavy punishment upon impenitent sinners who have been guilty of it.

C H A P. VI.

1 The law of the Nazarite in the days of his separation, 13 and after the completion of those days. 22 The form of blessing the people.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When either man or woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to separate themselves unto the LORD :

3 He shall separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine tree, from the kernels even to the husk.

27 The water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, &c.] The Jews inform us, that if she was guilty, the consequences were immediately seen in her countenance ; for she grew pale, and her eyes seemed ready to start out of her head ; and lest the temple should be polluted by her death, she was immediately carried out, and died instantly, with all the ignominious circumstances related in the curse.

29 This is the law of jealousies, &c.] That is, the methods to be observed in discovering the crime of adultery ; but this ceremony was never made use of after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, and for these reasons : first, because adulteries became so frequent, that the performing the ceremonies on these occasions would have ingrossed the whole time of the priests ; and secondly, because they deemed it unpardonable to erase the name of God so often in the waters of bitterness : when the husband, therefore, had any just ground of suspecting his wife's fidelity, and could produce witnesses to depose that they had seen her privately with the suspected person, contrary to the charge of her husband, she was immediately divorced, and deprived of her dowry. It is observable, that the Jews were not the only people who had recourse to such portentous and extraordinary methods for discovering the truth, in case of suspected guilt. The heathens had in like manner their waters of conviction. The inhabitants of the gold coast gave a solemn potion called bitter water, by way of trial, upon any light suspicion of injury, and especially of adultery. Among our Saxon ancestors, the manner of trial by fire-ordeal, and others of the same kind, had a great affinity to this of the Jews, it being expected that God would work a miracle to clear the innocent, or convict the guilty.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VI.

When either man or woman shall separate themselves.] A woman might make the vow of a Nazarite, as well as a man ; but then she must be at her own disposal, and not under the power of a parent or husband, by whose authority the vow might be annulled.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no razor come upon his head : until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall come at no dead body.

7 He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die : because the consecration of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD.

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration ; then he shall shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year for a trespass offering : but the days that were before shall be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 ¶ And this is the law of the Nazarite, when the days of his separation are fulfilled : he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation :

14 And he shall offer his offering unto the LORD, one he lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt offering, and one ewe lamb of the first year without blemish for a sin offering, and one ram without blemish for peace offerings,

15 And a basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread anointed with oil, and their meat offering, and their drink offerings.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin offering, and his burnt offering :

17 And he shall offer the ram for a sacrifice of peace offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread : the priest shall offer also his meat offering, and his drink offering.

18 And the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall take the hair of the head of his separation,

A vow of a Nazarite, &c.] The word "Nazarite" signifies Separated ; because such as came under this vow separated themselves from others by a peculiar abstinence, lived apart from company, and consequently from the gaieties and diversions of the world. There were two sorts of these vows, the one perpetual, or for life ; the other for a certain time only ; the latter of which is here mentioned.

4 From the kernels even to the husk.] That is, no liquor made from any part of the grape.

5 There shall no razor come upon his head, &c.] He was to let the locks of his hair and beard grow, to denote his austerity, renunciation of the pleasures of the world, and betaking himself to a severer way of life. And such persons not only let their hair grow, but also wore an hairy garment, as St. John did, Matt. iii. 4. and Elijah before him, 2 Kings i. 8.

7 The consecration of his God is upon his head.] The word which we render "consecration," signifies also a crown. A celebrated French writer therefore reads it, The crown of his God is upon his head. So the wise man tells us, that "the hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness," Prov. xvi. 31.

9 He hath defiled the head of his consecration, &c.] As the whole person was defiled, consequently the hair of his head ; which therefore was unfit to be offered to God, and burnt to his honour ; whence the polluted hair was to be shaved clean off, that new might grow in its stead.

11 He sinned by the dead, &c.] That is, he hath contracted a legal uncleanness, which, tho' it was involuntary, was a breach of the ceremonial law, and was to be purged after this manner.

12 The days that were before shall be lost, &c.] That is, shall not be reckoned ; for if he had vowed to be a Nazarite for a whole year, and had happened to touch a dead carcase in the twelfth month, all the preceding eleven months were accounted nothing, but he was to renew his vow for another year.

ration, and put it in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace offerings.

19 And the priest shall take the sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the hair of his separation is shaven :

20 And the priest shall wave them for a wave offering before the LORD : this is holy for the priest, with the wave breast and heave shoulder : and after that the Nazarite may drink wine.

21 This is the law of the Nazarite who hath vowed, and of his offering unto the LORD for his separation, beside that that his hand shall get : according to the vow which he vowed, so he must do after the law of his separation.

22 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them,

24 The LORD bless thee, and keep thee :

25 The LORD make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee :

26 The LORD lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.

27 And they shall put my name upon the children of Israel ; and I will bless them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VI.

Vows ought to be strictly kept ; and Christians are more especially called upon to devote themselves to God by a life of sobriety, temperance, purity of manners, and an exemplary conduct. The blessing which the priest pronounced over the people of Israel is an excellent pattern of prayer, teaching us, that the favour and blessing of God is the fountain of all our happiness ; that we ought incessantly to implore that blessing, as well for ourselves as others ; and that the ministers of the Lord especially ought to pour out their constant prayers for the people over whom they are set.

1 The offering of the princes at the dedication of the tabernacle, 4 which is disposed of among the Levites. 10, 12, &c. The offerings of the princes severally at the dedication of the altar. 89 God speaketh to Moses from the mercy seat.

AND it came to pass on the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle, and had anointed it, and sanctified it, and all the instruments thereof, both the altar and all the vessels thereof, and had anointed them, and sanctified them ;

25 The Lord make his face shine upon thee, &c.] A metaphor taken from the sun, whose kindly influences cheer and enliven the face of nature : in like manner does divine favour shine forth upon the soul, comforting and cherishing it.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

1 On the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle, &c.] That is, in the first day after the things relating to the tabernacle, the priests, Levites, &c. were finished ; the camp formed, and the tribes ranged under their several standards.

10 Princes offered for dedicating of the altar, &c.] As there was a great number of the sacrifices offered, it is inferred that the wilderness could not be entirely desert, but must have had pastures in many places ; since the Israelites had still so many cattle, as to be able to supply the offerings here mentioned, as well as to celebrate the passover, which required a very great number both of kids and lambs. That we find mention made of the flocks of the Amalekites, and of those of Nabal, in the wilderness of Paran, 1 Sam. xv. 9.

11 They shall offer—each prince on his day, &c.] It is not easy to determine absolutely when the offerings began ; though it may be reasonably computed thus ; the tabernacle was erected on the first day of the first month of the second year after the Israelites came out of Egypt, Exod. xl. 17. In the consecration of that and the altar, &c. were consumed seven days, chap. xxix. 37. The consecration of the priests began on the eighth day, which lasted seven days longer, Lev. viii. 33. The passover and the feasts of unleavened bread were kept on the fourteenth day, and lasted till the twenty-second, Numb. ix. 5. The remainder of the month we may suppose to have been spent in delivering the laws mentioned in Leviticus. Upon the first day of the second month began the numbering of the people, Numb. i. which may be supposed to have lasted three days : the Levites were numbered on the fourth, Numb. iii. 4. The next day we may imagine they were offered to God, and given to the priests. On the sixth day their consecration followed, chap. viii. 7. Their several charges were delivered on the seventh, chap. iv. After which we may suppose the princes began to offer on the eighth day of the second month, which lasted twelve days, that is to say, till the nineteenth inclusive, and on the twentieth of the second month they removed to the wilderness of Paran.

4 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

5 Take it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation : and thou shalt give them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service.

6 And Moses took the waggons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.

7 Two waggons and four oxen he gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service :

8 And four waggons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari, according unto their service, under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

9 But unto the sons of Kohath he gave none : because the service of the sanctuary belonging unto them was that they should bear upon their shoulders.

10 ¶ And the princes offered for dedicating of the altar in the day that it was anointed, even the princes offered their offering before the altar.

11 And the LORD said unto Moses, they shall offer their offering, each prince on his day, for the dedicating of the altar.

12 ¶ And he that offered his offering the first day was Nahshon the son of Amminadab, of the tribe of Judah :

13 And his offering was one silver charger, the weight thereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary ; both of them were full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering :

14 One spoon of ten shekels of gold full of incense :

15 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering :

16 One kid of the goats for a sin offering :

17 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year : this was the offering of Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

18 ¶ On the second day Nethaneel the son of Zuar, prince of Issachar, did offer :

19 He offered for his offering one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary ; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering :

20 One spoon of gold of ten shekels, full of incense :

21 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering :

22 One kid of the goats for a sin offering :

23 And for a sacrifice of peace offerings, two oxen, five

13 One silver charger] All the vessels of the sanctuary were of gold ; this charger therefore, or broad dish, seems to have been designed for the altar of burnt offerings in the court of the tabernacle : its use was probably to receive the flesh, which was offered at the altar, or the fine flour for meat offerings.

An hundred and thirty shekels, &c.] Or, about sixty-five ounces.

14 One spoon, &c.] The Hebrew word signifies any concave or hollow vessel ; its use therefore might be to take up the incense, in order to throw it on the coals in the censer. In the solemn expiation, indeed, the high-priest was to take up the incense in his hand, and throw it on the fire, Lev. xvi. 12. But it might be ordered otherwise on special occasions.

19 He offered for his offering one silver charger, &c.] It may not be improper to observe in this place, that the reason for these offerings of the princes, or heads of the several tribes, being all of the same number and value, was probably in order to prevent a vain boasting and emulation among them, as being men of equal rank and authority.

five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

24 ¶ On the third day Eliab the son of Helon, prince of the children of Zebulun, did offer:

25 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary: both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

42 ¶ On the sixth day Eliasaph the son of Deuel, prince of the children of Gad, offered:

43 His offering was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, a silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

Before CHRIST 1490.

54 ¶ On the eighth day offered Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur, prince of the children of Manasseh:

60 ¶ On the ninth day Abidan the son of Gideoni, prince of the children of Benjamin, offered:

61 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

63 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

64 One kid of the goats for a sin offering:

66 ¶ On the tenth day Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai, prince of the children of Dan, offered:

67 His offering was one silver charger, the weight whereof was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

68 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

69 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

72 ¶ On the eleventh day Pagiel the son of Ocran, prince of the children of Asher, offered:

54, 55 On the eighth day offered Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur, prince of the children of Manasseh: His offering was, &c.] If any should object against such a number of repetitions, they ought to remember that such are suitable to the simplicity of the primitive times, for which reason it is we meet with so many in Homer, who is thought to have lived near the times of Moses.

61 Seventy shekels, &c.] About thirty-five ounces.

Before CHRIST 1490. five rams, five he goats, five lambs of the first year; this was the offering of Ahira the son of Enan.

84 This was the dedication of the altar, in the day when it was anointed, by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold;

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary.

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.

87 All the oxen for the burnt offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat offering: and the kids of the goats for sin offering twelve.

88 And all the oxen for the sacrifice of the peace offerings were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty. This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

89 ¶ And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with him, then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he spake unto him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VII.

When we reflect on the cheerfulness with which the people contributed towards finishing the tabernacle, we may conclude that their repentance for their idolatry was sincere, which they evidenced by a pious work; in like manner should we bestow of our temporal things for the support of the gospel, and be always ready to distribute, willing to communicate; and also with Moses, draw near with humble boldness to the mercy seat of our Redeemer, who shed his blood upon the cross for our sins.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The lighting of the lamps. 5 The consecration of the Levites. 23 Their age and time of service.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou lightest the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light over against the candlestick.

3 And Aaron did so; he lighted the lamps thereof over against the candlestick, as the LORD commanded Moses.

4 And this work of the candlestick was of beaten gold, unto the shaft thereof, unto the flowers thereof, was beaten work: according unto the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Take the Levites from among the children of Israel, and cleanse them.

85 All the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, &c.] That is, about one hundred pounds troy.

89 Heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat, &c.] Moses here informs us in what manner God communicated his will to him; not by any impression on his mind, in a vision, or by the representation of things to him in a dream; but by a clear and distinct voice, which he heard of one speaking to him from between the cherubim, as he stood in the outer court of the sanctuary; but at the same time saw no image or similitude. Hence the most holy place, containing the ark and the mercy seat, from whence this divine voice proceeded, was called dabir, or "the oracle." See 1 Kings vi. 19.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VIII.

2 Shall give light over against the candlestick.] This passage might be better rendered, Shall shine from before the face of the candlestick; i. e. shall give light to every part of the room; for as the sanctuary had no windows, consequently it had no light but what proceeded from the lamps placed on the candlestick.

3 He lighted the lamps thereof.] They used to light the middlemost lamp from the fire on the altar, and then all the others were lighted from that lamp.

Or over against the candlestick, &c.] Or rather, he lighted the lamps placed on all the branches of the candlestick. Maimonides asserts, that the six lamps which were fastened on the branches which pro-

7 And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: sprinkle water of purifying upon them, and let them shave all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean.

8 Then let them take a young bullock with his meat-offering, even fine flour mingled with oil, and another young bullock shalt thou take for a sin offering.

9 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the congregation: and thou shalt gather the whole assembly of the children of Israel together:

10 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the LORD: and the children of Israel shall put their hands upon the Levites:

11 And Aaron shall offer the Levites before the LORD for an offering of the children of Israel, that they may execute the service of the LORD.

12 And the Levites shall lay their hands upon the heads of the bullocks: and thou shalt offer the one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering, unto the LORD, to make an atonement for the Levites.

13 And thou shalt set the Levites before Aaron, and before his sons, and offer them for an offering unto the LORD.

14 Thus shalt thou separate the Levites from among the children of Israel: and the Levites shall be mine.

15 And after that shall the Levites go in to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation: and thou shalt cleanse them, and offer them for an offering.

16 For they are wholly given unto me from among the children of Israel; instead of such as open every womb, even instead of the firstborn of all the children of Israel, have I taken them unto me.

17 For all the firstborn of the children of Israel are mine, both man and beast: on the day that I smote every firstborn in the land of Egypt, I sanctified them for myself.

18 And I have taken the Levites for all the firstborn of the children of Israel.

19 And I have given the Levites as a gift to Aaron and to his sons from among the children of Israel, to do the service of the children of Israel in the tabernacle of the congregation, and to make an atonement for the children of Israel: that there be no plague among the children of Israel, when the children of Israel come nigh unto the sanctuary.

20 And Moses, and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites according unto all that the LORD commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did the children of Israel unto them.

21 And the Levites were purified, and they washed their clothes, and Aaron offered them as an offering before the LORD: and Aaron made an atonement for them to cleanse them.

22 And after that went the Levites in to do their service ceeded from the candlestick, had all of them their faces and their wicks turned towards the middlemost lamp, which was on the body of the candlestick.

7 Sprinkle water of purifying upon them, &c.] That is, water of purification from sin; which was prepared with the ashes of a red heifer, that had been offered up for a burnt offering, chap. xix. 17.

10 The children of Israel shall put their hands upon the Levites.] The Israelites, by this action, expressed their separating the Levites from the service of the sanctuary, instead of their first-born; and their transferring to the former the charge which would otherwise have belonged to the latter.

11 Aaron shall offer, &c.] In the Hebrew, Aaron shall wave the Levites for a wave offering. Le Clerc supposes that they were only presented before God at the altar, or went round about it, at Aaron's command; for the word often signifies to offer in general.

14 The Levites shall be mine.] They were to attend wholly on the service of the tabernacle, as God's peculiar servants and ministers; and for that reason they were exempted from all taxes and military services.

15 Thou shalt cleanse them, &c.] It ought to be rendered, After thou shalt cleanse them.

19 That there be no plague, &c.] In order to prevent others from incurring the judgments due to irreverence and profanation, by presumptuously intermeddling in sacred things, I have given the Levites to Aaron, and his sons, that they may officiate in the house of God, and prevent others from approaching.

service in the tabernacle of the congregation before Aaron, and before his sons: as the LORD had commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did they unto them.

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 This is it that belongeth unto the Levites: from twenty and five years old and upward they shall go in to wait upon the service of the tabernacle of the congregation:

25 And from the age of fifty years they shall cease waiting upon the service thereof; and shall serve no more:

26 But shall minister with their brethren in the tabernacle of the congregation, to keep the charge, and shall do no service. Thus shalt thou do unto the Levites touching their charge.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VIII.

The purification insisted upon in this chapter, denotes the necessity there is that our consciences be sprinkled with the blood of Christ; and as the Levites were to be touched by the people, and to present sacrifices for themselves, we may learn that it is our duty to draw nigh to God, through the merits of Jesus Christ, who is now our high priest in heaven; and also, that both ministers and people, are in duty bound to crave mercy of God, as no man liveth and sinneth not.

C H A P. IX.

1 The passover is commanded again. 6 The case of some that were unclean. 9 A second passover is allowed for such, and for the absent at the first. 15 The cloud guideth the removals and encampments of the Israelites.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Let the children of Israel also keep the passover at his appointed season.

3 In the fourteenth day of this month, at even, ye shall keep it in his appointed season: according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies thereof, shall ye keep it.

4 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover.

5 And they kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month at even in the wilderness of Sinai: according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And there were certain men, who were defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day: and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day:

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and I will hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

26 And shall do no service, &c.] That is, they shall not do any servile work, but shall only instruct others how such work is to be done.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IX.

1 The Lord spake, &c.] This should be translated, "The Lord had spoken," because the subject of this narrative was transacted a month before, though, for particular reasons, not recorded till now.

5 They kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month at even, in the wilderness, &c.] This was the second time of their keeping this feast, after their coming out of Egypt; and the last time of their keeping it, till they entered into the land of Canaan.

7 Wherefore are we kept back, &c.] The law of the passover, required every Israelite to eat of it; but they, who had contracted any ceremonial pollution, were, by the subsequent laws, forbidden to eat of the holy things. Here, then, was a very difficult dilemma, for if they neglected to come to this sacred ordinance, they were guilty of contempt of it; and if they came polluted, they were guilty of profanation of it. So that it was necessary, and a proof of their wisdom, to lay their complaint before Moses.

6 I will hear what the Lord will command, &c.] I will go into the sanctuary, and consult the oracle of God.

9 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you or of your posterity shall be unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

11 The fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 They shall leave none of it unto the morning, nor break any bone of it: according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from among his people: because he brought not the offering of the LORD in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin.

14 And if a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the LORD; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: ye shall have one ordinance both for the stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

15 ¶ And on the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent of the testimony: and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire, until the morning.

16 So it was alway: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents.

18 At the commandment of the LORD the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the LORD they pitched: as long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

19 And when the cloud tarried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the LORD, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the LORD they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the LORD they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.

23 At the commandment of the LORD they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the LORD they journeyed;

10 If any man—be unclean by reason of a dead body, &c.] This is likewise to be understood of all other cases of legal uncleanness.

13 Shall be cut off, &c.] That is, shall be separated from the community, either by death, banishment, or excommunication, though it is generally thought to imply a cutting off by death.

14 If a stranger, &c.] Here is a clause added in favour of strangers. This kind of admission of those who were not native Israelites, (though it was necessary they should be circumcised) to eat of the passover, was an intimation of the favour of God designed to bestow upon the Gentiles at the coming of Christ; namely, that he would make Jew and Gentile one people.

16 The cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.] That which appeared like a cloud by day, appeared as a fire all night; a cloud only, would not have been visible by night; nor would a fire have been so conspicuous and discernible in the day time.

21 Whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.] However impatient forever the people might be to arrive at the promised land, where they expected the enjoyment of so many temporal blessings; and how tedious and troublesome forever their journeys proved, we never find them (though otherwise refractory enough) murmuring when this signal was made them, whether it happened by night or day. As long and as far as the cloud moved, so long and so far they marched; and where ever it rested, there they pitched their tents.

Before CHRIST 1490. journeyed: they kept the charge of the LORD, at the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. IX.

Since the Jews celebrated the passover ■ God had appointed, so we should inviolably attend upon all the divine ordinances, and the duties that relate to the service of God. Secondly, As those who were outwardly defiled, were not allowed to keep the passover till a month after, when they were purified; much less ■■ obstinate and impertinent sinners to present themselves before God, or partake of the Lord's supper, till purified by sincere repentance. Thirdly, It was a glorious privilege of the Jews, to be led by the cloud in the desert, which betokened the presence of God; but how much more happy are we, to be guided by the light of the gospel, which shews us the way wherein to walk, during our stay here below, preparatory to our arrival in heaven, our true country, where all imperfection will be done away!

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Make thee two trumpets of silver; of a whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for the calling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps.

3 And when they shall blow with them, all the assembly shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And if they blow but with one trumpet, then the princes, which are heads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.

5 When ye blow an alarm, then the camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.

6 When ye blow an alarm the second time, then the camps that lie on the south side shall take their journey: they shall blow an alarm for their journeys.

7 But when the congregation is to be gathered together, ye shall blow, but ye shall not sound an alarm.

8 And the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets; and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations.

9 And if ye go to war in your land against the enemy that oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets; and ye shall be remembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

By the hand of Moses.] Who was their law-giver and director, and who, at every march and encampment, accompanied the divine signal with a solemn prayer, saying, when the ark set forward, "Rise up, Lord, let thine enemies be scattered;" and when it rested, "Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel," &c.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

2 Make thee two trumpets, &c.] These were for the two priests, Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron; afterwards, as the priests were increased, so were the number of trumpets. In Solomon's time, we read of "an hundred and twenty priests, sounding with trumpets, 2 Chron. v. 12.

3 When they shall blow with them, &c.] When the priests shall blow ■■ equal and uniform sound.

5 When ye blow an alarm, &c.] That is, with ■ quick, broken, and quivering sound.

7 When the congregation is to be gathered together, ye shall blow, but—not sound an alarm.] An alarm was directed to be sounded in the former case, because a broken, sharp sound, was best adapted to stir up and encourage the people to rise, and march forward in battle against the Canaanites; but when the congregation ■■ to be assembled, then it was ordered they should blow ■ continued, equal sound, as being most suitable to the quiet assembling of the people.

8 The sons of Aaron shall blow with the trumpets, &c.] The priests alone were appointed to this office, that the people might pay the greater regard to the soundings, as if they heard God calling upon them by his ministers to attend his summons.

11 ■ And it came to pass on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

12 And the children of Israel took their journeys out of the wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran.

13 And they first took their journey according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

14 ■ In the first place went the standard of the camp of the children of Judah according to their armies: and over his host was Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

15 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Issachar was Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

16 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon.

17 And the tabernacle was taken down: and the sons of Gershon and the sons of Merari set forward, bearing the tabernacle.

18 ■ And the standard of the camp of Reuben set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elizur the son of Shedeur.

19 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

20 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Gad was Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

21 And the Kohathites set forward, bearing the sanctuary: and the other did set up the tabernacle against they came.

22 ■ And the standard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward according to their armies: and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud.

23 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manassah was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

24 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideon.

25 ■ And the standard of the camp of the children of Dan set forward, which was the rereward of all the camps throughout their hosts: and over his host was Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Asher was Pagiel the son of Ocran.

27 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Naphtali was Ahira the son of Enan.

28 Thus fast was proclaimed by the sound of trumpet, at the same time that ■■ alarm of war was sounded. ■ Blow ye the trumpet in Zion," says the prophet, "sanctify ■ fast, call ■ solemn assembly." Jer. ii. 15.

Ye shall be remembered, &c.] As the trumpets were sounded by the command of God, it was therefore ■ kind of call upon him for assistance. Accordingly we find, that when Judah saw themselves beset with dangers "before and behind, they cried unto the Lord, and the priests sounded with the trumpets," &c. 2 Chron. xiii. 14.

10 That they may be to you for a memorial, &c.] Exciting you to worship God with earnestness and fervour.

12 The wilderness of Paran.] The wilderness of Paran is thought to signify, in a strict sense, that part of the deserts of Arabia, only between Hazaroth on the west, and Mount Seir on the east; but in a larger sense, it seems to denote all the desert lying between the wilderness of Shur westward, towards Egypt and Mount Seir, or the land of Edom, eastward; and between the land of Canaan northward; and the Red Sea southward; in which sense it comprehended Kibroth-hattaavah, and Hazeroth; and in this sense it seems to be meant by Moses, in this place, as also in Deut. i. 19.

17 The tabernacle was taken down, &c.] The taking down and removing the tabernacle, denotes the instability of that legal, figurative worship, the unsettled state of the church, and all its members in this world; as also the removal of the church from one place to another, from Jews to Gentiles.

21 The other did set up the tabernacle against they came.] By "the other," are meant the Gershonites and Merarites, who before had set forward with the waggon, bearing the boards, pillars, &c. of the sanctuary, between the standard of Judah and Reuben.

25 The rereward of all the camps, &c.] This passage should have been translated, "Dan set forward, gathering to it all the camps;" that is, all the rest of the people who did not belong to any particular camp, but to all the camps in general.

28 Thus were the journeyings of the children of Israel according to their armies, when they set forward.
 29 ¶ And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father in law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel.
 30 And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred.
 31 And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us instead of eyes.
 32 And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.
 33 ¶ And they departed from the mount of the LORD three days' journey: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD went before them in the three days' journey, to search out a resting place for them.
 34 And the cloud of the LORD was upon them by day, when they went out of the camp.
 35 And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, Rise up, LORD, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee.
 36 And when it rested, he said, Return, O LORD, unto the many thousands of Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. X.

The instructions we are to draw from this chapter, are, from the excellent rules laid down by Moses for calling the people together to divine worship, to observe decency and good order in all sacred matters, as becomes those who profess the holy religion of Jesus: and, secondly, That as the ark of the covenant was carried before the people when they marched, so it is our duty, through the whole of our christian course or pilgrimage through this world, to follow Christ, who is to us what the ark was to the children of Israel.

CHAP. XI.

- 1 The burning at Taberah is quenched by Moses' prayer.
 4 The people lust for flesh, and loathe manna. 10 Moses complaineth of his charge. 16 God promiseth to divide the burden of it among seventy elders, and to give the people flesh for a month. 21 Moses' faith is staggered.
 24 God giveth of his spirit unto the seventy elders.
 31 Quails are given in wrath at Kibroth-battaavah.

AND when the people complained, it displeased the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled; and the fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the uttermost parts of the camp.

2 And the people cried unto Moses; and when Moses prayed unto the LORD, the fire was quenched.

29 Hobab, the son of Raguel, &c.] Raguel is another name for Jethro, who being returned to his own country, Hobab his son, and the brother of Moses' wife, had accompanied Moses all the time the Israelites encamped at Sinai, which was not far from Midian; but since the people were now marching towards Canaan, he was desirous of returning to his father.

31 Leave us not] Moses urges his request with some warmth; because Hobab having lived all his days on the borders of the wilderness, was consequently acquainted with every part of it, and able to shew them the conveniencies and inconveniencies of the places they passed through, and to advise them how to conduct themselves in case they should be attacked by the neighbouring nations.

Thou mayest be to us instead of eyes.] Or, as a guide to the blind. The Syriac has it, Thou shalt be dear to us as our eyes.

33 The ark of the covenant of the Lord went before them] The meaning is, the ark of the Lord marched in their presence, the cloud being over it in the midst of their army.

To search out a resting place, &c.] That is, to direct them where to find one.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XI.

1 The people complained] They began secretly to murmur among themselves, being weary of living on manna, and wanting a variety of food.

The fire of the Lord, &c.] Some by this expression understand lightning, which is called "the fire of God," 2 Kings i. 12. Job i. 16. proceeding either immediately from heaven, or from the pillar of the cloud: others think it might be one of those hot blighting winds, common in the deserts of Arabia, and which the prophet speaks of, Ezek. xix. 12.

3 And he called the name of the plate Taberah: because the fire of the LORD burnt among them. Before CHRIST 1490.

4 ¶ And the mixt multitude that was among them fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also wept again, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons; and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes.

7 And the manna was as coriander seed, and the colour thereof as the colour of bdellium.

¶ And the people went about, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And when the dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.

10 ¶ Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent: and the anger of the LORD was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 And Moses said unto the LORD, Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, Carry them in thy bosom, as a nursing father beareth the sucking child, unto the land which thou swarest unto their fathers?

13 Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, kill me I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not see my wretchedness.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee.

17 And I will come down and talk with thee here: and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, Sanctify yourselves against to morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have

2 Was quenched, &c.] That is, ceased from destroying the people.

4 Who shall give us fish, &c.] This abrupt question is an expression of a vehement, impatient desire, mixed with despair, in Psalm cxiii. 5.

5 We remember the fish, &c.] The Egyptian proselytes, who appear to have been the fomenters of this murmuring, having spread the spirit of dissension among the Israelites; they openly reproach their deliverer, as having decoyed them from a very plentiful country, abounding with a variety of delicious fish, such as the lake Moeris and the river Nile in Egypt were famed for; and a rich soil, producing the best herbs, fallads, and fruits; all which they had now exchanged for a miserable, starving condition, and had nothing but manna to cloy them.

10 The anger of the Lord, &c.] We are not to understand this and similar passages of scripture, in a literal sense; for God is not moved or actuated by passion; such expressions are only accommodated to our capacities and manner of speaking.

14 I am not able to bear all this people, &c.] I have not strength to undergo the toil of bearing all their complaints, and appeasing their tumults.

15 Let me not see my wretchedness.] An expression of great affliction towards so ungrateful a people. The meaning is, let me not live to see the miseries which they are inevitably drawing upon themselves by their murmurings, while the enemies of God insult over them, and rejoice in their destruction.

18 Sanctify yourselves, &c.] Make yourselves ready to receive this present from God with gratitude.

Before CHRIST 1490. have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 But even a whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 ¶ And Moses said, The people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them; or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together, for them to suffice them?

23 And the LORD said unto Moses, Is the LORD's hand waxed short? thou shalt see now whether my word shall come to pass unto thee or not.

24 ¶ And Moses went out, and told the people the words of the LORD, and gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that when the spirit rested upon them they prophesied, and did not cease.

26 But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them; and they were of them that were written, but went not out unto the tabernacle: and they prophesied in the camp.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

28 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses forbid them.

29 And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? would God that all the LORD's people were prophets, and that the LORD would put his spirit upon them.

30 And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

31 ¶ And there went forth a wind from the LORD, and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp, and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth.

32 And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten homers: and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

33 And while the flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was kindled against the people, and the LORD smote the people with a very great plague.

34 And he called the name of that place Kibroth-hattaavah: because there they buried the people that lusted.

35 And the people journeyed from Kibroth-hattaavah unto Hazeroth; and abode at Hazeroth.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XI.

This history teaches us, that we should not lust after evil things, as the children of Israel lusted: that we should not be displeased at the favour of God to others, nor prefer earthly things to heavenly: that God punished the children of Israel, by giving them flesh, as they desired, which shews that God gives men sometimes in wrath what they ask of him; and they are often punished in obtaining their wishes. Lastly, The answer and will of Moses, that all the LORD's people were prophets, admonishes us not to envy the blessings that God bestows upon others; but, on the contrary, to rejoice as often as we see the glory of God promoted, either by ourselves or our neighbours.

CHAP. XII.

God rebuked the sedition of Miriam and Aaron. 10 Miriam's leprosy; Moses prayeth for her. 14 God commandeth her to be shut out of the camp seven days. 16 The people encamp in the wilderness of Paran.

AND Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married: for he had married an Ethiopian woman.

2 And they said, Hath the LORD indeed spoken only by Moses? hath he not spoken also by us? And the LORD heard it.

3 (Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth.)

4 And the LORD spake suddenly unto Moses, and unto Aaron, and unto Miriam, Come out ye three unto the tabernacle of the congregation. And they three came out.

5 And the LORD came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the door of the tabernacle, and called Aaron and Miriam: and they both came forth.

6 And he said, Hear now my words: If there be a prophet among you, I the LORD will make myself

20 Until it come out at your nostrils, &c.] Until your impatient appetites be glutted, and you are convinced to your shame and confusion, of your monstrous ingratitude to God.

23 Is the Lord's hand waxed short? &c.] Is not the same omnipotence that created the world, the same power that divided the sea, and opened the rocks, still able to procure bread for his people?

25 Took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it to the seventy elders, &c.] That is, bestowed upon them the gifts of inspiration or prophecy, whereby they were enabled with uncommon power of words, and supernatural strength and vivacity of argument, to set forth the praises of God, the excellencies of his laws, and to persuade the people to a passive submission to his will.

26 There remained two of the men in the camp, &c.] That is, two of those seventy elders whom Moses had now ordained.

28 My lord Moses, forbid them.] Some have thought that Joshua himself was one of the seventy, and that his zeal for the honour of the order made him desire they might be restrained; since he took it for granted they were not inspired as the rest were.

29 Enviest thou? Moses reproves his adviser, and rejects his counsel; because supposing they had been guilty of an irregularity, Joshua was too warm upon them. Hence we learn, that our zeal should always be tempered with meekness and wisdom.

Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, &c.] Moses wishes that they were all inspired to sing the praises of Jehovah, and recommend virtue and religion one to another: but then he wishes also, that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them, and would not have those set up for prophets who are not properly qualified. Let those vain, formal, and illiterate pretenders consider this, who intrude themselves into the sacred office.

31 There went forth a wind from the Lord.] A south wind, Psalm xxviii. and it is said to be "from the Lord," because it was ordered and directed by his special power and providence.

And brought quails from the sea, &c.] In like manner as before. Exod. xvi. 13.

33 The wrath of the Lord was kindled, &c.] Because they were not in the same distressful circumstances now as before: when they first murmured, they were really in want of provision, and therefore God pitied their distress, and sent them a supply: but now they complained not from necessity, but wantonness, since they had plenty of manna.

34 Kibroth-hattaavah, &c.] That is, the graves of lust; because those were buried there who by their lust had occasioned the plague.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

1 Because of the Ethiopian woman, &c.] That is, as most interpreters think, of Zipporah, whom Aaron and Miriam in contempt called an Ethiopian, though it should have been rendered the Cushite, or Arabian woman, she being a native of Midian, a district of Arabia.

2 And they said, Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses, &c.] It is conjectured that this difference between Moses, his brother, and sister, arose from hence—When Jethro his father-in-law was in the camp, Moses, pursuant to his advice, appointed judges, to determine inferior causes; and afterwards finding his son Hobab very serviceable to him, he intreated him to stay with him, reposing great confidence in him; in the preceding chapter too we read that seventy elders were nominated by Moses, without consulting Aaron and Miriam; the story of their quarrel therefore being immediately subjoined, it seems as if they thought themselves neglected, and that they were displeased because their advice was not asked in an affair of such importance; but being afraid to charge Moses directly, they vented their spleen upon his wife, giving her opprobrious names, and probably complaining to the people of the two great influences which Zipporah and Hobab had over Moses.

myself known in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream.

7 My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house.

8 With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the LORD shall he behold: wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses?

9 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against them; and he departed.

10 ¶ And the cloud departed from off the tabernacle; and, behold, Miriam became leprous, white as snow: and Aaron looked upon Miriam, and, behold, she was leprous.

11 And Aaron said unto Moses, Alas, my lord, I beseech thee, lay not the sin upon us, wherein we have done foolishly, and wherein we have sinned.

12 Let her not be as one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he cometh out of his mother's womb.

13 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, heal her now, O God, I beseech thee.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, If her father had but spit in her face, should she not be ashamed seven days? let her be shut out from the camp seven days, and after that let her be received in again.

15 And Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days: and the people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again.

16 ¶ And afterward the people removed from Hazeroth, and pitched in the wilderness of Paran.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XII.

From the events in this chapter we may remark, that good men are often exposed to crosses and trials, even from those who ought to support and assist them: that God punishes those who maltreat his servants; and, lastly, that Moses prayed for Miriam, though he was so much injured by her; which teaches us to do good to those that do us evil, and to pray for them, rather than wish them evil, or do any to them.

C. H. A. P. XIII.

1 The names of the men who are sent to search the land:

17 Their instructions: 21 Their acts: 26 Their relation.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

7 My servant Moses is not so] He is a prophet of a superior rank, to whom I impart my mind in a far more noble and extensive manner; who in his interviews with God is not intranced in visions, but is always awake, and perfect master of himself.

Who is faithful in all mine house.] Who executed the divine commands with great exactness, doing nothing of himself, as he was now falsely accused. Moses in this was a type of Christ, who is constituted head of the christian church, though with a far greater extent of power and authority. Heb. iii. 2.

8 With him will I speak mouth to mouth.] That is, after that familiar manner in which one friend speaks to another.

The similitude of the Lord shall he behold, &c.] According to the present translation, this is directly contrary to what Moses himself expressly declares, Deut. iv. 25. that he saw no similitude; it should therefore be rendered as follows, being connected with the foregoing words: Not in dark speeches, and in a figure, shall he behold the Lord.

10 The cloud departed from off the tabernacle] Standing at a distance, till Miriam was removed from the tabernacle, and carried out of the camp.

Miriam became leprous] This leprosy did not proceed, as was the usual case, from a previous ill disposition of the blood and juices, but it seized her instantaneously, and was turned suddenly into that infinity of small imperceptible and corroding worms which naturally were the more immediate cause of that distemper; a just punishment for her pride and detraction!

Aaron looked upon Miriam, and behold she was leprous.] The reason why Aaron was exempted from this punishment seems to have been, because he was appointed to be a judge of leprosy, which office he could not have performed, had he been a leper himself; and because he was so lately consecrated an high priest, God did not think proper, for the preservation of his authority, so soon to render him vile and contemptible in the eyes of the people; it is thought too that Miriam might be the first in the transgression, and that she drew Aaron (who seems in other instances to have been a person of too much facility) over to her party.

11 Lay not the sin upon us, &c.] Aaron, sensible of the superior dignity of Moses and of his own folly, begs of him in the most submissive terms to forgive him, and to intercede with God for the life land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them. Before CHRIST 1490.

3 And Moses by the commandment of the LORD sent them from the wilderness of Paran: all those men were heads of the children of Israel.

4 And these were their names: of the tribe of Reuben, Shammua the son of Zaccur.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori.

6 Of the tribe of Judah, Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

7 Of the tribe of Issachar, Igal the son of Joseph.

8 Of the tribe of Ephraim, Oshea the son of Nun.

9 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Palti the son of Raphu.

10 Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

11 Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi the son of Sufi.

12 Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel the son of Gemalli.

13 Of the tribe of Asher, Sethur the son of Michael.

14 Of the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi the son of Vophsi.

15 Of the tribe of Gad, Geuel the son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called Oshea the son of Nun Jehoshua.

17 ¶ And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way southward, and go up into the mountain:

18 And see the land what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strong holds;

20 And what the land is, whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein, or not. And be ye of good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. Now the time was the time of the firstripe grapes.

21 ¶ So they went up, and searched the land from the wilderness of Zin unto Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

22 And they ascended by the south, and came unto Hebron; where Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmi, the children of Anak, were. (Now Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt.)

of his sister, who must have died of her distemper, had not the divine power miraculously interposed.

14 If her father had but spit in her face, &c.] This was a token of great anger and contempt; a daughter under such circumstances would be ashamed for some time to look her father in the face; and as Miriam had by his dissension offended Moses her civil parent, and in opposing him had displeased God her spiritual father, she ought to take shame to herself, and likewise on account of her distemper undergo that temporary exile, which was prescribed for legal impurities. Job xxx. 10. Isaiah l. 6: Lev. xxi. 8. Numb. vi. 9.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIII.

2 Send thou men, that they may search the land, &c.] It appears from Deut. i. 22, 23. that the people first requested that spies might be sent, and therefore Moses in sending them did it in compliance to their humour.

16 Moses called Oshea the son of Nun Jehoshua.] When he went to fight the Amalekites, Exod. xvii. 9. he was called Joshua, a word of the same import with Jesus, which signified a saviour; and he is more than once called by that name in the Septuagint translation. He was a type of Christ; for as he led the Israelites into Canaan, so does our blessed Saviour bring us to the heavenly Canaan, "the rest which remaineth for the people of God."

18 See the land, what it is, &c.] Hence we may suppose that little commerce had been carried on between Egypt and Canaan since Jacob's days; otherwise they could not have been unacquainted with these matters.

19 Whether in tents, or in strong holds.] The Vulgate and Septuagint render it, Whether in cities with or without walls.

21 The wilderness of Zin] It lay near Kadesh-barnea, on the south-east of Canaan. There was a place called the wilderness of Sin, Exod. xvi. 1. which lay on the south-west; and therefore must not be confounded with the former.

Unto Rehob, &c.] This city stood north of Canaan, near the sea coast, not far from Zidon.

22 The children of Anak, &c.] These were a gigantic race of men, who took their name from Anak their progenitor; they were so terrible to their neighbours, that it became a proverbial saying among them, Who can stand before the children of Anak?

Before
CHRIST
1490.

23 And they came unto the brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff; and they brought of the pomegranates, and of the figs.

24 The place was called the brook Eshcol, because of the cluster of grapes which the children of Israel cut down from thence.

25 And they returned from searching of the land after forty days.

26 ¶ And they went and came to Moses, and to Aaron, and to all the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the wilderness of Paran, to Kadesh; and brought back word unto them, and unto all the congregation, and shewed them the fruit of the land.

27 And they told him, and said, We came unto the land whither thou sentest us, and surely it floweth with milk and honey; and this is the fruit of it.

28 Nevertheless the people be strong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled, and very great: and moreover we saw the children of Anak there.

29 The Amalekites dwell in the land of the south: and the Hittites, and the Jebusites and the Amorites, dwell in the mountains: and the Canaanites dwell by the sea, and by the coast of Jordan.

30 And Caleb stilled the people before Moses, and said, Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.

31 But the men that went up with him said, We be not able to go up against the people: for they are stronger than we.

32 And they brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land, through which we have gone to search it, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof: and all the people that we saw in it are men of a great stature.

33 And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIII.

God was pleased to send spies into Canaan, to encourage his people to obtain that country, and strengthen their faith in his promises. Those spies, who frightened the people, represent to us such persons as, instead of animating themselves to do their duty, and overcome difficulties in their way to heaven, lose their courage, and dishearten others, by pretending that the difficulties are insurmountable, and the duties of holiness beyond our reach. But Joshua and Caleb describe to us those zealous persons who do not suffer themselves to be misled by the multitude, but who always cleave to God and their duty, and are not discouraged at the sight of those conflicts which they are to undergo, relying on the divine aid for support.

23 A branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff, &c.] Both on account of its weight, and to preserve it from bruising. That there are vines and grapes of a prodigious size in the eastern and southern parts of the world, is recorded by several writers; particularly Strabo, Pliny, Olearius, and the learned Huet.

24 The brook Eshcol, &c.] The Hebrew word nabhal signifies "a valley" as well as a torrent or brook.

30 Let us go up at once, and possess it, &c.] Such was the confidence of Caleb, that he entertained no doubt of conquest; therefore he said not, Let us go up and conquer it, but, "Let us go up at once, and possess it," as if it was already conquered.

32 A land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof, &c.] This expression seems to relate to the vast number of inhabitants, and to signify they were so numerous, that the land was scarce sufficient for their maintenance.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIV.

1 All the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried, &c.] Nothing but lamentations were to be heard, and grievous complaints of the melancholy condition of themselves and families; who, as they falsely supposed, after all their hardships, were now to be exposed to the mercy of their cruel enemies.

3 Wherefore hath the Lord brought us into this land, &c.] They not only accuse Moses, but even God himself, as if he had dealt deceitfully with them.

4 Let us make us a captain, and let us return into Egypt.] Their outrageous disposition had infatuated their minds; for how could they propose to get thither without food? could they imagine God would send it them from heaven, after they had so shamefully forsaken him? how were they to find their way, when the cloud which directed them

CHAP. XIV.

1 The people murmur at the news. 6 Joshua and Caleb labour to pacify them. 11 God threateneth them. 13 Moses intercedeth with God, and obtaineth pardon; 26 but the murmurers are excluded from entering into the promised land. 36 The men who raised the evil report concerning the land die by a plague. 40 The people, that against the will of God would invade the land, are smitten by the inhabitants of it.

AND all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried: and the people wept that night.

2 And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or would God we had died in the wilderness!

3 And wherefore hath the LORD brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

4 And they said one to another, Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt.

5 Then Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, rent their clothes:

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land which we passed through to search it, is an exceeding good land.

8 If the LORD delight in us, then he will bring us into this land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey.

9 Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread for us: their defence is departed from them, and the LORD is with us: fear them not.

10 But all the congregation bade stone them with stones. And the glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel.

11 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them?

12 I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the LORD, Then the Egyptians was withdrawn? or if they did, how were they to contend with the nations that should oppose them in their passage? and, after all, when they came into Egypt, what reception could they expect from a people who had suffered so severely through them? It is amazing, that notwithstanding all these difficulties, they should persist in their madness, and resolve to chuse a new commander to lead them back again! Nehemiah tells us, chap. ix. 17. that they did actually appoint them a captain.

5 Fell on their faces, &c.] To deprecate the wrath of God.

8 If the Lord delight in us, &c.] That is, if we do not forfeit his favour, he will enable us to drive out the Canaanite, and settle in the possession of this land.

9 They are bread for us] That is, they are an easy prey. See chap. xxiv. 8.

Their defence is departed from them, &c.] They have filled up the measure of their iniquities, and the divine protection is withdrawn from them; which, if we do not forfeit it by our rebellion, is insured to us.

11 And the Lord said unto Moses] Out of the cloud upon the tabernacle.

How long will this people provoke me?] Which suggests that they had often provoked him, and had done it long ago, and still continued to do so; and he had long bore their provocations; but it was not reasonable, nor could it be expected by Moses or any other, that he would bear them much longer.

And how long will it be ere they believe me, &c.] Unbelief was a sin they had often and long been guilty of, and which greatly prevailed among them, and was the root of all their murmurings, mutiny and rebellion; and what was highly provoking to the Lord, since they ought to have believed him, and that he was able to make good, and would make good his promises to them.

Egyptians shall hear it, (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for they have heard that thou LORD art among this people, that thou LORD art seen face to face, and that thy cloud standeth over them, and that thou goest before them, by day time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will speak, saying,

16 Because the LORD was not able to bring this people into the land which he swore unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my LORD be great, according as thou hast spoken, saying,

18 The LORD is long suffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

19 Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people according unto the greatness of thy mercy, and as thou hast forgiven this people, from Egypt even until now.

20 And the LORD said, I have pardoned according to thy word:

21 But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

22 Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles, which I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, have tempted me now these ten times, and have not hearkened to my voice;

23 Surely they shall not see the land which I swore unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it.

24 But my servant Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereinto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwelt in the valley.) Tomorrow turn you, and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

26 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

27 How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

28 Say unto them, As truly as I live, saith the LORD, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you:

29 Your carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me.

CHRIST
1490.

30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I swore to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

31 But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which ye have despised.

32 But as for you, your carcases, they shall fall in this wilderness.

33 And your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years, and bear your whoredoms, until your carcases be wasted in the wilderness.

34 After the number of the days in which he searched the land, even forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know my breach of promise.

35 I the LORD have said, I will surely do it unto all this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 ¶ And the men, which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a slander upon the land, 37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, died by the plague before the LORD.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of the men that went to search the land, lived still.

39 And Moses told these sayings unto all the children of Israel: and the people mourned greatly.

40 ¶ And they rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned.

41 And Moses said, Wherefore now do ye transgress the commandment of the LORD? but it shall not prosper.

42 Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies.

43 For the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you.

44 But they presumed to go up unto the hill top: nevertheless the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and Moses, departed not out of the camp.

45 Then the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, and discomfited them, even unto Hormah.

GENERAL

15 Then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will speak, saying.] Moses is more solicitous for the honour of God, than anxious about his own interest. He pleads that the eyes both of Egypt and Canaan were upon them; that great expectations were raised concerning them; and that if God suffered this people, who had made so great noise in the world, to be all consumed, he insinuates that those heathen nations would rashly conclude, that it was for want of power in their God, to bring them safely through the wilderness into the promised land.

17 Let the power of my Lord be great, &c.] Let the fame of thy power be magnified among the nations, by subduing the enemies of the Lord's people.

18 And by no means clearing the guilty, &c.] The word "guilty" is not in the original, and as it is directly opposite to the intention of Moses' petition, the passage would be better rendered as follows: Who will not make quite desolate, though he visit the iniquity of the father upon the children, &c.

19 As thou hast forgiven this people, from Egypt even until now.] Spare them this once; add this one instance of divine mercy and patience to the many thou hast already given. Surely the boundless extent of the divine goodness is still a foundation of hope to the greatest sinners; if they repent, they have no reason absolutely to despair, since "the mercy of God endureth for ever."

21 All the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord.] That is, all the earth shall acknowledge and confess the justice of the Lord's proceeding against his people Israel.

22 Have tempted me, &c.] That is, have rebelled against me.

23 Dwelt in the valley.] It should be rendered, Lie in wait for you in the valley.

Turn you, &c.] Since ye have not courage enough notwithstanding all the promises made you, to force the Canaanites, it will be most prudent in you to remove hence; and instead of proceeding to take possession of the land, to return through the wilderness towards the Red sea, from whence ye came.

33 Your children shall wander in the wilderness forty years.] A terrible reflection this! to be doomed themselves to perish in the wilderness, and not be suffered to enter the promised land, on the borders of which they were just arrived; and that their posterity should be doomed to wander in the wilderness forty years, in quest of food, after the manner of the Arabian shepherds.

And bear your whoredoms, &c.] That is, shall feel the fatal effects of your idolatry and defection from your God.

34 My breach of promise,] Or rather, my resentment.

40 We be here, and will go up, &c.] The Israelites now repented of their folly, acknowledged their error, and would very willingly have taken possession of the land, to which they were averse before; but it was now too late, the decree was gone forth, and the consumption of the people determined. This should teach sinners not to proceed resolutely in sinning.

44 They presumed to go up, &c.] Desperately resolved, as it were, to act diametrically opposite to God's command in every thing; he bid them go, and they would not; he forbade them, and they would.

45 And smote them.] They succeeded accordingly; and indeed how could they expect otherwise? The enemy had posted themselves upon the top of the hill, in order to defend that pass against the invaders; and being informed of their approach by their scouts they sallied out upon them, overcame them, and killed many of them.

Hormah.] This city was situated in the south of Canaan, but had not this name, which signifies "utter destruction," till many years after; when the Canaanites who inhabited it were devoted to utter destruction. See chap. xxi. 3. Moses is thought to have composed the nineteenth psalm in memory of this event: in which he gives us a most lively image of the shortness and frailty of human life.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIV.

1490. From the examples of the Jews, who on account of their rebellion and unbelief, were excluded from the land of Canaan, and died in the wilderness, we may learn, that those who provoke the Lord by distrust and disobedience, shall not inherit his promises. The punishment inflicted on the ten spies, and the promise God made to Joshua and Caleb, shew us, that they who are the occasion of offences, and draw others into sin, shall receive the punishment due to it; but that God is kind, and will bless those that are faithful to him. Lastly, The defeat of the children of Israel by the Canaanites, points out to us, that whatever is undertaken against the will of God, can never succeed.

CHAP. XV.

- The law of the meat offering and the drink offering with the sacrifices, 14 in which the stranger is included. 17 The law of the first of the dough for an heave offering. 22 The sacrifice of the congregation for sins of ignorance. 27 The sacrifice of a private person for the same. 30 The punishment of presumption. 32 The sabbath breaker is stoned. 37 The law of fringes.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come into the land of your habitations, which I give unto you,

3 And will make an offering by fire unto the LORD, a burnt offering, or a sacrifice in performing a vow, or in a freewill offering, or in your solemn feasts, to make a sweet favour unto the LORD, of the herd, or of the flock:

4 Then shall he that offereth his offering unto the LORD bring a meat offering of a tenth deal of flour mingled with the fourth part of an hin of oil.

5 And the fourth part of an hin of wine for a drink offering shalt thou prepare with the burnt offering or sacrifice, for one lamb.

6 Or for a ram, thou shalt prepare for a meat offering two tenth deals of flour mingled with the third part of an hin of oil.

7 And for a drink offering thou shalt offer the third part of an hin of wine, for a sweet favour unto the LORD.

8 And when thou preparest a bullock for a burnt offering, or for a sacrifice in performing a vow, or peace offerings unto the LORD:

9 Then shall he bring with a bullock a meat offering of three tenth deals of flour mingled with half an hin of oil.

10 And thou shalt bring for a drink offering half an hin of wine, for an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

11 Thus shall it be done for one bullock, or for one ram, or for a lamb, or a kid.

12 According to the number that ye shall prepare, so shall ye do to every one according to their number.

13 All that are born of the country shall do these things after this manner, in offering an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

14 ¶ And if a stranger sojourn with you, or whosoever be among you in your generations, and will offer an offering made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD; as ye do, so he shall do.

15 One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you, an ordinance for ever in your generations: as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the LORD.

16 One law and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth with you.

17 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

18 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye come into the land whither I bring you,

19 Then it shall be, that, when ye eat of the bread of the land, ye shall offer up an heave offering unto the LORD.

20 Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering: as ye do the heave offering of the threshing floor, so shall ye heave it.

21 Of the first of your dough ye shall give unto the LORD an heave offering in your generations.

22 ¶ And if ye have erred, and not observed all these commandments, which the LORD hath spoken unto Moses,

23 Even all that the LORD hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the day that the LORD commanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations;

24 Then it shall be, if ought be committed by ignorance without the knowledge of the congregation, that all the congregation shall offer one young bullock for a burnt offering, for a sweet favour unto the LORD, with his meat offering, and his drink offering, according to the manner, and one kid of the goats for a sin offering.

25 And the priest shall make an atonement for all the congregation of the children of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them; for it is ignorance: and they shall bring their offering, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD, and their sin offering before the LORD, for their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the congregation of the children of Israel, and the stranger that sojourneth among them; seeing all the people were in ignorance.

27 And if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a the goat of the first year for a sin offering.

28 And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 Ye shall have one law for him that sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 ¶ But the soul that doeth ought presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

31 Because he hath despised the word of the LORD, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off; his iniquity shall be upon him.

32 ¶ And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath day.

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

34 And they put him in ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him.

35 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

1 The Lord spake unto Moses, saying.] The subsequent laws seem to have been delivered near the period of their wandering in the wilderness, but were not to be observed till they came into Canaan, because they could not be provided with necessaries requisite for the performance of these ceremonies.

4 A tenth deal of flour.] About half a peck.

The fourth part of an hin of oil.] A quart of oil.

14 And if a stranger sojourn with you, &c.] By a "stranger" is to be understood one who had renounced idolatry, and become a proselyte to the Jewish religion. This law, which made a distinction between them and the Israelites in matters relating to divine worship, was wisely calculated to invite and encourage strangers to embrace their religion, as well as to engage the Hebrews to shew them kindness, 19 The bread of the land, &c.] This is, such corn as is used in making bread, comprehending wheat, barley, rye, or oats.

30 The soul that doeth ought presumptuously, &c.] In the Hebrew it is, With a high hand; and in the Greek, With a hand of pride. The meaning is, whoever shall presumptuously, and against all admonition, violate the commands of God; that delinquent shall be cut off by death, and no atonement shall be admitted. These violations of the laws are to be understood of those relating to religious worship, which if not direct idolatry, were at least a degree of apostasy from the true religion, and a contempt of God and his word.

32 The man that gathereth sticks upon the sabbath day.] The use of those sticks was undoubtedly to make a fire with; but as they were commanded to bake and seethe what they had occasion for on the day before the sabbath, this offence was a violation of the law of the sabbath; and consequently an implicit contempt of the Creator to whose honour it was dedicated,

35 And the LORD said unto Moses, The man shall be surely put to death: all the congregation shall stone him with stones without the camp.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue:

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them; and that ye seek not after your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use to go a whoring:

40 That ye may remember, and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God.

41 I am the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, to be your God: I am the LORD your God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XV.

In this chapter, we observe the difference between sins committed through ignorance, and wilful sins, both which are to be atoned for by repentance. Sins committed through stubbornness are very heinous, since no sacrifices could atone for them, but they were punished with death; which was the case of the man that had gathered sticks on the sabbath day. The law concerning the fringes that the Jews were to wear upon their cloaths, was to put them in mind never to depart from the commandments of God: may we take warning from hence, always to have the law of the Lord before our eyes, and to conform ourselves according to it.

C H A P. XVI.

1 The rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. 4 Moses opposeth it. 12 He sendeth for Dathan and Abiram, who refuse to come. 16 Korah and his company bring incense before the Lord. 23 Moses separateth the people from the tents of the rebels and denounceth their judgment. 31 The earth swallowed up some, a fire consumeth the rest. 36 The censers are reserved to holy use. 41 The people murmur. 44 God's anger is kindled. 46 Aaron by Moses' direction slayeth the plague, in which fourteen thousand and seven hundred perished.

35 The man shall be surely put to death, &c.] The reason why the breach of the sabbath is ordered to be so severely punished, is, because it was an implicit denial of God to be the creator of the world. The sabbath was a sign, by which the worshippers of that omnipotent being were distinguished from idolaters, who thought the world to be eternal, and adored the heavenly luminaries, the sun, moon, and stars, as deities, and a multiplicity of other nominal gods: the violation of this institution therefore implied a defection from the true religion to polytheism and idolatry.

35 That they make them fringes in the borders of their garments, &c.] This ornament was intended to distinguish them in their dress, as circumcision did their persons, from other nations: so that whenever they looked upon this mark, they might be reminded of their being worshippers of the true God, a holy and peculiar people. Many of the Jews considered these ornaments in a very different light, and prided themselves in wearing them. The Pharisees, in our Saviour's time, used to enlarge their fringes, in order to make them more observable, and gain them the reputation of superior sanctity, Matt. xxiii. 5.

39 To go a whoring.] This is an usual phrase in scripture for idolatry, Exod. xxxiv. 15. God is ever considered as the spiritual spouse of his church.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

1 Now Korah] The sacred historian has not informed us at what time, and in what encampment, this rebellion of Korah happened; but the general opinion is, that the cause of the mutiny was owing to his resentment upon the advancement of Aaron and his family to the office of high-priest. Being sensible he had no hopes of aiming at that dignity as matters now stood, he was determined to endeavour after it, by compelling them to change their measures, or by depriving them forcibly of their authority; and, therefore, in order to render himself more certain of success, he drew Dathan and Abiram, and others of the Reubenites, into rebellion; and being joined by two hundred and fifty persons of authority among the other tribes, they became a party, and declared themselves for a change of government.

On, the son of Peleth] "On" is here mentioned as one of the chiefs of the faction, but is not mentioned afterwards; it is imagined, therefore, either that he repented, and deserted their party, No. 15.

NOW Korah, the son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, and Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, the son of Peleth, sons of Reuben, took men:

Before CHRIST 1471.

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the LORD is among them: wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the LORD?

4 ¶ And when Moses heard it, he fell upon his face:

5 And he spake unto Korah and unto all his company, saying, Even to morrow the LORD will shew who are his, and who is holy; and will cause him to come near unto him; even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him.

6 This do; Take your censers, Korah, and all his company;

7 And put fire therein, and put incense in them before the LORD to morrow: and it shall be that the man whom the LORD doth choose, he shall be holy: ye take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi.

8 And Moses said unto Korah, Hear, I pray you, ye sons of Levi:

9 Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself to do the service of the tabernacle of the LORD, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?

10 And he hath brought thee near to him, and all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also?

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the LORD: and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

12 ¶ And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, sons of Eliab: which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out or that he did not render himself so remarkable as Dathan and Abiram.

Sons of Reuben] That is, of the posterity and tribe of Reuben. As Korah was disgusted at the preferment of Aaron to the priesthood, and perhaps too because Elizaphan was appointed chief of the family of the Kohathites; so it is probable that the Reubenites, the first-born of Israel, were offended at the preference given to Judah, and that they themselves were not placed in the front of the camp.

Took men.] The word "men" is not in the original, and since "took" is the first word in the text, it would be more natural if translated thus: Korah took both Dathan and Abiram, &c. i. e. he drew them over to his party, or formed an association or conspiracy with them.

3 Against Moses] As if he had advanced his brother and family to the priesthood by his own authority, and not by the direction of God.

Ye take too much upon you, &c.] The priesthood ought not to be confined to your family alone; you ought to think it sufficient to be on a level with your brethren, who are all members of the community, and alike favoured with the divine presence and protection.

4 And when Moses heard it, &c.] This prostration was not a sign of fear, though, if we believe Josephus, the insurgents approached him in a riotous manner, and threatened to stone him. This prostration was intended for the same end as that mentioned chap. xvi. 5. that is, for deprecating God's displeasure against the Israelites, and for supplicating his direction in so dangerous a crisis.

5 Will cause him to come near unto him, &c.] Meaning that person who is to serve him in the sacred offices.

9 Seemeth it but a small thing, &c.] As if he had said, you ought, instead of repining, because Aaron's family is advanced above yours, to consider your own privileges, who are distinguished above the other tribes, by being ordained Levites.

11 What is Aaron, &c.] He has done nothing of himself; God is the doer of all, Exod. xxi. 7.

12 Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, &c.] Suspecting they had been drawn into the conspiracy by the artifice and insinuations of Korah, he sends for them to argue the case mildly.

13 Thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, &c.] This seems a sarcastical reflection on Moses, who, in his description of the promised land, used to paint it as "a land flowing with milk and honey."

Before CHRIST 1471. out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover thou hast not brought us into a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was very wroth, and said unto the LORD, Respect not thou their offering: I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.

16 ¶ And Moses said unto Korah, Be thou and all thy company before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to morrow.

17 And take every man his censur, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censur, two hundred and fifty censurs; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censur.

18 And they took every man his censur, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And Korah gathered all the congregation against them under the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

21 Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may consume them in a moment.

22 And they fell upon their faces, and said, O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

25 And Moses rose up and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs: lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; for I have not done them of mine own mind.

29 If these men die the common death of all men, or if they be visited after the visitation of all men; then the LORD hath not sent me.

30 But if the LORD make a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they go down quick into the pit; then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 ¶ And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

32 And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their houses, and all the men that appertained unto Korah, and all their goods.

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel that were round about them fled at the cry of them: for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censurs out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for they are hallowed.

38 The censurs of these sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar: for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: and they shall be a sign unto the children of Israel.

39 And Eleazar the priest took the brazen censurs, wherewith they that were burnt had offered; and they were made broad plates for a covering of the altar:

40 To be a memorial unto the children of Israel, that no stranger, which is not of the seed of Aaron, come near to offer incense before the LORD; that he be not as Korah, and as his company: as the LORD said to him by the hand of Moses.

41 ¶ But on the morrow all the congregation of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, saying, Ye have killed the people of the LORD.

42 And it came to pass, when the congregation was gathered against Moses and against Aaron, that they looked toward the tabernacle of the congregation: and, behold, the cloud covered it, and the glory of the LORD appeared.

43 And Moses and Aaron came before the tabernacle of the congregation:

44 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 Get you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And they fell upon their faces.

46 ¶ And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censur, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And

14. Wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? &c.] Dost thou think to blind us, so that none of us shall be able to discern this imposture? or shall we suffer thee to lead us about after this manner, like blind men, whither thou pleasest, sometimes towards Canaan, and now back again towards Egypt?

15. Moses was very wroth] As this seems to contradict Moses's character, of being the meekest man upon earth, the Septuagint render, It was very grievous to him; or it made him very sad; and the Arabic, It was very troublesome to Moses.

I have not taken one ass, &c.] This is a proverbial expression, implying, that he had not in the least instance deprived them of their property.

17. Before the Lord, &c.] That is, at the door of the tabernacle.

19. Korah gathered all the congregation against them, &c.] A plain indication, that the people were inclined to dispute the authority of Moses and Aaron.

22. God of the spirits of all flesh, &c.] O thou God and father of the spirits of all flesh, wilt thou not have mercy upon those spirits which thou hast created, whose frame thou knowest, and canst distinguish between the leaders and misled.

24. From about the tabernacle, &c.] It is thought these rebels had erected a tabernacle in the midst of their tents, in which they met in council, and hung out a flag of defiance against Moses: hence called the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

30. A new thing] That is, a new and unexperienced kind of judgment; for God has many arrows in his quiver; nor is he limited to one way of punishing; but the earth, when he pleaseth, shall execute his vengeance, as well as the fire.

Into the pit, &c.] The word which we render "pit" sometimes signifies the grave, and sometimes the region of departed souls: here it denotes that pit or cavity in the earth into which the bodies and substance of these men were swallowed up.

35. A fire from the Lord, and consumed the two hundred and fifty men, &c.] That is, the men who had assumed the priests office. This was the more astonishing, as Moses and Aaron were then among them, though they received no hurt.

38. The censurs of these sinners against their souls, &c.] It may be better translated, The censurs of those sinners are sanctified by their intentions.

41. All the congregation—of Israel murmured, &c.] It might naturally have been expected that such a signal vengeance would have effectually silenced all murmurings and discontent; but it had a different effect upon this inflexible people; for the very next day they assembled in a tumultuous manner, charging Moses and Aaron with the blood of these men.

42. They looked toward the tabernacle, &c.] The faith and intrepidity of Moses and Aaron on this occasion is rendered very conspicuous in this passage, which signifies that they firmly relied on the interposition of Providence in their favour, who, in order to establish their faith, and comfort them in this critical juncture, manifested his glorious presence in the cloud.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation; and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, beside them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron returned unto Moses unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVI.

The terrible punishments these rebellious Israelites drew upon themselves by their incorrigibility and hardness of heart, shews us, that they who will not be humbled by lesser judgments, only expose themselves to greater; and that God not only punishes the authors of disorders and offences, but likewise, those who suffer themselves to be drawn away to do evil.

C H A P. XVII.

1 God commandeth the rods of the tribes to be brought before the testimony. 6 They are laid up, and Aaron's rod only flourisheth. 10 It is left for a monument against the rebels.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod according to the house of their fathers, of all their princes according to the house of their fathers twelve rods: write thou every man's name upon his rod.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation before the testimony, where I will meet with you.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, whom I shall choose, shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, whereby they murmur against you.

6 ¶ And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece, for each prince one, according to their father's houses, even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

7 And Moses laid up the rods before the LORD in the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi was budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.

49 They that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, &c.] As the people, instead of being led to repentance by the dreadful catastrophe of Korah and his accomplices, murmured on account of the death of those delinquents: God now silences their complaints by the slaughter of many thousands.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVII.

5 I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, &c.] I will work such a miracle as shall be sufficient to prevent their murmuring any more; and shall be a standing testimony to them, of the persons on whom I have conferred the priesthood.

6 Every one of their princes gave him a rod apiece, &c.] It is thought that these rods were twigs cut off from an almond-tree; and probably from one and the same tree, that there might be no manner of difference between them.

8 Was budded, and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and yielded almonds.] In some parts of the rod, there was an appearance of buds coming forth; in others they were fully thrust out; in others they were opened into blossoms; and in other parts those blossoms had grown into almonds. This was truly astonishing; and we find that the Israelites were so thoroughly convinced by this miraculous sign, that they never after called the authority of Aaron's priesthood in question.

10 Before the testimony.] It has been a matter of enquiry, whether Aaron's rod was put within the ark of the covenant, or only by it; God commanded Moses only to put it in the tabernacle, there to be preserved. St. Paul says it was placed within the ark, Heb. iv. 4.

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod. Before CHRIST 1471.

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept for a token against the rebels; and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

11 And Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

13 Whosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVII.

From this chapter we perceive, that after God had supported the ministry of Aaron, by punishing those who had set themselves up against him, he was pleased to confirm it again by this new miracle: from whence we may learn, that it is in no case lawful to oppose divine ordinances; that we must submit ourselves to those whom God has established in his church, or the government thereof; and that no one ought to oppose them, or usurp their office and authority.

C H A P. XVIII.

1 The charge of the priests and Levites. 8 The portion of the priests. 21 The portion of the Levites. 25 The heave offering to the priests out of the portion of the Levites.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, Thou and thy sons and thy father's house with thee shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

2 And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be joined unto thee, and minister unto thee: but thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and the charge of all the tabernacle: only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, that neither they, nor ye also, die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: and a stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And ye shall keep the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar: that there be no wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

6 And I, behold, I have taken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel: to you they are given as a gift for the LORD, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 Therefore thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your together with a pot of manna, and the tables of the law. In 1 Kings viii. 9. it seems to be intimated, that there was nothing in the ark but the tables of the law; and for that reason others will have it, that it was only placed on the side of the ark.

To be kept for a token, &c.] To convince the consciences of men, and to silence all disputes concerning the priesthood. We find no mention in scripture, how long this wonderful rod continued in this sacred repository. When the ark was brought into the temple of Solomon, no notice is taken of it; and yet it is reasonable to think it was preserved for a considerable time in the verdure in which it now appeared, for the conviction of posterity.

12 We die, we perish, we all perish.] This is a natural picture of the great consternation of their minds. The Israelites were ever in extremes; either daring and presumptuous, or abject and desponding.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

1 Shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary, &c.] That is, you shall take care that such people as are legally defiled, do not approach the tabernacle. This charge lieth upon you, and if you suffer these institutions to be profaned through your negligence, you shall bear the punishment of such profanation. These declarations proved useful in removing the envy of the people from the priests, whose dignity they saw attended with so great danger.

4 A stranger shall not, &c.] The Hebrew word zar implies not only a person of a different nation, but likewise any Israelite who was not a Levite.

Before CHRIST 1471. your priest's office for every thing of the altar, and within the vail; and ye shall serve: I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

¶ And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, I also have given thee the charge of mine heave offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them by reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

9 This shall be thine of the most holy things, reserved from the fire: every oblation of their's, every meat offering of their's, and every sin offering of their's, and every trespass offering of their's, which they shall render unto me, shall be most holy for thee and for thy sons.

10 In the most holy place shalt thou eat it; every male shall eat it: it shall be holy unto thee.

11 And this is thine; the heave offering of their gift, with all the wave offerings of the children of Israel: I have given them unto thee, and to thy sons, and to thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: every one that is clean in thy house shall eat of it.

12 All the best of the oil, and all the best of the wine, and of the wheat, the first fruits of them which they shall offer unto the LORD, them have I given thee.

13 And whatsoever is first ripe in the land, which they shall bring unto the LORD, shall be thine; every one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it.

14 Every thing devoted in Israel shall be thine.

15 Every thing that openeth the matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the LORD, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine: nevertheless the first born of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem.

16 And those that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, according to thine estimation, for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, which is twenty gerahs.

17 But the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shall burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the wave breast and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 All the heave offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee, and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: it is a covenant of salt for ever before the LORD unto thee and to thy seed with thee.

20 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

21 ¶ And, behold, I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 Neither must the children of Israel henceforth come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, lest they bear sin, and die.

23 But the Levites shall do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel, they have no inheritance.

24 But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer as an heave offering unto the LORD, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the LORD, even a tenth part of the tribe.

27 And this your heave offering shall be reckoned unto you, as though it were the corn of the threshing-floor, and as the fulness of the winepress.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave offering unto the LORD of all your tithes, which ye receive of the children of Israel; and ye shall give thereof the LORD's heave offering to Aaron the priest.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave offering of the LORD, of all the best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof out of it.

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the threshing-floor, and as the increase of the winepress.

31 And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.

32 And ye shall bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the best of it: neither shall ye pollute the holy things of the children of Israel, lest ye die.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVIII.

By God's regulating the offices of the priests and Levites, and providing for their subsistence, we are taught, that all things ought to be done in the church according to order; that provision should be made in the church, for the maintenance of the pastors, and those that serve in it; and that if the Jews were obliged to give the tithes and first fruits, &c. for the maintenance of the priests, Christians also are no less obliged to devote some part of their goods to the service of God, of the poor, and to other holy uses.

CHAP. XIX.

1 The water of separation made of the ashes of a red heifer. 11 The law for the use of it in purification of the unclean.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron saying,

2 This is the ordinance of the law, which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot, wherein is no blemish, and upon which never came yoke:

3 And

¶ By reason of the anointing, &c.] Because thou art anointed with sacred oil, and consecrated to the office of a priest.

9 Every oblation, &c.] The Hebrew word kerban, rendered an oblation, is a general term, comprehending all the particulars specified afterwards; it includes not only the animal sacrifices, but likewise the inanimate oblations, termed meat offerings.

10 In the most holy place, &c.] That is, the court of the tabernacle, termed "most holy," in respect of the camp.

19 A covenant of salt, &c.] That is, a firm and inviolable covenant, or one that shall continue as long as the dispensation lasts. A perpetual covenant was termed "a covenant of salt," because salt is of a preserving nature. It was a symbol of friendship and fidelity. Perhaps it was usual, in all solemn covenants which were confirmed by sacrifice, to offer salt with the sacrifice, to denote the perpetuity of the covenant.

¶ Neither shalt thou have any part among them: I am thy part, &c.] The provision made for the priests was so ample, that their proportion, without any share in the land of Canaan, upon computation, will be found to have been far richer than of any other persons.

23 Shall bear their iniquity, &c.] That is, the effect or punishment of their iniquity.

24 The tithes,—which they offer—unto the Lord, I have given to the Levites, &c.] It was indeed highly reasonable that they should be provided for by the public, who had parted with their own inheritance to them; had yielded up many national advantages to the other tribes, and eased the nation by their services.

31 In every place, &c.] That is, at their own houses, or wherever they pleased.

32 Lest ye die.] In the Hebrew, Nor shall ye eat; as they did who intermeddled with those sacred things which God had reserved for his ministers.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

2 A red heifer, &c.] The original word properly signifies, A young cow, between the age of a calf and a heifer; one that is not past three years old, and which has not yet felt the yoke. The reason why a heifer was required for this sacrifice, was probably in opposition to the superstition of the Egyptians, who, though they offered bullocks in sacrifice, yet held cows in great veneration.

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face:

4 And Eleazar the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and sprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times:

5 And one shall burn the heifer in his sight; her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn:

6 And the priest shall take cedar wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

7 Then the priest shall wash his clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place, and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel for a water of separation: it is a purification for sin.

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even: and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them, for a statute for ever.

11 ¶ He that toucheth the dead body of any man shall be unclean seven days.

12 He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean: but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, defileth the tabernacle of the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel: because the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent: all that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days.

15 And every open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And for an unclean person they shall take of the ashes of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and running water shall be put thereto in a vessel:

18 And a clean person shall take hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave:

19 And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day: and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bath himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath defiled the sanctuary of the LORD: the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him; he is unclean.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

22 And whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean; and the soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIX.

The red colour of the heifer may serve to denote the heinous nature of sin and rebellion against God, and setting his commands at defiance. As the sins of the people could not be expiated without blood, that circumstance may direct our view to the efficacy of the blood of Christ, which cleanseth from all sin; and that God commanded the children of Israel to avoid external impurity by not touching an infected person, so we should carefully avoid the conversation of such persons as would tend to corrupt our morals.

3 Ye shall give her unto Eleazar, &c.] Had the high-priest been employed in the following work, he would have been defiled; a thing which he was carefully to avoid; but as it was an affair of great concern, it was to be performed by one next to Aaron in dignity.

9 A water of separation: it is a purification for sin.] It has been a matter of dispute, why this water, mixed with the ashes of a red heifer, should purify the unclean, and yet pollute not only those who assisted at the slaying, burning, or gathering the ashes of it; but even those who sprinkled the unclean person with it. This sacrifice was a type of Christ, who was of much greater efficacy towards the purifying and sanctifying of men, than that of bulls and goats, the ashes of an heifer, or any other legal sacrifice. See Heb. xiii. 11, 12, and ix. 13.

20 That soul shall be cut off, &c.] The ceremonial pollution, by neglecting the purification prescribed, became a mortal guilt, for which the offender was to be cut off. It is a dangerous thing to despise divine institutions, how inconsiderable soever they may seem to us. A small sin unrepented of will hazard our salvation; yet the wound is not so fatal as the contempt of the remedy.

near forty years, and that generation of murmurers being almost extinct, they are again brought back to Kadesh. It is probable there were no new laws delivered in all that time.

Miriam died there, and was buried there.] She was sister of Moses and Aaron, and daughter of Amram and Jochebed; was born about ten or twelve years before Moses, and about the year of the world 2424, and was probably about ten or twelve years of age at the time her brother was exposed upon the banks of the Nile, where she was watching when Pharaoh's daughter found him. She was enlightened with the supernatural gift of prophecy, as she herself insinuates, chap. xii. 2. She died in the first month of the fortieth year after the Israelites left Egypt.

2 There was no water for the congregation.] The water which had hitherto supplied them from Horeb, now failed; intimating that they were now to quit the wilderness, and to be introduced into the land of promise, a land abounding with springs and rivers.

They gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.] Notwithstanding this new generation had so evidently seen the accomplishment of the divine judgments threatened to their parents, who were now almost all dead; yet the pain of thirst threw them into the very same sin of murmuring and mutinying.

the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod from before the LORD as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?

11 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice: and the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 This is the water of Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the LORD, and he was sanctified in them.

14 ¶ And Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath befallen us:

15 How our fathers went down into Egypt, and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And when we cried unto the LORD, he heard our voice, and sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt: and, behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost of thy border:

17 Let us pass, I pray thee, through thy country: we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's high way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, We will go by the high way: and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, then I will pay for it: I will only, without doing any thing else, go through on my feet.

20 And he said, Thou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel turned away from him.

10 Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock? It is to this passage the psalmist seems to allude, where he says of Moses, that "he spoke unadvisedly with his lips," Psalm cvi. 33. Perhaps he might be guilty of arrogating too much to himself and Aaron on this occasion; for he says, without mentioning God, "must we fetch you water out of this rock?" as if they could do it by their own power.

11 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his rod he smote the rock twice, &c.] His not waiting at all for the eruption of the water upon the first stroke, had somewhat the appearance of impatience; add to which, that this behaviour was in public, in the sight of the Israelites, to whom Moses and Aaron were designed to be examples of faith, and patience, meekness and hope.

12 Because ye believed me not] That is, they had a less degree of faith than was required, or than they ought to have had at this time; for it is evident they did not actually disbelieve, since they smote the rock, which was an intimation that they entertained some hope of the water flowing from thence, upon the sign given.

Ye shall not bring this congregation into the land, &c.] As Moses, the minister of the law, conducted the people through the wilderness to the borders of the promised land, but could not bring them into it, but Joshua put them into possession; so neither can the works of the law, or legal dispensation, put us in possession of heaven; it is our spiritual Joshua, or Jesus, only can do this.

13 Meribah] That is, "strife or contention." In Deut. xxxii. 51. it is called Meribah Kadesh, to distinguish it from that other Meribah at Horeb, where the Israelites were guilty of the same crime, Exod. xvii. 7.

He was sanctified in them.] That is, God glorified his power, his goodness, and his veracity, in the sight of Israel; and demonstrated the impartiality of his justice by this signal miracle, by punishing even his greatest favourites for their incredulity.

14 Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom] It is said, Deut. xx. 10. "When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, then proclaim peace unto it." On this text the Jews have founded a tradition, that the Israelites were obliged to send 22 ¶ And the children of Israel; even the whole congregation, journeyed from Kadesh, and came unto mount Hor.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in mount Hor, by the coast of the land of Edom, saying, 24 Aaron shall be gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because ye rebelled against my word at the water of Meribah.

25 Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the LORD commanded: and they went up into mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation.

28 And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XX.

We may remark, from this chapter, the many mercies the Israelites received from God, and the many chastisements inflicted on them for their murmurings: that God, nevertheless, gave them water after a wonderful manner; that Moses and Aaron were not permitted to enter the land of Canaan, through their unbelief; and that Aaron died about the same time: which represents to us, on the one hand, the hardness and incredulity of sinners, on whom neither mercies nor chastisements have any effect. We also learn, that God punishes the want of faith, even in the faithful themselves; and though he pardons their infirmities, he does not always exempt them from temporal punishments.

The reason for sending this message was, because the nearest passage to the land of Canaan was through the country of Edom or Idumea.

Thy brother Israel, &c.] Moses, in his message, kindly reminds them of their relation and descent; the Edomites being the posterity of Esau, and the Israelites of Jacob, who were brothers.

20 Thou shalt not go through, &c.] As Esau hated Jacob, on account of his having obtained the blessing, so in his descendants that hatred now revived, when Jacob's posterity were just going to inherit that blessing.

22 Mount Hor.] This mountain, or rather chain of mountains, was in the eastern border of the land of Edom, and was probably so named from Hori, the first possessor of it, Gen. xxxvi. 30.

24 Shall be gathered unto his people, &c.] Aaron is not cut off, as it was usually expressed concerning those who died by the hand of justice; but he is gathered unto his people, one who died in the arms of divine grace.

28 And Aaron died there in the top of the mount, &c.] Aaron was born in the year of the world 2430: he was three years older than his brother. In point of dignity, he was considered as next to him, being immediately appointed by God to exercise the office of priesthood in the tabernacle, and his sons for ever after him. He had four sons by his wife Elisheba, namely, Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. He died in the arms of Moses his brother, and Eleazar his son, A. M. 2552, at the age of one hundred and twenty-three years, and was buried by Moses and his sons in a cave of this mountain.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXI.

2 Vowed a vow, &c.] See Lev. xxviii. 29. This was that species of vow distinguished by the title of cherem. The devoting whole nations to destruction may, to the inconsiderate, appear cruel; yet

If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then I will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place Hormah.

4 ¶ And they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red sea, to compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much discouraged because of the way.

5 And the people spake against God, and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt, to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water; and our soul lotheth this light bread.

6 And the LORD sent fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 ¶ Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee; pray unto the LORD that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole, and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and pitched at Ije-abarim, in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sunrising.

12 From thence they removed, and pitched in the valley of Zared.

13 From thence they removed, and pitched on the other side of Arnon, which is in the wilderness that cometh out of the coasts of the Amorites: for Arnon is the border of Moab, between Moab and the Amorites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book of the wars of the LORD, What he did in the Red sea, and in the brooks of Arnon.

15 And at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab.

16 And from hence they went to Beer: that is the well whereof the LORD spake unto Moses, Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

17 Then Israel sang this song, Spring up, O well; sing ye unto it:

18 The princes digged the well, the nobles of the people digged it, by the direction of the lawgiver, with their staves. And from the wilderness they went to Mattanah:

19 And from Mattanah to Nahaliel: and from Nahaliel to Bamoth:

20 And from Bamoth in the valley, that is in the country of Moab, to the top of Pisgah, which looketh towards Jeshimon.

21 ¶ And Israel sent messages unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

22 Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well: but we will go along by the king's high way, until we be past thy borders.

23 And Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the villages thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon:

27 Wherefore they that speak in proverbs say, Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built and prepared:

28 For there is a fire gone out of Heshbon, a flame from the city of Sihon: it hath consumed Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

29 Woe to thee, Moab! thou art undone, O people of Chemosh: he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

30 We have shot at them; Heshbon perished even unto Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto Medeba.

31 Thus Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

33 ¶ And they turned and went up by the way of Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he, and all his people, to the battle at Edrei.

34 And the LORD said unto Moses, Fear him not: for yet it should be remembered, that these nations had grown so abandoned in vice, that they had already provoked God to denounce their extermination, in order to vindicate his own attributes, and prevent their example from proving contagious.

3 Hormah.] That is, "utter destruction." See note on chap. xiv. 45.

4 Soul—was much discouraged, &c.] They were not only tired with the circuit they were obliged to take on account of the refusal of the Edomites, but were impatient of staying any longer in the wilderness, which their return towards the Red sea indicated.

5 There is no bread, neither is there any water, &c.] It was their rage caused them to utter falsehoods; for they had both, being fed with manna from heaven, and supplied with water from the rock.

6 The Lord sent fiery serpents among the people, &c.] The sacred historian informs us, that they were exceedingly numerous in this place, Deut. viii. 15. and as we have not met with any instance of their proving fatal in the preceding part of this history, we must suppose that the Israelites were hitherto preserved from their rage by an extraordinary providence, which being suspended on account of their crimes, they were exposed to the attacks of these creatures. It was now in the heat of summer, when creatures of this kind are naturally most venomous, and they raised such sores and sudden inflammations whereforever they fell, as occasioned death in some of the guilty, and violent pains in all.

8 Make thee a fiery serpent] It has been matter of great surprize and perplexity in the Jews, why God, who had forbidden all manner of images, should upon this occasion command one to be made; but had they known the nature of Christ's sufferings, they would have quickly perceived that it was an eminent type of his crucifixion: And set it upon a pole, &c.] The word which we render "a pole," signifies a banner or ensign, erected with an intention that the people should gather unto it.

9 And Moses made a serpent of brass] A figure of the sharaph, the serpent above-mentioned.

When he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.] This healing virtue was derived from God alone, who was pleased in this manner to display his great power, to make the Israelites sensible that those serpents were sent by him; and that if he was their enemy, he could employ any instrument to their destruction, and if their friend, he could provide a remedy for the worst of evils.

24 Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, &c.] As the Amalekites were become irreclaimably wicked, and had "filled up the measure of their iniquity," the Almighty gave them up to national destruction, according to his prediction, Deut. xxxiii. 34.

27 They that speak in proverbs] That is, those who speak or write in a lofty and figurative style, such as the following poem appears to be, which was the composition of some ancient poet among the Amorites, on Sihon's victory over the Moabites.

Come into Heshbon, let the city of Sihon be built, &c.] That is, let Heshbon now become the city of Sihon, and be made fit for his royal seat.

28 For there is a fire gone out of Heshbon, &c.] The poet here rises into raptures, and prophesies the conquest of the whole country, by the desolating army of Sihon marching out of Heshbon.

29 O people of Chemosh, &c.] So he calls the Moabites, on account of their worshipping the god Chemosh, 1 Kings xi. 7. Chemosh is understood to be the sun.

33 Bashan] This mountain is much celebrated in scripture for its rich pastures, excellent breed of cattle, and stately oaks.

Before CHRIST 1452. for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

35 So they smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXI.

The defeat of the kings mentioned in this chapter indicates a beginning of the accomplishment of those promises that God had made to the children of Israel, that he would give them the land of Canaan, even whilst Moses lived. From the history of the fiery serpents we may observe the punishment of the Israelites for their frequent murmurings; and also the wonderful manner by which the people were healed of the bite of those serpents; but, above all, this history ought to lead our minds to Christ, the great antitype, who died on the cross to expiate sin.

C H A P. XXII.

1 The Israelites encamp in the plains of Moab. 2 Balak's first message for Balaam is refused. 15 His second message prevaileth. 22 An angel opposeth Balaam on the way; his ass seeth the angel, and endeavoureth to avoid him; Balaam smiteth the ass; God openeth the ass's mouth; the angel reproveth Balaam, but suffereth him to proceed on his journey. 36 Balak geth out to meet him.

AND the children of Israel set forward, and pitched in the plains of Moab on this side Jordan by Jericho.

2 ¶ And Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.

3 And Moab was sore afraid of the people, because they were many: and Moab was distressed because of the children of Israel.

4 And Moab said unto the elders of Midian, Now shall this company lick up all that are round about us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor to Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt: behold, they cover the face of the earth and they abide over against me:

6 Come now therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

7 And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with the rewards of divination in their hands; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, Lodge here this night, and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me: and the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

9 And God came unto Balaam, and said, What men are these with thee?

10 And Balaam said unto God, Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying, 11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure I shall be able to overcome them, and drive them out.

12 And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for they are blessed.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.

15 ¶ And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me:

17 For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me: come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 ¶ And God's anger was kindled because he went: and the angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.

23 And the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field: and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

24 But

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXII.

1 In the plains of Moab, &c.] These plains formerly belonged to Moab, but were now in the possession of the Amorites: they lay opposite to the fords of Jordan; that river flowing between them and the town of Jericho.

4 Moab said unto the elders of Midian] That is, by his messengers, whom he sent unto the kings and princes of Midian, inviting them to join with him as confederates against the Israelites, whom he represented as their common enemy.

As the ox licketh up the grass of the field, &c.] By this metaphor he signified with what ease the Israelites would conquer them, and what an universal desolation they would make, in case they did not meet with timely opposition.

5 He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam, &c.] The scripture expressly calls Balaam a prophet; and some are of opinion, that he had been a good man, till loving the wages of unrighteousness, he apostatized from God; and, betaking himself to idolatry, fell under the delusion of Satan.

6 Curse me this people, &c.] Some of the wisest nations among the heathens believed the persons of their prophets to be in such great esteem with their gods, that they would listen to, and ratify their benedictions or execrations; and that such had effect not only on private persons, but even whole communities.

9 God came unto Balaam, &c.] That is, manifested his will to him by an angel, ver. 23.

12 They are blessed.] They are under the protection of heaven, and no imprecations against them will avail.

18 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, &c.]

Thus far his regard to the divine command had some ascendancy over his covetousness and ambition; but yet those passions were not entirely subdued, since the next words shew, he would have gratified them, if he could by any means have satisfied his conscience.

19 Tarry ye also here this night, &c.] The iniquity of his heart now began to disclose itself: he had an avaricious eye on the tempting rewards, and therefore hinted to the messengers, that there was some upon his intercessions, that the counsels of heaven might be altered; and that the unchangeable Being might possibly recede from his former decree.

20 If the men come to call thee, rise up and go with them] He would not hearken to the voice of God, and so was left to perish by his own devices; and was, with the princes of Moab, slain by the Israelites, Josh. xiii. 22.

But yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.] The meaning seems to be, that he might go with the messengers of Balak, provided they did not require him to do any thing contrary to what God had before commanded him.

21 Balaam rose up in the morning, &c.] His great haste betrayed the inclinations of his heart, shewed how much he hankered after the wages of unrighteousness, and his wicked intention of cursing the Israelites.

22 God's anger was kindled because he went, &c.] Because he went voluntarily, and waited not for the messengers to call him; in all probability, he set out with an intention to curse Israel, according to the earnest desire of Balak.

23 The ass saw the angel—and—turned aside out of the way, &c.] Terrified, as it seems, by the brightness and dazzling appearance of the angel; which yet the eye of Balaam did not perceive, being blinded.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.

25 And when the as's saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall: and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the as's saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the as's with a staff.

28 And the LORD opened the mouth of the as's, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the as's, Because thou hast mocked me: I would there were a sword in mine hand, for now would I kill thee.

30 And the as's said unto Balaam, Am not I thine as's, upon which thou hast ridden ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the LORD opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine as's these three times? behold, I went out to withstand thee, because thy way is perverse before me:

33 And the as's saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the LORD, I have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it displease thee, I will get me back again.

35 And the angel of the LORD said unto Balaam, Go with the men: but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 ¶ And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, he went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, which is in the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am I not able indeed to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have I now any power at all to say any thing? the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

39 And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto Kirjath-huzoth.

40 And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the high places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

Before CHRIST 1452.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXII.

From the conduct of Balaam, we may infer, that covetous men will even act against the dictates of their consciences, to gratify their avarice; but that God can effectually employ the meanest instruments to stop their mad career, especially when they are bent on the destruction of the people of the most high. From Balaam's being ordered to continue his journey when he would have returned, we may learn, that God accepts of no forced obedience, which proceeds from fear; and that when sinners embark in undertakings contrary to his, he can produce a quite contrary effect from their evil designs, by making it appear that he will be always master, and cause them to bring about his purposes, even against their own minds.

C H A P. XXIII.

1 Balak's sacrifice. 7 Balaam's first parable. 14 Balak sacrificeth again. 18 Balaam's second parable. 25 Balak is displeased with Balaam; but bringeth him to the top of Peor, and sacrificeth there.

AND Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven oxen and seven rams.

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken; and Balak and Balaam offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

3 And Balaam said unto Balak, Stand by thy burnt offering, and I will go: peradventure the LORD will come to meet me: and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And he went to an high place.

4 And God met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and, lo, he stood by his burnt sacrifice, he, and all the princes of Moab.

7 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, Balak the king of Moab hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, Come, curse me Jacob, and come, defy Israel.

8 How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

10 Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!

11 And Balak said unto Balaam, What hast thou done blinded with the glare of filthy lucre, with bribery and corruption; and having his head and heart filled with the greatest expectations from Balak.

28 Opened the mouth of the as's, &c.] The end of this extraordinary miracle probably was, to shew the mercenary prophet, that his passions had blinded and stupified him; that he had not even the sense and discernment of a brute, and that it would be dangerous and vain attempt for him to proceed to prevaricate, and not to say to Balak what God should put in his mouth.

29 Balaam said unto the as's] Balaam might possibly not regard or attend to the wonder through excess of rage or madness; and his threatening to kill the beast implies that his passion was downright frenzy, and the behaviour of a man quite beside himself, who, though awake, had not the proper use of his faculties.

Because thou hast mocked me, &c.] That is, exposed me to scorn.

31 The Lord opened the eyes of Balaam] Either by presenting the angel to his view, who was concealed before; or else by awakening his attention, so that he might take notice of the angel, whom he had not hitherto observed.

He bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face.] Through fear and astonishment.

35 Go with the men, &c.] A man of so covetous disposition as Balaam, not daring to imprecate evil against the Israelites, though prompted by the greatest rewards, was a sufficient token and assurance to the Moabites, that they were the peculiar care of Providence.

39 Kirjath-huzoth.] In the Hebrew, The city of stones, or of many stones. Perhaps it was another name for Ar, the metropolis of Moab.

41 Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the high places of Baal, &c.] "Baal" signifies Lord; and was a name given to many different deities, both male and female.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIII.

1 Seven altars and seven rams.] These sacrifices were observed, according to the religious rites in worshipping the God of Israel.

3 He went to an high place.] In the margin, He went solitarily, or into the most retired part of the grove; for he was already on an high place.

5 The Lord put a word in Balaam's mouth, &c.] In the Hebrew, Jehovah put a word, &c. Hence it is reasonable to conclude, that Balaam was a prophet of the true God.

7 His parable, &c.] That is, his prophetic speech.

8 How shall I curse, &c.] How can I perform an improbability, and curse those whom God Almighty has determined to bless.

9 The people shall dwell alone, &c.] That is, shall be separated from all other nations, by laws, religion, and manners peculiar to themselves.

10 Who can count the dust of Jacob?] The Septuagint render it, Who can count the seed of Jacob? A people like the dust in multitude.

Let me die the death of the righteous] He vainly wishes to die like those who were in the favour of God, after having enjoyed a prosperous, if not wicked, life, in this world.

Let my last end be like his.] The Hebrew word, translated "last end," properly signifies, a future state after death. The desire of Balaam, therefore, is a striking proof that a future state was generally believed and acknowledged in those early and remote times.

Before CHRIST 1452. done unto me? I took thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast blessed them altogether.

12 And he answered and said, Must I not take heed to speak that which the LORD hath put in my mouth?

13 And Balak said unto him, Come, I pray thee, with me unto another place, from whence thou mayest see them: thou shalt see but the utmost part of them, and shalt not see them all: and curse me them from thence.

14 ¶ And he brought him into the field of Zophim, to the top of Pisgah, and built seven altars, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

15 And he said unto Balak, Stand here by thy burnt offering, while I meet the LORD yonder.

16 And the LORD met Balaam, and put a word in his mouth, and said, Go again unto Balak, and say thus.

17 And when he came to him, behold, he stood by his burnt offering, and the princes of Moab with him. And Balak said unto him, What hath the LORD spoken?

18 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, Rise up, Balak, and hear; hearken unto me, thou son of Zippor:

19 God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?

20 Behold, I have received commandment to bless: and he hath blessed; and I cannot reverse it.

21 He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel: the LORD his God is with him, and the shout of a king is among them.

22 God brought them out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn.

23 Surely there is no enchantment against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel: according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, What hath God wrought!

24 Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

25 ¶ And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all.

26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak, Told not I thee, saying, Ali that the LORD speaketh, that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, Come, I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence.

28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of Peor, that looketh toward Jeshimon.

29 And Balaam said unto Balak, Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams.

30 And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIII.

We may observe from this chapter, that though Balak used his utmost endeavours to induce Balaam to curse the Israelites; and though the prophet, allured by the promises made him, was inclined to curse them, yet God did not permit him, but obliged him to bless them; by which we may learn, that God always rules over the wicked; that he does not suffer them to do his children the harm they desire; nay, that he makes use of them to do good to them; and that nothing can hurt those whom God blesses and favours.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Balaam, leaving divinations, prophesieth the happiness of Israel. 10 Balak in anger dismisseth him. 15 He prophesieth of the Star of Jacob, and the destruction of some nations.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

2 And Balaam lifted up his eyes, and he saw Israel abiding in his tents according to their tribes; and the spirit of God came upon him.

3 And he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said:

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

5 How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel!

6 As the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river's side, as the trees of lign aloes which the LORD hath planted, and as cedar trees beside the waters.

7 He shall pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be in many waters, and his king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.

8 God brought him forth out of Egypt; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn: he shall eat up the nations his enemies, and shall break their bones, and pierce them through with his arrows.

9 He

14 The field of Zophim, &c.] That is, the field of the watchmen, who were placed on the top of Pisgah, a very high mountain in the country of Moab, to give notice of an enemy's approach. It seems to have been a plain on the top of the mountain, where these watchmen were placed.

16 The Lord met Balaam, &c.] The Lord came to him personally, in a glorious manifestation of the Shechinah; which so amazed and confounded him, that he never afterwards went to enquire what he should say.

19 God is not a man that he should lie.] It is in vain for man to importune a Being, who is in his nature immutable, to reverse the blessings he has promised to Israel, or to curse those whom he hath said he will bless.

21 He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, &c.] The Vulgate renders it, There is no idol in Jacob, neither is there any image seen in Israel. Intimating, that notwithstanding the Israelites might have been guilty of violating the divine laws in many instances, yet so long as they kept themselves from the worship of false gods, the true one whom they served, would preserve them from their enemies, and crown all their undertakings with success.

22 He hath as it were the strength of an unicorn.] Some commentators take the Hebrew word reem, translated "unicorn" for the rhinoceros; a creature which, from its make, and the structure of its body, appears to be the strongest of quadrupeds, the elephant not excepted. Many think it signifies the algazel, or gazellus, a kind of mountain or wild goat, of a considerable size, very common in Arabia.

23 There is no enchantment against Jacob, &c.] No imprecations whatever, uttered by a diviner, can affect a people who are under the immediate protection of the Almighty.

28 Balak brought Balaam to the top of Peor, &c.] This was the most famous eminence in all the country of Moab, where Baal is supposed to have had a temple, and was therefore called Baal-Peor.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIV.

1 He went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments, &c.] That is, he did not use unwarrantable arts, as before.

3 The man, whose eyes are open, hath said.] The words should be rendered, The man who had his eyes shut, but now open; alluding to his not seeing the angel.

4 Falling into a trance, but having his eyes open.] Or rather, "falling," and his eyes were opened; in allusion to what happened in the way.

6 As the valleys.] As the word nechalim signifies either brooks, or valleys, this sentence may be rendered, As streams of water they are extended. The imagery which composes this beautiful simile, conveys the highest degree of beauty, order, and utility.

As the trees of lign aloes, &c.] This tree, (which is not the common aloe) grows in Arabia and the East Indies, and diffuses a very fragrant odour.

7 He shall pour the water out of his buckets.] God shall bless them with plentiful harvests; in which rain greatly contributes in those countries.

His seed shall be in many waters.] Or, by many waters; it shall be sown in a well watered ground, and produce a plentiful crop; probably implying the great increase of the Israelites.

His king shall be higher than Agag, &c.] Agag was a general name for the kings of the Amalekites; he was very powerful: but, says Balaam, "his king," i. e. Christ, the king of Israel, "shall be higher than Agag;" shall be exalted above all the kings of the earth.

Shall eat up, &c.] He shall utterly destroy and extirpate.

9 He

9 He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion: who shall stir him up? Blessed is he that bleseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

10 ¶ And Balak's anger was kindled against Balaam, and smote his hands together: and Balak said unto Balaam, I called thee to curse mine enemies, and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

11 Therefore now flee thee to thy place: I thought to promote thee unto great honour; but, lo, the LORD hath kept thee back from honour.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, Spake I not also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying,

13 If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my people: come therefore and I will advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people in the latter days.

15 ¶ And he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said:

16 He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the most high, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

17 I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth.

18 And Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek, he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was the first of the nations; but his latter end shall be that he perish for ever.

21 And he looked on the Kenites, and took up his parable, and said, Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock.

22 Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

9 He couched, &c.] Implying, that the Israelites should conquer the Canaanites, and settle in their land, and that all attempts to disturb them would prove ineffectual.

10 Smote his hands together, &c.] So as to make a loud explosion. This was an expression of great anger or concern, Ezek. xxi. 17.

11 The Lord hath kept thee back from honour.] Meaning, that he had deprived himself of great advantages by being less solicitous of pleasing Jehovah, than Baal-peor.

14 Come—and I will advertise thee, &c.] Probably Balaam here gave to Balak that wicked politic council mentioned chap. xxxi. 16.

17 I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh.] The true sense of the passage is, I see him (the person of whom he is about to speak) though not yet in being: I behold him, though as yet afar off.

There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall arise out of Israel.] This prophecy belongs principally to Christ: the metaphor here used of a star was of a mysterious kind, and is to be understood only as relating to Christ, the eternal Son of God, who was the star seen by the eastern sages, Matt. ii. 2. and "the bright and morning star," Rev. xxii. 16.

Shall smite the corners of Moab.] That is, shall totally destroy the Moabites. It means, spiritually, Christ's glorious victory over the Gentiles, by captivating their minds to the love of goodness, and subduing their will and affections to the service of the true God.

And destroy all the children of Sheth.] We may reasonably conclude, that not all mankind in general (as the words seem to imply) but some particular persons, were intended by "the children of Sheth." The Jerusalem Targum translates it, the sons of the east.

18 Edom shall be a possession, &c.] This was fulfilled by David, 2 Sam. viii. 14. See also Psalm lx. 8. and cviii. 9.

19 Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, &c.] This prophecy was fulfilled literally in David, and was spiritually accomplished in Christ.

20 Amalek was the first of the nations.] They were possessed of these countries before the days of Abraham and Lot. See Gen. iv.

But his latter end shall be that he perish for ever.] This prediction was literally fulfilled by Saul, 1 Sam. xv. 18.

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas, who shall live when God doeth this! Before CHRIST 1452.

24 And ships shall come from the coast of Chittim, and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXIV.

These prophecies of Balaam import, that a great king should destroy the Moabites and the Edomites; that the Amalekites should likewise be destroyed; that the Kenites should be carried away into captivity by the Assyrians; that afterwards the Assyrians should be conquered by the people of Chittim, that is, by the Macedonians. These prophecies are all of them remarkable, because they foretel what was to happen several ages after to all those people.

C H A P. XXV.

1 Israel at Shittim commit whoredom and idolatry. 6 Phinehas killeth Zimri and Cozbi. 10 God therefore giveth him an everlasting priesthood. 16 God commandeth Moses to vex the Midianites.

AND Israel abode in Shittim, and the people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.

2 And they called the people unto the sacrifices of their gods: and the people did eat, and bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor: and the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel.

4 And the LORD said unto Moses, Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the LORD against the sun, that the fierce anger of the LORD may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto the judges of Israel, Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

6 ¶ And, behold, one of the children of Israel came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitish woman in the sight of Moses, and in the sight of all the congregation of the children of Israel, who were weeping before the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 And when Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the 21 And he looked on the Kenites, &c.] By the Kenites we should understand the Midianites, Jethro's posterity, who is called the Kenite, Judges i. 16.

22 Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.] The power and number of the Kenites shall decline, till in the end they are carried away captive by the Assyrians.

23 Alas! who shall live when God doeth this!] Who shall escape the ravages of the Assyrians, when God shall permit them to over-run a great part of the world!

24 Ships shall come from the coast of Chittim.] By Chittim is meant Greece, Gen. x. 4. This prophecy was fulfilled by Alexander the Great.

And shall afflict Asshur, &c.] The Grecians under Alexander the Great subdued all those countries: and the Romans afterwards extended their empire into the same regions.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXV.

1 Shittim.] This was in the plains of Moab. The people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.] Balaam devised this mean stratagem to deprive the Israelites of the favour of the Almighty, and to bring them under a curse.

2 They called the people to the sacrifices of their gods, &c.] The feasts following these sacrifices, were accompanied with music and dancing, which had a great tendency to inflame their carnal appetites, which these fair deluders would not permit them to satisfy, till they had first consented to worship their idols.

4 Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up.] More properly thus, take all the heads or judges of the people to thy assistance, and hang them up; that is, all those that have quitted God for Baal-peor.

Before the Lord.] That is, before the sanctuary.

Against the sun, &c.] That is, openly or publicly.

5 Slay ye every one his men, &c.] It seems the judges were very dilatory in executing this order; seeing God himself thought proper to visit the principal offenders with exemplary punishment.

the woman through her belly. So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

9 And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

11 Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous for my sake among them, that I consumed not the children of Israel in my jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

13 And he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood; because he was zealous for his God, and made ~~an~~ atonement for the children of Israel.

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of a chief house among the Simeonites.

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

16 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 Vex the Midianites, and smite them:

18 For they vex you with their wives, wherewith they have beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, which was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXV.

The sin committed by the Israelites with the Moabitish women, should warn us to resist with more eagerness the temptations of the flesh, than the malice of our enemies. See 1 Cor. x. The zeal of Moses and Phinehas, and the reward the latter met with, prove that it is our duty zealously to oppose and rebuke all those who openly offend God.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, 11 Notwithstanding the children of Korah died not.

express command of Moses, the supreme magistrate, who ordered the judges of the people to fall upon those who had joined themselves to Baal-Peor, and to slay every one his men, ver. 5.

9 Those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand. St. Paul, in 1 Cor. x. 8. mentions only twenty and three thousand, who fell in one day; whence it seems as if one thousand ~~were~~ slain by the judges, and twenty and three thousand by the hand of God.

11 He was zealous for my sake, &c. Or, he was jealous with my jealousy. Such was his zeal for the honour of God, and the national interest, he could not bear so notorious a breach of allegiance.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVI.

2 Take the sum of all the congregation, &c. God commands a third poll, or register of males, to be taken to demonstrate his faithfulness in fulfilling his threats denounced against their ungrateful and disobedient predecessors, and in performing his promise of multiplying Abraham's seed.

10 The earth swallowed them up with Korah. It is very probable that Korah was consumed with the fire of God, with those who offered incense unbidden. See chap. xvi. 35.

35 ¶ These are the sons of Ephraim after their families: of Shuthelah, the family of the Shuthalites: of Bechar, the family of the Bachrites: of Tahan, the family of the Tahanites.

40 And the sons of Bela were Ard and Naaman: of Ard, the family of the Ardites: and of Naaman, the family of the Naamites.

41 These are the sons of Benjamin after their families: and they that were numbered of them were forty and five thousand and six hundred.

42 ¶ These are the sons of Dan after their families: of Shuham, the family of the Shuhamites. These are the families of Dan after their families.

43 All the families of the Shuhamites, according to those that were numbered of them, were threescore and four thousand and four hundred.

44 ¶ Of the children of Asher after their families: of Jimna, the family of the Jimnites: of Jesui, the family of the Jesuites: of Beriah, the family of the Beriites.

48 ¶ Of the sons of Naphtali after their families: of Jahzeel, the family of the Jahzeelites: of Guni, the family of the Gunites:

49 Of Jezer, the family of the Jezerites: of Shillem, the family of the Shillemites.

50 These are the families of Naphtali according to their families: and they that were numbered of them were forty and five thousand and four hundred.

29 The family of the Machirites, &c.] See Joshua xvii. 1. from whence it appears, that Machir had divers children, some of whose posterity took their names from Machir, and some from his son Gilead.

30 Jeezer, &c.] He is also called Abiezer. See Josh. xvii. 2. Judges vi. 11, 34.

51 Six hundred, &c.] Notwithstanding all that had happened to the Israelites in the desert, and the plagues inflicted on them, their number was but one thousand eight hundred and twenty persons less than at the last poll, chap. i. 46.

54 To every one shall his inheritance be given, &c.] The land of Canaan contained about 14,976,000 acres; which quantity of land will divide to 600,000 men, above twenty-one acres and an half in No. 16.

51 These were the numbered of the children of Israel, six hundred thousand and a thousand seven hundred and thirty. Before CHRIST 1422.

52 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

53 Unto these the land shall be divided for an inheritance according to the number of names.

54 To many thou shalt give the more inheritance, and to few thou shalt give the less inheritance: to every one shall his inheritance be given according to those that were numbered of him.

55 Notwithstanding the land shall be divided by lot: according to the names of the tribes of their fathers they shall inherit.

56 According to the lot shall the possession thereof be divided between many and few.

57 ¶ And these are they that were numbered of the Levites after their families: of Gershon, the family of the Gershonites: of Kohath, the family of the Kohathites: of Merari, the family of the Merarites.

58 These are the families of the Levites: the family of the Libnites, the family of the Hebronites; the family of the Muhlites, the family of the Mushites, the family of the Korathites. And Kohath begat Amram.

59 And the name of Amram's wife was Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt: and she bare unto Amram Aaron and Moses, and Miriam their sister.

60 And unto Aaron was born Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

61 And Nadab and Abihu died, when they offered strange fire before the LORD.

62 And those that were numbered of them were twenty and three thousand, all males from a month old and upward: for they were not numbered among the children of Israel, because there was no inheritance given them among the children of Israel.

63 ¶ These are they that were numbered by Moses and Eleazar the priest, who numbered the children of Israel in the plains of Moab by Jordan, near Jericho.

64 But among these there was not a man of them whom Moses and Aaron the priest numbered, when they numbered the children of Israel in the wilderness of Sinai.

65 For the LORD had said of them, They shall surely die in the wilderness. And there was not left a man of them, save Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXVI.

God's care for his people was a great act of mercy; he caused them to be numbered, in order to prevent disputes when they divided the land. Their number was nearly the same as it was forty years before; upwards of six hundred thousand men, besides women and children, had died; from which we may learn, what a heinous sin it is to murmur against God. Caleb and Joshua, on the contrary, are particularly mentioned, because they believed in the promise God had made, and were not afraid of the Canaanites.

65 Save Caleb—and Joshua, &c.] Whom God hath promised to spare, as a reward of their zeal, chap. xiv. 24, 30, 38. Some of the Levites also seem to be excepted; and it is certain that Eleazar was born in Egypt, Exod. vi. 23.

2 And they stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

3 Our father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD in the company of Korah; but died in his own sin, and had no sons.

4 Why should the name of our father be done away from among his family, because he hath no son? Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

5 And Moses brought their cause before the LORD.

6 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

7 The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

8 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

9 And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren.

10 And if ye have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren.

11 And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel a statute of judgment, as the LORD commanded Moses.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel.

13 And when thou hast seen it, thou also shalt be gathered unto thy people, as Aaron thy brother was gathered.

14 For ye rebelled against my commandment in the desert of Zin, in the strife of the congregation, to sanctify me at the water before their eyes: that is the water of Meribah in Kadish in the wilderness of Zin.

15 ¶ And Moses spake unto the LORD, saying,

16 Let the LORD, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation, 17 Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the LORD be not as sheep which have no shepherd.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on CHAP. XXVII.

1 Then came the daughters of Zelophehad, &c.] These apprehending that, being females, they were to be excluded from all settled inheritance in the lands and estates of the country, drew up a representation of their case, and presented it to Moses, then in the great court of judicature at the tabernacle.

3 He died in his own sin, &c.] That is, he did not die as an associate in the rebellion, but as a common sinner, to whom death is due. His sin was personal, and therefore did not affect his children.

4 Why should the name of our father be done away? &c.] When any one's family was extinct, his name was raised out of the genealogical tables.

12 Get thee up into this mount Abarim, &c.] These words were spoken after all that follows in this book, and in Deuteronomy; appears from Deut. xxxii. 49.

14 Ye rebelled, &c.] See chap. xx. ver. 12.

18 Take thee Joshua, the son of Nun] As the high office of judge of Israel required a person of the most eminent qualifications, God appointed Joshua to succeed Moses, though he was not only of another family, but another tribe; viz. that of Ephraim.

Lay thine hand upon him, &c.] Moses, by this ceremony, transferred the public trust upon Joshua, which was delegated to him from God.

20 Put some of thine honour upon him, &c.] Moses is ordered to permit him to share with him immediately in the government, that 20 And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel may be obedient.

21 And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him after the judgment of Urim before the LORD: at his word shall they go out, and at his word they shall come in, both he, and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation.

22 And Moses did as the LORD commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation:

23 And he laid his hands upon him, and gave him a charge, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXVII.

By the law concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, it appears that God designed to preserve the distinction of families and inheritances among the Jews, and that daughters should have their right; from whence we should learn to administer impartial justice to all, respecting property. The establishing Joshua in the place of Moses, is a token of God's care of his people; and shews us, that when he removes any of his servants from us, he usually raises up others to succeed them.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 The Lord's offerings are commanded to be offered in their due season. 3 The continual burnt offering. 9 The offering on the sabbath, 11 on the new moons, 16 at the passover, 26 in the day of firstfruits.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 2 Command the children of Israel, and say unto them, My offering, and my bread for my sacrifices made by fire, for a sweet savour unto me, shall ye observe to offer unto me in their due season.

3 ¶ And thou shalt say unto them, This is the offering made by fire which ye shall offer unto the LORD; two lambs of the first year without spot day by day, for a continual burnt offering.

4 The one lamb shalt thou offer in the morning, and the other lamb shalt thou offer at even;

5 And a tenth part of an ephah of flour for a meat offering, mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil.

6 It is a continual burnt offering, which was ordained in mount Sinai for a sweet savour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

7 And the drink offering thereof shall be the fourth part of an hin for the one lamb: in the holy place shalt thou the people might thereby have the greater respect for this his successor.

21 He shall stand before Eleazar the priest] This privilege shews the pre-eminence Joshua had above other Israelites, who, though not admitted to so near an intercourse with God as Moses, was nevertheless assured, he should not want direction from the oracle, in any doubt, by consulting the high-priest, who was to receive the answer.

After the judgment of Urim, &c.] See note on Exod. xxviii. 30.

22 Moses did as the Lord commanded him, &c.] This shews him to have been governed by a principle of disinterestedness, which places him above all other law-givers, who generally took care to advance their own family.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on CHAP. XXVIII.

1 The Lord spake unto Moses, saying.] The stated sacrifices and service of the tabernacle, having now for many years been very much interrupted by reason of the frequent and tedious journeys of the Israelites; God commands Moses to repeat them to the people in the following order, of daily, weekly, monthly, and anniversary sacrifices.

2 My offering, and my bread, &c.] Those sacrifices which were consumed on the altar, were consumed the food of God. Lev. iii. 11.

3 Two lambs of the first year, &c.] The first national sacrifice was to be offered every day, morning and evening, throughout the whole year.

thou cause the strong wine to be poured unto the LORD for a drink offering.

8 And the other lamb shalt thou offer at even: as the meat offering of the morning, and as the drink offering thereof, thou shalt offer it, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD.

9 ¶ And on the sabbath day two lambs of the first year without spot, and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, and the drink offering thereof:

10 This is the burnt offering of every sabbath, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

11 ¶ And in the beginnings of your months ye shall offer a burnt offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, seven lambs of the first year without spot:

12 And three tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, for one bullock; and two tenth deals of flour for a meat offering, mingled with oil, for one ram;

13 And a several tenth deal of flour mingled with oil for a meat offering unto one lamb; for a burnt offering of a sweet favour, a sacrifice made by fire unto the LORD.

14 And their drink offerings shall be half an hin of wine unto a bullock, and the third part of an hin unto a ram, and a fourth part of an hin unto a lamb: this is the burnt offering of every month throughout the months of the year.

15 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering unto the LORD shall be offered, beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

16 ¶ And in the fourteenth day of the first month is the passover of the LORD.

17 And in the fifteenth day of this month is the feast: seven days shall unleavened bread be eaten.

18 In the first day shall be an holy convocation; ye shall do no manner of servile work therein:

19 But ye shall offer a sacrifice made by fire for a burnt offering unto the LORD; two young bullocks, and one ram, and seven lambs of the first year: they shall be unto you without blemish:

20 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil: three tenth deals shall ye offer for a bullock, and two tenth deals for a ram;

21 A several tenth deal shalt thou offer for every lamb, throughout the seven lambs:

22 And one goat for a sin offering, to make an atonement for you.

23 Ye shall offer these beside the burnt offering in the morning, which is for a continual burnt offering.

24 After this manner ye shall offer daily, throughout the seven days, the meat of the sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet favour unto the LORD: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt offering, and his drink offering.

25 And on the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work.

26 ¶ Also in the day of the first fruits, when ye bring a new meat offering unto the LORD, after your weeks be out, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work:

9 On the sabbath day two lambs, &c.] The second national sacrifice was weekly. On this day the burnt offerings and meat offerings were ordered to be double, as appears from ver. 10.

11 In the beginnings of your months ye shall offer, &c.] The third stated sacrifice was monthly, to be offered upon the first day of every month. As one of the most natural divisions of time is, by the periodical revolutions of the moon, which, in these serious climates, could be easily discerned by all; so it is natural to think, that the solemn celebration of the new moon, in honour of the true God, was in use even before the rise of idolatry, and probably made a part of the patriarchal religion.

15 Unto the Lord, &c.] Not to the moon, as was practised by the Egyptians, and other nations.

16 The fourteenth day—is the passover, &c.] This fourth and national sacrifice was annually, viz. the great passover festival, with the feast of unleavened bread, annexed to it. Exod. xii. 5, 6.

24 After this manner ye shall offer] This solemn festival was designed as an acknowledgment of God's goodness in bringing them

28 And their meat offering of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals unto one bullock, two tenth deals unto one ram,

29 A several tenth deal unto one lamb, throughout the seven lambs;

30 And one kid of the goats to make an atonement for you.

31 Ye shall offer them beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, (they shall be unto you without blemish) and their drink offerings.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXVIII.

From this chapter, we may discern the watchfulness of God over his people, by a new promulgation of the law before the death of Moses, and just after the investiture of Joshua. Hence we should learn to treasure up the word of God in our hearts, and practise it in our lives. By the first day of every month being set apart for the exercise of religious duties, we are to observe, that we should dedicate as much of our time as possible, to the worship of the God of nature, providence, and grace.

AND in the seventh month, on the first day of the month, ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work; it is a day of blowing the trumpets unto you.

2 And ye shall offer a burnt offering for a sweet favour unto the LORD; one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year without blemish:

7 ¶ And ye shall have on the tenth day of this seventh month an holy convocation; and ye shall afflict your souls: ye shall not do any work therein:

8 But ye shall offer a burnt offering unto the LORD for a sweet favour; one young bullock, one ram, and seven lambs of the first year; they shall be unto you without blemish:

9 And their meat offering shall be of flour mingled with oil, three tenth deals to a bullock, and two tenth deals to one ram,

26 In the day of the first fruits, &c.] The first national sacrifice was also annual, viz. at the harvest-festival, when the first fruits of corn were to be offered up.

After your weeks be out, &c.] Seven weeks to be counted from Easter to Pentecost, Lev. xxiii. 15, 16.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIX.

¶ In the seventh month, &c.] The fifth national and annual sacrifice was performed on the feast of trumpets, about the time of our September. As the scripture nowhere gives the reason of this festival, authors are much divided about it. Some of the fathers were of opinion, it was in memory of the law given on mount Sinai, at which time the trumpet and thunder was heard. Others have conceived that it was intended to put mankind in remembrance of the general resurrection, which is to be ushered in with the sound of the trumpet, Lev. xxiii. 24. Univ. Hist.

12 ¶ And on the fifteenth day of the seventh month ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work, and ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days:

17 ¶ And on the second day ye shall offer twelve young bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without spot:

18 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

19 And one kid of the goats for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and the meat offering thereof, and their drink offerings.

20 ¶ And on the third day eleven bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish;

21 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

22 And one goat for a sin offering; besides the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

23 ¶ And on the fourth day ten bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

26 ¶ And on the fifth day nine bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without spot:

27 And their meat offering, and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

28 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

29 ¶ And on the sixth day eight bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

30 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

31 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

32 ¶ And on the seventh day seven bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

33 And their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

34 And one goat for a sin offering; besides a continual burnt offering, his meat offering, and his drink offering.

35 ¶ On the eighth day ye shall have a solemn assembly: ye shall do no servile work therein:

36 But ye shall offer a burnt offering; a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: one bullock, one ram, seven lambs of the first year without blemish:

37 Their meat offering and their drink offerings for the bullock, for the ram, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

38 And one goat for a sin offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat offering, and his drink offering.

39 These things ye shall do unto the LORD in your set feasts, beside your vows, and your freewill offerings, for your burnt offerings, and for your meat offerings, and for your drink offerings, and for your peace offerings.

40 And Moses told the children of Israel according to all that the LORD commanded Moses.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXIX.

We may here learn, that no religion can be of God, that does not inculcate the doctrine of repentance; nor is repentance genuine, unless it be habitual. As the sacrifices were not so numerous on the last day as on the others, we are hereby admonished not to trust in any thing for salvation but the merits of Christ, and to turn to him by faith and true repentance.

CHAP. XXX.

1 Vows are not to be broken. 3 The exceptions of a maid's vow, of a wife's, 9 of a widow's, or of her that is divorced.

AND Moses spake unto the heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded.

2 If a man vow a vow unto the LORD, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond; he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

3 ¶ If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond therewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if her father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand: and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

6 ¶ And if she had at all an husband, when she vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

7 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it: then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But

13 Thirteen young bullocks, &c.] All these troublesome services, and expensive sacrifices, made their religion a very grievous yoke, under which the best men among them groaned, longing for the coming of the Messiah; when, their own doctors say, "No sacrifices shall remain but those of thanksgiving, praise and prayer." It appears from the account, that there were every year sacrificed at the tabernacle and temple, at the national charge, the following number of beasts; viz. lambs, 1101; bullocks, 132; rams, 72; kids, 21; goats, 2; exclusive of a prodigious number of voluntary vow and trespass-offerings.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXX.

¶ Unto the heads of the tribes, &c.] This law was delivered to them, that they might instruct those committed to their charge, explain the law to them, give them necessary cautions upon it, and also call them to account for the breach of their vows.

¶ If a man vow a vow unto the Lord.] Vows were early in use among the Jews; thus Jacob vowed a tenth of all his acquisitions to the Lord, when he retired to Padan-aram for fear of his brother Esau, Gen. xxviii. 20. and Hannah, desirous of a son, in order to obtain her request, vowed before-hand, to consecrate him to God i Sam. ii. 21.

An oath to bind his soul, &c.] A promise to man is but a bond upon the estate; but a promise to God, is a bond upon the soul.

3 If a woman also vow a vow, &c.] Women at their own disposal, were bound, if possible, to perform their vows; but if a woman unmarried, and consequently at her parent's disposal, should vow a vow, the law here orders that her vow should be no longer obligatory, than in respect to her parents consent it at first maketh thereof; and it was the same with regard to wives, orphans, and servants, who are under the power of their husbands, guardians, and masters.

8 But if her husband disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 ¶ But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which are upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her, in the day that he heard them.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them; then he shall bear her iniquity.

16 These are the statutes, which the LORD commanded Moses, between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXX.

From this chapter we are taught, that all lawful vows should be performed, and that nothing (if we have ability) can release us from them; that rash vows, and such as we have no right to make, may be annulled, provided it be done lawfully, and by those who have proper right and authority; and that God takes care to preserve the power of fathers, husbands, and guardians.

C H A P. XXXI.

- 1 The Midianites are spoiled, and Balaam slain. 13 Moses is wroth with the officers for saving the women alive, and ordereth the soldiers with their captives and spoil to be purified. 21 Eleazar sheweth the law of purification. 25 The proportion whereby the prey is to be divided. 48 The voluntary oblation of the officers unto the treasury of the Lord.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

2 Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou be gathered unto thy people.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the LORD of Midian.

4 Of every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war.

5 So they were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand.

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males.

8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Reken, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they burnt all their cities wheremin they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil, unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 ¶ And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle.

15 And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved all the women alive?

16 Behold, these caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the LORD in the matter of Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the LORD.

17 Now therefore kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.

18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

19 And do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And purify all your raiment, and all that is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

21 ¶ And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 Only the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead,

23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless

14 If her husband—hold his peace, &c.] His silence, or not contradicting it at the first proposal, shall be interpreted consent, nor shall it be in the husband's or father's power to retract that consent, or hinder her from performing her vow; if he does, "He shall bear her iniquity;" God shall punish him, and not her, for a breach of sacred faith.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXI.

2 Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites, &c.] The Midianites were the posterity of Abraham by Keturah; some of them settled south of Canaan, among whom Jethro lived, and they retained the worship of the true God; but these were settled east of Canaan, and were idolaters, neighbours to, and in confederacy with the Moabites. In conformity ■ the counsel given them by Balaam, these latter had seduced the Israelites to uncleanness, and the worship of their gods; for which Moses is here ordered to send an army against them, and utterly to destroy them.

4 Of every tribe a thousand, &c.] By this small number, to let them see they were to rely more upon God, than the strength of their army.

6 And Phinehas] Some have thought, that from the late courage, No. 16.

geous act of Phinehas, chap. xxv. 8. he was appointed to command the troops who were to avenge the Lord of Midian. But as Moses in the war with the Amorites, had sent the forces under the conduct of Joshua, it was most probable he was commander at that time; and that the province appointed Phinehas, was only to take care of the holy things.

With the holy instruments and the trumpets, &c.] The most probable opinion is, that by these instruments, are to be understood the ark of the covenant, and what was included in it.

7 They slew all the males.] That is, all they met with, giving no quarter. But it is not to be understood of all the males of the nation; because the Midianites of this country, who are reckoned with the children of the east, Judges vi. 3. were a potent and formidable enemy to Israel, in the days of Gideon.

17 Kill every male] Moses ordered the male children to be slain, that he might thereby extirpate the whole nation, as far as lay in his power, and prevent their revenging the death of their parents, in case they were suffered to live to man's estate.

Kill every woman that hath known man, &c.] Because they had been the chief instruments of drawing the Israelites to idolatry.

18 All the women children—keep alive, &c.] Being young, they might be brought to embrace the Jewish religion.

let it shall be purified with the water of separation : and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water.

24 And ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation :

27 And divide the prey into two parts ; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation :

28 And levy a tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle : one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep :

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for an heave offering of the LORD.

30 And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the flocks, of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, which keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five thousand sheep.

33 And threescore and twelve thousand beeves,

34 And threescore and one thousand asses,

35 And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.

36 And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep:

37 And the LORD's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.

38 And the beeves were thirty and six thousand ; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and twelve.

39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred ; of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and one.

40 And the persons were sixteen thousand ; of which the LORD's tribute was thirty and two persons.

41 And Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's heave offering, unto Eleazar the priest, as the LORD commanded Moses.

42 And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the men that warred, 43 (Now the half that pertained unto the congregation was three hundred thousand and thirty thousand and seven thousand and five hundred sheep,

44 And thirty and six thousand beeves,

45 And thirty thousand asses and five hundred,

46 And sixteen thousand persons ;)

47 Even of the children of Israel's half, Moses took one portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto the Levites, which kept the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD ; as the LORD commanded Moses.

48 ¶ And the officers which were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses :

49 And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our charge, and there lacketh not one man of us.

27 Divide the prey, &c.] The captives and cattle ; as to the plate, jewels, and other goods, every man kept what he took. See ver. 50, 53.

49 There lacketh not one man of us.] An evident proof that Omnipotence fought for them, and defended them ; this was so extraordinary an instance of the divine protection, as can scarcely be paralleled in history.

52 Sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.] About five talents and a half, or 27,919 l. sterling. Three hundred shekels make a talent.

50 We have therefore brought an oblation for the LORD, what every man hath gotten, of jewels, of gold, of chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, to make an atonement for our souls before the LORD.

51 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of them, even all wrought jewels.

52 And all the gold of the offering that they offered up to the LORD, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

53 (For the men of war had taken spoil, every man for himself.)

54 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and brought it into the tabernacle of the congregation, for a memorial for the children of Israel before the LORD.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXI.

Several things are observable in this history, of the victory gained over the Midianites ; namely, the subduing the enemies of the Israelites ; that Balaam, and the women who had caused the people to sin, were slain ; the division of the spoil equally between those who were in the war, and those who remained in the camp ; and that the officers presented to God the most valuable things taken from the Midianites, teaching us to do him homage for all our prosperity, and devote all his gifts to his service and glory.

CHAP. XXXII.

I The Reubenites and Gadites sue for their inheritance on the east side of Jordan. 6 Moses reproveth them. 16 They offer conditions ; 20 he is content ; and assigneth the land them, and to half the tribe of Manasseh. 34 They build cities, and conquer what remained.

NOW the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle : and when they saw the land of Jazer, and the land of Gilead, that, behold, the place was a place for cattle ;

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses, and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Shebam, and Nebo, and Beon,

4 Even the country which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle :

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and bring us not over Jordan.

6 ¶ And Moses said unto the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall ye sit here ?

7 And wherefore discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them ?

8 Thus did your fathers, when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea to see the land.

9 For when they went up unto the valley of Eschol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

10 And the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob ; because they have not wholly followed me :

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXII.

I Now the children of Reuben, &c.] The tribes of Reuben, Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, observing that the country was fertile, and stored with good pasturage, desired they might be permitted to settle there, ■ ■ place very commodious for them, having large flocks of cattle.

7 Wherefore discourage ye the heart, &c.] Moses suspected that it was either cowardice, or ■ love of ease, that made them petition to stay where they were, which ill example might have proved of bad consequence in disheartening the rest of their brethren.

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun: for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation, that had done evil in the sight of the LORD, was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.

15 For if ye turn away from after him, he will yet again leave them in the wilderness; and ye shall destroy all this people.

16 ¶ And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones:

17 But we ourselves will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities because of the inhabitants of the land.

18 We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance.

19 For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 ¶ And Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him,

22 And the land be subdued before the LORD: then afterward ye shall return, and be guiltless before the LORD, and before Israel; and this land shall be your possession before the LORD.

23 But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the LORD: and be sure your sin will find you out.

24 Build ye cities for your little ones, and folds for your sheep; and do that which hath proceeded out of your mouth.

25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

26 Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead:

27 But thy servants will pass over, every man armed for war, before the LORD to battle, as my lord saith.

28 So concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle, before the LORD, and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do.

32 We will pass over armed before the LORD into the land of Canaan, that the possession of our inheritance on this side Jordan may be our's.

Before CHRIST 1452.

33 And Moses gave unto them, even to the children of Gad, and to the children of Reuben, and unto half the tribe of Manasseh the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, the land, with the cities thereof in the coasts, even the cities of the country round about.

34 ¶ And the children of Gad built Dibon, and Ataroth, and Aroer,

35 And Atroth, Shopan, and Jaazer, and Jogbehah,

36 And Beth-nimrah, and Beth-haran, fenced cities: and folds for sheep.

37 And the children of Reuben built Heshbon, and Elealeh, and Kirjathaim.

38 And Nebo, and Baal-meon, (their names being changed,) and Shibmah: and gave other names unto the cities which they builded.

39 And the children of Machir the son of Manasseh went to Gilead, and took it, and dispossessed the Amorite which was in it.

40 And Moses gave Gilead unto Machir the son of Manasseh; and he dwelt therein.

41 And Jair the son of Manasseh went and took the small towns thereof, and called them Havoth-jair.

42 And Nobah went and took Kenath, and the villages thereof, and called it Nobah, after his own name.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXXII.

This chapter points out to us, that the distribution made to the two tribes and a half, of the country beyond Jordan, was the beginning of the accomplishment of the promises God made to his people, to give them all that country; and also that God ordered they should be assisting in the reduction of the land of Canaan, for their brethren who had helped them to subdue that part of the country; we are here instructed to act justly towards, and assist each other, on all lawful occasions.

C H A P. XXXIII.

1 Two and forty journeys of the Israelites. 50 The Canaanites are to be destroyed.

THESE are the journeys of the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt with their armies under the hand of Moses and Aaron.

2 And Moses wrote their goings out according to their journeys by the commandment of the LORD: and these are their journeys according to their goings out.

3 And they departed from Rameses in the first month: on the fifteenth day of the first month, on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians.

4 For the Egyptians buried all their first-born, which the LORD had smitten among them: upon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.

5 And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

6 And they departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.

7 And they removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baal-zephon: and they pitched before Migdol.

8 And they departed from before Pi-hahiroth, and passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and 17 But we ourselves will go ready armed, &c.] The offer which they made to go in the front of the battle, and risque their lives against such potent enemies, without any farther advantage to themselves, was an expression of their faith in God, and love to their brethren.

33 Moses gave unto them] The dominions of Sihon and Og, the two vanquished kings of the Amorites, extended from the river Arnon to mount Hermon. These countries Moses gave to the tribe of Reuben, the tribe of Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh.

Even the cities of the country round about.] It is observable, that as these tribes were first settled before the others, so they were afterwards displaced before them, being, for their idolatry, first carried captive into Assyria, Chron. v. 25, 26. Probably their early defection from the true religion, was owing to their being placed at so great a distance from the public worship. We see by this, how Providence proportions his dispensations by balancing prosperity and adversity, and setting the one against the other.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIII.

1 These are the journeys of the children of Israel, &c.] Moses was particularly commissioned to preserve their history for the benefit of posterity; therefore he here recapitulates the principal stages of this long journey, setting them all before the reader in one view, that all who would take pains to examine things, might be satisfied by what a train of miracles such a multitude of people were fed every day, for forty years together, in a barren and inhospitable desert.

36 And they removed from Ezion-gaber, and pitched in the wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.

37 And they removed from Kadesh, and pitched in mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

38 And Aaron the priest went up into mount Hor at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month.

39 And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in mount Hor.

40 And king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

47 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, and pitched in the mountains of Abarim before Nebo.

48 And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and pitched in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

49 And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth even unto Abel-shittim in the plains of Moab.

50 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

51 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

52 Then ye shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places:

53 And ye shall dispossess the inhabitants of the land, and dwell therein: for I have given you the land to possess it.

54 And ye shall divide the land by lot for an inheritance among your families: and to the more ye shall give the more inheritance, and to the fewer ye shall give the less inheritance: every man's inheritance shall be in the place where his lot falleth; according to the tribes of your fathers ye shall inherit.

55 But if ye will not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you; then it shall come to pass, that those which ye let remain of them shall be pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, and shall vex you in the land wherein ye dwell.

56 Moreover it shall come to pass, that I shall do unto you, as I thought to do unto them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIII.

The several journies of the Israelites indicate to us, that we have no continuing city here, but should look for an heavenly one: their various changes shew the transitoriness of all sublunary things; which should remind us, that peace of conscience only is durable, which will follow from the performance of the divine commands, and that we should beg of God to accept of our most imperfect services through the merits of Christ.

Pricks in your eyes, and thorns in your sides, &c.] As the eye is a part the most sensibly affected by pain, this image pathetically expresses the grievous afflictions they should suffer by those of the inhabitants whom they neglected to extirpate, according to the divine command.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These are they whom the Lord commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIV.

We are to remark from this chapter, that the different habitations, pointed out by Moses before the Israelites took possession of Canaan, afterwards took place just as he had predicted; that Moses testified his obedience, and reliance on God's faithfulness to his promise, by making known the will of God to the children of Israel; and that God gave a clear proof of his love, by appointing proper leaders for his people before the death of Moses.

3 And the cities shall they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.

4 And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits round about.

13 This is the land which ye shall inherit, &c.] From the foregoing description, it appears that they were placed in a very pleasant country, being bounded on the south by lofty mountains, which sheltered them from the sultry air of the Arabian deserts; on the west, by the Mediterranean-sea, which afforded them refreshing breezes; on the north, by mount Lebanon, which kept off the colder blasts from that quarter; and, on the east, by the delightful plains of Jordan.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXV.

That they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession cities to dwell in.] The Levites were plentifully provided for, by the laws concerning tithes and offerings; but it was also necessary, that when they came to Canaan, proper habitations should be appointed for them, where they might live comfortably and usefully.

Suburbs, &c.] These were certain spaces of ground about and belonging to the cities, for pastures, orchards, gardens, sheep-houses, barns, and other little rural conveniences.

4 A thousand cubits, &c.] It is two thousand in the Greek translation; which, in the next verse, is proved to be the right reading. Two thousand cubits is about three-fourths of a mile.

6 And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and to them ye shall add forty and two cities.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be of the possession of the children of Israel: from them that have many ye shall give many; but from them that have few ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites according to his inheritance which he inheriteth.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

11 Then ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, which killeth any person at unawares.

12 And they shall be unto you cities for refuge from the avenger; that the manslayer die not, until he stand before the congregation in judgment.

13 And of these cities which ye shall give, six cities shall ye have for refuge.

14 Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge.

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, both for the children of Israel, and for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them: that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither.

16 And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

17 And if he smite him with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

18 Or if he smite him with an hand weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

19 The revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him, he shall slay him.

20 But if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him by laying of wait, that he die;

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer, when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait, 23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither fought his harm.

24 Then the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood, and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge, whither he was fled: and he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest, which was anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer; he shall not be guilty of blood:

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high priest: but after the death of the high priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for a statute of judgment unto you throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die.

31 ¶ Moreover ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death: but he shall be surely put to death.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him that is fled to the city of his refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the land, until the death of the priest.

33 So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are: for blood it defileth the land: and the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it.

34 Defile not therefore the land which ye shall inhabit, wherein I dwell: for I the LORD dwell among the children of Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXV.

The habitations for the Levites teach us to provide for those who minister in holy things; and the laws about murderers denote the heinousness of the crime, the curse and punishment entailed upon it; and the extreme horror even the thought, and especially whatever may lead to the crime, should affect us with.

C H A P. XXXVI.

1 The inconvenience of the inheritance of daughters is set forth. 5 It is remedied by their being restrained to marry in their own tribes. 10 The daughters of Zelophehad are married to their father's brothers' sons.

AND the chief fathers of the families of the children of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel:

2 And they said, The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

4 And

6 Six cities for refuge, &c.] The Levites were to have, in all, forty-eight cities, ver. 7. out of these, six were to be privileged places, or cities of refuge, whither any person, who had the misfortune to kill another undesignedly, might flee and take sanctuary. These asylums were very different from those of other nations; they did not screen them who were guilty of wilful murder; but such, according to the tenor of the same law, were to be dragged even from the horns of the altar.

16 If he smite him with an instrument of iron, &c.] It was presumed, if he assaulted a man with a weapon, he intended him a mischief; though perhaps there was no malice premeditated, and he did it in a passion.

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders—and kill the slayer; he shall not be guilty, &c.] If Christians, who have fled to Christ for succour, forsake and wander from him, how can they, without an absurdity, expect to be protected and saved by him!

30 One witness shall not testify against any person, &c.] In right reason there should be two; for the witness who affirms, and the accused who denies, make an equal balance; a third, therefore, is necessarily required, to incline the scale.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXVI.

1 The chief fathers of the families, &c.] The portion that had been given to the daughters of Zelophehad, and the laws which ordered the estates of those who died without issue male, should descend to their daughters, gave the elders of Israel some reason to fear, that by these heiresses marrying into different tribes, the parts allotted to each would be confounded; these estates would of course be alienated from their own tribe, and incorporated into another by the rights of their husbands; nor would the year of jubile rectify this inconvenience, since these inheritances would, by the common right of marriage, descend, at the jubile, to the heirs of those women who married in another tribe. These considerations induced them to present a petition to Moses, to desire him to prevent this inconvenience by a particular law.

4 And when the jubile of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

5 ¶ And Moses commanded the children of Israel according to the word of the LORD, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

6 This is the thing which the LORD doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them marry to whom they think best; only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry.

7 So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

8 And every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.

9 Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe

6 Let them marry to whom they think best, &c.] They were not to marry to those of another tribe or family, but in their own tribe. This was enjoined to preserve order in the commonwealth; and particularly to prevent the mixture of the tribe of Judah (from which the Messiah was to descend) with other tribes.

8 Every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance, &c.] Heiresses were to observe what is here commanded: but those who had no inheritance, might marry into what tribe they pleased.

12 They were married into the families, &c.] In the Hebrew, to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance. Before CHRIST 1451.

10 ¶ Even as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad:

11 For Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad, were married unto their father's brothers' sons:

12 And they were married into the families of the sons of Manasseh the son of Joseph, and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father.

13 These are the commandments and the judgments, which the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses unto the children of Israel in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXXVI.

In what concerns private property, we are hereby taught to act with judgment, prudence and discretion, if we expect the divine blessing. As the people consulted Moses in difficult cases, let us learn to seek advice from God in prayer, relying on the divine promise for assistance; and that to be regular in our conduct, will make us in some measure resemble the blessed above, where all is harmony, order, peace and love.

To some who were of the families; that is, into one of the families of Manasseh, from whom several families descended; for they did not marry promiscuously, but into their father's family, viz. that of Hephher.

13 These are the commandments and the judgments, &c.] By "commandments," in this place, the precepts relating to the worship of God, seem to be understood; and by "judgments," the laws of civil polity.

DEUTERONOMY.

THE ARGUMENT.

This book is called from the Greek, Deuteronomy, or, a second law, being a recapitulation of the several laws already delivered. Those Israelites, to whom the law was first given in the wilderness, being dead; a repetition of it seemed necessary to this new generation of men. There are contained several additional laws, explications, and enlargements, enforced by the strongest and most pathetic motives to obedience, taking up about the space of one month.

C H A P. I.

1 Moses' speech at the end of the fortieth year, 6 in which he rehearseth the story of God's sending Israel from Horeb to go and possess the promised land, 9 of giving them officers, 19 of passing through the wilderness to Kadesh, 22 of sending the spies to search the land, 34 and of God's anger for their incredulity and disobedience.

THESE be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel on this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against the Red sea, between Paran, and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

2 (There are eleven days' journey from Horeb by the way of mount Seir unto Kadesh-barnea). 1451.

3 And it came to pass in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 After he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt in Astaroth, in Edrei.

5 On this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying,

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on CHAP. I.

1 These be the words] All the passages and speeches of this book were comprehended in the space of a month. It begins on the first day of the eleventh month, and on the first day of the twelfth month Moses is supposed to have died.

On this side Jordan] That is, on the east, where they are encamped at this time.

Over against the Red sea, &c.] Some interpreters explain it not of the sea Zuph, (the Red or Arabian sea) but rather of some flaggy place on the banks of the river Jordan; or else on the sides of the Dead sea, towards the wilderness of Arabia.

2 There are eleven days' journey, &c.] This was inserted to shew, that it was the will and pleasure of the Almighty, that what might have been effected in eleven days, the Israelites should not accomplish in less than thirty and eight years.

Before
1451.

6 ¶ The LORD our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount:

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have set the land before you: go in and possess the land which the LORD swore unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

9 ¶ And I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 The LORD your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (The LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you!)

12 How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife?

13 Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him.

17 Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man; for the judgment is God's: and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

18 And I commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do.

19 ¶ And when we departed from Horeb, we went through all that great and terrible wilderness, which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the LORD our God commanded us; and we came to Kadesh-barnea.

20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountains of the Amorites, which the LORD our God doth give unto us.

21 Behold, the LORD thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; fear not, neither be discouraged.

22 ¶ And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come.

23 And the saying pleased me well; and I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe:

24 And they turned and went up into the mountain, and came into the valley of Eshcol, and searched it out.

25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again, and said, It is a good land which the LORD our God doth give us.

26 Notwithstanding ye would not go up, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God:

27 And ye murmured in your tents, and said, Because the LORD hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hands of the Amorites, to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have discouraged our heart, saying, The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great and walled up to heaven; and moreover we have seen the sons of the Anakims there.

29 Then I said unto you, Dread not, neither be afraid of them.

30 The LORD your God which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes;

31 And in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.

32 Yet in this thing ye did not believe the LORD your God,

33 Who went in the way before you, to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to shew you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 ¶ And the LORD heard the voice of your words and was wroth, and swore, saying,

35 Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I swore to give unto your fathers, 36 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath wholly followed the LORD.

37 Also the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.

38 But Joshua the son of Nun, which standeth before thee, he shall go in thither: encourage him: for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

39 Moreover your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

40 But as for you, turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea.

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and went presumptuously up into the hill.

44 And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you, and chased you, as bees do, and destroyed you in Seir, even unto Hormah.

45 And ye returned and wept before the LORD; but the LORD would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

46 So ye abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

GENERAL

6 In Horeb, &c.] This passage would have been more properly translated by or near Horeb; for God did not deliver his oracle from the mountain, but from the tabernacle.

14 The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.] This he mentions, not to court their applause, but to aggravate the sin of their mutinies after this, to shew them, that the government they quarrelled with was what they themselves had consented to.

17 The judgment is God's, &c.] They were God's ministers, and acted by his authority; and therefore ought to give judgment with perfect equity, resolution, and impartiality, as being accountable to him.

28 Walled up to heaven, &c.] An hyperbolical expression, implying no more than that the walls were exceedingly lofty.

38 Encourage him, &c.] Strengthen him; namely, by the imposition of hands, whereby Moses imparted some of his honour to Joshua, and he was filled with the Spirit.

41 We answered and said unto me, We have sinned against the Lord, &c.] God, by Moses, forbade the attempt, and yet they went presumptuously up to the hill; and, as if governed by a spirit of contradiction, acted now in contempt of the threatening, as they had before acted in contempt of the promise.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. I.

The author of the epistle to the Hebrews shews ■ the use we ought to make of this history, when he tells us, that as the murmurings and rebellions of the Israelites was the reason why they did not enter into the land of Canaan; so we should take care that we be not excluded by our unbelief and disobedience to the gospel, from the heavenly Canaan, and from that rest which is reserved for the people of God.

C H A P. II.

The story is continued, setting forth that they were not to meddle with the Edomites, 9 nor with the Moabites, 16 nor with the Ammonites: 24 but Sihon the Amorite was given up to be subdued by them.

THEN we turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red sea, as the LORD spake unto me: and we compassed mount Seir many days.

2 And the LORD spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain long enough: turn you northward.

4 And command thou the people, saying, Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir; and they shall be afraid of you: take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore:

5 Meddle not with them; for I will not give you of their land, no, not so much as ■ foot breadth; because I have given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

6 Ye shall buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

7 For the LORD thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: these forty years the LORD thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

8 And when we passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, through the way of the plain from Elath, and from Ezion-gaber, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto me, Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given Ar unto the children of Lot for a possession.

10 The Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims;

11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims; but the Moabites call them Emims.

12 The Horims also dwelt in Seir beforetime; but the children of Esau succeeded them, when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their stead; as Israel did unto the land of his possession, which the LORD gave unto them.

13 Now, rise up, said I, and get you over the brook Zered. And we went over the brook Zered.

14 And the space in which we came from Kadesh-barnea, until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years; until all the generation of the men of war were wasted out from among the host, as the LORD swore unto them.

15 For indeed the hand of the LORD was against them, to destroy them from among the host, until they were consumed.

16 ¶ So it came to pass, when all the men of war were consumed and dead from among the people, Before CHRIST 1451.

17 That the LORD spake unto me, saying;

18 Thou art to pass over through Ar, the coast of Moab, this day:

19 And when thou comest nigh over against the children of Ammon, distress them not, nor meddle with them: for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon any possessions; because I have given it unto the children of Lot for ■ possession.

20 (That also was accounted ■ land of giants: giants dwelt therein in old time; and the Ammonites call them Zamzummims;

21 A people great, and many, and tall, ■ the Anakims; but the LORD destroyed them before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead:

22 As he did to the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, when he destroyed the Horims from before them: and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead even unto this day:

23 And the Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto Azzah, the Caphtorims, which came forth out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.)

24 ¶ Rise ye up, take your journey, and pass over the river Arnon: behold, I have given into thine hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land: begin to possess it, and contend with him in battle.

25 This day will I begin to put the dread of thee and the fear of thee upon the nations that are under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble, and be in anguish because of thee.

26 And I sent messengers out of the wilderness of Kedemoth unto Sihon king of Heshbon with words of peace, saying, 27 Let me pass through thy land: I will go along by the high way, I will neither turn unto the right hand nor to the left.

28 Thou shalt sell me meat for money, that I may eat; and give me water for money, that I may drink: only I will pass through on my feet;

29 (As the children of Esau which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites which dwell in Ar, did unto me;) until I shall pass over Jordan into the land which the LORD our God giveth us.

30 But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for the LORD thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.

31 And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.

32 Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz.

33 And the LORD our God delivered him before us; and we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.

34 And we took all his cities at that time, and utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain:

35 Only

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on Chap. II.

1 Then we turned, &c.] From the borders of Canaan to go southward. Moses preserves not the record of any thing that happened during that tedious march back to the Red sea; but passeth it over in silence, as ■ dark time, and makes his narrative immediately begin again when they faced about towards Canaan. See ver. 3.

5 Meddle not with them, &c.] Thus, before God brought Israel to destroy their enemies in Canaan, he taught them to forgive their enemies in Edom.

6 Buy water, &c.] This may be understood of buying wells ready digged.

9 I have given Ar] Ar was the name of the chief city of the Moabites; but here it implies the whole country.

Unto the children of Lot, &c.] God out of remembrance of the righteousness of his servant Lot, is propitious to the Moabites, who were his posterity.

10 The Emims, &c.] The original word signifies "terrible;" No. 17.

and was probably given them by the Moabites, from their being remarkably terrible to their neighbours.

12 The Horims also dwelt in Seir, &c.] This part of the history encourages the Israelites not to fear their stoutest enemies, but rather to hope, that if the providence of God had done thus much for the Moabites and Edomites, he would do much more for Israel his peculiar people.

13 The brook Zered, &c.] Or bourn; a valley, with a river running through it.

20 Zamzummims.] They are supposed to be the same as are called Zuzims, Gen. xiv. 5. and the name signifies "vile" or "wicked."

23 The Avims] The antient inhabitants of the country, of which the Philistines afterwards possessed themselves.

The Caphtorims, &c.] These were ■ people joined both in kindred and habitation with the Philistines. See Gen. x. 14. Amos ix. 7.

30 The Lord thy God hardened his spirit, &c.] That is, gave him over to his ■ own inflexible humour, and suffered his heart to be hardened: for he, denying their request, drew upon himself their resentment, provoked the war, and was the occasion of his own destruction.

35 Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took.

36 From Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us: the LORD our God delivered all unto us:

37 Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not, nor unto any place of the river Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, nor unto whatsoever the LORD our God forbade us.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. II.

We are taught, from this chapter, by the proceedings of the Edomites, never to injure others, especially those of our own kindred. By the Israelites being forbidden to do any harm to the Edomites, Moabites, and Ammonites, we may observe the care God took of those people for the sake of the patriarchs their progenitors; and that we ought not to revenge ourselves, nor deprive others of what God has given them. The subduing the country of the Amorites by the assistance of God, and his promises thereby beginning to be accomplished, was an earnest that God would put them into the possession of the whole country. Let us, therefore, by faith in God's promises, look for the heavenly Canaan above.

CHAP. III.

1 The story of the conquest of Og king of Bashan; the size of his bed; 12 the distribution of the conquered lands to the two tribes and half; 18 the charge given to these by Moses; 21 and his exhortation to Joshua; 23 his prayer that he might enter into the land, which is not accepted; but he is permitted to see the land.

THEN we turned, and went up the way to Bashan: and Og the king of Bashan came out against us, he and all his people, to battle at Edrei.

2 And the LORD said unto me, Fear him not: for I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

3 So the LORD our God delivered into our hands Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people: and we smote him until none was left to him remaining.

4 And we took all his cities at that time, there was not a city which we took not from them, threescore cities, all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

5 All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars; beside unwalled towns a great many.

6 And we utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon king of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city.

7 But all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities, we took for a prey to ourselves.

8 And we took at that time out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites the land that was on this side Jordan, from the river of Arnon unto mount Hermon.

9 (Which Hermon the Sidonians call Sirion; and the Amorites call it Shenir;)

10 All the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

11 For only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of giants; behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron; is it not in Rabbath of the children of Ammon? nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man.

12 ¶ And this land, which we possessed at that time, from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites and to the Gadites.

13 And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

14 Jair the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi; and called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day.

15 And I gave Gilead unto Machir.

16 And unto the Reubenites and unto the Gadites I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon half the valley, and the border even unto the river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon;

17 The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from Chinnereth even unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, under Ashdod-pisgah eastward.

18 ¶ And I commanded you at that time, saying, The LORD your God hath given you the land to possess it: ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are meet for the war.

19 But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle,) shall abide in your cities which I have given you;

20 Until the LORD have given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the LORD your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

21 ¶ And I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the LORD do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest.

22 Ye shall not fear them: for the LORD your God he shall fight for you.

23 ¶ And I besought the LORD at that time, saying,

24 O Lord God, thou hast begun to shew thy servant thy greatness, and thy mighty hand: for what God is there in heaven or in earth, that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might?

25 I pray thee let me go over, and see the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon.

26 But the LORD was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the LORD said unto me, Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter.

27 Get thee up into the top of Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

28 But charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him: for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see.

29 So we abode in the valley over against Beth-peor.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. III.

What is most remarkable in this chapter, is, the earnest request of Moses, that he might go into the land of Canaan, and God's refusing him that favour. This is a lesson to us, that God does not always hear those prayers which concern temporal affairs; and that though he pardons those whom he loves, he nevertheless thinks fit sometimes to punish them in this life, for certain sins which they have committed. David was a notable instance of this.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. III.

9 Which Hermon the Sidonians call, &c.] This mountain had five names, Hermon, Sirion, Shenir, Sion, and Hor; some of which Moses here enumerates that the Israelites, who were to consider this mountain as the northern boundary, might not be misled by this diversity of appellations.

11 Of the remnant of giants] What we render giants, is in the Hebrew rephaim; see Gen. xiv. 5.

A bedstead of iron] Bedsteads of iron were not uncommon in antient days, though of much later date. When the Thebans took Plataea, they made bedsteads of the brass and iron they found there.

Is it not in Rabbath] As a monument of his extraordinary stature, his bedstead was preserved by the Ammorites, and shewed as a curiosity in their chief city.

Nine cubits, &c.] Hence it appears, that Og was six cubits high, reckoning the bedstead to have been made, according to the common custom, a third part larger than the person who lay in it; consequently he was ten feet and an half of our measure in height, or twice as tall as an ordinary man.

14 Bashan-havoth-jair, &c.] Bashan, the towns of Jair.

COMMENTARY

CHAP. IV.

1 An exhortation to obedience from God's past dealings ; 15 and a particular dissuasive against idolatry, 25 and solemn admonition of the ill consequences of disobedience, and of the happy consequences of returning to God. 32 The especial regard shewn to the Israelites in God's wonderful dealings with them. 41 Moses appointeth the three cities of refuge on the east side of Jordan. 44 Recapitulation.

NOW therefore hearken, O Israel, unto the statutes and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen what the LORD did because of Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

4 But ye that did cleave unto the LORD your God are alive every one of you this day.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?

8 And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?

9 Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons;

10 Specially the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

11 And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

12 And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.

13 And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

15 ¶ Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for ye saw no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire: Before CHRIST 1451.

16 Lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female,

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

18 The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:

19 And lest thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath divided unto all nations under the whole heaven.

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and brought you forth out of the iron furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a people of inheritance, as ye are this day.

21 Furthermore the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance:

22 But I must die in this land, I must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess that good land.

23 Take heed unto yourselves, lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

24 For the LORD thy God is a consuming fire, even a jealous God.

25 ¶ When thou shalt beget children, and children's children, and ye shall have remained long in the land, and shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and shall do evil in the sight of the LORD thy God, to provoke him to anger:

26 I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it; ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

27 And the LORD shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the LORD shall lead you.

28 And there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

29 But if from thence thou shalt seek the LORD thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

30 When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice:

31 (For the LORD thy God is a merciful God;) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

1 Now therefore hearken, &c.] Moses exhorts them, in the most serious and affectionate manner, as they were about to enter into and possess the promised land, to be punctually obedient to the laws of God, and cautious of offending him, for fear of incurring his displeasure.

2 Ye shall not add—neither shall ye diminish, &c.] He shall neither add to the law which I have given you, any heathenish superstition, or modes of worship, of your own invention; nor shall you wilfully omit any plain duty which it requires.

7 Who hath God so nigh them, &c.] The Jews were the only nation under heaven that had a symbol of God's presence continually among them.

15 For ye saw no manner of similitude, &c.] Moses puts them in mind of this particular, as a strong and everlasting argument to keep them clear of all superstitious or idolatrous worship of him, by the use of any kind of image, picture, or resemblance of any created being.

19 Lest thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, &c.] The heavenly luminaries were the first prophane objects of adoration, and the most plausible idolatry; leading the adoration to those creatures that not only are in situation above us, but are most serviceably glorious in themselves. The plausibility of this species of idolatry made it the more dangerous, and the more necessary for Moses to caution the people against it; so strong is the temptation to sense! so forcible is the impulse of a vain imagination, and the impetuous torrent of the custom of the nations! and so weak is faith in an invisible God, and an invisible world!

24 The Lord thy God is a consuming fire, &c.] God, from the rectitude of his nature, will be as far from letting moral evils pass with impunity, as fire is from consuming its proper fuel.

26 I call heaven and earth to witness, &c.] He conjures them, by all that is sacred in heaven and earth, not to incur those evils which await their disobedience.

upon the earth, and as from the one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

33 Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

34 Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

35 Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the LORD he is God; there is none else beside him.

36 Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee: and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire; and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

37 And because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his fight with his mighty power out of Egypt;

38 To drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

39 Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the LORD he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else.

40 Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever.

41 ¶ Then Moses severed three cities on this side Jordan toward the sun rising:

42 That the slayer might flee thither, which should kill his neighbour unawares, and hated him not in times past: and that fleeing unto one of these cities he might live:

43 Namely, Bezer in the wilderness, in the plain country, of the Reubenites; and Ramoth in Gilead, of the Gadites; and Golan in Bashan, of the Manassites.

44 ¶ And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel:

45 These are the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt,

46 On this side Jordan, in the valley over against Beth-peor, in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel smote, after they were come forth out of Egypt:

47 And they possessed his land, and the land of Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites, which were on this side Jordan toward the sun rising;

48 From Aroer, which is by the bank of the river Arnon, even unto mount Sion, which is Hermon, 49 And all the plain on this side Jordan eastward, even unto the sea of the plain, under the springs of Pishah.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. IV.

The admonitions and cautions given by Moses to the Israelites, as they were to them incentives to duty; so also should they make a still greater impression upon us, whom God has chosen to be his true people, and for whom he has wrought greater miracles than he did for the Jews.

15 Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, &c.] The argument brought to enforce the observation of the sabbath, is the deliverance of the Israelites out of Egypt; perhaps, because it was typical of our redemption by Jesus Christ; in remembrance of which the Christian sabbath was to be observed.

22 ¶ These words the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice: and he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

23 And it came to pass, when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the heads of your tribes, and your elders;

24 And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath shewed us his glory and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us: if we hear the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.

26 For who is there of all flesh, that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

27 Go thou near, and hear all that the LORD our God shall say: and speak thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speak unto thee; and we will hear it, and do it.

28 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: they have well said all that they have spoken.

29 O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!

30 Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will speak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.

32 Ye shall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

33 Ye shall walk in all the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. V.

The dread which the publication of the law caused in the Jews, should make us remember that our God is a consuming fire to the transgressors of it; and fear the terrible punishment with which those are threatened who despise the voice of Jesus Christ. We may learn from hence, that nothing is more acceptable to God than the cheerful obedience of his creatures; and that his care is, to load them with his favours.

C H A P. VI.

1 The end of the law is obedience: 3 An exhortation thereto. 20 What they are required to teach their children concerning it.

NOW these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it:

2 That thou mightest fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged.

3 ¶ Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey.

4 Hear, O Israel: the LORD our God is one LORD:

5 ¶ And thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

6 And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

7 And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

8 And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

9 And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.

10 And it shall be, when the LORD thy God shall have brought thee into the land which he swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities, which thou buildest not,

11 And houses full of all good things, which thou filledst not, and wells digged, which thou diggedst not; vineyards and olive trees, which thou plantedst not; when thou shalt have eaten and be full;

12 Then beware lest thou forget the LORD, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.

13 Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his name.

14 Ye shall not go after other gods, of the gods of the people which are round about you;

15 (For the LORD thy God is a jealous God among you) lest the anger of the LORD thy God be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the face of the earth.

16 Ye shall not tempt the LORD your God, as ye tempted him in Massah.

17 Ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the LORD your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee.

18 And thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the LORD: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, 19 To cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the LORD hath spoken.

20 ¶ And when thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD our God hath commanded you?

13 And shalt swear by his name. To swear to the Lord of hosts, is to profess the true religion, Isaiah xix. 18. and in Psal. lxiii. 11. every one that sweareth by him, means every worshipper of the true God.

25 And it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded us.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VI.

This chapter instructs us, that our chief care ought to be to love and obey God, and to adhere inviolably to his word; that the bounden duty of parents is, to teach their children in the law and fear of the Lord; and to be always speaking of his mercies, his commandments and judgments: we should also learn, never to abuse the favours of God, but to be always meditating upon them, so that we may both fear and love him, which alone can make us happy.

1 All communication with the seven nations of Canaan is forbidden for fear of idolatry, 6 and in consideration of the holiness of the people: 9 The justice and mercy of God's nature a motive to obedience. 12 Blessings and victory are assured to them from God in return. 25 Images must be wholly destroyed.

WHEN the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou;

2 And when the LORD thy God shall deliver them before thee, thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them: thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them:

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

4 For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

5 But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.

6 ¶ For thou art a holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor chose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people:

8 But because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

9 ¶ I know therefore that the LORD thy God, he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments to a thousand generations;

10 And repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face:

11 Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 ¶ Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers:

13 And he will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he swore unto thy fathers to give thee:

14 Thou shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee; but will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

16 And thou shalt consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee.

17 If thou shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?

18 Thou shalt not be afraid of them: but shalt well remember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt;

19 The great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out: so shall the LORD thy God do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

20 Moreover the LORD thy God will send the hornet among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is among you, a mighty God and terrible.

22 And the LORD thy God will put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

24 And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.

25 ¶ The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein: for it is an abomination to the LORD thy God.

26 Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house,

25 If shall be our righteousness, &c.] The Greek translateth it, Mercy shall be to us; but here it meaneth justice, or righteousness; whereby men, if they could perform the law (which indeed they cannot do) might be justified before God.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

2 And utterly destroy them, &c.] If either the incorrigible wickedness of my people, or the danger of their corrupting others by their enticements and bad examples, may be deemed a sufficient reason (as it is in all civil governments to cut off obnoxious members) for God to rid himself of any nation that has incurred his highest displeasure; the Israelites, who were only instruments in God's hands, are no more to be blamed for executing the Almighty's commands, than the person who apprehends a malefactor, and brings him to condign punishment, is to be thought culpable by the laws of the land.

7 The Lord did not set his love upon you, &c.] It is not your numbers, nor your strength, nor any qualifications of your own, that induced God to confer these singular privileges upon you; but it was the completion of the promises made to your ancestors, to which you are indebted for all the distinguishing blessings of your nation.

18 Shalt well remember what the Lord thy God did unto Pharaoh, &c.] The Israelites might perhaps think, that the most numerous mult needs be victorious; but to fortify them against this temptation, they were to call to mind the destruction of Pharaoh and all the power of Egypt, the signs and wonders wherewith God had brought them out of Egypt, in order to settle them in Canaan.

20 The Lord thy God will send the hornet, &c.] They were not to dishearten themselves on account of the weakness and deficiency of their own forces; for God would send them in auxiliary troops of hornets and wasps, which should so terrify and molest their enemies, that their most numerous armies would become an easy prey to Israel.

house; lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it; and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VII.

To make a right use of this chapter, we should consider that the Canaanites were destroyed not only for their abominable wickedness, but that the Israelites might not by them be drawn into iniquity and idolatry; whence it appears, that God does at last destroy nations, when their wickedness is become enormous; and that we should be afraid to have any dealings with the prophane, lest we be involved in their sins and punishment.

C H A P. VIII.

An exhortation to obedience in regard of God's mercy and goodness in his dealings with Israel.

ALL the commandments which I command thee this day shall ye observe to do that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers.

2 And thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldst keep his commandments, or no.

3 And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

4 Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years.

5 Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to fear him.

7 For the LORD thy God bringeth thee into a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig trees, and pomegranates; a land of oil olive, and honey;

9 A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a land whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.

10 When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God for the good land which he hath given thee.

11 Beware that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

12 Lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;

14 Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VIII.

3 Man doth not live by bread only, but by every word, &c. He supplies your wants by his miraculous hand, to convince you, that the sustenance and preservation of your life is not owing to mere bread or ordinary food; but to the word or power of God; and to any thing that he shall please to appoint to be the means of your nourishment.

4 Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy feet swell, &c. As nothing hindered the Israelites from trafficking with their Arabian neighbours, it is evident they might have been supplied with cloaths, either by making or purchasing them: these words of Moses have therefore been explained thus: "Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee;" that is, Providence has been so liberal in supplying your wants in this desert land, that you have never through poverty, been obliged to let your cloaths wax old upon you, but have always been supplied with new before the old were worn out.

9 Whose stones are iron, &c. Whose iron mines are as plentiful as quarries of stone in other places.

14 Then thine heart be lifted up, &c. For want of reflecting on the LORD thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage;

15 Who led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought; where there was no water; who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint;

16 Who fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not, that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end;

17 And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth.

18 But thou shalt remember the LORD thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day.

19 And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish.

20 As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, so shall ye perish; because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VIII.

We have, in this chapter, two instructions, drawn from the favours and corrections of God to excite us to fear him, and also to meditate upon the mercies and afflictions which come from his hand. From hence we are also taught, that men are too prone to abuse prosperity; that they forget God, and fall into pride and sin, when they are too much at their ease; and thereby force God to take from them those comforts and that plenty of which they made so ill an use.

C H A P. IX.

1 Moses dissuadeth them from the opinion of their own righteousness, 7 by rehearsing their several rebellions.

HEAR, O Israel: Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations greater and mightier than thyself, cities great and fenced up to heaven.

2 A people great and tall, the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak!

3 Understand therefore this day, that the LORD thy God is he which goeth over before thee; as a consuming fire he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the LORD hath said unto thee.

4 Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the LORD thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness the LORD hath brought me in to possess this land: but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD doth drive them out from before thee.

5 Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that he may perform the word which the LORD sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand therefore, that the LORD thy God giveth the instability of human affairs, men think themselves self-sufficient, and lose that just sense which they ought to have of the sovereignty of their Maker, and their absolute and necessary dependance upon him.

15 The rock of flint. The rock of Meribah, which has continued to this day, without the least injury from time or accidents, and is here called "the rock of flint," may, from its purple or reddish colour, be more properly rendered, the rock of amethyst, or the granate rock. It is about six yards square, lying loose near the valley of Rephidim, and seems to have been formerly a cliff of mount Sinai, which hangs in a variety of precipices all over this valley.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

1 This day, &c. At this time, that is, very shortly; "day" is often used in scripture for time; among other places, see 2 Cor. vi. 2.

5 Not for thy righteousness, &c. Though the Canaanites were expelled for their national wickedness, it does not follow that the Israelites were settled in their room for their own virtue. God often chastises the wicked by means of others, who are full as wicked as they.

giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiffnecked people.

7 ¶ Remember, and forget not how thou provokedst the LORD thy God to wrath in the wilderness: from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the LORD.

8 Also in Horeb ye provoked the LORD to wrath, so that the LORD was angry with you to have destroyed you.

9 When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the LORD made with you, then I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights, I neither did eat bread nor drink water:

10 And the LORD delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God; and on them was written according to all the words, which the LORD spake with you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the LORD gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant.

12 And the LORD said unto me, Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore the LORD spake unto me, saying, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people:

14 Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven: and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 So I turned and came down from the mount, and the mount burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the LORD your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the LORD had commanded you.

17 And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.

18 And I fell down before the LORD, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread, nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

19 For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure, wherewith the LORD was wroth against you to destroy you. But the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the LORD was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as dust: and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

22 And at Taberah, and at Massah, and at Kibroth-hataavah, ye provoked the LORD to wrath:

23 Likewise when the LORD sent you from Kadesh-

7 Forget not, how thou provokedst the Lord thy God to wrath, &c.] That they might have no pretence to think that God brought them into the land of Canaan for their righteousness; he here shews them, what a miracle of mercy it was, that they had not long ere this been destroyed in the wilderness: so far from purchasing his favour, he reminds them, that they had many times laid themselves open to his displeasure.

12 Thy people which, &c.] This expression denotes the extreme anger of God: he seems here to abandon them, throws them out of his care, and disowns them: they are thy people, says he to Moses, they are none of mine, nor shall they be dealt with as mine.

26 I prayed therefore unto the Lord, &c.] From the manner of this prayer it appears, that it was entirely owing to the mercy of barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God, and ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 Ye have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you.

25 Thus I fell down before the LORD forty days and forty nights, as I fell down at the first; because the LORD had said he would destroy you.

26 I prayed therefore unto the LORD, and said, O Lord God, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness, which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin:

28 Lest the land whence thou broughtest us out say, Because the LORD was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 Yet they are thy people and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy mighty power and by thy stretched out arm.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. IX.

The instruction we are to derive from this chapter is, that it is the mercy of God alone that we are obliged for all our happiness; and that the remembrance of his mercies, and of our own unworthiness, ought always to be present with us, and incline us to humility and gratitude.

CHAP. X.

1 Moses proceedeth to relate the mercy of God in restoring the two tables, 6 continuing the priesthood, 8 separating the tribe of Levi, 10 and hearkening unto his suit for the people. 12 He exhorteth to obedience.

AT that time the LORD said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and make thee an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables which thou brakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And I made an ark of shittim wood, and hewed two tables of stone like unto the first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten commandments, which the LORD spake unto you in the mount out of the midst of the fire in the day of the assembly: and the LORD gave them unto me.

5 And I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark which I had made; and there they be, as the LORD commanded me.

6 ¶ And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera: there Aaron died, and there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office in his stead.

7 From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

8 ¶ At that time the LORD separated the tribe of Levi, to bear the ark of the covenant of the LORD, to stand

God, and the importunity of Moses, and not to any merit of theirs, that the Israelites stood indebted for pardon and reconciliation.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

6 Took their journey from Beeroth—to Mosera: there Aaron died, &c.] It seems very plain, from the account which we have of their encampments, in Numb. xxxiii. that mount Hor and Mosera were two distinct places; and therefore some have maintained, that the sixth and seventh verses of this chapter, in the common Hebrew text, have been extremely corrupted by the ignorance of some transcribers; because the Samaritan makes the account, here given, exactly agree with the order of the encampments mentioned Numb. xxxiii. and there it is said that Aaron died, and was buried in mount Hor.

stand before the LORD to minister unto him, and to pleas in his name, unto this day.

9 Wherefore Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD is his inheritance, according is the LORD thy God promised him.

10 ¶ And I stayed in the mount, according to the first time, forty days and forty nights; and the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also, and the LORD would not destroy thee.

11 And the LORD said unto me, Arise, take thy journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land, which I swore unto their fathers to give unto them.

12 ¶ And now, Israel, what doth the LORD thy God require of thee, but to fear the LORD thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul,

13 To keep the commandments of the LORD, and his statutes, which I command thee this day for thy good?

14 Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the LORD's thy God, the earth also, with all that therein is.

15 Only the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day.

16 Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiffnecked.

17 For the LORD your God is God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, mighty, and a terrible, which regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward:

18 He doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment.

19 Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

20 Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou cleave, and swear by his name.

21 He is thy praise, and he is thy God, that hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thine eyes have seen.

22 Thy fathers went down into Egypt with three-score and ten persons; and now the LORD thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. X.

We are taught, from this chapter, that the end which God proposes to himself in all that he does for mankind, and what he requires from us, above all other things, is, that we should love him with all our heart, and serve him with all our strength; that we should fear him, walk in his ways, and love our neighbour as ourselves.

CHAP. XI.

people's personal experience of God's great works, and their future expectations in the land of promise. 10 The of their children therein. 22 Victory and extensive territory will reward their obedience. 26 The blessing and curse set before them.

THEREFORE thou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, always.

2 ¶ And know ye this day; for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen the chastisement of the LORD your God, his greatness, his mighty hand; and his stretched out arm.

3 And his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land;

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; how he made the water of the Red sea to overflow them; they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day;

5 And what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came into this place;

6 And what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the substance that was in their possession, in the midst of all Israel:

7 But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did.

¶ Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may be strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it;

9 And that ye may prolong your days in the land, which the LORD swore unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 ¶ For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs:

11 But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven:

12 A land which the LORD thy God careth for:
the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

13 ¶ And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul,

14 That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest

14 The heaven and the heaven of heavens, &c.] The first heaven comprehends the atmosphere, the space illuminated by the sun, moon, and stars: the second, or the heaven of heavens, is the glorious region, in which the throne of God is placed.

16 Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, &c.] Would you therefore recommend yourselves to the favour of God, you must not satisfy yourselves with the observance of external rites and ceremonies;
but your chief aim must be, to attain those inward dispositions of mind, and to reform those sinful affections, that are intended by circumcision, and other external ordinances.

19 Love ye therefore the stranger, &c.] Be kind therefore to all your fellow-creatures, out of honour to your common creator, and in imitation of that tender care which he exercises over all the sons of men.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on Chap. XI.

1 Therefore, &c.] That is, because the LORD thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude, with which the preceding chapter concludes.

2 I speak not with your children, &c.] All that were now above fifty could very well remember their deliverance out of Egypt; for all those who, at the time of the deliverance, were turned of twenty, were now (except only three of them) all dead; but of those, who
No. 17.

at that time were under twenty, many were now living and to them he speaks, and not to their children, who could know it only by hearsay.

10 And wateredst it with thy foot, &c.] The meaning is, that whereas Egypt was watered by human art, Canaan was watered by rain from heaven: or as the foot is sometimes metaphorically used for labour, the import of the phrase may be, Which thou wateredst with great labour.

11 But the land, whither ye go to possess it, &c.] Whilst the Egyptians were inventing methods, and labouring to moisten and refresh their grounds; the Israelites knew no such necessity, and were released from all that toil; they had their God to "water their furrows, and to send rain into the little vallies thereof: he blessed their increase, he crowned the year with his goodness, and his clouds dropped fatness," Psalm lxxv. 11, 12.

12 A land which the LORD thy God careth for, &c.] Not so much fruitful of itself, as by the peculiar blessings of God upon it; God often declares, that he would either send or withhold the rain, and they were to expect to find the country fruitful or barren, as they were faithful or remiss in their duty.

14 The first rain and the latter rain, &c.] The first at the autumn-nal, and the second at the vernal equinox: the first, to cause the seed sown to spring up; and the second, to nourish the corn until the harvest.

Before CHRIST 1451. mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

15 And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full.

16 Take heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them;

17 And then the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he shut up the heaven, and there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 ¶ Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates;

21 That your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 ¶ For if ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him;

23 Then will the LORD drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

24 Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be your's: from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the utmost sea shall your coast be.

25 There shall no man be able to stand before you: for the LORD your God shall lay the fear of you and the dread of you upon all the land that ye shall tread upon, as he hath said unto you.

26 ¶ Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse;

27 A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day:

28 And a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, and the curse upon mount Ebal.

30 Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the champaign over against Gilgal, beside the plains of Moreh?

31 For ye shall pass over Jordan to go in to possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein.

32 And ye shall observe to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day.

29 Thou shalt put the blessing.] Thou shalt cause it to be pronounced.

Upon mount Gerizim, and upon mount Ebal.] The above-mentioned mountains were separated by a valley two hundred paces wide, and situated in the tribe of Ephraim, near the oaks or plains of Moreh; where God appeared to Abraham, after he came into the land of Canaan, and where Abraham built an altar unto the Lord.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

1. These are the statutes, &c.] Moses begins with those statutes which relate to the worship of God; and particularly those which explain the second commandment, about which God is in a special manner jealous.

2. Upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, &c.] The first altars (of nature's raising) acquired a relative sanctity; that is, they were considered as holy places; but the temples and altars there raised

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XI.

We should always remember, that if Moses denounced blessings and curses to the Jews to oblige them to fear the Lord; the gospel contains much more valuable blessings, and more terrible curses. Let us think well of this, and learn to obey the commands of God.

CHAP. XII.

1. Monuments of idolatry must be destroyed. 4 The service of God must be attended upon in the place of his choosing. 15, 20 Flesh for common food may be killed and eaten elsewhere, only without the blood; 17, 26 but all holy things must be brought and eaten in the holy place. 19 The Levite not to be forsaken. 29 Idolatrous practices not to be enquired after.

THESE are the statutes and judgments, which ye shall observe to do in the land, which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, all the days that ye live upon the earth.

2 Ye shall utterly destroy all the places, wherein the nations which ye shall possess served their gods, upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree:

3 And ye shall overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, and destroy the names of them, out of that place.

4 ¶ Ye shall not do so unto the LORD your God.

5 But unto the place which the LORD your God shall choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his habitation shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

6 And thither ye shall bring your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, and your tithes, and heave offerings of your hand, and your vows, and your freewill offerings, and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks:

7 And there ye shall eat before the LORD your God, and ye shall rejoice in all ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

8 Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes.

9 For ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance, which the LORD your God giveth you.

10 But when ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the LORD your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety;

11 Then there shall be a place which the LORD your God shall choose to cause his name to dwell there; thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave offering of your hand, and all your choice vows which ye vow unto the LORD:

12 And ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God, ye, and your sons, and your daughters, and your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and the Levite that is within your gates; forasmuch as he hath no part nor inheritance with you.

13 Take heed to thyself that thou offer not thy burnt offerings in every place that thou seest:

14 But

being afterwards abused to the vilest purposes of superstition, and barbarous idol-worship, Moses wisely ordered them to be destroyed.

3. And burn their groves, &c.] Being the places where the works of darkness were committed, they must all be destroyed, with the altars, pillars, and images that had been used by the heathens in the worship of their gods, so as the very names of them might be buried in oblivion; and not only not to be remembered with respect, but not remembered at all.

5. To put his name there, &c.] The Chaldee paraphrase expounds it, To cause his majesty or divine presence to dwell there.

6. Your tithes, &c.] Those which were used at feasts of thanksgiving, in solemn festivals.

8. Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, &c.] In the wilderness, while the Israelites were destitute of many things requisite to the exact performance of their sacred rites, they were excused from the observance of many of them, and, among the rest, of that of circumcision.

14 But in the place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

15 ¶ Notwithstanding thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee: the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, as of the roebuck, and as of the hart.

16 Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 ¶ Thou mayest not eat within thy gates thy tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy freewill offerings, or heave offering of thine hand:

18 But thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates: and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou puttest thine hands unto.

19 ¶ Take heed to thyself that thou forsake not the Levite as long as thou livest upon the earth.

20 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, as he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh, because thy soul longeth to eat flesh; thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

21 If the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

22 Even as the roebuck and the hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them: the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike.

23 Only be sure that thou eat not the blood: for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh.

24 Thou shalt not eat it; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water.

25 Thou shalt not eat it; that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

26 ¶ Only thy holy things which thou hast, and thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose:

27 And thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

28 Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.

29 ¶ When the LORD thy God shall cut off the nations from before thee, whither thou goest to possess them, and thou succeedest them, and dwellest in their land;

30 Take heed to thyself that thou be not snared by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee; and that thou enquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise.

31 Thou shalt not do so unto the LORD thy God: for every abomination to the LORD which he hateth have they done unto their gods; for even their sons and their daughters they have burnt in the fire to their gods.

32 What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XII.

From this chapter Christians may learn, that God will not be served otherwise than as he prescribes in his word; that they ought to abominate all sorts of idolatry and superstition; to keep themselves from evil customs and evil examples; and to employ in the service of God, and support of the poor, those temporal goods which God has bestowed on them.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Enticers to idolatry must be stoned to death, 6 without regard to nearness of relation. 12 Idolatrous cities must be utterly destroyed.

IF there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder,

2 And the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known; and let us serve them;

3 Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul.

4 Ye shall walk after the LORD your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and cleave unto him.

5 And that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death; because he hath spoken to turn you away from the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, to thrust thee out of the way which the LORD thy God commanded thee to walk in. So shalt thou put the evil away from the midst of thee.

6 ¶ If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend, which is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which thou hast not known, thou, nor thy fathers;

7 Namely, of the gods of the people which are round about you, nigh unto thee, or far off from thee, from the one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth;

8 Thou shalt not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him:

9 But thou shalt surely kill him; thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people.

10 And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the 14 In the place which the Lord shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer, &c.] There is not any particular precept in all the law of Moses, so largely pressed and so frequently inculcated as this, by which they were all tied to bring their sacrifices to that one altar which was set up in the court of the tabernacle, and there to perform all the rituals of their religion.

18 The Levite that is within thy gates, &c.] Besides the Levites who attended the altar, as assistants to the priests, there were other Levites also, dispersed in the country, to instruct the people in the law of God, and to assist them in their devotions.

23 Be sure that thou eat not the blood, &c.] Why the Israelites were forbidden thus strictly the eating of blood, has been supposed to be, to prevent the superstitions of the old idolaters, about the blood of their sacrifices, which they thought their demons delighted in, and by eating of which they imagined that they had communion with them.

31 Thou shalt not do so unto the Lord thy God, &c.] They were not to introduce the inhuman customs of the idolaters, because it would be absurd to make those their patterns whom God had made their slaves and captives.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIII.

1 If there arise among you a prophet, &c.] Moses, foreseeing that the Israelites would, in after-ages, be exposed to the delusions of false prophets, lays down this certain rule whereby to judge of such pretenders to inspiration; namely, the existence of the true God, and the authority, goodness, and truth of his laws and religion, in opposition to the idolatrous customs, absurdities, follies, and wickednesses of the worship of the heathens.

9 Thou shalt surely kill him, &c.] It is not sufficient for thee to dissent from his wicked persuasions; but thou must also, without any mercy, procure vengeance on him by way of justice, in accusing him to the magistrate, either by information, or have it enquired into, or by sufficient proof; and, in case he is condemned, thou oughtest to be the first that shall put his condemnation in execution.

Before CHRIST 1451. the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.

11 And all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

12 ¶ If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, the children of Belial, are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known.

14 Then shalt thou enquire, and make search, and ask diligently; and, behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you;

15 Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God: and it shall be an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.

17 And there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing to thine hand: that the LORD may turn from the fierceness of his anger, and shew thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers;

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep all the commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XIII.

This chapter teaches us, that we should, by all possible and just means, oppose such as draw away others into error and wickedness; yea, though they be our nearest relations; and that the church ought to make use of discipline, and the means that Jesus Christ has appointed, to prevent scandals, to reclaim such as are the authors thereof, and to exclude them from the communion, if they become incorrigible.

CHAP. XIV.

1 God's children must not disfigure themselves in mourning.

3 What may, and what may not be eaten, of beasts, 9 of fishes, 11 of fowls. 21 That which dieth of itself must not be eaten. 22 Tithing to be truly performed.

23 Tithes and firstlings of cattle to be eaten before the LORD. 24 What is to be done in case of very distant abode. 28 The third year's tithes of alms and charity.

YE are the children of the LORD your God: ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead.

¶ For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God, and the LORD hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself, above all the nations that are upon the earth.

3 ¶ Thou shalt not eat any abominable thing.

4 These are the beasts which ye shall eat: the ox, the sheep, and the goat,

5 The hart, and the roebuck, and the fallow deer, and the wild goat, and the pygarg, and the wild ox, and the chamois.

6 And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat.

7 Nevertheless, these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney: for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, nor touch their dead carcase.

9 ¶ These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters: all that have fins and scales shall ye eat:

10 And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat; it is unclean unto you.

11 ¶ Of all clean birds ye shall eat.

12 But these are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospray,

13 And the glede, and the kite, and the vulture after his kind,

14 And every raven after his kind,

15 And the owl, and the night hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind,

16 The little owl, and the great owl, and the swan,

17 And the pelican, and the gier eagle, and the cormorant,

18 And the stork, and the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat.

19 And every creeping thing that fieth is unclean unto you: they shall not be eaten.

20 But of all clean fowls ye may eat.

21 ¶ Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it unto an alien: for thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.

22 ¶ Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year.

23 ¶ And thou shalt eat before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks; that thou mayest learn to fear the LORD thy God always.

24 ¶ And if the way be too long for thee so that thou art not able to carry it; or if the place be too far from thee, which the LORD thy God shall choose to set his name there, when the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

25 Then shalt thou turn it into money, and bind up the money in thine hand, and shalt go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose:

26 And thou shalt bestow that money for whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul desireth: and thou shalt eat there before the LORD thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou and thine household,

27 And the Levite that is within thy gates; thou shalt not forsake him; for he hath no part nor inheritance with thee.

28 ¶ At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates:

29 And the Levite, (because he hath no part nor inheritance with thee,) and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hand which thou doest.

GENERAL

13 Children of Belial, &c.] The word "Belial," signifies one who is subject to no law; and therefore a very proper word for the devil, and all the children of disobedience.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIV.

1 Ye shall not cut yourselves] The Israelites are reminded that they were the children of the Lord their God; that therefore they were to bear all evil accidents and afflictions with patience; they were not to sorrow as men without hope; being intitled after death, to heavenly and eternal inheritance.

Nor make any baldness between your eyes, &c.] They were not to make themselves bald, by shaving or plucking off the hair between their eyes, or on the fore part of their head.

3 Any abominable thing.] That is, Any thing which I have made abominable to you, or put far from you.

5 The hart, and the roebuck, &c.] The beasts which Moses here enumerates, are most probably the deer, the antelope, the wild beever, the goat-deer, the white bullocks, the buffalo, and the jeraffa, or mountain goat.

29 And shall eat and be satisfied, &c.] Concerning the distribution of tithe, the Hebrew writers tell us, that the owner of the field, when the poor passed by him, and he had there the tithe of the poor, gave every one of them that passed by, so much of that tithe as would satisfy him.

COMMENTARY

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIV.

The instructions to be drawn from this chapter are, that those who have a better hope, should not afflict themselves beyond measure for the deceased; that the creatures of God ~~are~~ to be used with sobriety and thankfulness, and in such a manner that nobody may be scandalized; that the ministers of the church should be maintained; and that care should be taken of the poor.

C H A P. XV.

1 The seventh year a year of release for the poor. 7 It must be no hindrance to lending or giving. 12 An Hebrew servant, unless he be unwilling to depart, must in the seventh year go forth free and well furnished. 19 All firstling males of the cattle are to be sanctified unto the LORD.

AT the end of every seven years thou shalt make a release.

2 And this is the manner of the release: Every creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour, shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release.

3 Of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again: but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release;

4 Save when there shall be no poor among you; for the LORD shall greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it:

5 Only if thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all these commandments which I command thee this day.

6 For the LORD thy God blest thee, as he promised thee; and thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

7 ¶ If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother:

But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shall surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

9 Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart, saying, The seventh year, the year of release, is at hand; and thine eye be evil against thy poor brother, and thou givest him nought; and he cry unto the LORD against thee, and it be sin unto thee.

10 Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him: because that for this thing the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto.

11 For the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

12 ¶ And if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years; then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty:

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy flour, and out of thy winepress: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath blessed thee thou shalt give unto him.

15 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bond-man in the land of Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee: therefore I command thee this thing to day.

16 And it shall be, if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee;

17 Then thou shalt take an aul, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever. And also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise.

18 It shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth a double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

19 ¶ All the firstling males that come of thy herd and of thy flock thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep.

20 Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God year by year in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

21 And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy God.

22 Thou shalt eat it within thy gates: the unclean and the clean person shall eat it alike, as the roebuck, and as the hart.

23 Only thou shalt not eat the blood thereof; thou shalt pour it upon the ground as water.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XV.

We are taught from this chapter, to treat our servants with equity and gentleness, and not to be severe in exacting our debts from the poor; to take great care of people in want, and never to forsake them, since it is a crying sin to oppress them, or leave them destitute of help; and that God will extend his blessings to those who have compassion on the miserable.

C H A P. XVI.

1 The feast of the passover, 9 of weeks, 13 of tabernacles. 16 Every male must offer according to his ability at these three feasts. 18 Of judges, and of justice. 21 Groves and images are forbidden.

OBERVE the month of Abib, and keep the passover unto the LORD thy God: for in the month of Abib the LORD thy God brought thee forth out of Egypt by night.

2 Thou shalt therefore sacrifice the passover unto the LORD thy God, of the flock and the herd, in the place which the LORD shall choose to place his name there.

3 Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction; for thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt in haste: that thou mayest remember the day when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt all the days of thy life.

4 And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee in all thy coast seven days; neither shall there any thing of the flesh, which thou sacrificedst the first day at even, remain all night until the morning.

5 Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover within any of thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee:

6 But at the place which the LORD thy God shall choose

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

4 Save when there shall be no poor among you, &c.] This is much better rendered, in the margin, "To the end that there be no poor among you, or that none among you may be pinched by extreme poverty."

9 Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart, &c.] Moses here gives the Israelites a charge, that they should look upon every poor neighbour as a member of the same happy society, equally related to God as himself; who, therefore, would be sure to punish all uncharitableness to such as were his own, as he would be to bless and reward those, who, with a generous and bountiful heart, humbly and gratefully depended upon his providence, and obeyed his commands.

18 Worth a double hired servant, &c.] The ordinary time for hiring mercenary servants, was not less than one year, nor more than three years: "Within three years, the years of an hireling," says Isaiah, xvi. 14. but the bond-servant, having served six years, is therefore said to be worth a double hired servant, in serving six years.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

3 The bread of affliction, &c.] So called because it was insipid, and not easily digested; and therefore served to put them in mind of their afflicted state in Egypt.

choose to place his name in, there thou shalt sacrifice the passover at even, at the going down of the sun, at the season that thou camest forth out of Egypt.

7 And thou shalt roast and eat it in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose: and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go into thy tents.

8 Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread: and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly to the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work therein.

9 ¶ Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn.

10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

11 And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are among you, in the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to place his name there.

12 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt: and thou shalt observe and do these statutes.

13 ¶ Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy corn and thy wine:

14 And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates.

15 Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.

16 ¶ Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the LORD empty:

17 Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee.

18 ¶ Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment.

19 Thou shalt not wrest judgment; thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift: for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the words of the righteous.

20 That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest live, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

21 ¶ Thou shalt not plant thee a grove of any trees near unto the altar of the LORD thy God, which thou shalt make thee.

22 Neither shalt thou set thee up any image; which the LORD thy God hateth.

7 And go into thy tents.] Unto thine own habitations. The words are only a permission, not an absolute command: after they had eaten the paschal lamb, they were permitted to return home, if they pleased.

9 Seven weeks shalt thou number, &c.] The feast of Pentecost was kept in solemn commemoration of the awful delivery of the law at mount Sinai; and in thankfulness to God for the fruits of the year.

13 The feast of tabernacles, &c.] This feast was instituted in order to commemorate the providential preservation of the Israelites, during their wandering in the wilderness.

18 Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, &c.] Accordingly judges were appointed, and tribunals erected, in every city, to determine all differences arising out of the law; though not to the power of life and death. It was customary for the Israelites to keep their courts in the gates, or in the chambers over the gates of

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVI.

This chapter conveys the following instructions; that as the Jews observed certain feasts in memory of national mercies, so Christians ought to celebrate God's goodness with greater zeal and devotion, not only at peculiar times, but at all times, and in all their ways; for the life of a Christian ought to be a perpetual feast; that magistrates and judges ought to administer exact justice, take no bribe, nor have respect of persons; and that every species of idolatry should be avoided, and whatever might be an occasion of sin or scandal to ourselves or others.

CHAP. XVII.

1 The thing sacrificed must be sound. Idolaters must be put to death. 8 Hard controversies must be determined by the priests and judges, the contemner of whose determination must be put to death. 14 The election and duty of a king.

THOU shalt not sacrifice unto the LORD thy God any bullock, or sheep, wherein is blemish, or any evil favouredness: for that is an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

2 ¶ If there be found among you within any of thy gates which the LORD thy God giveth thee, man or woman, that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the LORD thy God, in transgressing his covenant,

3 And hath gone and served other gods, and worshipped them, either the sun or moon, or any of the host of heaven, which I have not commanded;

4 And it be told thee, and thou hast heard of it, and enquired diligently, and, behold, it be true, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought in Israel:

5 Then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, even that man or that woman, and shalt stone them with stones till they die.

6 At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death.

7 The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people. So thou shalt put the evil away from among you.

8 ¶ If there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment, between blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates: then shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the place which the LORD thy God shall choose;

9 And thou shalt come unto the priests the Levites, and unto the judge that shall be in those days, and enquire; and they shall shew thee the sentence of judgment:

10 And thou shalt do according to the sentence, which they of that place which the LORD shall choose shall shew thee; and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee:

11 According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do: thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand, nor to the left.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVII.

3 Any of the host of heaven] This is, any of the stars, many of which were worshipped by the neighbouring nations; as the dog-star by the Egyptians, who imagined that the soul of Isis had been transported thither after death.

I have not commanded.] I have forbidden.

8 Between blood and blood] In a question that may arise, whether a man hath committed wilful murder or only casual.

Stroke, &c.] Or plague; the Chaldee translateth it, The plague of leprosy, wherein there might be difficulties that the priest could not easily judge.

will not hearken unto the priest that standeth to minister there before the LORD thy God, or unto the judge, even that man shall die: and thou shalt put away the evil from Israel.

13 And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

14 ¶ When thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

15 Thou shalt in any wise set him king over thee, whom the LORD thy God shall choose: one from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother.

16 But he shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.

17 Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away: neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold.

18 And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book out of that which is before the priests the Levites:

19 And it shall be with him, and he shall read therein all the days of his life: that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them:

20 That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVII.

We learn hence, to oppose those who would turn us away from the true worship of God, and the obedience we owe to him; that Christians should submit themselves to their spiritual and temporal guides; that kings and magistrates ought not to heap up riches, live deliciously, or oppress the people, but live within the bounds of humility, govern the people with equity, and, above all, meditate on the law of God, and conform themselves strictly to it.

C H A P. XVIII.

1 The LORD is the inheritance of the priests and Levites. 3 The priest's due. 6 All Levites who minister are entitled to like portions. 9 The abominations of the Canaanites to be avoided. 15 A prophet to arise, like unto Moses, who must be hearkened unto. 20 The presumptuous prophet must be put to death. 21 How he may be known.

THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel: they shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

16 He shall not multiply horses, &c.] For the reason given in the next words; it was customary to buy horses out of Egypt, and so it continued to the days of Solomon.

17 Neither shall he multiply wives, &c.] Lest he be seduced from the true religion, by marrying the worshippers of strange gods, as Solomon was.

18 Shall write him a copy of this law, &c.] Some hereby understand the book of Deuteronomy, which is an abridgment of the law; others are of opinion, that it means the whole pentateuch.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

3 The two cheeks, and the maw.] See Lev. vii. 32. By "the maw" is meant the stomach, which was accounted by the ancients a great dainty.

6 If a Levite.] By "a Levite" is here understood any of the levitical tribe, whether a priest or an ordinary Levite.

Come with all the desire of his mind, &c.] To encourage all those of the sacred order to take delight in the exercise of their ministry, and to promote the honour of divine service, he appointed that such of the priests as chose to serve at their tabernacle out of their ordinary course, and addicted themselves to a constant attendance upon the public mi-their brethren: the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

3 ¶ And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a sacrifice, whether it be ox or sheep; and they shall give unto the priest the shoulder, and the two cheeks, and the maw.

4 The firstfruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give him.

5 For the LORD thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, to stand to minister in the name of the LORD; him and his sons for ever.

6 ¶ And if a Levite come from any of thy gates out of all Israel, where he sojourned, and come with all the desire of his mind unto the place which the LORD shall choose;

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

8 They shall have like portions to eat, beside that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony.

9 ¶ When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations.

10 There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch,

11 Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer.

12 For all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee.

13 Thou shalt be perfect with the LORD thy God.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt possess, hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath not suffered thee so to do.

15 ¶ The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken;

16 According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy God in Horeb in the day of the assembly, saying, Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.

17 And the LORD said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken.

18 I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth: and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.

19 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in thy name, I will require it of him.

20 ¶ But the prophet, which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to nistry, should have the same continual allowance with the priests and Levites in waiting.

10 An observer of times.] That sort of divination which consisted in observing the face of the heavens, the motion and figure of the clouds, the appearance of meteors, thunder, lightning, and the like.

Or an enchanter.] One who divines by means of serpents.

Or a witch.] One who does mischief to men or beasts by evil acts.

11 Or a charmer.] One who pretends to foretel future events from the positions of the planets.

Or a necromancer.] One who enquires of the dead, or a consulter of dead idols.

15 Like unto me, &c.] The words are applicable to none but the Messiah, who was a second law-giver, like unto Moses, which none of the other prophets were; nor had any of the other prophets, but the Messiah, such a near and familiar intercourse with God, as Moses.

18 And will put my words, &c.] This prediction was fully accomplished in our Saviour, who, though he confirmed his doctrine by miracles, yet were they calculated to promote the good of mankind, and not to render him an object of dread and terror.

19 I will require it of him.] The Greek translateth this passage, I will take vengeance on him.

Before CHRIST 1451. to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die.

21 ¶ And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken?

22 When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XVIII.

From this chapter we may note, that it is a great sin to use divination, observe times, and other superstitious rites, and that these practices ought not to be suffered among those who know the true God: and that the command given by God, not to listen to false prophets, shews us that we must not believe all sorts of teachers and doctrines, but try the persons that teach, and avoid those that preach doctrines contrary to the scriptures, and obey those that declare the truth.

CHAP. XIX.

1 The cities of refuge. 4 The privilege thereof allowed to the manslayer; 11 but not to him that is guilty of wilful murder. 14 The landmark not to be removed. 15 Two witnesses at the least are required to prove a criminal fact. 16 The punishment of false witnesses.

WHEN the LORD thy God hath cut off the nations, whose land the LORD thy God giveth thee, and thou succeedest them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses;

2 Thou shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

4 ¶ And this is the case of the slayer, which shall flee thither, that he may live: whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not in time past;

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the ax to cut down the tree, and the head flippeth from the helve, and lighteth upon his neighbour, that he die; he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live:

6 Lest the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and slay him; whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not in time past.

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the LORD thy God enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers;

9 If thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his way; then shalt thou add three cities more for thee, beside these three:

20 That prophet shall die.] Shall be judged, and condemned to death by the magistrate.

22 If the thing follow not, &c.] If a prophet appeal to some miracle or future event, an absolute sign of his being sent from God, and the miracle should fail, or the prediction not be fulfilled, he shall be considered an impostor.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

1 In the midst of thy land, &c.] Within thy land; they were to be placed so conveniently in several parts of the country, that men might easily and speedily flee to them.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way.] The senate, or Jewish magistrates, were obliged to prepare the ways to the cities of refuge; and that in the fifteenth of the month Adar (answering to our February) they set people every year upon this work; these ways were thirty-two cubits in breadth, without any impediments or obstructions in them.

Divide the coasts of thy land, &c.] They were to divide their possessions into three equal parts, and in the central part of each they were to open an asylum, that, being nearly at an equal distance with respect to the inhabitants of each district, each might enjoy the same benefit from them.

10 That innocent blood be not shed in thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 ¶ But if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities:

12 Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

13 Thine eye shall not pity him, but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

14 ¶ Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

15 ¶ One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

16 ¶ If a false witness rise up against any man to testify against him that which is wrong;

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand before the LORD, before the priests and the judges, which shall be in those days;

18 And the judges shall make diligent inquisition; and, behold, if the witness be a false witness, and hath testified falsely against his brother;

19 Then shall ye do unto him, as he had thought to have done unto his brother: so shalt thou put the evil away from among you.

20 And those which remain shall hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you.

21 And thine eye shall not pity; but life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XIX.

We are taught from this chapter, that wilful murder is a crime that should never pass unpunished by the magistrate; that land-marks are not to be removed; and that false witnesses should suffer the same punishment as would have been inflicted upon those against whom they gave their testimony. Hence we may see, that it is the will of God, that justice and uprightness should take place in societies, and that they who wrong their neighbours, by bearing false witness, or in any other manner, expose themselves to God's vengeance.

CHAP. XX.

1 The priest's exhortation before the battle. 5 The officer's proclamation signifying who are to be dismissed. 10 How the cities that accept or refuse the proclamation of peace are to be treated. 16 The cities of the seven nations are devoted to utter destruction. 19 Trees good for food must not be cut down in the siege.

WHEN thou goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seeest horses, and chariots, and a people more than thou, be not afraid of them: for the LORD

9 Then thou shalt add three cities more, &c.] In David's time the bounds of the children of Israel were enlarged quite to the river Euphrates; yet three other cities were not added; so that we may conjecture that David did not drive out the heathen which were beyond Lebanon, but only subdued and made them tributary.

12 The elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, &c.] Upon any suspicion or information of murder, laid against any one that took refuge there, the magistrate of the town or district where the fact was committed, shall send for the person out of the refuge-town, bring him to a fair trial, and, upon a clear evidence of wilful murder, shall condemn him to death, and cause execution to be done, without fear, partiality, or affection.

21 Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, &c.] See commentary on Luke xxiv. 20.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XX.

And seeest horses, and chariots, &c.] The armies of the Israelites consisted wholly of foot, and their law seems to have continued so, in order to more intire reliance upon God, the Canaanites and other nations having the advantage of chariots and horses.

LORD thy God is with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the priest shall approach and speak unto the people,

3 And shall say unto them, Hear; O Israel, ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts faint, fear not, and do not tremble, neither be ye terrified because of them;

4 For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

5 ¶ And the officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not dedicated it; let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it.

7 And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her.

8 And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, What man is there that is fearful and fainthearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart faint as well as his heart.

9 And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make captains of the armies to lead the people.

10 ¶ When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, then proclaim peace unto it.

11 And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.

12 And if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it:

13 And when the LORD thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, thou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword:

14 But the women, and the little ones, and the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spoile thereof, shalt thou take unto thyself; and thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

15 Thus shalt thou do unto all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations.

16 ¶ But of the cities of these people, which the LORD thy God doth give thee for an inheritance, thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth:

17 But thou shalt utterly destroy them; namely, the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee:

18 That they teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so should ye sin against the LORD your God.

19 ¶ When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an ax against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (for the tree of the field is man's life) to employ them in the siege:

20 Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down; and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until it be subdued.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XX.

From this chapter we learn, that as the Jews were exhorted to engage in ~~an~~ unjust wars, on which they could not ask a blessing ~~in~~ their attempts; and that they were to be carried on with temper and moderation, sparing as much as possible, the lives of men and the fruits of the earth; much more ought Christians to shew their moderation and mercy in this respect, and that they are animated with the Spirit of Jesus Christ, the spirit of meekness and love.

CHAP. XXI.

1 The expiation of a murder, when the slayer is unknown.

10 The usage of a captive taken to wife. 15 The first-born not to be disinherited upon private affection. 18

A rebellious son must be stoned to death. 22 The male-factor must not hang all night on a tree.

IF one be found slain in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him:

2 Then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth, and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain:

3 And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke;

4 And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley, which is neither eared nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley:

5 And the priests the sons of Levi shall come near; for them the LORD thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the LORD; and by their word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried:

6 And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the slain man, shall wash their hands over the heifer that is beheaded in the valley:

7 And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it.

8 Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, and lay not innocent blood unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them.

9 So shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

10 ¶ When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive,

11 And seekest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife;

12 Then

2 The priest shall approach, &c.] A priest was particularly appointed to blow with the trumpet when they were preparing for battle, and exhort them, in the most persuasive manner, to a courageous performance of their duty; to look upon their cause as the cause of God, and assure themselves of success under his protection.

5 The officers shall speak unto the people, &c.] The heralds were to make proclamation, allowing an exemption from the war to such as had lately purchased estates, newly built houses, and not yet settled in them, planted new vineyards, or were newly married; lest the thoughts of such men, continually hankering after their private affairs, might dispirit them from the business of the war, and indispose them for the public service.

8 What man is there that is fearful and fainthearted? &c.] We may observe from this passage, that though the Israelites were not absolutely to rely upon their own strength and valour, and the conduct of their men, for the victory, yet they were to employ only such persons in their wars as had a mind disposed and qualified for the business, and were looking for a blessing upon their endeavours.

10 Then proclaim peace unto it.] See commentary on Numb. xx. 14.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXI.

1 If one be found slain in the land; &c.] The expiation for a concealed murder, when the criminal could not be found, was attended with great solemnity, in order to shew the heinousness of the fact, and to deter others from committing the like.

2 Thy elders, &c.] Not "the elders," in the next verse, (it not being yet known to what particular city it belongeth) but "thy elders," O Israel, which were of the general state of the land, and members of the great council; or sanhedrim.

4 Unto a rough valley, &c.] The original signifies both a valley and a stream; a valley with a brook running through it.

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house; and she shall shave her head, and pare her nails;

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and bewail her father and her mother a full month: and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.

14 And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise of her, because thou hast humbled her.

15 ¶ If a man have two wives, one beloved, and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the firstborn son be her's that was hated:

16 Then it shall be, when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved firstborn before the son of the hated, which is indeed the firstborn:

17 But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the firstborn, by giving him a double portion of all that he hath: for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the firstborn is his.

18 ¶ If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them:

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place;

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice; he is a glutton, and a drunkard.

21 And all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die: so shalt thou put evil away from among you; and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

22 ¶ And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree:

23 His body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day; (for he that is hanged is accursed of God;) that thy land be not defiled, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXI.

This chapter shews us, that judges and magistrates cannot be too strict in discovering and punishing murderers; and that the punishment of disobedient children, should make such fear the anger and curse of God.

CHAP. XXII.

1 Of humanity toward brethren. 5 The sex to be distinguished by apparel. 6 The dam not to be taken with her young ones. 8 Every house must have battlements. 9 Three sorts of confusion to be avoided. 12 Fringes to be worn upon the vesture. 13 The punishment of him that slandereth his wife, and of the wife, if convicted 12 She shall shave her head, and pare her nails.] The Chaldee paraphrase translateth it, She shall let her nails grow; which seems most suitable to a state of mourning.

13 The raiment of her captivity, &c.] Namely, the garments in which she was taken: these she was to lay aside, and, in their room, to put on mourning, as another sign of her humiliation, and to withdraw the man's affection from her if she continued in her unbelief.

15 Two wives, &c.] Though bigamy was contrary to God's institution, and was begun by the posterity of Cain (see Gen. iv. 9.) yet the corruption being spread over all, and even in the church, God for a while only suffered it, until the time of reformation; but (notwithstanding what a modern writer has asserted) approved not of it, as appears from our Saviour's words, Matt. xiv. 4, 5.

18 If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, &c.] When all means of admonition and correction were lost upon any son, and the parent saw nothing but ruin to the estate and family, he was directed to make complaint to the magistrates in court; who, upon sufficient evidence given, were to condemn him to death, a terrible example of disobedience to the laws of God.

22 And thou hang him on a tree.] The Hebrews understand this, not of putting him to death by hanging, but of hanging a man up after he was stoned to death.

of unchastity before marriage. 22 Adultery to be punished with death. 23 Of a rape committed in the city, or in the field. 28 Of fornication. 30 Incest is forbidden.

THOU shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother.

■ And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again.

3 In like manner shalt thou do with his ass; and so shalt thou do with his raiment; and with all lost thing of thy brother's, which he hath lost, and thou hast found, shalt thou do likewise: thou mayest not hide thyself.

4 Thou shalt not see thy brother's ass or his ox fall down by the way, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.

5 ¶ The women shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord thy God.

6 ¶ If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young:

7 But thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.

8 ¶ When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house, if any man fall from thence.

9 ¶ Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds: lest the fruit of thy seed which thou hast sown, and the fruit of thy vineyard, be defiled.

10 Thou shalt not plough with an ox and an ass together.

11 Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of woollen and linen together.

12 ¶ Thou shalt make thee fringes upon the four quarters of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

13 ¶ If any man take a wife, and go in unto her, and hate her,

14 And give occasions of speech against her, and bring up an evil name upon her, and say, I took this woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a maid:

15 Then shall the father of the damsel, and her mother, take and bring forth the tokens of the damsel's virginity unto the elders of the city in the gate:

16 And the damsel's father shall say unto the elders, I gave my daughter unto this man to wife, and he hateth her;

17 And, lo, he hath given occasions of speech against her, saying, I found not thy daughter a maid; and yet these

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXII.

5 The women shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, &c.] If the sexes were not distinguished by their habits, it would open a door to all manner of iniquity; for which reason, if there was no other, this law was very wise and good.

6 Thou shalt not take the dam with the young.] This is one of those merciful constitutions in the law of Moses, which respect the animal creation, and tend to humanize the hearts of the people, to produce in them a sense of the divine providence, extending itself to all creatures, and to teach them to exercise their dominion over them with gentleness.

8 Thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, &c.] That is, a balustrade of rails round the top of the house: the houses of the Israelites had six roofs, on which they walked, and conversed from thence with the people in the streets; and this illustrates the meaning of our Saviour's words, when he mentions speaking and proclaiming upon the house-tops. See Matt. x. 27. Luke xii. 3.

10 Thou shalt not plough with an ox and an ass, &c.] An ox and an ass were not to be coupled together in the same carriage; with this merciful intent, that one beast of greater strength might not strain a creature of less beyond its ability.

these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city. 18 And the elders of that city shall take that man and chastise him;

19 And they shall amerce him in an hundred shekels of silver, and give them unto the father of the damsel, because he hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin of Israel: and she shall be his wife; he may not put her away all his days.

20 But if this thing be true, and the tokens of virginity be not found for the damsel:

21 Then they shall bring out the damsel to the door of her father's house, and the men of her city shall stone her with stones that she die: because she hath wrought folly in Israel, to play the whore in her father's house: so shalt thou put evil away from among you.

22 ¶ If a man be found lying with a woman married to an husband, then they shall both of them die, both the man that lay with the woman, and the woman: so shalt thou put away evil from Israel.

23 ¶ If a damsel that is a virgin be betrothed unto an husband, and a man find her in the city, and lie with her;

24 Then ye shall bring them both out unto the gate of that city, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die; the damsel, because she cried not, being in the city; and the man because he hath humbled his neighbour's wife: so thou shalt put away evil from among you.

25 ¶ But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man force her, and lie with her: then the man only that lay with her shall die:

26 But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing; there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death: for as when a man riseth against his neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this matter:

27 For he found her in the field, and the betrothed damsel cried, and there was none to save her.

28 ¶ If a man find a damsel that is a virgin, which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found;

29 Then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver, and she shall be his wife; because he hath humbled her, he may not put her away all his days.

30 ¶ A man shall not take his father's wife, nor discover his father's skirt.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXII.

By this chapter we are exhorted honestly to restore things that are found. The law forbidding men and women to change the habits of their sex, teaches us to observe modesty and decency in apparel, and to avoid all that is unseemly, or that may tend to impurity. The law prohibiting the mixture of divers kinds, was in opposition to the customs of the idolaters. By the laws against uncleanness, we see, that they who are guilty of fornication and adultery, ought to be punished, and that they are obliged to make reparation by all possible means, which should deter us from the practice of those infamous sins, and prompt us to live in great chastity.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 What persons may not enter into the congregation. 3 An Ammonite or Moabite are excluded to the tenth generation; 7 but an Edomite or Egyptian may be admitted in the third. 9 Every wicked thing to be avoided in the host. 10 An unclean person must remove out of the camp. 12 Cleanliness to be attended to therein because of God's presence. 15 Of the fugitive servant. 17 Whoredom and sodomy not to be committed in Israel. 18 Of abominable sacrifices. 19 Of usury. 21 Of vows. 24 Of trespasses.

HE that is wounded in the stones, or hath his privy member cut off, shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

2 A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

3 ¶ An Ammonite or Moabite shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to their tenth generation shall they not enter into the congregation of the LORD for ever:

4 Because they met you not with bread and with water in the way, when ye came forth out of Egypt; and because they hired against thee Balaam the son of Beor of Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse thee.

5 Nevertheless the LORD thy God would not hearken unto Balaam; but the LORD thy God turned the curse into a blessing unto thee, because the LORD thy God loved thee.

6 Thou shalt not seek their peace nor their prosperity all thy days for ever.

7 ¶ Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite; for he is thy brother: thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian; because thou wast a stranger in his land.

¶ The children that are begotten of them shall enter into the congregation of the LORD in their third generation.

9 When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing.

10 ¶ If there be among you any man, that is not clean by reason of uncleanness that chanceth him by night, then shall he go abroad out of the camp, he shall not come within the camp:

11 But it shall be, when evening cometh on, he shall wash himself with water: and when the sun is down, he shall come into the camp again.

12 ¶ Thou shalt have a place also without the camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad:

13 And thou shalt have a paddle upon thy weapon; and it shall be, when thou wilt ease thyself abroad, thou shalt dig therewith, and shalt turn back and cover that which cometh from thee:

14 For the LORD thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp, to deliver thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee; therefore shall thy camp be holy: that he see no unclean thing in thee, and turn away from thee.

15 ¶ Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee:

16 He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates, where it liketh him best: thou shalt not oppress him.

17 ¶ There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israel, nor a sodomite of the sons of Israel:

9 Then keep thee from every wicked thing.] We are not to suppose that this advice is confined to the time of the host going forth, but is a duty at all times necessary and incumbent; but yet if there is any time, wherein abstinence from sin becomes more necessary than any other, surely it is in the time of war.

13 Thou shalt have a paddle upon thy weapon, &c.] Or, Thou shalt have a paddle besides thy arms; a paddle was an instrument of iron, the use of which, is described in the succeeding part of the verse.

14 The Lord—walketh in the midst of—thee, &c.] The ark, the symbol of God's presence, went along with them.

15 Thou shalt not deliver unto his, &c.] This is thought to have a particular relation to times of war, when heathen soldiers or servants might desert, and come over to the Israelites, with intent to embrace the true religion.

17 Nor a sodomite, &c.] More probably, a whore-master; the Israelites being notoriously guilty of those abominable practices.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIII.

3 An Ammonite or Moabite shall not, &c.] Though an Israelitish woman was not to marry an Ammonite or Moabite, yet a man of Israel might marry one of these women, after they had embraced the Jewish religion, of which we have an instance in Boaz, the ancestor of David, who married Ruth, the Moabitess.

6 Thou shalt not seek their peace, &c.] "Thou shalt have no public league or friendship with these nations," otherwise the particular duties of human and civil society, and of ordinary justice, are not here forbidden.

7 Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite] The Edomites were the descendants of Esau, and consequently a kindred nation; and as they were a circumcised people, they might make marriages with them, provided they worshipped the true God.

Thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian, &c.] It appears from this injunction of the Almighty, that the memory of past favours should not be effaced by succeeding injuries.

18 ¶ Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the LORD thy God for any vow: for even both these are abomination unto the LORD thy God.

19 ¶ Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother; usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of any thing that is lent upon usury:

20 Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all that thou fettest thine hand to in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

21 ¶ When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the LORD thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee.

22 But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee.

23 That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform; even a freewill offering, according as thou hast vowed unto the LORD thy God, which thou hast promised with thy mouth.

24 ¶ When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel.

25 When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbour, then thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbour's standing corn.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIII.

From this chapter, we may perceive that God abhors impiety, which ought to be banished from those who profess to serve him: that we ought not to use extortion, nor forget to use great moderation and equity in exacting payment; that lawful vows should be punctually accomplished; that the tendency of the law relating to plucking the ears of corn, or the grapes, was to keep the Jews from covetousness, and a churlish disposition, to make them avoid injustice; and, in using another's property, not to abuse that liberty, by doing mischief to their neighbour's goods.

C H A P. XXIV.

1 The law of divorce. 5 A new married man is exempt from war and civil offices for the space of a year. 6, 10 Of pledges. 7 Of manstealers. 8 Of leprosy. 14 The hire of a servant must not be detained. 16 Every man must be answerable for his own sin. 17 Of doing justice to the fatherless. 19 Of charity.

WHEN a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.

2 And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife;

3 And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and giveth it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife;

4 Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the LORD: and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

5 ¶ When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

18 Of a dog, &c.] Dog is understood here, by some, in a figurative sense, for the sodomite or whore-master above mentioned.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXIV.

1 Then let him write her a bill of divorcement, &c.] Whoever had conceived an insurmountable dislike to his wife, had hereby the privilege of repudiating her, not in a precipitate manner, but deliberately, by giving her a discharge from any further relation to him, signed with his own hand, by which she acquired full liberty to marry any other person.

4 May not take her again, &c.] Lest this permission should give occasion to abuses, it was ordained by the law, that the husband who had once repudiated his wife, should, upon her being married to 6 ¶ No man shall take the nether or the upper millstone to pledge: for he taketh a man's life to pledge.

7 ¶ If a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him; then that thief shall die; and thou shalt put evil away from among you.

8 ¶ Take heed in the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you: as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.

9 Remember what the LORD thy God did unto Miriam by the way, after that ye were come forth out of Egypt.

10 ¶ When thou dost lend thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge.

11 Thou shalt stand abroad, and the man to whom thou dost lend shall bring out the pledge abroad unto thee.

12 And if the man be poor, thou shalt not sleep with his pledge:

13 In any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own raiment, and bless thee: and it shall be righteousness unto thee before the LORD thy God.

14 ¶ Thou shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates:

15 At his day thou shalt give him his hire, neither shall the sun go down upon it; for he is poor, and setteth his heart upon it: lest he cry against thee unto the LORD, and it be sin unto thee.

16 ¶ The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

17 ¶ Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless; nor take the widow's raiment to pledge:

18 But thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt, and the LORD thy God redeemed thee thence: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

19 ¶ When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow: that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all the work of thine hands.

20 When thou beatest thine olive tree, thou shalt not go over the boughs again: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

21 When thou gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it afterward: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

22 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in the land of Egypt: therefore I command thee to do this thing.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXIV.

We may hence observe, with our Lord, that the divorces tolerated among the Jews, are no longer so among Christians; and that the bond of marriage cannot be dissolved, unless in the cases mentioned, Matt. xix. and 1 Cor. vii.—That we should not be too rigorous when we take pledges, or when we make poor persons pay their debts to us; that we should pay readily and honestly the wages of the hireling, and use kindness to strangers, widows, and orphans; also that we should remember the poor with our substance, if we expect God's blessing upon it.

another, become incapable of retaking her, though she should grow rich, or be otherwise again desirable; this consideration prevented them from parting with their wives; since, if she was once married to a second, she was irrecoverably lost to her former husband.

10 Thou shalt not go into his house, &c.] This was a merciful provision for the poor, whose houses he privileged in such a manner, that no man might enter them without his content, and then choose what he pleased for the security of what was due to him.

16 The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, &c.] This is a rule of common equity, and not at all inconsistent with God's threatening to punish the sins of the fathers upon the children; that refers to the strokes of heaven: whereas the present text relates to punishments inflicted upon criminals by men.

C H A P. XXV.

1 Stripes must not exceed forty. 4 The ox not to be muzzled. 5 The law of raising up seed unto a deceased brother. 11 Of immodesty in a woman. 13 Of unjust weights and measures. 17 The memory of Amalek to be blotted out.

IF there be a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them; then they shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked.

2 And it shall be, if the wicked man be worthy to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to lie down, and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number.

3 Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed: lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many stripes, then thy brother should seem vile unto thee.

4 Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn.

5 ¶ If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger: her husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her.

6 And it shall be, that the firstborn which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Israel.

7 And if the man like not to take his brother's wife, then let his brother's wife go up to the gate unto the elders, and say, My husband's brother refuseth to raise up unto his brother a name in Israel, he will not perform the duty of my husband's brother.

8 Then the elders of his city shall call him, and speak unto him: and if he stand to it, and say, I like not to take her;

9 Then shall his brother's wife come unto him in the presence of the elders, and loose his shoe from off his foot, and spit in his face, and shall answer and say, So shall it be done unto that man that will not build up his brother's house.

10 And his name shall be called in Israel, The house of him that hath his shoe loosed.

11 ¶ When men strive together one with another, and the wife of the one draweth near for to deliver her husband out of the hand of him that smiteth him, and putteth forth her hand, and taketh him by the secrets:

12 Then thou shalt cut off her hand, thine eye shall not pity her.

13 ¶ Thou shalt not have in thy bag divers weights, a great and a small.

14 Thou shalt not have in thine house divers measures, a great and a small.

15 But thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have: that thy days may be lengthened in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

16 For all that do such things, and all that do unrighteously, are an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

17 ¶ Remember what Amalek did unto thee by the way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt;

18 How he met thee by the way, and smote the hindmost of thee, even all that were feeble behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary; and he feared not God. Before CHRIST 1451.

19 Therefore it shall be, when the LORD thy God hath given thee rest from all thine enemies round about, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it, that thou shalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven; thou shalt not forget it.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXV.

From this chapter we have the following instructions; that the guilty should be punished with humanity and moderation; that we should provide a maintenance for those who labour for the good of others, particularly for ministers; see 1 Cor. ix. that fraud and deceit in weights and measures, is an abomination to the Lord; and that God's command to destroy the Amalekites, who had unjustly attacked the Israelites, shews us, that pride, cruelty, and injustice, often cause the ruin of nations, as well as individuals.

C H A P. XXVI.

1 The confession of him that offereth the basket of firstfruits.

12 The prayer of him that giveth his third year's tithes.

16 The covenant between God and the people.

AND it shall be, when thou art come in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein;

2 That thou shalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose to place his name there.

3 And thou shalt go unto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, I profess this day unto the LORD thy God, that I am come unto the country which the LORD sware unto our fathers for to give us.

4 And the priest shall take the basket out of thine hand, and set it down before the altar of the LORD thy God.

5 And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God, a Syrian ready to perish was my father, and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous:

6 And the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage:

7 And when he cried unto the LORD God of our fathers, the LORD heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression:

8 And the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm, and with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders:

9 And he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 And, now behold, I have brought the firstfruits of the land, which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God:

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXV.

1 If there be a controversy, &c.] Having affixed punishments to the breaches of the most capital laws, Moses now orders that the several inferior courts of justice should take due cognizance of other criminal matters, deserving only corporal penalties, and be just and impartial in their proceedings, upon all such complaints.

4 Thou shalt not muzzle the ox, &c.] It was the custom of those countries to use oxen in treading out the corn, either with their feet, or by drawing sledges, which were a sort of heavy tables, armed with iron nails, to separate the grain from the straw. By this allegorical precept, Moses instructs the people to be kind to their servants and labourers, especially to those who ministered to them in holy things.

9 And loose his shoe] He was stigmatized in this manner for want of natural affection; this ceremony implied that he deserved to be degraded to the condition of a slave, accustomed to go barefoot.

And spit in his face, &c.] In his sight, or before him.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVI.

5 A Syrian ready to perish was my father, &c.] Jacob was a Syrian by descent, Abraham being a native of that country, and he himself lived twenty years with Laban, the Syrian, and there he was called a Syrian; and at the time he went down into Egypt, he was ready to perish by famine.

tithes of thine increase the third year, which is the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates and be filled;

13 Then thou shalt say before the LORD thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them:

14 I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead: but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me.

15 Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

16 ¶ This day the LORD thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments: thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast avouched the LORD this day to be thy God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice:

18 And the LORD hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldest keep all his commandments;

19 And to make thee high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the LORD thy God, as he hath spoken.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXVI.

This chapter contains many edifying lessons; namely, that we should pay homage to God for all the good things we possess, acknowledge our own unworthiness, and confess that we hold all things from his bounty; and that, to shew our piety and gratitude, we ought to reserve part of our substance, and devote it to God in humility, either for his service, or the support of the poor. Also that in the practice of every duty, and in obedience to the laws of the Lord, consists all our happiness and our glory; by this we shall draw upon ourselves the favour of God, and his holy blessings.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 The people are commanded to write the law upon stones, which are to be set up, and an altar of whole stones to be built, in mount Ebal. 9 Moses and the priests recommend attention and obedience to the law. 11 Six tribes to be stationed on Gerizzim, and six on Ebal. 14 The curses to be pronounced by the Levites.

13 Before the Lord, &c.] These words signify, that every man should make this declaration before the most holy place at the sanctuary; for the words "before the Lord," are generally so used in these books; and, unless they had been obliged to this, their covetous disposition might have inclined them to defraud the poor.

14 I have not eaten thereof in my mourning] Nothing was more unfuitable to the worship of God, than melancholy and dejection of mind; therefore the Israelites were not allowed to eat of holy things when they were in a state of mourning.

Nor given ought thereof for the dead, &c.] I have not offered any of my fruits to idols, which are only dead men deified.

15 Look down from thy holy habitation, &c.] Though God was pleased to dwell among them, by a glorious symbol of his presence, yet Moses teaches the Israelites to acknowledge that he dwelt in a more transcendent glory in the heavens.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVII.

¶ Thou shalt set thee up great stones] Unless we could determine how much of the law was to be written upon these stones, we cannot judge of their number; for if only the ten commandments, fewer than twelve would serve, if the whole book of Deuteronomy, so many were not sufficient.

Plaster them with plaster.] From hence it appears that the law was not to be engraved on these stones, but to be written or painted on them.

3 All the words of this law, &c.] Probably the curses which follow from ver. 15. to the end of the chapter.

AND Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day.

2 And it shall be on the day when ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, that thou shalt set thee up great stones, and plaster them with plaster:

3 And thou shalt write upon them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over, that thou mayest go in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey; as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee.

4 Therefore it shall be when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster.

5 And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them.

6 Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones: and thou shalt offer burnt offerings thereon unto the LORD thy God:

7 And thou shalt offer peace offerings, and shalt eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God.

8 And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly.

9 ¶ And Moses and the priests the Levites spake unto all Israel, saying, Take heed, and hearken, O Israel; this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God.

10 Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

11 ¶ And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

12 These shall stand upon mount Gerizzim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan; Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin:

13 And these shall stand upon mount Ebal to curse; Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zebulun, Dan, and Naphtali.

14 ¶ And the Levites shall speak, and say unto all the men of Israel with a loud voice, 15 Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the LORD, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place. And all the people shall answer and say, Amen.

16 Cursed be he that setteth light by his father or his mother. And all the people shall say, Amen.

17 Cursed be he that removeth his neighbour's landmark. And all the people shall say, Amen.

18 Cursed

7 And shalt eat there, and rejoice before the Lord, &c.] The people of Israel, to whom God promised the land of Canaan, being given to understand that God, having performed what he promised, expected that they, on their part, would be mindful of their obligations.

12 Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin.] These six tribes, who stood upon mount Gerizzim (on the top, and on the descent of it, down to the bottom) were all descended from the sons of the free women, Leah and Rachel; and many think it was on that account that they were appointed to bless, which was more honourable than to curse.

14 The Levites.] The priests, who are often called "the priests, the Levites." See Josb. viii. 33.

Shall speak, and say unto all the men of Israel with a loud voice, &c.] The priests turning their faces first towards mount Gerizzim, proclaimed with a loud voice, "Blessed be the man that maketh not any graven, &c." to which all the people that stood there, answered Amen; and then, turning their faces towards mount Ebal, they said "Cursed be the man that maketh, &c." to which also those who stood on that mountain, made the same reply, and so alternately.

15 And putteth it in a secret place.] That is, Hideth it, to avoid discovery and punishment.

The people shall answer and say, Amen.] Implying only a declaration, or confirmation, that to such vices the curse of God is due, agreeable to the revelation of his will in the sacred volume.

18 Curfed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 19 Curfed be he that perverteth the judgment of the stranger, fatherless, and widow. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 20 Curfed be he that lieth with his father's wife; because he uncovereth his father's skirt. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 21 Curfed be he that lieth with any manner of beast. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 22 Curfed be he that lieth with his sister, the daughter of his father, or the daughter of his mother. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 23 Curfed be he that lieth with his mother in law. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 24 Curfed be he that smiteth his neighbour secretly. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 25 Curfed be he that taketh reward to slay an innocent person. And all the people shall say, Amen.
 26 Curfed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law to do them. And all the people shall say, Amen.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXVII.

We should consider seriously the blessings and curfings pronounced with so much solemnity to the Israelites; that sinners are subject to the wrath of God, no less by the gospel, than by the law; and that those denounced by the gospel are by far the most terrible.

C H A P. XXVIII.

■ The blessings for obedience. 15 The curses for disobedience.

AND it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe and to do all his commandments which I command thee this day, that the LORD thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth:

2 And all these blessings shall come on thee, and overtake thee, if thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God.

3 Blessed shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field.

4 Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

5 Blessed shall be thy basket and thy store.

6 Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

7 The LORD shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways.

■ The LORD shall command the blessing upon thee in thy storehouses, and in all that thou settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

9 The LORD shall establish thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, if thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways.

10 And all the people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be afraid of thee.

11 And the LORD shall make thee plenteous in goods, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in the land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers to give thee. Before CHRIST 1451.

12 The LORD shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain unto thy land in his season; and to bless all the work of thine hand: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

13 And the LORD shall make thee the head, and not the tail; and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the LORD thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them:

14 And thou shalt not go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, to the right hand, or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them.

15 ¶ But it shall come to pass, if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes which I command thee this day; that all these curses shall come upon thee, and overtake thee:

16 Curfed shalt thou be in the city, and curfed shalt thou be in the field.

17 Curfed shall be thy basket and thy store.

18 Curfed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 Curfed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and curfed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

20 The LORD shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.

21 The LORD shall make the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it.

22 The LORD shall smite thee with ■ consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning, and with the sword, and with blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish.

23 And the heaven that is over thy head shall be brass, and the earth that is under thee shall be iron.

24 The LORD shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust: from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

25 The LORD shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them: and shalt be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

26 And thy carcase shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.

27 The LORD will smite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.

28 The LORD shall smite thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart:

29 And thou shalt grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways:

19 The stranger, fatherless, and widow, &c.] This is a paraphrase upon the poor.

24 That smiteth his neighbour secretly, &c.] This is to be understood not only of murder, but likewise of defamation and scandal, by which the fame of ■ absent person is wounded and destroyed.

25 That taketh reward to slay ■ innocent person, &c.] This has respect to the judges, who, for money, not only gave ■ wrong judgment, but condemned the innocent to death. See Micah iii. 11.

26 That confirmeth not all the words of this law, &c.] That performeth not, &c.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXVIII.

2 And overtake thee, &c.] This expression points out the quickness and unexpectedness of the blessings wherewith God would favour the Israelites:—he would surprise them, as it were, with his benefits, and not only exceed, but even prevent their wishes.

5 Blessed shall be thy basket, &c.] Thou shalt prosper in all thy labours of husbandry.

7 Flee before thee seven ways.] Promising not only victory, but ■ complete one.

12 Thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.] That is, Thou shalt have such plenty, as that, after thou hast sufficed thyself, thou shalt be able to lend unto others.

21 Cleave unto thee] That is, be incurable.

23 The earth—iron.] Hard as iron, for want of rain to soften it.

26 No man shall fray them away.] No man shall take so much compassion upon them, ■ to chase away the fowls of the air, and the beasts of the earth, and to inter the remainders of the carcases which those devourers had not consumed.

27 The botch of Egypt] This is generally understood to be the leprosy.

The emerods, &c.] Supposed to be the piles.

Before CHRIST 1451. ways: and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee.

30 Thou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build a house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not gather the grapes thereof.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, and shall not be restored to thee: thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue them.

32 Thy sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no might in thine hand.

33 The fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up; and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway:

34 So that thou shalt be mad for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

35 The LORD shall smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.

36 The LORD shall bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone.

37 And thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.

38 Thou shalt carry much seed out into the field, and shalt gather but little in; for the locust shall consume it.

39 Thou shalt plant vineyards, and dress them, but shalt neither drink of the wine, nor gather the grapes; for the worms shall eat them.

40 Thou shalt have olive trees throughout all thy coasts, but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the oil; for thine olive shall cast his fruit.

41 Thou shalt beget sons and daughters, but thou shalt not enjoy them; for they shall go into captivity.

42 All thy trees and fruit of thy land shall the locust consume.

43 The stranger that is within thee shall get up above thee very high; and thou shalt come down very low.

44 He shall lend to thee, and thou shalt not lend to him: he shall be the head, and thou shalt be the tail.

45 Moreover all these curses shall come upon thee, and shall pursue thee, and overtake thee, till thou be destroyed; because thou hearkenedst not unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which he commanded thee:

46 And they shall be upon thee for a sign and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever.

47 Because thou servedst not the LORD thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, for the abundance of all things;

48 Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in want of all things: and he shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee.

49 The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand.

50 A nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old, nor shew favour to the young:

51 And he shall eat the fruit of thy cattle, and the fruit of thy land, until thou be destroyed: which also shall not leave thee either corn, wine, or oil, or the increase of thy kine, or flocks of thy sheep, until ye have destroyed thee.

52 And he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst throughout all thy land: and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

53 And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee:

54 So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave:

55 So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.

56 The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter,

57 And toward her young one that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.

58 If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD;

59 Then the LORD will make thy plagues wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore sicknesses, and of long continuance.

60 Moreover he will bring upon thee all the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of; and they shall cleave unto thee.

61 Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the LORD bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

62 And ye shall be left few in number, whereas ye were 45 Moreover all these curses shall come upon thee—till thou be destroyed, &c.] The meaning is, that these punishments should not cease, but follow one upon another, till they had brought them to utter ruin.

46 They shall be upon thee for a sign and for a wonder.] The curses shall remain fixed upon them, and continue unremoved from age to age, that all men may take notice of them, and look upon them as extraordinary tokens of God's high displeasure, and take warning thereby, to avoid their guilt of infidelity and disobedience.

And upon thy seed for ever.] All the world may clearly see that the God of their fathers hath cast them off, they having no signs or badges of his ancient wonted favours; whilst innumerable marks and scars of his fearful indignation against their fathers, remain unhealed in their children, after more generations than their ancestors had of prosperity in the promised land.

49 The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far.] Much the same description is given of the Chaldeans, Jer. v. 15. But this evidently belongs to the Romans.

From the end of the earth.] The Romans, by whom they were last destroyed, came literally from far, and from the end of the earth, particularly Julius Severus, who was called by the emperor Adrian, to effect their destruction, from commanding here in Britain.

As swift as the eagle flieth, &c.] Metaphorically applied to the Roman eagles, or ensigns.

53 In the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee.] This was exactly fulfilled by Vespasian and his son Titus, who besieged them so closely in Jerusalem, that they could not stir out; so that several hundred thousands perished by a lamentable famine and the sword; there were destroyed by pestilence, famine, and otherways, one million, one hundred thousand, besides above nine hundred thousand carried into captivity.

55 So that he will not give to any, &c.] This is descriptive of more famines than one, whereby they were forced, after they had eaten up their horses, dogs, cats, and such like creatures, and their very belts and shoes, to eat even their own children; which the parents, who used to live deliciously, Moses prophesied should themselves eat up privately, and let none share with them.

62 Ye shall be left few in number, &c.] As Moses foretold, they were left few in number; for Severus so beset and attacked them separately, in several parties, that very few of them escaped; fifty of their strongest fortresses being utterly rased, and nine hundred and eighty-five of their most noble and populous towns sacked and consumed by fire, and five hundred and eighty thousand slain; so that Judea was in a manner laid waste, and left as a desert.

were as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the LORD thy God.

63 And it shall come to pass, that as the LORD rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you; so the LORD will rejoice over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought: and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it.

64 And the LORD shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and there thou shalt serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone.

65 And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind:

66 And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life:

67 In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

68 And the LORD shall bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, Thou shalt see it no more again: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bondmen and bondwomen, and no man shall buy you.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXVIII.

The threatenings and curses contained in this chapter having been accomplished, clearly prove the divinity of the holy scriptures; and ought to inspire us with a great fear of offending the Lord, lest we should incur those penalties and curses that are denounced in the gospel; and which are neither less certain, nor less dreadful, than those contained in the law.

CHAP. XXIX.

2 Moses exhorteth the people to obedience by the memory of the works they had seen. 10 They are all presented before the LORD to enter into covenant with him, and warned of the danger of flattering themselves in wickedness. Revealed things alone belong to men.

THESE are the words of the covenant, which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the land of Moab, beside the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.

2 ¶ And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land;

3 The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs, and those great miracles:

4 Yet the LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day.

5 And I have led you forty years in the wilderness: your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot.

6 Ye have not eaten bread, neither have ye drunk wine or strong drink: that ye might know that I am the LORD your God.

64 From the end of the earth even unto the other, &c.] Adrian caused many of them to be transported into Spain, accounted the western end of the world; and many of them fled to Babylon, and almost the extremity of the east.

68 Ye shall be sold—and no man shall buy you.] This is generally understood to mean, that though some were sold at a very vile rate, next to nothing, yet others hung upon the sellers hands; the market being either overstocked with their numbers, that none would cheapen the greatest part of them; or they were so contemptible, that none would give what was asked for such useless slaves.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on CHAP. XXIX.

1 These are the words, &c.] "These words" refer to the foregoing chapter.

6 Ye have not eaten bread, &c.] They were constantly supported by a miraculous supply from God, who took care of them, and No. 19.

7 And when ye came unto this place, Sihon the king of Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, came out against us unto battle, and we smote them: Before CHRIST 1451.

¶ And we took their land, and gave it for an inheritance unto the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to the half tribe of Manasseh.

9 Keep therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may prosper in all that ye do.

10 ¶ Ye stand this day all of you before the LORD your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel,

11 Your little ones, your wives, and thy stranger that is in thy camp, from the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water:

12 That thou shouldest enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day:

13 That he may establish thee to day for a people unto himself, and that he may be unto thee a God, as he hath said unto thee, and as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

14 Neither with you only do I make this covenant and this oath;

15 But with him that standeth here with us this day before the LORD our God, and also with him that is not here with us this day:

16 (For ye know how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt; and how we came through the nations which ye passed by;

17 And ye have seen their abominations, and their idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which were among them:)

18 Lest there should be among you man, or woman, or family, or tribe, whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; lest there should be among you a root that beareth gall and wormwood;

19 And it come to pass, when he heareth the words of this curse, that he bless himself in his heart, saying, I shall have peace, though I walk in the imagination of mine heart, to add drunkenness to thirst:

20 The LORD will not spare him, but then the anger of the LORD and his jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the LORD shall blot out his name from under heaven.

21 And the LORD shall separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that are written in this book of the law:

22 So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses which the LORD hath laid upon it;

23 And that the whole land thereof is brimstone, and salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, like the overthrow of Sodom, and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath:

24 Even all nations shall say, Wherefore hath the LORD thereby laid a greater obligation upon them to serve him, who had graciously fed them, without any labour of their own.

15 But with him that standeth, &c.] Instead of "but," it might be better translated, As with him that standeth here with us this day before the Lord our God, so also with him that is not with us this day.

18 A root that beareth gall and wormwood.] The expression denotes any wicked, idolatrous person lurking among, and mixed in with, the people; who, like the venom of an infectious plant, might diffuse their evil practices, and corrupt the rest.

19 To add drunkenness to thirst.] A metaphorical expression, to denote a presumptuous continuance in sin.

20 Shall lie upon him, &c.] Not fall only, but shall "lie" or remain upon him.

23 The whole land thereof is brimstone, and salt, and burning, &c.] Pliny says, Omnis locus in quo reperitur sal, sterilis est, nihilque gignit; that is, All ground whereon salt is found, is barren, and produces nothing.

Before CHRIST 1451. LORD done thus unto this land? what meaneth the heat of this great anger?

25 Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt:

26 For they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and whom he had not given unto them:

27 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against this land, to bring upon it all the curses that are written in this book:

28 And the LORD rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day.

29 The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXIX.

From this chapter, and the threatenings denounced in it, we are taught to fear God, and not expose ourselves to his wrath. Above all, we should remember, that he has made for us a more excellent and permanent covenant in Jesus Christ: we should therefore take heed that we fear, love, and obey him.

C H A P. XXX.

I Great mercies promised unto the penitent. II The commandment is of obvious interpretation. 15 Death and life are set before the people.

AND it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee,

2 And shalt return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul;

3 That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee.

4 If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee:

5 And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.

6 And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

7 And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

8 And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day.

9 And the LORD thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy 29 The secret things belong, &c.] Some take the meaning of this to be, that men should not search into those mysteries which God has, in his great wisdom, thought proper to conceal from the sons of men. It has likewise been translated thus: That the secrets of the Lord our God are revealed to us and to our children; and this sense has been adopted and maintained by many very eminent and learned men.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXX.

4 If any of thine be driven out unto the utmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, &c.] It is this promise which Nehemiah plainly alludes to, in his prayer to God, to prosper his endeavours for the restoration of Jerusalem, Neh. i. 8, 9.

Will circumcise thine heart, &c.] The Greek translateth it, land, for good: for the LORD will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers:

10 If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

11 ¶ For this commandment which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off.

12 It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

15 ¶ See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

16 In that I command thee this day to love the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

17 But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

18 I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land, whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it.

19 I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy feed may live:

20 That thou mayest love the LORD thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him: for he is thy life, and the length of thy days: that thou mayest dwell in the land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XXX.

This chapter exhibits to us the promises God made to the Jews, of re-establishing them when they should return to him; and shews, that God is full of goodness, and always ready to receive into mercy those sinners who are enabled to make a right use of his corrections, and are converted to him. If we consider what Moses says, "I set before thee life and death, blessing and cursing—choose thee blessing and life," it will appear, that there is nothing wanting on God's part to make men happy; and if they perish, their condemnation will lie at their own door: this reflection should excite us to love God with all our heart, obey his voice, and to adhere to him; because he alone is our life and our happiness.

C H A P. XXXI.

I Moses encourageth the people. 7 and Joshua. 9 He delivereth the law to the priests to be read by them every seventh year to the people. 14 Moses and Joshua appear before God. 16 God telleth Moses of the people's future apostacy, and the consequent evils, and giveth him a song to testify against them. 23 Joshua receiveth a charge. 24 Moses delivereth the book of the law to the Levites to keep, and calleth together the elders and officers to hear the song.

AND

Will purge and cleanse thine heart. The Jews rested too much on the externals of their religion, and particularly the circumcision of the flesh.

13 Who shall go over the sea for us, &c.] The Israelites needed not (like the Greek philosophers) to undertake long and tedious voyages; or wearisome travels, to fetch their instructions from foreign countries, in order to acquire wisdom; for God now taught his people in the wilderness, without any pains of their own.

15 See, I have set before thee life and good, and death and evil. By "life" may be meant long life in the land God had promised them; and by "good," all the prosperity they could wish for there: so by "death" is understood their being cut off from the land of the living before their time; and by "evil," all the calamities he had threatened while they lived. In a higher sense, it may be understood to mean, true happiness both here and for ever.

COMMENTAR

AND Moses went and spake these words unto all Israel.

2 And he said unto them, I am an hundred and twenty years old this day; I can no more go out and come in: also the LORD hath said unto me, Thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

3 The LORD thy God, he will go over before thee, and he will destroy these nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them: and Joshua, he shall go over before thee, as the LORD hath said.

4 And the LORD shall do unto them as he did to Sihon and to Og, kings of the Amorites, and unto the land of them, whom he destroyed.

5 And the LORD shall give them up before your face, that ye may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you.

6 Be strong and of good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the LORD thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

7 ¶ And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, Be strong and of a good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the LORD hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it.

8 And the LORD, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.

9 ¶ And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and unto all the elders of Israel.

10 And Moses commanded them, saying, At the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles, 11 When all Israel is come to appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose, thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing.

12 Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law:

13 And that their children, which have not known any thing, may hear, and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourselves in the tabernacle of the congregation, that I may give him a charge. And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud: and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

16 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers; and this people will rise up, and go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land, whither they go to be among them, and will forsake me, and break my covenant which I have made with them.

17 Then my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and I will hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall them; so that they will say in that day, Are not these evils come upon us, because our God is not among us?

18 And I will surely hide my face in that day for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness for me against the children of Israel.

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I swear unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey; and they shall have eaten and filled themselves, and waxen fat; then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, when many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify against them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for I know their imagination which they go about, even now, before I have brought them into the land which I swear.

22 Moses therefore wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.

23 ¶ And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, Be strong and of a good courage: for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swear unto them: and I will be with thee.

24 ¶ And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying, 26 Take this book of the law, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee.

27 For I know thy rebellion, and thy stiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD; and how much more after my death?

28 Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, and call heaven and earth to record against them.

29 For I know that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and evil will befall you in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

30 And Moses spake in the years of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXXI.

From hence we perceive the necessity there was that the word of God should be put into writing, to the end that religion should be preserved pure and uncorrupted; that this word should be read to the people; and that the chief care of the ministers of religion should be, to keep the true doctrine, and the true service of God, free from any alteration; and that God will punish the disobedience and ingratitude of those who abuse his goodness, corrupt his true worship, and rebel against him.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXI.

¶ And Moses went and spake, &c.] It is probable that after Moses had renewed the covenant with the people (mentioned in the foregoing chapter) he dismissed them, and retired to his own tent; but not long after gave them a new summons, and went again to take his leave of them.

2 I can no more go out and come in, &c.] I can no longer discharge the office I have long sustained of your governor and leader; not for want of vigour either of body or mind, but because God did not think fit to permit him to conduct them any farther.

¶ Also the LORD hath said, &c.] For the LORD hath said, &c.

3 And Joshua, he shall go over before thee, &c.] As their captain and leader, after the death of Moses.

9 Which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, &c.] The Kohathites, who were Levites and not priests, carried the ark in their travels.

16 In the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles.] This being at the end of every seventh year, when they were free from cares by the release of their debts, the law was likely to make the greater impression on them.

19 Thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, &c.] "Sleep," in scripture, signifying death, this implies, that death shall not have dominion over the bodies of God's people for ever, but that in the morning of the resurrection they shall awake certainly they fall asleep.

¶ 5 Moses commanded the Levites, &c.] The priests, who were of the tribe of Levi.

26 In the side of the ark, &c.] By the side of the ark; to be reserved there as the authentic copy, by which all others were to be examined and corrected.

30 The words of this song, &c.] The scripture poetry consists in brief and weighty sentences, simply and sincerely composed, in a lively manner, to enlighten the understanding, move the affections, and

C H A P. XXXII.

I Moses' song, which setteth forth the perfections of God; 7 his special goodness to his people; 15 their ingratitude and apostasy; 19 God's displeasure and vengeance, but mercy in the end. 44 Moses adviseth the people to set their hearts unto all the words of the law. 48 God sendeth him up to mount Nebo to see the promised land, and die.

GIVE ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

2 My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass:

3 Because I will publish the name of the LORD: ascribe ye greatness unto our God.

4 He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he.

5 They have corrupted themselves, their spot is not the spot of his children: they are a perverse and crooked generation.

6 Do ye thus requite the LORD, O foolish people and unwise? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee, and established thee?

7 ¶ Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations: ask thy father, and he will shew thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee.

8 When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.

9 For the LORD's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance.

10 He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye.

11 As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings:

12 So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him.

13 He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock;

14 Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape.

15 ¶ But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked: thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness; then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation.

and fix the memory. Moses led the way to all the excellencies contained in the antient poetry of the heathens; inasmuch as his mind was raised to the noblest sublimity of thoughts and speech, by admiration of those strange events, of which he had been an eye-witness.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXII.

1 Give ear, O ye heavens, &c.] Moses begins this inimitable piece of poetry by invoking the heavens and the earth to attend to what he is going to deliver. Such figurative and animated modes of speech have a great tendency to awaken the attention.

2 My doctrine shall drop, &c.] Let my doctrine drop, &c. Sink into their hearts, to soften them, as the drops of rain and dew do the earth, and produce the fruits of obedience.

5 Their spot is not the spot of his children, &c.] Or, the sons of pollution are not his. The true characteristic of the sons of God, is, to imitate God himself; but the crimes of the Israelites were of so aggravating a nature, as to speak them degenerate from their profession of being God's peculiar people; they were the spots of a crooked and perverse generation, who refused to be reclaimed.

8 When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, &c.] He directs them to look farther back, and they would find that long before Abraham's time God had them in his thoughts, even when he divided the earth among the sons of Noah and their posterity, after the flood.

10 He led him about, &c.] He compassed him about, that is, he incircled him with his divine protection.

11 As an eagle stirreth up her nest, &c.] The care of Providence

16 They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger.

17 They sacrificed unto devils, not to God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not.

18 Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee.

19 ¶ And when the LORD saw it, he abhorred them, because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters.

20 And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very forward generation, children in whom is no faith.

21 They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

22 For a fire is kindled in mine anger, and shall burn unto the lowest hell, and shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains.

23 I will heap mischiefs upon them; I will spend mine arrows upon them.

24 They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction: I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.

25 The sword without, and terror within, shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs.

26 I said, I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men:

27 Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the LORD hath not done all this.

28 For they are a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

29 O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

30 How should one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the LORD had shut them up?

31 For their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges.

32 For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter:

33 Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps.

34 Is over the Israelites could not be expressed more emphatically than by this comparison.

13 He made him ride, &c.] Probably fare sumptuously, and live deliciously, as in Hosea x. 11. the meaning of which is, the people of Israel shall live in pleasure, while Judah shall live laboriously.

15 Jeshurun waxed fat, &c.] Moses prophetically declares, that Israel, in their prosperity, should abuse God's mercies, spurn at his laws, and become wanton and insolent as a pampered horse. The word "Jeshurun" may be derived from jasher, "righteousness," because they were a people professing righteousness, or governed by righteous laws.

21 I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people, &c.] God threatens to repay their frequent revolts from him in their own kind, by causing the very Gentiles, whom they so much despised, not only to become their conquerors, but also to be taken into his covenant, while they themselves were excluded from it.

23 I will spend mine arrows upon them, &c.] I will empty my quiver, and shoot all my arrows, till I have not one left. Meaning, God's judgments and plagues.

27 Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, &c.] God would not have their enemies insult and grow outrageous in their insolent language, even against himself.

32 Their wine is of the vine of Sodom, &c.] The soil about Sodom produced nothing but blasted fruit, of a black hue, and without substance.

33 Their wine is the poison of dragons, &c.] Their works are so pernicious, that they resemble the poison of dragons, or serpents.

6 For

34 Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?
 35 To me belongeth vengeance, and recompence; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste.
 36 For the LORD shall judge his people, and repent himself for his servants, when he seeth that their power is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.
 37 And he shall say, Where are their gods, their rock in whom they trusted, 38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices, and drank the wine of their drink offerings? let them rise up and help you, and be your protection.
 39 See now that I, even I, am he, and there is no god with me: I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.
 40 For I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever.
 41 If I whet my glittering sword, and mine hand take hold on judgment; I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me.
 42 I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh; and that with the blood of the slain and of the captives, from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy.
 43 Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people: for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.
 44 ¶ And Moses came and spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he, and Hoshea the son of Nun.
 45 And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel:
 46 And he said unto them, Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law.
 47 For it is not a vain thing for you; because it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.
 48 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses that self-same day, saying,
 49 Get thee up into this mountain Abarim, unto mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho; and behold the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel for a possession:
 50 And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people; as Aaron thy brother died in mount Hor, and was gathered unto his people:
 51 Because ye trespassed against me among the children of Israel at the waters of Meribah-Kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin: because you sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel.
 52 Yet thou shalt see the land before thee; but thou shalt not go thither unto the land which I give the children of Israel.

36 For the Lord, &c.] Nevertheless the Lord, &c. Upon their repentance, he will shew them compassion.

38 Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices, &c.] The same rites were used among the Gentiles as among the Jews, who offered all the fat upon the altar, and there poured out the wine which accompanied the meat offering.

40 I lift up my hand to heaven, &c.] I swear solemnly. It was usual to stretch out the hand in swearing; agreeable to Virgil, Suspiciens cœlum tenditque ad sidera dextram.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIII.

¶ And this is the blessing, &c.] Moses having seen them vastly increased, and ready to enter upon the promised land, takes his farewell of them, with a blessing pronounced upon the people in general, and upon each tribe in particular.

2 A fiery law, &c.] Because the law was given out of the midst of the fire.

6 Let not his men be few.] The verse may be translated, Let Reuben live, and not die, though his men be few. As there is no No. 19.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXII.

In this song of Moses we find it plainly foretold; that the Gentiles should be called to partake of the covenant of God, in the place of the Jews, and the Jews themselves should also be admitted in the latter days. Here we should bless the Lord for having honoured us with his knowledge, who were formerly heathens, and pray for the conversion of the Jews, and of all the other nations in the world.

Before CHRIST 1451.

C H A P. XXXIII.

1 Moses' prophecy before his death, beginning with a display of God's majesty, and regard for Israel. 6 The blessing of Reuben; 7 of Judah; 8 of Levi; 12 of Benjamin; 13 of Joseph; 18 of Zebulun and Issachar; 20 of Gad; 22 of Dan; 23 of Naphtali; 24 of Asher. 26 The excellency of Israel.

AND this is the blessing, wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

2 And he said, The LORD came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran, and he came with ten thousands of saints: from his right hand went a fiery law for them.

3 Yea, he loved the people; all his saints are in thy hand: and they sat down at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy words.

4 Moses commanded us a law, even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.

5 And he was king in Jeshurun, when the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together.

6 ¶ Let Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

7 ¶ And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, Hear, LORD, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

8 ¶ And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

9 Who said unto his father, and to his mother, I have not seen him; neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children: for they have observed thy word, and kept thy covenant.

10 They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law: they shall put incense before thee, and whole burnt sacrifice upon thine altar.

11 Bless, LORD, his substance, and accept the work of his hands: smite through the loins of them that rise against him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again.

12 ¶ And of Benjamin he said, The beloved of the LORD shall dwell in safety by him; and the LORD shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders.

13 ¶ And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the LORD be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

14 And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, mention made of Simeon, it is generally thought that his tribe is included in the blessing of Judah, with whom his possessions were mixed.

15 And

7 Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, &c.] This benediction cannot relate to the time when it was given, but to the time of the return of the Israelites from Babylon, when Judah, with Benjamin, the Levites, and the remnant of Israel, made only forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty. Ezra ii. 64.

9 Neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor know his own children, &c.] This relates to the impartial execution of judgment by the Levites, upon the worshippers of the golden calf without respect of persons.

11 The work of his hands, &c.] The acts of the ministerial office.

12 The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him.] The temple of Jerusalem (the place where the divine Majesty eminently resided) was in the tribe of Benjamin.

His shoulders.] This signifies sides or borders. The temple was built in the borders of Benjamin.

13, 14 Blessed of the Lord be his land, &c.] Moses here foretells that this tribe should be situated in a most plentiful country, and enriched by the divine blessing upon it.

Before
1451.

15 And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills,
16 And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

17 His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.

18 ¶ And of Zebulun he said, Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out; and Issachar, in thy tents.

19 They shall call the people unto the mountain; there they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness: for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas, and of treasures hid in the sand.

20 ¶ And of Gad he said, Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad: he dwelleth as a lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head.

21 And he provided the first part for himself, because there, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he seated; and he came with the heads of the people, he executed the justice of the LORD, and his judgments with Israel.

22 ¶ And of Dan he said, Dan is a lion's whelp: he shall leap from Bashan.

23 ¶ And of Naphtali he said, O Naphtali, satisfied with favour, and full with the blessing of the LORD: possess thou the west and the south.

24 ¶ And of Asher he said, Let Asher be blessed with children; let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him dip his foot in oil.

25 Thy shoes shall be iron and brass; and as thy days, so shall thy strength be.

26 ¶ There is none like unto the God of Jeshurun, who rideth upon the heaven in thy help, and in his excellency on the sky.

27 The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms: and he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee; and shall say, Destroy them.

28 Israel then shall dwell in safety alone: the fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine; also his heavens shall drop down dew.

29 Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIII.

From this chapter we may consider, that how great soever those blessings of Moses were, they became vain and unprofitable, by the disobedience of the Jews, who are now thereby deprived of all the benefits that Moses wished them before his death. Hence we may learn, that it is not sufficient for the servants of God to bless and pray for ~~men~~ (even though God be ready to bestow those blessings) if men by their sins and negligence defeat the same.

C H A P. XXXIV.

1 Moses from mount Nebo vieweth the land: 5 His death and burial: 7 His age. ¶ Thirty days' mourning for him. 9 Joshua succeedeth him. 10 The praise of Moses.

AND Moses went up from the plains of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, that is over against Jericho. And the LORD shewed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan,

¶ And all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the utmost sea,

3 And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees, unto Zoar.

4 And the LORD said unto him, This is the land which I swear unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed: I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither.

5 ¶ So Moses, the servant of the LORD, died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the LORD.

6 And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-Peor: but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.

7 ¶ And Moses was an hundred and twenty years old when he died: his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated.

8 ¶ And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab thirty days: so the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended.

9 And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the LORD commanded Moses:

10 ¶ And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face,

11 In all the signs and the wonders which the LORD sent him to do in the land of Egypt to Pharaoh, and to all his servants, and to all his land, 12 And in all that mighty hand, and in all the great terror which Moses shewed in the sight of all Israel.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XXXIV.

It is our duty to honour the memory of Moses; to reverence the law he promulged; to imitate his virtues, particularly that faith, meekness, zeal, and diligence, in which he served God. But, above all, we should believe in him whose coming he foretold, and who is infinitely superior to him by the divinity of his person, perfection of his doctrine, glory of his miracles, and holiness of his life; namely, our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom belong glory and praise for ever and ever. Amen.

The

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXXIV.

It is an opinion, which seems very consonant both to reason and matter of fact, that this last book of Moses ended with his prophetic blessing upon the twelve tribes, "Happy art thou, O Israel, &c." and that the chapter now before us was formerly the first of Joshua, but thence removed, and joined to the other by way of supplement.

4 I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, &c. It may be supposed, that upon this occasion God strengthened the eyes of Moses with greater vigour than ordinary, to enable him to take a larger prospect; and that, as the extent of the country was above the stretch of mere human sight, God was pleased to assist his visive faculties, and to give them greater power.

6 No man knoweth of his sepulchre, &c. The reason why this great prophet and lawgiver was so secretly buried, was, to prevent the people from paying idolatrous worship to his remains; a species of idolatry still prevalent in pagan and popish countries.

Thus ends the Pentateuch; which contains the history of two thousand five hundred and fifty-two years and a half, from the beginning of the world to the death of Moses.

N. B. At the request of many of our numerous subscribers, we shall, in the subsequent part of this work, insert our Reflections at the bottom of the pages, immediately after the Commentary and Notes on each respective chapter, that they may appear more detached from the text. Now the Pentateuch is completed, we have complied with this hint communicated from various quarters, in order to give general satisfaction to the public at large, who have so universally approved and encouraged our arduous undertaking.

COMMENTARY

15 Of him that dwelt in the bush, &c. See Exod. iii. 2.

17 The ten thousands of Ephraim, and—the thousands of Manasseh. This is supposed to be the benediction of these two tribes; the younger of which was to be more powerful than the elder; see Gen. xlviii. 19.

18 In thy going out To traffic with the neighbouring nations. Issachar, in thy tents. The tribe of Issachar should grow rich by feeding cattle, and by husbandry.

19 They shall suck of the abundance of the seas, &c. They shall import abundance of various commodities.

20 And teareth the arm with the crown of the head. He shall destroy the princes with their kings; the "arm" denoting subordinate rulers; the "crown of the head," supreme or chief commanders.

21 There, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he seated, &c. The portion of God was assigned by Moses.

22 A lion's whelp. The Chaldee paraphrase has it, Strong as a lion's whelp.

He shall leap from Bashan. Bashan was a mountain famous for breeding very fierce lions; metaphorically alluding to the valour and courage of this tribe.

25 Thy shoes shall be iron and brass, &c. Alluding to the mines of those metals, with which that country abounded.

26 There is none like unto the God of Jeshurun, &c. Moses in general pronounces their happiness, that their God was not like the gods of other nations, but super-eminent in all perfections.

28 The fountain of Jacob, &c. The posterity of Jacob, who flowed from him as a river from a fountain.

29 Happy art thou, O Israel, &c. Unable further to express their happiness, he here breaks out into admiration of it.

The Book of J O S H U A.

THE ARGUMENT.

This book is so called, not so much upon the account of its author, as of its subject matter; since it contains the history of the wars, the many signal victories obtained by Joshua over the inhabitants of Canaan, the division of the land among the several tribes, and of other affairs which happened under the administration of that great captain. The Jewish church generally allow Joshua to have been the author of this book, and we have no sufficient authority to oppose their judgment in this respect. It comprehends the history of about seventeen years.

CHAP. I.

1 The Lord appointeth Joshua to succeed Moses. 3 The extent of the promised land. 5 God promiseth to assist Joshua, and instructeth him. 10 Joshua prepareth the people to pass over Jordan. 12 He putteth the two tribes and half in mind of their engagement to Moses. 16 They promise him obedience.

NOW after the death of Moses the servant of the LORD it came to pass, that the LORD spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying,

2 Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel.

3 ¶ Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses.

4 From the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea, toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.

5 ¶ There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life: as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

6 Be strong and of a good courage: for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land, which I swore unto their fathers to give them.

7 Only be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever thou goest.

8 This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.

9 Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

10 ¶ Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying, Before CHRIST 1451.

11 Pass through the host and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals; for within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which the LORD your God giveth you to possess it.

12 ¶ And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manasseh, spake Joshua, saying, 13 Remember the word which Moses the servant of the LORD commanded you, saying, The LORD your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan; but ye shall pass before your brethren armed, all the mighty men of valour, and help them;

15 Until the LORD have given your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed the land which the LORD your God giveth them: then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses the LORD's servant gave you on this side Jordan toward the sunrising.

16 ¶ And they answered Joshua, saying, All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go.

17 According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee: only the LORD thy God be with thee, as he was with Moses.

18 Whosoever be that doth rebel against thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words in all that thou commandest him, he shall be put to death: only be strong and of a good courage.

CHAP. II.

1 Rahab receiveth and concealeth the two spies sent from Shittim. 8 The covenant between her and them. 23 Their return and report.

AND Joshua the son of Nun sent out of Shittim two men to spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went, and came into an harlot's house, named Rahab, and lodged there.

2 And it was told the king of Jericho, saying, Behold, there came men in hither to night of the children of Israel to search out the country.

3 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. I.

1 Moses' minister, &c.] Joshua had been trained up under Moses during the greatest part of the time the Israelites wandered in the wilderness; had seen the wonderful works of God wrought by Moses; well understood the nature and disposition of the people; had been one of the twelve spies sent to search out the promised land, and one of the two who gave a faithful account of it; and was consequently every way qualified for the important office of conducting the children of Israel to the possession of it.

6 Be strong and of a good courage, &c.] This exhortation, together with the preceding and the following encouragement, was necessary to animate this new leader, and inspire him with zeal in the execution of the momentous charge he had just undertaken.

11 Prepare you victuals, &c.] They were to provide themselves with such victuals as the country of Sihon and Og, which they had lately conquered, afforded.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. I.

We are hereby taught, that God, whenever he takes to himself his faithful servants, raises up others, and endues them with the gifts of his Spirit. The obedience paid to Joshua, by the two tribes and a half, in helping their brethren to conquer Canaan, should incite us to obey and submit to our leaders, and assist each other in all just matters, particularly in the great work of our salvation.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. II.

1 Jericho] This was a city of Canaan, which afterwards fell to the lot of the tribe of Benjamin, about seven leagues distant from Jerusalem, and two from Jordan.

Into a harlot's house, &c.] The original, which is here translated "harlot," signifies, An hostess; and therefore, as the expression is capable of a double sense, when we consider the faith which Rahab expressed in God, and her behaviour to the two Israelites, charity will incline us to take it here in the more favourable sense.

Before
1451.

3 And the king of Jericho sent unto Rahab, saying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which ~~are~~ entered into thine house: for they be come to search out all the country.

4 And the woman took the two men, and hid them, and said thus, There came men unto me, but I wist not whence they were:

5 And it came to pass about the time of shutting of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went I wot not: pursue after them quickly; for ye shall overtake them.

6 But she had brought them up to the roof of the house, and hid them with the stalks of flax, which she had laid in order upon the roof.

7 And the men pursued after them the way to Jordan unto the fords: and as soon as they which pursued after them were gone out, they shut the gate.

8 ¶ And before they were laid down, she came up unto them upon the roof;

9 And she said unto the men, I know that the LORD hath given you the land, and that your terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land faint because of you.

10 For we have heard how the LORD dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites, that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And ~~as~~ soon as we had heard these things, our hearts did melt, neither did there remain any more courage in any man, because of you: for the LORD your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath.

12 Now therefore, I pray you, swear unto me by the LORD, since I have shewed you kindness, that ye will also shew kindness unto my father's house, and give me a true token:

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

14 And the men answered her, Our life for your's, if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, when the LORD hath given us the land, that we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

15 Then she let them down by a cord through the window: for her house was upon the town wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.

16 And she said unto them, Get you to the mountain, lest the pursuers meet you; and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be blameless of this thine oath which thou hast made us swear.

18 Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread in the window which thou didst let us down by: and thou shalt bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

4 I wist not whence they were.] The best apology that has been made for Rahab on this occasion, is founded on the supposition that the design of God towards the inhabitants of Canaan, was, some way or other, revealed to the king and people of Jericho, and that both he and they had been sufficiently warned to save themselves from the destruction that was coming upon them.

10 We have heard how the Lord dried up the water of the Red sea for you, &c.] Setting aside her faith, (for which she is so justly commended in the gospel) if she had heard of the destruction of Pharaoh in the Red Sea, and of the other two kings on the east side of Jordan, the king of Jericho can hardly be supposed to have been ignorant of their fate; and therefore it was ~~as~~ natural for her to be terrified at it, and to provide for her safety, as it was for him to make ~~a~~ brave resistance, or perish in the attempt.

15 Her house was upon the town wall, &c.] As soon as it was dark, she let them down from one of her windows; for the gates of the city had been shut by the king's orders.

19 Whoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, his blood shall be upon his head, &c.] This was but reasonable; for they did not know how to distinguish them from others, if they were in the street.

24 Truly the Lord hath delivered into our hands all the land, &c.]

19 And it shall be, that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, his blood shall be upon his head, and we will be guiltless: and whosoever shall be with thee in the house, his blood shall be on our head, if any hand be upon him.

20 And if thou utter this our business, then we will be quit of thine oath which thou hast made us to swear.

21 And she said, According unto your words, so be it. And she sent them away, and they departed: and she bound the scarlet line in the window.

22 And they went, and came unto the mountain, and abode there three days, until the pursuers were returned: and the pursuers sought them throughout all the way, but found them not.

23 ¶ So the two men returned, and descended from the mountain, and passed over, and came to Joshua the son of Nun, and told him all things that befel them:

24 And they said unto Joshua, Truly the LORD hath delivered into our hands all the land; for even all the inhabitants of the country do faint because of us.

CHAP. III.

1 Joshua cometh to Jordan. 2 The officers instruct the people concerning their passage. 5 Joshua giveth directions relating thereto. 7 God encourageth and instructeth Joshua. 9 Joshua encourageth and directeth the people. 14 The waters of Jordan are divided.

AND Joshua rose early in the morning; and they removed from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

2 ¶ And it came to pass after three days, that the officers went through the host;

3 And they commanded the people, saying, When ye see the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, and the priests the Levites bearing it, then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

4 Yet there shall be ~~a~~ space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way heretofore.

5 ¶ And Joshua said unto the people, Sanctify yourselves: for to morrow the LORD will do wonders among you.

6 And Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, Take up the ark of the covenant, and pass over before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

7 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall stand still in Jordan.

9 ¶ And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, Come hither, and hear the words of the LORD your God.

10 And

They found the people of the land under such ~~a~~ general consternation, that they were fully persuaded God would deliver them into their hands, and crown the armies of Israel with success.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. II.

In this chapter two things are remarkable; first, The prudence of Joshua in sending spies to Jericho, to encourage the people to invade the land; secondly, The conduct of Rahab, who, being persuaded that God had resolved to give Canaan to the Israelites, might act innocently; otherwise her behaviour might appear blameable respecting her king and country: however, she may serve for an example, in teaching ~~us~~ to shew the sincerity of our faith by good works.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. III.

4 That ye may know the way by which ye must go, &c.] It was only at their first removal from mount Sinai, and now upon this present occasion, that the ark was carried in the front of their army; whereas it was usually ordered to be carried in the middle of their camps.

9 Come hither, &c.] To the sanctuary, where Joshua now was.

She let them down by a cord through the window, for her House was upon the Town Wall.

10 And Joshua said, Hereby ye shall know that the living God is among you, and that he will without fail drive out from before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Jebusites.

11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of the LORD of all the earth passeth over before you into Jordan.

12 Now therefore take you twelve men out of the tribes of Israel, out of every tribe a man.

13 And it shall come to pass, as soon as the soles of the feet of the priests that bear the ark of the LORD, the LORD of all the earth, shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that the waters of Jordan shall be cut off from the waters that come down from above; and they shall stand upon an heap.

14 ¶ And it came to pass, when the people removed from their tents, to pass over Jordan, and the priests bearing the ark of the covenant before the people;

15 And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water, (for Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest,)

16 That the waters which came down from above stood and rose up upon an heap very far from the city Adam, that is beside Zaretan: and those that came down toward the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failed, and were cut off: and the people passed over right against Jericho.

17 And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground, until all the people were passed clean over Jordan.

CHAP. IV.

1 Twelve men are appointed to take stones for a memorial out of Jordan. 9 Twelve other stones are set up in the midst of Jordan. 10 The people pass over. 14 God magnifieth Joshua. 15 The priests are commanded to bring the ark up out of Jordan, which floweth again as before. 19 The date of the passage. 20 The twelve stones are pitched in Gilgal.

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over Jordan, that the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

Take you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man,

3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where the priests' feet stood firm, twelve stones, and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them in the lodging place, where ye shall lodge this night.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had prepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man:

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the LORD your God into the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel:

15 Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest.] The time of harvest, in those hot countries; happens early in the spring, when, by reason of hasty rains, and the melting of the snow upon mount Lebanon, and other neighbouring mountains, the river Jordan is always full of water, and generally overflows all its banks.

16 The people passed over right against Jericho.] Having that famous city in view; from whence, perhaps, the people on the walls might, with amazement, see the Israelites walk through the river on dry ground.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. III.

The several miraculous events recited in this chapter, particularly the stopping the waters of Jordan on the approach of the ark of the covenant, gave the Israelites to understand, that it would be only by the divine assistance that they would be able to subdue the Canaanites; and that his presence in the midst of them constituted their strength and glory; which may teach us likewise, that they who have God with them; and who walk under his guidance and protection, have nothing to fear.

6 That this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, ^{Before CHRIST 1451.} What mean ye by these stones?

7 Then ye shall answer them, That the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever.

8 And the children of Israel did so as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones out of the midst of Jordan, as the LORD spake unto Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there.

9 ¶ And Joshua set up twelve stones in the midst of Jordan, in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood: and they are there unto this day.

10 ¶ For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, until every thing was finished that the LORD commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses commanded Joshua: and the people hastened and passed over.

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the LORD passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people.

12 And the children of Reuben, and the children of Gad, and half the tribe of Manasseh, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them:

13 About forty thousand prepared for war passed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho.

14 ¶ On that day the LORD magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel; and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life.

15 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

16 Command the priests that bear the ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, Come ye up out of Jordan.

18 And it came to pass, when the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD were come up out of the midst of Jordan, and the soles of the priests' feet were lifted up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, and flowed over all his banks, as they did before.

19 ¶ And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month, and encamped in Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho.

20 ¶ And those twelve stones, which they took out of Jordan, did Joshua pitch in Gilgal.

21 And he spake unto the children of Israel, saying, When your children shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean these stones?

22 Then ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land.

23 For the LORD your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

7 These stones shall be for a memorial, &c.] It has been a custom in all ages to erect monuments of stone, in order to preserve the memory of covenants, victories, and other great transactions.

10 According to all that Moses commanded Joshua, &c.] We do not read that Moses gave any particular directions about the foregoing matters; therefore the meaning is, that Joshua punctually executed all that God ordered; Moses had admonished him.

13 About forty thousand prepared for war, &c.] By the last muster they consisted of above one hundred thousand able soldiers; and we hardly suppose that their number was now decreased. The forty thousand, therefore, that here went over Jordan, were but a part of them; and the rest were left behind, to guard their new conquest against the vanquished nations, that had abundant reason to become their enemies.

19 In Gilgal, &c.] A place famous in after-times; it had its name from the rite of circumcision, which was there renewed; it lay about two miles eastward of Jericho.

Before CHRIST 1451. as the LORD your God did to the Red sea, which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over:
 24 That all the people of the earth might know the hand of the LORD, that it is mighty: that ye might fear the LORD your God for ever.

C H A P. V.

1 The Canaanites are afraid. 2 Joshua reneweth circumcision. 10 The passover is kept at Gilgal. 12 The manna ceaseth. 13 An angel appeareth to Joshua.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings of the Amorites, which were on the side of Jordan westward, and all the kings of the Canaanites, which were by the sea, heard that the LORD had dried up the waters of Jordan from before the children of Israel, until we were passed over, that their heart melted, neither was their spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel.

2 ¶ At that time the LORD said unto Joshua, Make thee sharp knives, and circumcise again the children of Israel the second time.

3 And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at the hill of the foreskins.

4 And this is the cause why Joshua did circumcise: all the people that came out of Egypt, that were males, even all the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised: but all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumcised.

6 For the children of Israel walked forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: unto whom the LORD swore that he would not shew them the land, which the LORD swore unto their fathers that he would give us, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

7 And their children, whom he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

¶ And it came to pass, when they had done circumcising all the people, that they abode in their places in the camp, till they were whole.

23 As the Lord your God did to the Red sea, &c.] It must add fresh courage to the Israelites, when they considered that the same God, who, about forty years before, had wrought the like miracle for them in their passage of the Red sea; that then he divided the waves, to confirm the commission which he had given to Moses; and now had parted the stream, to strengthen the authority of his successor Joshua, and to give them assurance, that he would be with the one, ¶ he had been with the other; and empower the latter to make good their possession of the land of promise, even as he had enabled the former to accomplish their deliverance out of the land of bondage.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. IV.

As God commanded the children of Israel to raise a memorial of the passage through Jordan, and to acquaint their posterity of so wonderful an event; we likewise should perpetuate the remembrance of the Lord's mercies and most signal favours, and especially of what Jesus Christ has done for us; and also instruct our children in the truths of religion, that they may be early induced to love and fear the Lord.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. V.

1 Their heart melted, neither was their spirit in them any more, &c.] This seems to be one of the reasons why God divided the river for the Israelites, who were to be the instruments of his vengeance, to pass over; namely, that thereby he might inject ¶ terror into the inhabitants of Canaan, and to facilitate the conquest of their country.

2 Circumcise again the children of Israel the second time.] This does not signify that they who had been circumcised heretofore were to be now circumcised again (from whence some have drawn an argument for repeating baptism); but that there had been such a general circumcision heretofore ordered, as there was to be now, after a long omission of that rite.

9 I have rolled away the reproach of Egypt] The most common opinion is, that by "the reproach of Egypt" is meant nothing else but circumcision, with which the Israelites always upbraided other

9 And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you. Wherefore the name of the place is called Gilgal unto this day.

10 ¶ And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month at even in the plains of Jericho.

11 And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, unleavened cakes, and parched corn in the selfsame day.

12 ¶ And the manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there stood a man over against him with his sword drawn in his hand: and Joshua went unto him, and said unto him, Art thou for us, or for our adversaries?

14 And he said, Nay; but as captain of the host of the LORD am I now come. And Joshua fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said unto him, What faith my lord unto his servant?

15 And the captain of the LORD's host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so.

C H A P. VI.

1 Jericho is shut up. ¶ God instructeth Joshua how to carry on the siege. 6 Joshua directeth the priests with the ark followed by the people to compass the city. 8 It is compassed six days; and on the seventh day it is compassed seven times. 17 The city is accursed. 20 At the people's shout the walls fall down, and the city is utterly destroyed. 22 Rahab is saved. 26 The man that buildeth Jericho again is laid under a curse.

NOW Jericho was straitly shut up because of the children of Israel: none went out, and none came in.

2 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, See, I have given into thine hand Jericho, and the king thereof, and the mighty men of valour.

3 And ye shall compass the city, all ye men of war, and people, and particularly the Egyptians, with whom they had lived so long, and were best acquainted. Admitting this to be true, this passage is a plain proof that the Israelites could not learn the rite of circumcision from the Egyptians (as some pretend), but that the Egyptians, on the contrary, must have had it from them.

Is called Gilgal, &c.] Removed, taken away, or devolved: the Septuagint translate it by ἀφείλον, and the Vulgate by abhuli, I have taken away.

12 The manna ceased, &c.] Because they had now no need of it, being supplied by the store of old corn, which they found in the land of Canaan, and by what was growing upon the ground.

13 There stood a man over against him, &c.] Some are of opinion that this person was an angel; and there are several circumstances, in this very account of his apparition, which denote him to be ¶ divine, and not a created being; particularly from Joshua's calling him Jehovah, and worshipping him.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. V.

The terror that seized the Canaanites, ¶ the approach of the children of Israel, points out to us, how God prepares things for the execution of his designs, and that he turns the hearts of men which way he pleases. The circumcision of the Jews at their entrance into Canaan, and their celebration of the passover, teach us, that all God's ordinances, even those respecting external duties, should be strictly observed. The manna ceasing to fall, shews that it was a miraculous food, and that for the future the land should furnish ¶ supply of all necessities; and the apparition of an angel to Joshua, was a new sign of the protection of the Lord, and an assurance that he would give them possession of the land, ¶ he had promised.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on Chap. VI.

3 Ye shall compass the city, &c.] God intended to shew the Israelites that the conquest of Canaan was to be ascribed to him, ¶ not to human power, ordered Joshua not to attack the city, but compass it about seven days, when the walls would fall down, and open a passage for the Israelites to enter the city.

and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days.

4 And seven priests shall bear before the ark seven trumpets of rams' horns: and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and the priests shall blow with the trumpets.

5 And it shall come to pass, that when they make a long blast with the rams' horn, and when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, all the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city shall fall down flat, and the people shall ascend up every man straight before him.

6 ¶ And Joshua the son of Nun called the priests, and said unto them, Take up the ark of the covenant, and let seven priests bear seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD.

7 And he said unto the people, Pass on, and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the LORD.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, when Joshua had spoken unto the people, that the seven priests bearing the seven trumpets of rams' horns passed on before the LORD, and blew with the trumpets: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD followed them.

9 And the armed men went before the priests that blew with the trumpets, and the rereward came after the ark, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

10 And Joshua had commanded the people, saying, Ye shall not shout, nor make any noise with your voice, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, until the day I bid you shout; then shall ye shout.

11 So the ark of the LORD compassed the city, going about it once: and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp.

12 And Joshua rose early in the morning, and the priests took up the ark of the LORD.

13 And seven priests bearing seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD went on continually, and blew with the trumpets: and the armed men went before them; but the rereward came after the ark of the LORD, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

14 And the second day they compassed the city once, and returned into the camp: so they did six days.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they rose early about the dawning of the day, and compassed the city after the same manner seven times: only on that day they compassed the city seven times.

16 And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, Shout; for the LORD hath given you the city.

17 ¶ And the city shall be accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because she hid the messengers that we sent.

4 Trumpets of rams' horns, &c.] Some derive the word jebel not from the Arabic, which signifies "ram," but from Jubal, the first inventor of musical instruments; according to this sense, the trumpets used upon this occasion may be said to have been fashioned after the pattern of those which were invented by Jubal.

9 The rereward came after the ark, &c.] That is, the rest of the people, who had no arms, old men, women, and children, came in the rear of the ark.

15 On the seventh day, &c.] The Jewish writers say, that this was the sabbath; and it is worth observing, that it was the Lord who gave this command to compass the city on this day, as well as any other: that great Lord, who gave the command to keep the sabbath, now dispenses with it.

20 The wall fell down flat, &c.] Or, fell under it, as it is in the Hebrew; which seems to signify, that the foundations of the wall were subverted, so that it sunk and fell into the ditch; or sunk into the very ground on which it stood, so as to leave no ruins as in the common fall of walls.

26 Curst be the man before the Lord, that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho, &c.] This anathema was pronounced, that the miracle of the subversion of Jericho might be kept in perpetual remembrance; for whosoever saw the walls sink deep into the earth, would clearly discern, that this was not the form of a building destroyed by men, but miraculously thrown down by God. In the reign of Ahab, Hiel rebuilt the city, and incurred the curse denounced by 18 And ye in any wise keep yourselves from the accursed thing, lest ye make yourselves accursed, when ye take of the accursed thing, and make the camp of Israel a curse and trouble it.

19 But all the silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron, are consecrated unto the LORD: they shall come into the treasury of the LORD.

20 ¶ So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

21 And they utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword.

22 ¶ But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, as ye sware unto her.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her kindred, and left them without the camp of Israel.

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD.

25 And Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day; because she hid the messengers, which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

26 ¶ And Joshua adjured them at that time, saying, Cursed be the man before the LORD, that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his firstborn, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it.

27 So the LORD was with Joshua; and his fame was noised throughout all the country.

CHAP. VII.

1 Achan's trespass. 2 The Israelites are smitten by the men of Ai. 6 Joshua's complaint. 10 God instructeth him what to do. 16 Achan is taken by lot. 19 His confession. 24 He and all that belonged to him are destroyed in the valley of Achor.

BUT the children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing: for Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the accursed thing: and the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel.

2 ¶ And Joshua sent men from Jericho to Ai, which is beside Beth-aven, on the east side of Beth-el, and spake

Joshua; see 1 Kings xvi. 34. Some late travellers inform us, that at present it is no more than a poor despicable village of Arabs.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VI.

From this chapter, we see the beginning of the accomplishment of God's promise to his people, and that he truly fought for them. We may further observe, how early God began to give the Israelites an instance of his design to incorporate the Gentiles into the church, by the preservation of Rahab, who was afterwards married to Salmon, and has the honour to be mentioned in the genealogy of our Saviour, Matt. i. 5. In the ruins of Jericho we see a standing monument of the wrath of God against his enemies, when their iniquity is full; and how certainly the curse of God will overtake presumptuous sinners, as in the case of Hiel above-mentioned.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VII.

1 The children of Israel committed a trespass] That is, one among them; it is usual, in scripture-language, to ascribe that to many indefinitely, wherein one only is concerned; because where men are united in a society, they are all to partake of the good or evil that is done by the individual members.

Achan, &c.] In 1 Chron. ii. 7. he is called Achar, "the troubler of Israel," (as the word Achar signifies); it is likely that in after-times they changed his name from Achan to Achar.

Before

spake unto them, saying, Go up and view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai.

3 And they returned to Joshua, and said unto him, Let not all the people go up; but let about two or three thousand men go up and smite Ai; and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men: and they fled before the men of Ai.

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them in the going down: wherefore the hearts of the people melted, and became as water.

6 ¶ And Joshua rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the LORD until the eventide, he and the elders of Israel, and put dust upon their heads.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O LORD God, wherefore hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

8 O LORD, what shall I say, when Israel turneth their backs before their enemies!

9 For the Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land shall hear of it, and shall environ us round, and cut off our name from the earth: and what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

10 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Get thee up; wherefore liest thou thus upon thy face?

11 Israel hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them: for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

12 Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed: neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

13 Up, sanctify the people, and say, Sanctify yourselves against to morrow: for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

14 In the morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes: and it shall be, that the tribe which the LORD taketh shall come according to the families thereof; and the family which the LORD shall take shall come by households; and the household which the LORD shall take shall come man by man.

15 And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing shall be burnt with fire, he and all that he hath: because he hath transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he hath wrought folly in Israel.

16 ¶ So Joshua rose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes; and the tribe of Judah was taken:

17 And he brought the family of Judah; and he took the family of the Zarahites: and he brought the family of the Zarahites man by man; and Zabdi was taken:

18 And he brought his household man by man; and Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, was taken.

19 ¶ And Joshua said unto Achan, My son, give, I pray thee, glory to the LORD God of Israel, and make confession unto him; and tell me now what thou hast done; hide it not from me.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, Indeed I have sinned against the LORD God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done:

21 When I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

22 So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent; and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and laid them out before the LORD.

24 ¶ And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had: and they brought them unto the valley of Achor.

25 And Joshua said, Why hast thou troubled us? the LORD shall trouble thee this day. And all Israel stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.

26 And they raised over him a great heap of stones unto this day: so the LORD turned from the fierceness of his anger: wherefore the name of that place was called, The valley of Achor, unto this day.

C H A P. VIII.

1 God encourageth Joshua. 3 The stratagem for taking Ai. 9 Joshua placeth the ambush, and advanceth toward the city. 14 Ai is taken, and the king thereof hanged. 30 The altar is built in Ebal, the law written on stones, and the blessings and cursings pronounced before the people, as Moses had commanded.

AND

3 Let not all the people go up; but let about two or three thousand men, &c.] In this counsel a good providence of God interposed; for if the flight of three thousand men put the Israelites into such consternation, (as we read ver. 5, 6.) what condition would they have been in, if all the people had been routed, as they would have been, if they had attacked Ai, while the guilt of Achan's sacrilege remained unpunished!

5 The hearts of the people melted, and became as water.] It may be doubted, perhaps, whether the Israelites were a people of the greatest bravery in the world; but it may be truly said, that there was a necessity for their being so, because upon all occasions they had the Lord of hosts to protect them.

6 And put dust upon their heads.] This manner of expressing their grief was usual among the Jews, and was also imitated by the Gentiles; see Jonah iii. 6.

10 Get thou up; wherefore liest thou thus upon thy face?] These words are not a reproof, but a gracious answer to his prayer; for when a person, who supplicates a prince, is commanded to rise up from his knees, it is a token of acceptance.

11 Put it even among their own stuff.] Converted it immediately to their own private use; in this verse, how beautifully does each circumstance rise upon the foregoing! and every expression is a still additional aggravation of his guilt.

18 And Achan—was taken.] It is probable that the discovery was made by the casting of lots in the presence of God, which was the usual way, in after-times, of discovering noxious persons: see 1 Sam. xiv. 41, 42. Jonah i. 7.

21 A goodly Babylonish garment, &c.] The general opinion is, that the richness and excellency of it consisted not so much in the stuff whereof it was made, as in the colour of the dye, which most suppose to have been scarlet, a colour in high esteem among the ancients, and for which the Babylonians were justly famous.

24 His sons and his daughters.] Some think that his sons and daughters did not suffer death with him; and the next verse says, that "all Israel stoned him with stones;" and as, in the sentence denounced against him, we find no mention made of them, why should we suppose that they were partakers in his punishment, any otherwise than as they were brought out to be spectators of it?

His oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, &c.] These are here taken notice of, to let us see that Achan was a wealthy man, and therefore the more inexcusable in committing this fact.

25 All Israel stoned him with stones, &c.] The Jews affirm, that this was done not judiciously, but inadvertently by the people, who were so highly provoked, that they could not forbear casting stones at him as he was led to execution.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. VII.

This history points out to us, from the conduct of Achan, to what sin the love of riches drives men; and that nothing is sacred to those whom this passion possesseth: that the sin of one man may bring down the curse of God upon the public, and deprive them of his protection; and that sins committed in secret cannot escape his knowledge and vengeance; neither will ill-gotten riches profit the possessors, who obtain them unlawfully.

COMMENTAR

AND the LORD said unto Joshua, Fear not, neither be thou dismayed: take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai: see, I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land:

And thou shalt do to Ai and her king as thou didst unto Jericho and her king: only the spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves: lay thee an ambush for the city behind it.

So Joshua arose, and all the people of war, to go up against Ai: and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty men of valour, and sent them away by night.

And he commanded them, saying, Behold, ye shall lie in wait against the city, even behind the city: go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready:

And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city: and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, that we will flee before them,

(For they will come out after us) till we have drawn them from the city; for they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them.

Then ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand.

And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, that ye shall set the city on fire: according to the commandment of the LORD shall ye do. See, I have commanded you.

Joshua therefore sent them forth: and they went to lie in ambush, and abode between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people.

And Joshua rose up early in the morning, and numbered the people, and went up, he and the elders of Israel, before the people to Ai.

And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai.

And he took about five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of the city.

And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and their liers in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.

And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw that they hastened and rose up early, and the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain; but he wist not that there were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

And Joshua and all Israel made as if they were beaten before them, and fled by the way of the wilderness.

And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them: and they pursued after Joshua, and were drawn away from the city.

17 And there was not a man left in Ai or Beth-el, that went not out after Israel: and they left the city open, and pursued after Israel. Before CHRIST 1451.

18 And the LORD said unto Joshua, stretch out the spear that is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will give it into thine hand. And Joshua stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place, and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand: and they entered into the city, and took it, and halted and set the city on fire.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the smoke of the city ascended up to heaven, and they had no power to flee this way or that way: and the people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them; so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that side: and they smote them, so that they let none of them remain or escape.

23 And the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of Ai.

26 For Joshua drew not his hand back, wherewith he stretched out the spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

27 Only the cattle and the spoil of that city Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

29 And the king of Ai he hanged on a tree until eventide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcase down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise thereon a great heap of stones, that remaineth unto this day.

30 Then Joshua built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal, 31 As Moses the servant of the LORD commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, an altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron: and they offered thereon burnt offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace offerings.

32 And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. VIII.

1 Go up to Ai, &c.] God would not destroy Ai by a miracle, as he had done Jericho, because the people were now to appear formidable to other nations, on account of their courage and policy.

3 Thirty thousand mighty men of valour, &c.] It is reasonable to suppose, that the whole body designed for the ambuscade, consisted of thirty thousand men; and that the five thousand, mentioned ver. 12. was a small party detached from these.

15 All Israel made as if they were beaten before them, and fled, &c.] Though God could by one single act of his will, have destroyed the city of Ai, and all the inhabitants thereof, and without suffering his people to strike a blow, have put them in possession of the promised land; yet he chose to act by secondary means, as more conducive to glory.

17 Or Beth-el, &c.] It appears by these words, that the men of Beth-el were come to the assistance of Ai, before any of the army of Israel arrived; for afterwards they could not, because the ambuscade lay between Beth-el and Ai.

20 They had no power to flee this way or that way, &c.] Either they were so dismayed that they stood, as we say, stock still; or else found themselves so environed, that they could no way escape.

23 The king of Ai they took alive, &c.] Perhaps they were ordered so to do, that he might be made a public spectacle of the divine vengeance.

30 Joshua built an altar—in mount Ebal, &c.] The scripture plainly describes this mount Ebal as near Shechem, for there was only a valley between Ebal and Gerizim, from whence Jotham spake to the men of Shechem (Judg. ix. 7.) which was at a great distance from Ai; and therefore we must suppose that which is here related; not to have been done till they had the country about Shechem.

32 He wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law, &c.] Some think it not unlikely that this was a copy of the covenant, by which the children of Israel acknowledged that they held the land of Canaan of God, upon condition that they observed his laws, to which they and their posterity had obliged themselves.

Before
1451.

33 And all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges stood on this side the ark and on that side before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well the stranger, as he that was born among them: half of them over against mount Gerizim, and half of them over against mount Ebal; ■ Moses the servant of the LORD had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

34 And afterward he read all the words of the law, the blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law.

35 There was not a word of all that Moses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, with the women, and the little ones, and the strangers that were conversant among them.

CHAP. IX.

1 The kings of Canaan combine against Israel. 3 The Gibeonites by craft obtain a league: 16 The fraud is discovered, but are saved on account of the oath of the princes. 22 Joshua judgeth them to perpetual bondage.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings which were on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coasts of the great sea over against Lebanon, the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof;

■ That they gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one accord.

3 ¶ And when the inhabitants of Gibeon heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai,

4 They did work wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors, and took old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles, old, and rent, and bound up;

5 And old shoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy.

6 And they went to Joshua unto the camp at Gilgal, and said unto him, and to the men of Israel, We be come from a far country: now therefore make ye a league with us.

7 And the men of Israel said unto the Hivites, Peradventure ye dwell among us; and how shall we make ■ league with you?

8 And they said unto Joshua, We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye?

9 And they said unto him, From ■ very far country thy servants are come because of the name of the LORD thy God: for we have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt,

10 And all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbon, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashteroth:

11 Wherefore our elders and all the inhabitants of our country spake to us, saying, Take victuals with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants: therefore now make ye a league with us.

12 This our bread we took hot for our provision out of our houses on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy:

13 And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new; and, behold, they be rent: and these our garments and our shoes are become old by reason of the very long journey.

14 And the men took of their victuals, and asked not counsel at the mouth of the LORD.

15 And Joshua made peace with them, and made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes of the congregation sware unto them.

16 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours, and that they dwelt among them.

17 And the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Beeroth, and Kirjath-jearim.

18 And the children of Israel smote them not, because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the princes.

19 But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We have sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: now therefore we may not touch them.

20 This will we do to them; we will even let them live, lest wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we sware unto them.

21 And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but let them be hewers of wood and drawers of water unto all the congregation; as the princes had promised them.

22 ¶ And Joshua called for them, and he spake unto them, saying, Wherefore have ye beguiled us, saying, We are very far from you; when ye dwell among us?

23 Now therefore ye are cursed, and there shall none of you be freed from being bondmen, and hewers of wood and drawers of water for the house of my God.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the LORD thy God commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

25 And now, behold, we are in thine hand: as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

26 And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

27 And Joshua made them that day hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day, in the place which he should choose.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. VIII.

From the punishment of Achan we may remark, that every forbidden thing must be removed from us, before we ■ expect ■ blessing on our undertakings. From the taking of Jericho by miracle, and Ai by force, we may learn, that though God has promised his protection to those who fear him, we ought nevertheless to use every lawful means for our safety and defence. The reading of the blessings and curses was commanded, that the children of Israel might be engaged to walk in the laws of the Lord, and testify their thankfulness, when the promises which God had made to their ancestors were accomplished.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. IX.

1 The great sea] The Mediterranean.

Heard thereof.] Of the taking of Jericho and Ai.

4 They did work wilily] They contrived to put a fallacy upon the Israelites, and, by craft and cunning, to procure their favour.

Wine bottles old and rent] These bottles were made of leather, in which they formerly (as they now do in some countries) kept their wine.

Bound up.] Where they had been rent.

7 Unto the Hivites, &c.] Unto those who came from Gibeon, who were really Hivites, as is expressly said, chap. ii. 19.

15 Joshua made peace with them, &c.] Though by ■ positive law of God, the Israelites were enjoined to make no peace with the inhabitants of Canaan, as a nation, yet if any of them were willing to relinquish their idolatry, and other crimes, and embrace the true religion, they might be spared.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ■ Chap. IX.

From this history we may be convinced, that promises (how fraudulently soever they may be obtained) must, if lawful, be religiously observed; especially when an oath has intervened: and that the reverence due ■ our oaths, and to the God we worship, obliges us to fulfil them.

COMMENTARY

CHAP. X.

Five kings war against Gibeon. 6 The Gibeonites sue to Joshua, who goeth to their assistance. 8 God encourageth him, and casteth down hailstones from heaven upon the enemy. 12 At Joshua's word the sun and moon stand still. 16 The five kings are discovered and shut up in a cave till the pursuit is ended. 22 They are brought forth, scornfully used, and hanged. 28 Makkedah destroyed with her king, 29 and Libnah, 31 and Lachish, 33 and the king of Gezer, 34 and Eglon, 36 and Hebron, 38 and Debir. 40 After these conquests the army returned to Gilgal.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem had heard how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to Ai and her king; and how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

That they feared greatly, because Gibeon was a great city, as one of the royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

3 Wherefore Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Jahia king of Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon: for it hath made peace with Joshua and with the children of Israel.

5 Therefore the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon, and made war against it.

6 ¶ And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua to the camp to Gilgal, saying, Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites that dwell in the mountains are gathered together against us.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, and all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all night.

10 And the LORD discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up to Beth-horon, and smote them to Azekah, and unto Makkedah.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the LORD cast down great stones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died: they were more which died with hailstones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

12 ¶ Then spake Joshua to the LORD in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. Is not this written in the book of Jasher? So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and halted not to go down about a whole day.

14 And there was no day like that before it or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Israel.

15 And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

16 ¶ But these five kings fled, and hid themselves in a cave at Makkedah.

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them:

19 And stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and smite the hindmost of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

22 ¶ Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them.

25 And Joshua said unto them, Fear not, nor be dismayed, be strong and of good courage: for thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies, against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and hanged them on five trees: and they were hanging upon the trees until the evening.

27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast them into the cave wherein they had been hid, and laid great stones in the cave's mouth, which remain until this very day.

28 ¶ And that day Joshua took Makkedah, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof he utterly destroyed, them, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain: and he did to the king of Makkedah as he did unto the king of Jericho.

29 ¶ Then Joshua passed from Makkedah, and all Israel with him, unto Libnah, and fought against Libnah:

30 And the LORD delivered it also, and the king thereof, into the hand of Israel; and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain in it; but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho.

31 ¶ And Joshua passed from Libnah, and all Israel with him, unto Lachish, and encamped against it, and fought against it:

32 And the LORD delivered Lachish into the hand of

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. X.

2 As one of the royal cities, &c.] Gibeon was not a royal city; that is, had no king in it, but was yet equal to those cities that had kings, being governed by elders, who were persons of great authority.

11 The Lord cast down great stones, &c.] The Septuagint calls them, Hail stones of a vast bigness; which some think ~~was~~ accompanied with thunder and lightning.

12 Sun, stand thou still, &c.] At the same time that we admire this phenomenon, it should be remembered, that it was the work of that omnipotent Being who first created the beautiful system of the universe, and that all nature is under his immediate direction and government.

13 The book of Jasher, &c.] Some suppose, that this was only a collection of some verses, which the Israelites thought themselves concerned to learn by heart, the better to remember the miracles which God had been pleased to vouchsafe them.

15 Joshua returned—unto the camp to Gilgal.] The meaning is, that he was about to return, till he heard where the five kings were, and that many of the enemies were still remaining.

of Israel, which took it on the second day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein, according to all that he had done to Libnah.

33 ¶ Then Horam king of Gezer came up to help Lachish; and Joshua smote him and his people, until he had left him none remaining.

34 ¶ And from Lachish Joshua passed unto Eglon, and all Israel with him; and they encamped against it, and fought against it:

35 And they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed that day, according to all that he had done to Lachish.

36 ¶ And Joshua went up from Eglon, and all Israel with him, unto Hebron; and they fought against it:

37 And they took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and all the souls that were therein; he left none remaining, according to all that he had done to Eglon; but destroyed it utterly, and all the souls that were therein.

38 ¶ And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, to Debir; and fought against it:

39 And he took it, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof; and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and utterly destroyed all the souls that were therein; he left none remaining: as he had done to Hebron, so he did to Debir, and to the king thereof; as he had done also to Libnah, and to her king.

40 ¶ So Joshua smote all the country of the hills, and of the south, and of the vale, and of the springs, and all their kings: he left none remaining, but utterly destroyed all that breathed, as the LORD God of Israel commanded.

41 And Joshua smote them from Kadesh-barnea even unto Gaza, and all the country of Goshen, even unto Gibeon.

42 And all these kings and their land did Joshua take at one time, because the LORD God of Israel fought for Israel.

43 And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

C H A P. XI.

1 Divers other kings assembled against Israel by the waters of Merom. 6 God encourageth Joshua, who smiteth them. 10 Hazor is taken and burned; and the cities of the other kings are taken and spoiled. 16 All the country taken by Joshua. 21 The Anakims are cut off. 23 The land being subdued resteth from war.

AND it came to pass, when Jabin king of Hazor had heard those things, that he sent to Joab king of Madon, and to the king of Shimron, and to the king of Achshaph,

2 And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains south of Chinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders of Dor in the west,

3 And to the Canaanite on the east and on the west, and to the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, 40 As the Lord God of Israel commanded.] This is added as a justification of the Israelites from all imputation of cruelty or severity; for they only executed a divine sentence against this people, for their abominable wickedness, wherewith the Israelites would have been in danger of being infected, if they had not been extirpated.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. X.

In this chapter, we see the miraculous power of God exerted in the destruction of the enemies of his people, and the happy effects of prayer. This teaches us, that all our success proceeds from the favour of God, in whom we should always trust, when we use our utmost efforts. All the victories of Joshua plainly shew that God was with him, that all the divine promises were founded in truth and faithfulness; that God is almighty to fulfil them, and that his blessing ever accompanies those who confide in him, and walk in his ways.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XI.

4 As the sand that is upon the sea shore in multitude] Their whole and the Jebusite in the mountains, and to the Hivites under Hermon in the land of Mizpeh.

4 And they went out, they and all their hosts with them, much people, even as the sand that is upon the sea shore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many.

5 And when all these kings were met together, they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.

6 ¶ And the LORD said unto Joshua, Be not afraid because of them: for to-morrow about this time will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou shalt hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire.

7 So Joshua came, and all the people of war with him, against them by the waters of Merom suddenly; and they fell upon them.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them unto great Zidon, and unto Misrephoth-maim, and unto the valley of Mizpeh eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them as the LORD bade him: he houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 ¶ And Joshua at that time turned back, and took Hazor, and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them: there was not any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

12 And all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword, and he utterly destroyed them, as Moses the servant of the LORD commanded.

13 But as for the cities that stood still in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save Hazor only; that did Joshua burn.

14 And all the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.

15 As the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so did Moses command Joshua, and so did Joshua; he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

16 ¶ So Joshua took all that land, the hills, and all the south country, and all the land of Goshen, and the valley, and the plain, and the mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same;

17 Even from the mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir, even unto Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon under mount Hermon: and all their kings he took, and smote them, and slew them.

18 Joshua made war a long time with all those kings.

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel, save the Hivites the inhabitants of Gibeon: all other they took in battle.

20 For it was of the LORD to harden their hearts, that army is computed at three hundred thousand foot, ten thousand horse, and two thousand chariots. To oppose these numerous armies, Israel had no horse: God had interdicted their traffic with Egypt, for them, lest they should be ensnared to idolatry, or place greater confidence in them, than in the divine assistance.

And chariots, &c.] These chariots made a terrible slaughter among an army of foot, being armed with spikes, faulchions, scythes, and javelins, to the yokes of the horses, spokes, and fellyes of the wheels, and to the axle-trees.

5 At the waters of Merom, &c.] These waters are generally supposed to be the lake of Semechon, which lies between the head of the river Jordan, and the lake of Gennesareth; and that the city of Hazor, where Jabin reigned, was situated upon this lake.

6 Thou shalt hough their horses, &c.] Cut their hamstrings, to render them unfit for service.

13 The cities that stood still in their strength, &c.] The cities whose walls were not battered down in the taking of them.

that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour, but that he might destroy them, as the LORD commanded Moses.

21 ¶ And at that time came Joshua, and cut off the Anakims from the mountains, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel: only in Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod, there remained.

23 ¶ So Joshua took the whole land, according to all that the LORD said unto Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel according to their divisions by their tribes. And the land rested from war.

CHAP. XII.

1 The two kings whose countries Moses took and disposed of. 7 The one and thirty kings on the west side of Jordan which Joshua smote.

NOW these are the kings of the land, which the children of Israel smote, and possessed their land on the other side Jordan toward the rising of the sun, from the river Arnon unto mount Hermon, and all the plain on the east:

2 Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt in Heshbon, and ruled from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and from the middle of the river, and from half Gilead, even unto the river Jabbok, which is the border of the children of Ammon;

3 And from the plain to the sea of Chinneroth on the east, and unto the sea of the plain, even the salt sea on the east, the way to Beth-jeshimoth; and from the south, under Ashdod-pisgah:

4 And the coast of Og king of Bashan, which was of the remnant of the giants, that dwelt at Ashtaroth and at Edrei,

5 And reigned in mount Hermon, and in Salcah, and in all Bashan, unto the border of the Geshurites, and the Maachathites, and half Gilead, the border of Sihon king of Heshbon.

6 Them did Moses the servant of the LORD and the children of Israel smite: and Moses the servant of the LORD gave it for a possession unto the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh.

7 ¶ And these are the kings of the country which Joshua and the children of Israel smote on this side Jordan on the west, from Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon even unto the mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir; which Joshua gave unto the tribes of Israel for a possession according to their divisions;

8 In the mountains, and in the valleys, and in the 21 The Anakims, &c.] They were a distinct people from the Canaanites; gigantic in stature, and cruel in disposition. Their habitations were in the mountains, where they fortified themselves; which probably was the reason why Joshua did not attack them before he had finished his other conquests.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XI.

From this chapter, we perceive the wonderful effects of the power of God, and also his veracity; and that he had ordained to exterminate the Canaanites, because they were become abominable by their practices, and that they should not corrupt the Israelites: but though the justice of God is conspicuous in this, yet the proceedings of the children of Israel, instruments, by no means justifies cruelty and inhumanity in war. By leaving some of the Canaanites alive, for the trial of the Israelites, and their punishment afterwards, we may learn, that God sends us crosses and afflictions in this world, for our correction and good, and for the trial of our faith and patience, and that he may do us good in our latter end.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XII.

23 The king of the nations of Gilgal, &c.] This is not that Gilgal where Joshua incamped when he came over Jordan, for there was no city there, nor any king of that country, but the king of Jericho:

24 All the kings thirty and one.] It is surprising that in so small a country, there should be so many kings; but it is to be considered plains, and in the springs, and in the wilderness, and in the south country; the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Canaanites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebu-¹⁴⁵¹ fites:

9 The king of Jericho, one; the king of Ai, which is beside Beth-el, one;

10 The king of Jerusalem, one; the king of Hebron, one;

11 The king of Jarmuth, one; the king of Lachish, one;

12 The king of Eglon, one; the king of Gezer, one;

13 The king of Debir, one; the king of Geder, one;

14 The king of Hormah, one; the king of Arad, one;

15 The king of Libnah, one; the king of Adullam, one;

16 The king of Makkedah, one; the king of Beth-el, one;

17 The king of Tappuah, one; the king of He-pher, one;

18 The king of Aphek, one; the king of Lasharon, one;

19 The king of Madon, one; the king of Hazor, one;

20 The king of Shimron-meron, one; the king of Achshaph, one;

21 The king of Taanach, one; the king of Megiddo, one;

22 The king of Kedesh, one; the king of Jokneam of Carmel, one;

23 The king of Dor in the coast of Dor, one; the king of the nations of Gilgal, one;

24 The king of Tirzah, one: all the kings thirty and one.

CHAP. XIII.

1 What parts of the land remained yet unsubdued: Joshua is commanded to divide the whole by lot; the two tribes and half being excepted out of this division, and the tribe of Levi. 15 The bounds of Reuben's inheritance, (Balaam slain, ver. 22.) 24 of the inheritance of Gad, 29 and of the half tribes of Manasseh, as allotted by Moses, who gave no inheritance to the Levites, but God only.

NOW Joshua was old and stricken in years; and the LORD said unto him, Thou art old and stricken in years, and there remaineth yet very much land to be possessed. ¹⁴⁴⁵

2 This is the land that yet remaineth: all the borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri,

3 From Sihor, which is before Egypt, even unto the borders of Ekron northward, which is counted to the Canaanite: five lords of the Philistines; the Gazathites, that these kings were only petty princes, or lords of cities, which had a few villages depending on them, the inhabitants of which, were their tenants. We know that the king of Beth-el, and the king of Ai, when joined together, had in all, no more than twelve thousand subjects. Kingdoms, like other things, were antiently very small in their beginnings.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS on Chap. XII.

We here find that God continued to enlarge the dominions of the children of Israel, as he had promised, for truth is one of his attributes. Since it is evident Joshua never could have subdued all those kings, unless he had been supported by the almighty power of God, let this encourage us under all our afflictions; for "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIII.

1 Now Joshua was old, &c.] He is supposed to have been near hundred years old.

From Sihor, which is before Egypt] Sihor was a little stream from one of the branches of the Nile, by which Palestine was bounded on that side.

Which is counted to the Canaanites] The Philistines were not the original inhabitants of this country, which belonged to the offspring of Canaan, the youngest son of Ham; whereas the Philistines were descended from Misraim, his second son, who expelled the Avites out of this country.

Before CHRIST 1445. ites, and the Ashdothites, the Ephkalonites, the Gittites, and the Ekronites; also the Avites:

4 From the south, all the land of the Canaanites, and Mearah that is beside the Sidonians, unto Aphek, to the borders of the Amorites:

5 And the land of the Giblites, and all Lebanon, toward the sunrising, from Baal-gad under mount Hermon unto the entering into Hamath.

6 All the inhabitants of the hill country from Lebanon unto Misrephoth-maim, and all the Sidonians, them will I drive out from before the children of Israel: only divide thou it by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded thee.

7 Now therefore divide this land for an inheritance unto the nine tribes, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

■ With whom the Reubenites and the Gadites have received their inheritance, which Moses gave them, beyond Jordan eastward, even as Moses the servant of the LORD gave them;

9 From Aroer, that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain of Medeba unto Dibon;

10 And all the cities of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, unto the border of the children of Ammon;

11 And Gilead, and the border of the Geshurites and Maachathites, and all mount Hermon, and all Bashan unto Salcah;

12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth and in Edrei, who remained of the remnant of the giants: for these did Moses smite, and cast them out.

13 Nevertheless the children of Israel expelled not the Geshurites, nor the Maachathites: but the Geshurites and the Maachathites dwell among the Israelites until this day.

14 Only unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance; the sacrifices of the LORD God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, as he said unto them.

15 ¶ And Moses gave unto the tribe of the children of Reuben inheritance according to their families.

16 And their coast was from Aroer, that is on the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, and all the plain by Medeba;

17 Heshbon and all her cities that are in the plain Dibon, and Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon,

18 And Jahaza, and Kedemoth, and Mephaath,

19 And Kirjathaim, and Sibmah, and Zareth-shahar in the mount of the valley,

20 And Beth-peor, and Ashdoth-pisgah, and Beth-jeshimoth,

21 And all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, whom Moses smote with the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon, dwelling in the country.

22 Balaam also the son of Beor, the soothsayer, did the children of Israel slay with the sword among them that were slain by them.

[Also the Avites.] A remnant of those antient inhabitants, who continued, and were mixed in with the people.

6 Them will I drive out] This promise was conditional, and depended on the Israelites observing the laws given them by Moses; but they did not persist in the true worship of God, great part of these places were never conquered: the Sidonians were never subdued by the Israelites, and the people of Lebanon were only tributary in the days of David.

Divide thou it by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, &c.] "Though they be not driven out, yet, since I have promised to expel them, assign all the forementioned countries to the children of Israel by lot, as the inheritance I have bestowed upon them."

9 The city that is in the midst of the river, &c.] The Septuagint read, In the midst of the valley.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XIII.

From this chapter we learn, that God did not think proper to put the children of Israel in possession of the land all at once, in order to teach them to depend on him from time to time; but though 23 And the border of the children of Reuben was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities and the villages thereof.

24 ¶ And Moses gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad according to their families.

25 And their coast was Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, and half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer that is before Rabbah;

26 And from Heshbon unto Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim; and from Mahanaim unto the border of Debir;

27 And in the valley, Beth-aram, and Beth-nimrah, and Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge of the sea of Chinnereth on the other side Jordan eastward.

28 This is the inheritance of the children of Gad after their families, the cities, and their villages.

29 ¶ And Moses gave inheritance unto the half tribe of Manasse: and this was the possession of the half tribe of the children of Manasse by their families.

30 And their coast was from Mahanaim, all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, and all the towns of Jair, which are in Bashan, threescore cities:

31 And half Gilead, and Ashtaroth, and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the son of Manasseh, even to the one half of the children of Machir by their families.

32 These are the countries which Moses did distribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab, on the other side Jordan, by Jericho, eastward.

33 But unto the tribe of Levi Moses gave not any inheritance: the LORD God of Israel was their inheritance, as he said unto them.

CHAP. XIV.

1 The nine tribes and half are to have their inheritance by lot. 6 Caleb by privilege obtaineth Hebron.

AND these are the countries which the children of Israel inherited in the land of Canaan, which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance unto them.

2 By lot was their inheritance, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half tribe.

3 For Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and an half tribe on the other side Jordan: but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.

4 For the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

5 As the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

6 ¶ Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in Gilgal: and Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenazite said unto him, Thou knowest the thing that the LORD said the heathens were not totally subdued at that time, yet they were so some ages after. This is very emblematical of the progress of a christian through life.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIV.

1 These are the countries, &c.] Namely, those mentioned in the following chapters, this being no more than a kind of preface to the division of the land.

6 The children of Judah came unto Joshua—and Caleb the son of Jephunneh said unto him, &c.] Now that the Reubenites were provided for, the tribe of Judah was the eldest of those that wanted their portion: they came therefore to Joshua; and Caleb, who was not only a considerable person, but one of those princes who were appointed of God to assist in the division of the land, addresses Joshua concerning a particular case of his own; in which he would not take upon himself to judge, but desires to have it settled by Joshua, the supreme governor of God's people.

said unto Moses the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea.

7 Forty years old was I when Moses the servant of the LORD sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart.

8 Nevertheless my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt: but I wholly followed the LORD my God.

9 And Moses sware on that day, saying, Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, as he said, these forty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness: and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.

11 As yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out, and to come in.

12 Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the LORD spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced: if so be the LORD will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out, as the LORD said.

13 And Joshua blessed him, and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance.

14 Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenazite unto this day, because that he wholly followed the LORD God of Israel.

15 And the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba; which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. And the land had rest from war.

CHAP. XV.

1 The borders of the lot of Judah. 13 Caleb's portion and conquest. 16 Othniel for his valour hath Achsah Caleb's daughter to wife, who obtaineth a blessing from her father. 21 The cities of Judah. 63 The Jebusites remain unconquered.

THIS then was the lot of the tribe of the children of Judah by their families; even to the border of Edom the wilderness of Zin southward was the uttermost part of the south coast.

■ And their south border was from the shore of the salt sea, from the bay that looketh southward:

3 And it went out to the south side to Maaleh-acrabim, and passed along to Zin, and ascended up on the south side unto Kadesh-barnea, and passed along to Hezron, and went up to Adar, and fetched a compass to Karkaa:

4 From thence it passed toward Azmon, and went out unto the river of Egypt; and the goings out of that coast were at the sea: this shall be your south coast.

5 And the east border was the salt sea, even unto the end of Jordan. And their border in the north quarter was from the bay of the sea at the uttermost part of Jordan.

6 And the border went up to Beth-hogla, and passed

12 This mountain, &c.] The mountainous country where Hebron lay.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XIV.

In this chapter we see the accomplishment of the promise that God made to Joshua and Caleb, when he told them, that none but they two should enter into the land of Canaan. Caleb arrived at a happy and advanced old age; God gave mount Hebron to him and his posterity, which recompence proved to future ages a lasting monument of the faith and zeal of that holy man. Thus God rewards the piety of those who fear him, with temporal blessings, as well as those which are eternal.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XV.

8 The valley of the son of Hinnom, &c.] A valley on the east by the north of Beth-arabah; and the border went up to the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben:

Before CHRIST 1444.

7 And the border went up toward Debir from the valley of Achor, and so northward, looking toward Gilgal, that is before the going up to Adummim, which is on the south side of the river: and the border passed toward the waters of En-shemesh, and the goings out thereof were at En-rogel:

8 And the border went up by the valley of the son of Hinnom unto the south side of the Jebusite; the same is Jerusalem: and the border went up to the top of the mountain that lieth before the valley of Hinnom westward, which is at the end of the valley of the giants northward:

9 And the border was drawn from the top of the hill unto the fountain of the water of Nephtoah, and went out to the cities of mount Ephron; and the border was drawn to Baalah, which is Kirjath-jearim:

10 And the border compassed from Baalah westward unto mount Seir, and passed along unto the side of mount Jearim, which is Chesalon, on the north side, and went down to Beth-shemesh, and passed on to Timnah:

11 And the border went out unto the side of Ekron northward: and the border was drawn to Shicron, and passed along to mount Baalah, and went out unto Jabneel; and the goings out of the border were at the sea.

12 And the west border was to the great sea, and the coast thereof. This is the coast of the children of Judah round about according to their families.

13 ¶ And unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh he gave a part among the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the LORD to Joshua, even the city of Arba the father of Anak, which city is Hebron.

14 And Caleb drave thence the three sons of Anak, Shephai, and Ahiman, and Talmi, the children of Anak.

15 And he went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir: and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher.

16 ¶ And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.

17 And Othniel the son of Kenaz, the brother of Caleb, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

18 And it came to pass, as she came unto him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field: and she lighted off her ass; and Caleb said unto her, What wouldest thou?

19 Who answered, Give me a blessing; for thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water. And he gave her the upper springs, and the nether springs.

20 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Judah according to their families.

21 ¶ And the uttermost cities of the tribe of the children of Judah toward the coast of Edom southward were Kabzeel, and Eder, and Jagur,

22 And Kinah, and Dimonah, and Adadah,

23 And Kedesh, and Hazor, and Ithnan,

24 Ziph, and Telem, and Bealoth,

25 And Hazor, Hadattah, and Keriath, and Hezron, which is Hazor, side of Jerusalem, so delightfully shaded, that it invited them to perform their idolatrous worship in this valley, for which it became infamous. See 1 Kings xiii. 10. and Jer. vii. 32.

12 This is the coast of the children of Judah, &c.] The meaning of this text is, that their lot was bounded in this manner in the first draught of it.

19 Give me also springs of water] He not only begged the springs, but the ground in which they were, appears from the foregoing, where she moved her husband to ask a field.

He gave her the upper springs, and the nether springs.] He seems to have given her more than she desired; not only those which were below; that so neither the rising ground nor the plain, might want water.

32 All the cities are twenty and nine, with their villages.] The cities which fell to the lot of Judah amounted to thirty-eight: nine of these cities, namely, Beer-sheba, Moladah, Hazar-shual, Baalah, Azem, Hormah, Ziklag, Ain, and Rimmon, were taken from Judah, and given to the tribe of Simeon; which nine, with the twenty-nine mentioned in the preceding verses, complete the number of thirty-eight.

62 The city of salt, &c.] It was called, "the city of salt," either on account of its vicinity to the salt sea, or because Lot's wife was, in that neighbourhood, turned into a pillar of salt.

63 As for the Jebusites, &c.] This supposes that Jerusalem belonged to the children of Judah; and so it did in part, though not the whole; for some of it was in the tribe of Benjamin.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XV.

The instruction to be drawn from this chapter, is, that as the land was divided among the people by lot, in the most solemn manner, so we, who profess to be Christians, should never seek after any inheritance in this world, unless we have reason to hope for the divine blessing in the enjoyment of it.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVI.

1 The lot of the children of Joseph, &c.] That is, of Ephraim, and falem, the children of Judah could not drive them out: but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Judah at Jerusalem unto this day.

CHAP. XVI.

1 The general borders of the sons of Joseph. 5 The border of Ephraim's inheritance. 10 The Canaanites of Gezer are not driven out, but become tributaries.

AND the lot of the children of Joseph fell from Jordan by Jericho, unto the water of Jericho on the east, to the wilderness that goeth up from Jericho throughout mount Beth-el.

2 And goeth out from Beth-el to Luz, and passeth along unto the borders of Archi to Ataroth,

3 And goeth down westward to the coast of Japhleti, unto the coast of Beth-horon the nether, and to Gezer: and the goings out thereof are at the sea.

4 So the children of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

5 ¶ And the border of the children of Ephraim according to their families was thus: even the border of their inheritance on the east side was Ataroth-addar, unto Beth-horon the upper;

6 And the border went out toward the sea to Michmethah on the north side; and the border went about eastward unto Taanath-shiloh, and passed by it on the east to Janohah;

7 And it went down from Janohah to Ataroth, and to Naarath, and came to Jericho, and went out at Jordan.

8 The border went out from Tappuah westward unto the river Kanah; and the goings out thereof were at the sea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Ephraim by their families.

9 And the separate cities for the children of Ephraim were among the inheritance of the children of Manasseh, all the cities with their villages.

10 ¶ And they drave not out the Canaanites that dwelt in Gezer: but the Canaanites dwell among the Ephraimites unto this day, and serve under tribute.

CHAP. XVII.

1 The lot of Manasseh. 3 The case of Zelophehad's daughters. 7 The coast of Manasseh distinguished from that of Ephraim. 12 The Canaanites could not be wholly driven out, but those that remain are subjected to tribute. 14 The children of Joseph sue for and obtain another lot.

THERE was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh; for he was the firstborn of Joseph; to wit, for Machir the firstborn of Manasseh, the father of Gilead: because he was a man of war, therefore he had Gilead and Bashan.

There was also a lot for the rest of the children of Manasseh by their families; for the children of Abiezer, and for the children of Helek, and for the children of Afriel, and for the children of Shechem, and for the children of Hephher, and for the children of Shemida: these of that half of the tribe of Manasseh which was not yet provided for. One cannot but observe the providence of God, in bringing up their lot next to Judah's. For as Judah had the prerogative of being made the chief of all Jacob's children, so Joseph had the privilege of the firstborn transferred to his family; and therefore they are considered before any of the other tribes, except Judah.

10 They drave not out the Canaanites, &c.] They so far subdued them, as to make them tributaries. Grotius is of opinion that the inhabitants of Gezer submitted and accepted the terms of peace, which Joshua was bound to offer them before he began the war.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON Chap. XVI.

We may hence learn how careful Joshua was, in order to obey the will of God, by giving to each of the tribes their share, and suffering them to draw these shares by lot, that there might be no reason to suspect partiality, nor to occasion any disputes.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON Chap. XVII.

1 A lot for the tribe of Manasseh, &c.] That is, for that half of it which had received an inheritance, and yet had no portion on the other side Jordan.

4 According these were the male children of Manasseh the son of Joseph by their families.

3 ¶ But Zelophehad, the son of Hopher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters: and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

4 And they came near before Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, The LORD commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren. Therefore according to the commandment of the LORD he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

5 And there fell ten portions to Manasseh, beside the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan;

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons: and the rest of Manasseh's sons had the land of Gilead.

7 ¶ And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to Michmethah, that lieth before Shechem: and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah.

8 Now Manasseh had the land of Tappuah: but Tappuah on the border of Manasseh belonged to the children of Ephraim;

9 And the coast descended unto the river Kanah, southward of the river: these cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh: the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea:

10 Southward it was Ephraim's, and northward it was Manasseh's, and the sea is his border; and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east.

11 And Manasseh had in Issachar and in Asher Bethshean and her towns, and Ibleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of En-dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of Taanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries.

12 ¶ Yet the children of Manasseh could not drive out the inhabitants of those cities; but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

13 Yet it came to pass, when the children of Israel were waxen strong, that they put the Canaanites to tribute; but did not utterly drive them out.

14 ¶ And the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am a great people, forasmuch as the LORD hath blessed me hitherto?

15 And Joshua answered them, If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood country, and cut down for thyself there in the land of the Perizzites and of the giants, if mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee.

16 And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us: and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley have chariots of iron, both they who are of Bethshean and her towns, and they who are of the valley of Jezreel.

17 And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim and to Manasseh, saying, Thou art a great people, and hast great power: thou shalt not have one lot only:

18 But the mountain shall be thine; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down: and the outgoings of it shall be thine: for thou shalt drive out the Canaanites, though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 The tabernacle is set up at Shiloh. 2 Joshua causeth the remainder of the land not yet divided to be described into seven parts. 8 The description of it is made and brought to Joshua. 10 He distributeth it by lot. 11 The lot and border of the children of Benjamin. 21 Their cities.

AND the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together at Shiloh, and set up the tabernacle of the congregation there. And the land was subdued before them.

2 ¶ And there remained among the children of Israel seven tribes, which had not yet received their inheritance.

3 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the LORD God of your fathers hath given you?

4 Give out from among you three men for each tribe: and I will send them, and they shall rise, and go through the land, and describe it according to the inheritance of them; and they shall come again to me.

5 And they shall divide it into seven parts: Judah shall abide in their coast on the south, and the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.

6 Ye shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, that I may cast lots for you here before the LORD our God.

7 But the Levites have no part among you; for the priesthood of the LORD is their inheritance: and Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses the servant of the LORD gave them.

8 ¶ And the men arose, and went away: and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it, and come again to me, that I may here cast lots for you before the LORD in Shiloh.

9 And the men went and passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

10 ¶ And Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel according to their divisions.

11 ¶ And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

12 And their border on the north side was from Jordan; and the border went up to the side of Jericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward;

4 According to the commandment of the Lord he gave them an inheritance, &c.] After the lot had determined what land every tribe should have, Eleazar, Joshua, and the princes, considered how many families there were in the tribe, and how large they were, and accordingly divided among them.

12 The children of Manasseh could not drive out the inhabitants, &c.] Through want of faith in God, and of zeal to perform his commands; which made them slack in their attempts to expel the inhabitants of this country.

15 If mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee.] If that mount which was given them for their portion did not afford them room enough, he exhorts them to enlarge their bounds, by taking in those woodlands before-mentioned.

16 Chariots of iron, &c.] Not made of iron, but armed with iron; having a kind of scythes of two cabbins, fastened to long axle-trees on both wheels.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVII.

The portion given to Manasseh being inferior to that bestowed on No. 20.

Ephraim, may serve to convince us of the truth of Jacob's prophecy when he blessed the two sons of Joseph. We see here also shewn the truly laudable conduct of Ephraim, and the reward of their valour; and, lastly, that the prudent conduct of Joshua as a commander ought to be imitated by all who act in a military capacity.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XVIII.

2 Had not yet received their inheritance.] No lot had been drawn for seven tribes in Gilgal; perhaps, because the tribes of the house of Joseph were not satisfied with the division begun there.

5 Judah shall abide in their coasts on the south, and the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.] The lot of Judah, which was southerly, and the lot of Ephraim and Manasseh, which with respect to the former, were northerly, were not to be altered: these tribes were to remain undisturbed in their possessions, unless it should be found that they had more than they needed; and others had less.

westward; and the goings out thereof were at the wilderness of Beth-aven.

13 And the border went over from thence toward Luz; to the side of Luz, which is Beth-el, southward; and the border descended to Ataroth-adar, near the hill that lieth on the south side of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence, and compassed the corner of the sea southward, from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward; and the goings out thereof were at Kirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, a city of the children of Judah: this was the west quarter.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to the well of waters of Nephtoah:

16 And the border came down to the end of the mountain that lieth before the valley of the son of Hinnom, and which is in the valley of the giants on the north, and descended to the valley of Hinnom, to the side of Jebusi on the south, and descended to En-rogel,

17 And was drawn from the north, and went forth to En-shemesh, and went forth toward Geliloth, which is over against the going up of Adummim, and descended to the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben,

18 And passed along toward the side over against Arabah northward, and went down unto Arabah:

19 And the border passed along to the side of Beth-hoglah northward: and the outgoings of the border were at the north bay of the salt sea at the south end of Jordan: this was the south coast.

20 And Jordan was the border of it on the east side. This was the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, by the coasts thereof round about, according to their families.

21 ¶ Now the cities of the tribe of the children of Benjamin according to their families were Jericho, and Beth-hoglah, and the valley of Keziz,

22 And Beth-arabah, and Zemaraim, and Beth-el,

23 And Avim, and Parah, and Ophah,

24 And Chepar-haammonai, and Ophni, and Gaba; twelve cities with their villages:

25 Gibeon, and Ramah, and Beeroth,

26 And Mizpeh, and Chephirah, and Mozah,

27 And Rekem, and Irpeel, and Taralah,

28 And Zelah, Eleph, and Jebusi, which is Jerusalem, Gibeath, and Kirjath; fourteen cities with their villages. This is the inheritance of the children of Benjamin according to their families.

C H A P. XIX.

1 The lot of Simeon, 10 of Zebulun, 17 of Issachar, 24 of Asher, 32 of Naphtali, 40 of Dan. 49 The children of Israel give an inheritance to Joshua.

AND the second lot came forth to Simeon, even for the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families: and their inheritance was within the inheritance of the children of Judah.

2 And they had in their inheritance Beer-sheba, Sheba, and Moladah,

3 And Hazar-shual, and Balah, and Azem,

4 And Eltolad, and Bethul, and Hormah,

5 And Ziklag, and Beth-markaboth, and Har-sufah,

6 And Beth-lebaoth, and Sharuh; thirteen cities and their villages:

7 Ain, Remmon, and Ether, and Ashan; four cities and their villages:

14 And compassed the corner of the sea southward, &c.] The word which is here translated "corner," may signify the side of the sea; as if it had been said, that it ran in a parallel line with the sea.

28 This is the inheritance of the children of Benjamin, &c.] This was one of the smallest, with respect to the quantity of ground which they possessed; but the soil was richer than that of all the other tribes.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XVIII.

We may observe the prudent conduct of Joshua, in this chapter, in satisfying the scruples of the people; his ordering their lots to be drawn in the most sacred places, evinced his regard for religion; and the division here made, served to preserve distinction among the tribes, which continued till the coming of the Messiah.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XIX.

1 Even for the tribe of the children of Simeon, &c.] This repe-

8 And all the villages that were round about these cities to Baalath-beer, Ramath of the south. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families.

9 Out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon: for the part of the children of Judah was too much for them: therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.

10 ¶ And the third lot came up for the children of Zebulun according to their families: and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid:

11 And their border went up toward the sea, and Maralah, and reached to Dabbasheth, and reached to the river that is before Jokneam;

12 And turned from Sarid eastward toward the sunrising unto the border of Chisloth-tabor, and then goeth out to Daberath, and goeth up to Japhia,

13 And from thence passeth on along the east to Gittah-hepher, to Ittah-kazin, and goeth out to Remmon-methoar to Neah;

14 And the border compasseth it on the north side to Hannathon: and the outgoings thereof are in the valley of Jiphthah-el:

15 And Kattath, and Nahallal, and Shimron, and Idalah, and Beth-lehem: twelve cities with their villages.

16 This is the inheritance of the children of Zebulun according to their families, these cities with their villages.

17 ¶ And the fourth lot came out to Issachar, for the children of Issachar according to their families.

18 And their border was toward Jezreel, and Chesulloth, and Shunem,

19 And Haphraim, and Shihon, and Anaharath,

20 And Rabbith, and Kishion, and Abetz,

21 And Remeth, and En-gannim, and En-haddah, Beth-pazzez;

22 And the coast reacheth to Tabor, and Shahazimah, and Beth-shemesh; and the outgoings of their border were at Jordan: sixteen cities with their villages.

23 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Issachar according to their families, the cities and their villages.

24 ¶ And the fifth lot came out for the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families.

25 And their border was Helkath, and Hali, and Beten, and Achshaph,

26 And Alammelech, and Amad, and Misheal; and reacheth to Carmel westward, and to Shihor-libnath;

27 And turneth toward the sunrising to Beth-dagon, and reacheth to Zebulun, and to the valley of Jiphthah-el toward the north side of Beth-emek, and Neiel, and goeth out to Cabul on the left hand,

28 And Hebron, and Rehob, and Hammon, and Kanah, even unto great Zidon;

29 And then the coast turneth to Ramah, and to the strong city Tyre; and the coast turneth to Hosh; and the outgoings thereof are at the sea from the coast to Achzib:

30 Ummah also, and Aphek, and Rehob: twenty and two cities with their villages.

31 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families, these cities with their villages.

32 ¶ The

tion seems to imply, that though their inheritance was included in that of Judah, this tribe had another share by lot, besides the cities here spoken of.

2 Beer-sheba, Sheba, &c.] Or rather Beer-sheba, which is Sheba; for they were one and the same place.

9 The children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.] The original is here very justly and very significantly translated "within," though it signifies, in the midst; for the lot of Simeon did not lie in the midst, or in the heart, but in the skirts of the country of Judah.

16 These cities with their villages.] That is, these were the bounds of their inheritance; but all the cities belonging to it are not here set down.

32 ¶ The sixth lot came out to the children of Naphtali, even for the children of Naphtali according to their families.

33 And their coast was from Heleph, from Allon to Zaanannim, and Adami, Nekeb, and Jabneel, unto Lakum; and the outgoings thereof were at Jordan:

34 And then the coast turneth westward to Aznoth-tabor, and goeth out from thence to Hukkok, and reacheth to Zebulun on the south side, and reacheth to Asher on the west side, and to Judah upon Jordan toward the sunrising.

35 And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Ham-math, Rakkath, and Chinnereth,

36 And Adamah, and Ramah, and Hazor,

37 And Kedesh, and Edrei, and Enhazor,

38 And Iron, and Migdal-el, Horem, and Beth-anathi, and Beth-she mesh; nineteen cities with their villages.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 ¶ And the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah, and Eshtaol, and Ir-she mesh,

42 And Shaalabbin, and Ajalon, and Jethlah,

43 And Elon, and Thimnathah, and Ekron,

44 And Eltekeh, and Gibbethon, and Baalath,

45 And Jehud, and Bene-berak, and Gath-rimmon,

46 And Me-jarkon, and Rakkon, with the border before Japho.

47 And the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them: therefore the children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families, these cities with their villages.

49 ¶ When they had made an end of dividing the land for inheritance by their coats, the children of Israel gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them:

50 According to the word of the LORD they gave him the city which he asked, even Timnah-serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

51 These are the inheritances, which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, divided for an inheritance by lot in Shiloh before the LORD, at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. So they made an end of dividing the country.

34 To Judah upon Jordan, &c.] The meaning is, that this tribe had a communication with that of Judah, by means of the river Jordan.

46 Before Japho.] Afterwards called Joppa.

47 Went out too little for them, &c.] The words in the Hebrew, run thus, The coast of the children of Dan went out from them; that is, they were dispossessed of it, in some parts, by their powerful neighbours the Amorites, who forced them into the mountains, and would not let them dwell in the valley.

49 The children of Israel gave an inheritance to Joshua, &c.] How conspicuous was the modesty of this great man! He was content to stay for his inheritance till all the land was divided, and receive his portion as a gift from those he had before settled in the promised land.

51 They made an end of dividing the country.] It is worth remarking, that as Jacob and Moses, at the approach of their deaths, foretold the very soil and situation of every particular country that should fall to each tribe, so, upon this division by lot, it accordingly came to pass.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XIX.

The truth of divine revelation appears in the fulfilment of the events foretold by Jacob and Moses; for God, who does nothing in vain, and knows the end of all human affairs, does all things with the most precise regularity and exactness; which should serve us for a rule to copy after.

CHAP. XX.

Before CHRIST 1444.

1 God commandeth, 7 and the children of Israel appoint the six cities of refuge.

THE LORD also spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 Speak to the children of Israel, saying, Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof I spake unto you by the hand of Moses:

3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares and unwittingly may flee thither: and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities shall stand at the entering of the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

5 And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not beforetime.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

7 ¶ And they appointed Kedesh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, and Shechem in mount Ephraim, and Kirjath-arba, which is Hebron, in the mountain of Judah.

8 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho eastward, they assigned Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain out of the tribe of Reuben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

9 These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, until he stood before the congregation.

CHAP. XXI.

1 Eight and forty cities out of the other tribes are given unto the Levites. 9 The cities of the priests; 20 of the rest of the Kohathites; 27 of the Gershonites; 34 and of the Merarites. 43 God's promise fulfilled in giving the land and rest to Israel.

THEN came near the heads of the fathers of the Levites unto Eleazar the priest, and unto Joshua the son of Nun, and unto the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel;

2 And they spake unto them at Shiloh in the land of Canaan, saying, The LORD commanded by the hand of Moses to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs thereof for our cattle.

3 And

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XX.

1 The Lord also spake unto Joshua, &c.] From the tabernacle at the door of which Eleazar and Joshua and the princes had been making a division of the land.

4 Shall stand at the entering of the gate of the city, &c.] Desiring to be admitted and protected there.

6 Until he stand before the congregation for judgment, &c.] The avenger might bring him before another tribunal to be tried, whether he killed the man by chance, or not.

7 Kedesh in Galilee—Shechem in mount Ephraim; and Kirjath-arba, which is Hebron, in the mountain of Judah.] These three cities were all situated on eminences, so that they might be seen at a great distance; and being dispersed in several parts of the country, every one might enjoy the benefit of the one or the other; for Kedesh was in the north, Hebron in the south, and Shechem between both.

8 Bezer—Ramoth—and Golan, &c.] These cities were assigned by Moses, before he died, Deut. iv. 45. but had not their privileges till now.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XX.

From what is here said concerning the cities of refuge, we may learn what obligations we are under, at all times, to mingle mercy with justice, and to be extremely cautious of condemning any man, till we are convinced, by a rational evidence, of his guilt.

COMMENTARY

Before
CHRIST

3 And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

4 And the lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and the children of Aaron the priest, which were of the Levites, had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.

5 And the rest of the children of Kohath had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

6 And the children of Gershon had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

7 The children of Merari by their families had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

8 And the children of Israel gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

9 ¶ And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, these cities which are here mentioned by name,

10 Which the children of Aaron, being of the families of the Kohathites, who were of the children of Levi, had: for their's was the first lot.

11 And they gave them the city of Arba the father of Anak, which city is Hebron, in the hill country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.

12 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son Jephunneh for his possession.

13 Thus they gave to the children of Aaron the priest Hebron with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Libnah with her suburbs,

14 And Jattir with her suburbs, and Eshtemoa with her suburbs,

15 And Holon with her suburbs, and Debir with her suburbs,

16 And Ain with her suburbs, and Juttah with her suburbs, and Beth-shemesh with her suburbs; nine cities out of those two tribes.

17 And out of the tribe of Benjamin, Gibeon with her suburbs, Geba with her suburbs, 18 Anathoth with her suburbs, and Almon with her suburbs; four cities.

19 All the cities of the children of Aaron, the priests, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

20 ¶ And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim.

21 For they gave them Shechem with her suburbs in mount Ephraim, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Gezer with her suburbs.

22 And Kibzaim with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs; four cities.

23 And out of the tribe of Dan, Eltekeh with her suburbs, Gibbethon with her suburbs, 24 Aijalon with her suburbs, Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; four cities.

25 And out of the half tribe of Manasseh, Taanach with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; two cities.

26 All the cities were ten with their suburbs for the families of the children of Kohath that remained.

27 ¶ And unto the children of Gershon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half tribe of Manasseh they gave Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Beesh-terah with her suburbs; two cities.

28 And out of the tribe of Issachar, Kishon with her suburbs, Dabareh with her suburbs, 29 Jarmuth with her suburbs, En-gannim with her suburbs; four cities.

30 And out of the tribe of Asher, Mishal with her suburbs, Abdon with her suburbs, 31 Helkath with her suburbs, and Rechob with her suburbs; four cities.

32 And out of the tribe of Naphtali, Kedesh, in Galilee with her suburbs to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Hammoth-dor with her suburbs, and Kartan with her suburbs; three cities.

33 All the cities of the Gershonites according to their families were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

34 ¶ And unto the families of the children of Merari, the rest of the Levites, out of the tribe of Zebulun, Jokneam with her suburbs, and Kartah with her suburbs, 35 Dimnah with her suburbs, Nahalal with her suburbs; four cities.

36 And out of the tribe of Reuben, Bezer, with her suburbs, and Jahazah with her suburbs, 37 Kedemoth with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs; four cities.

38 And out of the tribe of Gad, Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Mahanaim with her suburbs, 39 Heshbon with her suburbs, Jazer with her suburbs; four cities in all.

40 So all the cities for the children of Merari by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were by their lot twelve cities.

41 All the cities of the Levites within the possession of the children of Israel were forty and eight cities with their suburbs.

42 These cities were every one with their suburbs round about them: thus were all these cities.

43 ¶ And the LORD gave unto Israel all the land which he swore to give unto their fathers; and they possessed it, and dwelt therein.

44 And the LORD gave them rest round about, according to all that he swore unto their fathers: and there stood not a man of all their enemies before them; the LORD delivered all their enemies into their hand.

45 There failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES ON CHAP. XXI.

3 The children of Israel gave unto the Levites, &c.] All the people of Israel acknowledged the obligations which God had laid upon them, and accordingly these words import, that the people separated so many cities (forty-eight, see Numb. xxxv. 7.) for the habitation of the Lord.

4 Out of the tribe of Judah, &c.] It was a special providence that the share which fell to the priests was in those tribes situated nearest to the city which God intended should be the fixed place of his worship and service.

13 And Libnah with her suburbs.] This is to be understood to belong to them no otherwise than Hebron did, to which they had no right beyond the city and suburbs.

36, 37 And out of the tribe, &c.] Originally these two verses were entirely omitted in the Masora; though without them, neither the twelve tribes of the Merarites in particular, nor the forty-eight levitical cities in general, nor the six cities of refuge, can be made up.

41 Forty and eight cities, &c.] Thus God ordered by Moses; and it is a demonstration that Moses was divinely inspired, to make such an appointment, before they knew whether, without straitening the other tribes, they could afford so many cities to the Levites.

43 The Lord gave unto Israel all the land, &c.] He gave them a right to the whole country, and he gave them the actual possession of the greatest part of it: he gave them likewise power to subdue the rest (if they continued obedient to him) as soon as it was convenient.

GENERAL REFLECTIONS ON CHAP. XXI.

From this chapter we learn, that those who minister in holy things are to be treated with our utmost respect and deference; and by the children of Joseph being placed in some of the most agreeable parts of the country, we may conclude, that God will ever bless the children of the righteous; also, that the small share allotted to the tribe of Levi, is a lesson to ministers, not to be greedy of filthy lucre.

COMMENTARY

C H A P. XXII.

Joshua dismisseth the two tribes and half with a blessing and a share of spoil. 10 On their journey they build the altar of testimony. 11 The other tribes are offended thereat, and send to demand satisfaction. 21 The two tribes and half vindicate their conduct. 30 The deputies are satisfied. 32 Their report satisfieth the people that sent them.

THEN Joshua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

2 And said unto them, Ye have kept all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded you, and have obeyed my voice in all that I commanded you :

3 Ye have not left your brethren these many days unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God.

4 And now the LORD your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them : therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, which Moses the servant of the LORD gave you on the other side Jordan.

5 But take diligent heed to do the commandment and the law, which Moses the servant of the LORD charged you, to love the LORD your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul.

6 So Joshua blessed them, and sent them away : and they went unto their tents.

7 Now to the one half of the tribe of Manasseh Moses had given possession in Bashan : but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them,

8 And he spake unto them, saying, Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment : divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.

9 And the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan, to go into the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, whereof they were possessed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

10 ¶ And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that are in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh built there an altar by Jordan, a great altar to see to.

11 ¶ And the children of Israel heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at the passage of the children of Israel.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, the whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them.

COMMENTARY AND NOTES on Chap. XXII.

1 Joshua called the Reubenites, &c.] Joshua called them unto him, and gave them an honourable dismissal; commending their further obedience to God and unto him; for their fidelity to their promises; and for their constancy and practice, their piety to God, and love to their brethren.

7 Now to the one half of the tribe, &c.] It seems that Joshua had dismissed with his blessing the Reubenites and the Gadites, and then blessed the Manassites by themselves; and the reason of this particularity, is supposed to be because the Manassites were near of kin to the children of Ephraim (of which tribe he himself was) and were now to be separated from the rest of their brethren in Canaan.

10 Build there an altar, &c.] This altar was not built in the land of Canaan, for there it would answer their intention, which was not for any religious use, but to erect a memorial to succeeding

13 And the children of Israel sent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manasseh, into the land of Gilead, Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest,

Before CHRIST 1444.

14 And with him ten princes, of each chief house a prince throughout all the tribes of Israel; and each one was an head of the house of their fathers among the thousands of Israel.

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,

16 Thus saith the whole congregation of the LORD, What trespass is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to turn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, that ye might rebel this day against the LORD?

17 Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD,

18 But that ye must turn away this day from following the LORD? and it will be, seeing ye rebel to day against the LORD, that to morrow he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, wherein the LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us: but rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar beside the altar of the LORD our God.

20 Did not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perisheth not alone in his iniquity.

21 ¶ Then the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh answered, and said unto the heads of the thousands of Israel,

22 The LORD God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD, save us not this day,)

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt offering or meat offering, or if to offer peace offerings thereon, let the LORD himself require it;

24 And if we have not rather done it for fear of this thing, saying, In time to come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad; ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a witness between us, and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore generations, that though they were parted by the river, yet they were of the same extract and religion, and held an equal right to the tabernacle at Shiloh, and to the worship of God performed there, that the inhabitants on the other side had.

12 The children of Israel gathered themselves together, &c.] And immediately took up arms for the vindication of the worship and religion of their forefathers, and to avenge the cause of God upon the heads and chief authors of this defection.

17 Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us? &c.] To dissuade them from their supposed idolatry, they are put in mind of the calamities which God had formerly sent upon them for their worship of Baal-peor; and this instance was very properly brought by Phinehas, who, in the punishment of it, was the principal actor.

20 Did Achan, &c.] If so lately God had been so severe upon them, for the offence of one man, viz. Achan only, what might they not expect, when two tribes and an half were going to revolt?

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

29 God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD, and turn this day from following the LORD, to build an altar for burnt offerings, for meat offerings, or for sacrifices, beside the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

30 ¶ And when Phinehas the priest, and the princes of the congregation and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the children of Manasseh spake, it pleased them.

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: now ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

32 ¶ And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, and the princes, returned from the children of Reuben, and from the children of Gad, out of the land of Gilead, unto the land of Canaan, to the children of Israel, and brought them word again.

33 And the thing pleased the children of Israel; and the children of Israel blessed God, and did not intend to go up against them in battle, to destroy the land wherein the children of Reuben and Gad dwelt.

34 And the children of Reuben and the children of Gad called the altar Ed: for it shall be a witness between us that the LORD is God.
